1159. President.] Have you ever signed any agreement to sow indigo?—No, I have not. I have cultivated the Sahib's nij abad, ploughed it, and given it the mui and bida (harrow and scuffer) for the past three years, and paid labourers for cutting the plant; and I have not received a pice for all this. I never got a meal, nor so much as a drink of water; instead of any sweetmeats I got the bamboo.

1160. Mr. Temple.] Did you never prefer any complaint to the head of the concern, Mr. Forlong?—If I go to the Burra Sahib, Mr. Smith gets angry; if I go to Mr. Smith, the dewan gets angry; if I go to the dewan, the amin gets angry; and if I go to the amin, the takidgir gets angry; and there it ends.

1161. Have you ever personally been to Nischindipore?—I was going to Mr. Forlong, to complain of the enhancement of rent, as well as of the measurement; I saw Mr. Forlong, but the amla said that the two annas were an increase on the profit of the ijara.

1162. But this was a matter of rent: did you ever go to Mr. Forlong, to complain about any indigo oppression?—I have not been to complain about indigo oppression; if any one goes, and it becomes known to the gomashta, the complainant is punished.

1163. Upon what terms should you be willing to sow indigo of your own free will?—Not for two bundles a rupee, not for a bundle a rupee, nor for 100 rupees a beegah.

1164. But 100 rupees a beegah is a very great profit, and if you ever get that sum from rice, why would not you cultivate indigo for the same?—The annoyance arising from indigo cultivation is perfectly killing.

1165. But supposing these annoyances were removed, and supposing you were not to be oppressed in the way you have been, on what terms would you then cultivate indigo?—Let there be profit or let there be loss, I will die sooner than cultivate indigo.

1166. But supposing the old accounts were wiped out, and you had not to cultivate a single cotta unless with your own accord, what objection would you then have to cultivate indigo?—My objection remains; I will not sow.

1167. Supposing your zemindar was a native, what terms would you require to sow indigo?—No, I won't cultivate indigo for any one on any account whatever.

JAMIR MUNDAL, Son of Sonaula, Inhabitant of Joyrampore, Thannah Damuhudah, near the Loknathpore Concern, Mussulman, called in; and Examined on oath.

1168. President.] How long have you been in the habit of cultivating indigo, and in what quantity?—From my boyhood. For about fifteen years I used to cultivate four beegahs of land; then three years ago the factory people increased it by one beegah, and last year they increased it again by 10 cottas; my jumma is 39 rupees at 2½ beegahs a rupee. As regards my other lands, I sow 16 beegahs of early rice, and four of late rice; I have four beegahs, garden and homestead, and six beegahs of hor or thatching grass.

72—I.

1169. What advances have you received for indigo, and what indigo did you produce?—I received eight rupees for the four beegahs at first; I never got any since; I can't say how much indigo I gave each year; last year I delivered 47 bundles. This is what the mohurrir told me.

1170. Did you go to the factory to settle your accounts?—No, I never went.

1171. Why did you not go?—Because I thought it of no use.

1172. Mr. Fergusson.] Did other ryots go to settle

Dinu
Mundal.

4 June 1860.

Jamir
Mundal.

Jamir
Mundal.

4 June
1860.

settle their accounts?—There is no account kept for Joyrampore.

1173. Besides those of Joyrampore, did not the ryots of the neighbouring villages go?—I cannot say whether they did or did not; the factory is easily visible from the village.

1174. President.] The mohurrir told you that you were credited with 47 bundles: did you never on this go to the factory, to see what was owing to you?—The mohurrir told me, a month afterwards, in the bazar; but this mohurrir was changed, and sent to the Sinduree factory. It is not our custom to go to the factory until sent for; if we go on our own accord we are beaten.

1175. Besides a failure to settle the accounts, do you complain of anything else?—Last year 100 of my bamboos were cut, and I was made to cut grass, and cart it, and was never paid for it; other ryots have been treated in the same way.

1176. Did you owe any rent to the factory?—Yes, I owe Rs. 5. 8.; I have been sued under Act X; I have had to pay one anna ijaradari up to this year; this year, however, I have not paid it.

1177. Why don't you complain to the magistrate?—If I go to complain, my house will be pulled down. The people of our village complained at the Damuhudah sub-division about the lattials, since which the lattials have been removed to the factory.

1178. Mr. Temple.] How many lattials used to remain in the factory?—About 200 or 300.

1179. Since the sub-division is brought so near your village, has oppression diminished?—Not in the least.

1180. Supposing that all trouble and oppression were at an end, and you were at liberty to cultivate as much or as little indigo as you wished to sow, on what terms would you consent to sow?—I would rather go to a country where the indigo plant is never seen or named.

1181. What is the reason for this intense dislike to indigo?—I have my honour to look after as much as great people.

1182. Mr. Fergusson.] Are you equally averse to railroads?—No, railroads are unobjectionable; the railroad people never beat me.

1183. Was there not a dispute between your village and the railroad engineers?—There was a row about cutting down a tree; my house is at the west end of the village, and the ground where the rail is to run is at the east end; the ryots got paid for their trees all right.

1184. Was there not a row or dispute about their refusing to give the engineers milk and other provisions?—I don't know; I have not heard of it.

DUKHI SHEIKH, Inhabitant of Doosta, Thannah Damuhudah, near the Loknathpore Concern, Mussulman, called in; and Examined on oath.

Dukhi
Sheikh.

1185. President.] How many beegahs of land have you got in your jumma?—I have 60 beegahs at 20 rupees jumma; I sow seven beegahs with indigo, but according to my measurement they are 11 beegahs. I first commenced sowing indigo about 12 to 14 years ago; they gave the first year two rupees advance per beegah. Three years after they gave me three rupees to cultivate two more beegahs; the following year they increased the cultivation by one and a half beegahs, and gave me another rupee, and made it up to six beegahs in all.

1186. How much plant did you deliver?—From seven to 10 cart-loads of indigo, yearly; I used to go to the factory myself; I never got a hath chitti; they used to fling my plant into the vats. In Phalgun and Chaitro, the amin or takidgir used to come to my house and tell me I had nothing to receive.

1187. Do you know how your account stands with the factory?—I do not know how it stands.

1188. Did they sue you for breach of contract?—Yes, they have done so; I have a mookhtar to look to the case.

1189. Mr. Fergusson.] Did you sow any indigo this year?—No.

1190. Did anybody advise you not to do so?—No one instigated nor advised me. On the 8th of Agran, we, and the inhabitants of several other villages, complained to the Commissioner, who was on his tour. The Commissioner said, "If you don't wish to sow, go and deposit your balances with the judge." I cannot say what my account is with the factory; I cart the indigo in the months of Sraban and Bhadro; I carry seed in the months of Agran and Posh; I never received any hire for my carts; if I asked for it I got beaten.

1191. Do you sell any indigo seed to the factory?—I grow some seed, which I give to the factory, for which I receive nothing. Last year

I gave a maund of seed, and never got anything for it.

1192. Did you never receive any money from the factory, except the advances?—I never received a pice, nor borrowed one from the factory.

1193. Has the factory tried to increase your rents?—They have never increased our rents; but we have been called upon for one and a half annas on the ijaradari; Kistoram Sircar, the factory gomashta, takes every day two or three large bundles of plantains and never pays for them; it is no use to complain to the planter.

1194. Why did you not refuse to sow indigo last year, and why this?—Last year they ploughed up two beegahs of pepper and sowed it with indigo; I did not know that there were any authorities to complain to. Since last Agran, when the Commissioner came to the interior of the district, we have become aware of the fact and have refused to sow; no one instigated us. Last year I could only sow six beegahs of rice lands with two ploughs; this year I have sown 52.

1195. Mr. Temple.] Have you ever been actually beaten yourself?—I was beaten three times last year.

1196. Have you ever been confined in a godown?—No; I was never confined in a godown.

1197. Have you ever had your cattle seized?—Yes, they seized my cattle and obliged me to pay a rupee a head for their restoration; I was fined for three years at three rupees a year for cattle trespass. The year before last the axle of my cart broke, consequently I could not go to the factory, and I was fined a rupee and a half.

1198. Have you ever had your house broken down by factory people?—No, never.

1199. Have you ever seen a lattial?—Every week or 10 days I used to see 50 or 60 of them.

1200. Did

1200. Did these men ever threaten you?—They did not threaten me, but the sight of them terrified me. They plundered and burned down a village.

1201. Did you see them do this?—Yes, I saw the burning.

1202. Did you mention the name of the village?—Doodbandli. There was a complaint made to the magistrate about it.

[Commission adjourned at 5.30, p. m.]

Dukhi
Sheikh.

4 June
1860.

Tuesday, 5th June 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C. S., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., C. S.; W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Rev. J. Sale;
Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

HADJI MULLA, Mussulman, Inhabitant of Chandpore, Thannah Hardi, near the Jalsuka Factory, Nischindipore Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

1203. President.] How long have you been cultivating indigo, and how much land have you?—I have cultivated five and a half beegahs of indigo for the last six or seven years; I have always sown this amount; I have only one plough; my jumna is one of 22 rupees, and comprises 31 beegahs; I have about 12 beegahs of high land, and the rest are submerged lands. In the submerged lands I sow rice; sometimes it is drowned, and sometimes it ripens; we have no rice planted with the hand in our part of the country.

1204. How were you first led to take advances?—I did not take any; my grandfather did.

1205. What plant did you generally deliver to the factory, and how does your account stand?—I cannot say exactly how many cartloads I delivered each year, but last year I delivered six cartloads; by my account six cartloads should give me 12 bundles, and 12 bundles would satisfy me. I did not go, but my brother went with the plant last year to the factory; he was told that he was credited with two bundles. My idea is that I ought to receive something instead of the factory getting anything from me. I have a cart that used to work at the factory every year; sometimes for one month, sometimes for two, during the manufacturing season, for which I received a rupee; eight annas before, and eight annas after the work was done. I am now receiving 16 rupees a month for the services of this cart from the railway department. I am also occasionally made to carry bamboos and thatching grass, from one factory to another, for which I receive nothing.

1206. Have you never complained to the planter when he rides out to inspect his lands?—I am afraid to go near him, because he gets in a passion.

1207. Can you not say what is the total of your account with the factory for everything?—I ought to get 260 rupees from the factory, i. e., according to the rate the Railway Department pays me for my cart.

1208. Mr. Sale.] Can you state what is the nature of your agreement with the factory, or have you signed any agreement to deliver indigo at a certain rate?—I never signed anything; I can read and write; I have delivered indigo to the factory every year, by compulsion.

1209. President.] To whom do you pay rents, and at what rate?—The Sahib has an ijara of 13 pice in the rupee of rental, and the remaining 12 annas and 9 pice go to the zemindar. The factory does not take anything openly as ijara fees, but it takes something for interest and expenses at about one anna on the rupee. I am not called on to pay any other expenses in the way of rents, but I had 32 babul trees cut down, which were worth six annas each; they likewise take straw for their cattle to eat, and when I make molasses of sugar-cane, then the dewan, amin, and takidgir ask for their share of it. The dewan takes 15 seers, the amin 10, and the takidgir 5; they take not only from me, but from the ryots of the village; this is a yearly custom.

1210. Did you not receive money annually from the factory?—If a few annas are owing to me, they transfer it to the rent account, and give me a remission.

1211. Did you never receive an advance every year?—In the present year they have transferred Rs. 1. 8. to the rent account. Last year I received nothing; the year before that nothing; but the year before that I got two rupees. Except in these two years, I got nothing.

1212. Have you sown indigo this year?—Yes, I sowed 1 beegah and 17 cottas last Kartik in this way. I had first sown it with halai (vetches) and mustard seed; then the takidgir had it sown with indigo, and when my seeds came up they went and reported to the factory that I had sown halai after the indigo. I was unwell, but they took my brother to the factory and beat him, and he was laid up for three months. This was the reason why I did not sow in Chaitra. They have taken out a summons under the new Act. What the result will be I cannot say.

1213. Was that remission of the Rs. 1. 8. rent before or after you sowed the halai?—It was in the month of Phalgun that I received the transfer; I had sowed in Kartik.

Hadji
Mulla.

5 June
1860.

Hadji
Mulla.

5 June
1860.

1214. Are you quite sure you received no cash?—I am quite positive about it.

1215. President.] Are you now willing to sow indigo; and if not, on what fresh terms would you be willing to do it?—I am not willing to sow, and I don't know that any fresh terms would satisfy me.

1216. Mr. Sale.] Would you not be willing to sow at a rupee a bundle?—No, I would not; rather than sow indigo I will go to another country; I would rather beg than sow indigo.

1217. Mr. Fergusson.] If you don't sow indigo, don't you think it likely that the zemindar would raise your rents?—No, the zemindar cannot; he gave me a fixed potta about nine years ago. In my potta, all the different kinds of land, homestead, garden, high and submerged lands, are charged at the same rate; that rate is two beegahs nine and a quarter cottas per rupee.

1218. Mr. Sale.] Does the planter take the land for indigo according to the same measurement as that at which they fix the rent?—No, they do not; five and half beegahs of factory measurement would be 11 beegahs of zemindary measurement.

1219. If one of your cart bullocks died, and if you asked the planter, would he not give you money to get another?—No, I get no assistance of that kind from the factory.

KADAMULLA, Mussulman, Inhabitant of Badamtolla, Thannah Hardi, near the Jalsuka Factory, Nischindipore Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

Kadamulla.

1220. President.] WHAT jumma have you; how many beegahs of land have you, and how many do you cultivate with indigo?—I have a jumma of 27 rupees; that is, 80 beegahs of land, of which I have cultivated six beegahs with indigo all my life; but what they call six beegahs is, by my measurement, 14.

1221. Did you ever receive any advances?—I did not, but my father received two rupees advance long ago; my father is now dead; he cultivated indigo all his lifetime, and since his death I have continued to do so. The produce of my land is generally six or seven cart-loads; I have no account of it in bundles, as the plant was taken and thrown into the vats. There is no use complaining to the Sahib about it.

1222. Can you state how your account now stands with the factory?—Last year I got two rupees from the factory, one of which was taken by the dewan, eight annas by the mohurrir, and eight annas by the amin and takidgir. According to my own account, my carts should give five to six bundles a cart. I cannot add up and say how many bundles my 10 carts would give me. Besides, I have two months' cart hire due to me. I ought to be paid Rs. 7. 8. a month for the cart; that is the rate in my part of the country. I have to pay rents to the factory in the proportion of nine pice in the rupee; the rest I pay to the zemindar. I never received any deduction in my rents on account of my dealings in indigo.

1223. What else did you sow last year besides indigo?—I sowed six beegahs with rice; the rest is uncultivated. I had prepared three beegahs of land with great care from Magh to Sraban, intending to sow chillies on them. The factory sowed this piece of land with indigo for seed in the month of Sraban last. I took the seed to the factory and cleaned it, and put it into the gola, and never got anything for it. I was obliged to take it to the factory, as I could not sell it on my own account; if I could have sold it in the bazar, I could have got 25 rupees and upwards for it; but if I had sowed chillies on the land, I should have cleared 40 rupees profit per beegah.

1224. Have you sown indigo this spring?—I have not sown this year, and I have been sued for breach of contract; there has been no decision as yet in my case.

1225. You have said, that if you had sown chillies you would have got 40 rupees a beegah; if you got 40 rupees a beegah for indigo, would you consent to sow it still?—No, I would not sow indigo again.

1226. Mr. Sale.] What is the cause of your unwillingness to sow indigo?—Let the accounts be squared, and if we are in debt to the factory we will pay it up; but sow indigo, I will not.

1227. Mr. Fergusson.] How many seers per beegah of seed do you get from the factory to sow?—Two-and-a-half seers per beegah.

1228. President.] Did you never receive any assistance from the factory in case of oppression or losses?—I got nothing but unfair treatment; on the contrary, two years ago 200 of my bamboos were cut down, and this year 100. I did not complain last year to the magistrate; my reason for complaining now is, that when I complained lately in Chaitro, we were told in the mofussil that it was the orders of the Queen that we were not to sow indigo; I heard it from a dozen people, in the month of Kartik. We were very much pleased, as our bones are burnt up by sowing indigo.

1229. But if you heard that this was the order of the Queen in Kartik, have you not also heard that there is a law lately passed, that those who have taken advances must sow indigo; and if they do not, they must go to prison?—I have heard that people have gone to prison, but it is not by order of the Queen.

BHIKHOO MUNDAL, Mussulman, Inhabitant of Khudipore, Thannah Damuhudah, near the Kutiachandpore Factory, Loknathpore Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

Bhikhoo
Mundal.

1230. President.] WHAT is the amount of your jumma, and how much of it do you sow with indigo?—I have a jumma of 40 rupees, at three beegahs for the rupee. We were four brothers, living together, but we are now divided, and we each sow three and a half beegahs of indigo. For the last three years I have received no advances. Three years ago, I got an advance of two rupees, but it was intercepted by the dewan and amin.

1231. Can you say what your account now is?—Last year I delivered 35 bundles, for which the factory price is six bundles for the rupee; deducting for seed, cart-hire, and something for keeping the accounts. If I go to the factory, the servants take money from me; it is no use to complain. They also cut my bamboo, babul, and young date trees; the bamboos were taken to the factory, and the date trees were cut to make way for indigo.

1232. Did

1232. Did you not complain of these outrages at the Sudder Station, or at the Sub-division of Damuhuda, or to the Daroga?—No.

1233. What led you to complain here?—They sued me for breach of contract; I gave bail, and came here, supposing that I should be righted.

1234. What made you break your contract, and why did you not sow this year as in former years?—The Commissioner went to the interior, and told us we might or might not sow, as we liked; I heard it was the Company's order that sowing was optional.

1235. What is the cause of your unwillingness to sow, now that it is optional?—I derive no advantage from it, and therefore I don't like to sow. The factory take 28 beegahs for what they call 13.

Bhikho
Mundal.

5 June
1860.

KULIN MUNDAL, Hindoo, Inhabitant of Kangrapore, Thannah Mirpore, near the Nundunpore Factory, called in; and Examined on oath.

1236. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] WHAT is your jumma, how long have you sown indigo, and how much land do you cultivate with indigo?—Mine is a jumma of eight rupees; I have 21 beegahs, of which I sow two beegahs, by factory measurement, with indigo; but these I call four beegahs. The takidgir threw a hath chitti into my house, and one rupee, saying that I had got four rupees, but that he had taken one, the amin another, and the dewan a third; on this I sowed. Last year I gave four cart loads; and the year before, five; each cart contains four bundles. They gave me no acknowledgment for this.

1237. Have you not settled your account with the factory?—No, I have not gone near the factory for a year. I once went to complain to the Sahib, about five years ago; my complaint was about the amount of land I was required to sow; I had only two bullocks. The dewan told the Sahib not to listen to my complaints, as I was a bad man; this was because I could not fee the dewan.

1238. President.] Have you sown this year, and if not, what is your reason for not sowing?—I sowed a beegah in Kartik; but I did not sow in Chaitro, because I had had enough of oppression from indigo. I cannot say whether a suit has been instituted against me for breach of contract; I have been for the last month in Calcutta; I brought two rupees from home; I eat once a day, which costs me four pice; I have not worked for hire; I am living at Bhowanipore; a man named Sunkur Mundal kindly gave me one day four annas.

1239. Mr. Temple.] In whose house did you reside at Bhowanipore; were you at the house of a friend, or were you paying hire?—I was at the printing-house of Hurris Baboo.

1240. Mr. Fergusson.] Is Hurris Chunder Baboo the proprietor of a newspaper?—I don't know who he is.

1241. Mr. Temple.] Did you ever see him?—No, I never did.

1242. If you have never seen him, how came you to go to his house?—There were other ryots also staying there; I housed with them.

1243. How many other ryots are there in the house?—About six others, besides myself.

1244. Does he entertain you all?—No, he does not.

1245. Where did you get the two rupees you brought with you?—I brought them from my house.

1246. President.] Have you anything more to say?—I have a great deal to say about indigo oppression. The Sahibs have taken some of my own jumma lands, and converted them into his khass or own lands, i.e. he has taken one beegah, and pays no rent for it. After cutting the indigo for the factory, I was told to sow grain on their nij lands, and because I could not do so, I was fined three rupees a beegah. I was not paid for my ploughs for cultivating that land, neither was I paid my expenses for ploughing, which took me from Syeshto to Kartik. They fined me four rupees for not weeding the land, and because I could not pay it, they took away my cow, and sold it to pay themselves; its price was eight rupees. The year before last, they cut down a tamarind tree because I could not weed; the tree yielded 10 rupees' worth of tamarinds yearly.

1247. Why did you not complain to the magistrate?—Because the planter tells us that whoever goes to the magistrate will have his house pulled down, and be turned out of the village. This year the amin and takidgir told me that there was a new law passed, called mughurer ain, or the law of the mallet; that unless I dug the indigo lands sufficiently deep, I should have my head beaten with a mallet, and indigo sown in it. They said that they had got two laws out of the Company; the other law was for breach of contract; both laws are now in force.

1248. Mr. Temple.] What terms would you require to induce you to sow indigo in future, supposing you had perfect freedom of action?—On no terms whatever; if I had got 20, or 30, or even 100 rupees a beegah, I would not sow indigo. The amin and takidgir said they would make our wives and families weed.

1249. Supposing a zemindar, or any person in whose justice you had confidence, asked you to sow indigo, at what price would you do it?—I would sow indigo for nobody, not even for my father and mother.

1250. But granting that you yourself have a personal objection to sow indigo, at what price could an ordinary ryot afford to do it?—We are all in the same condition.

1251. Mr. Fergusson.] Did you ever hear any order from the Government, or from any other authority about indigo?—I did hear that a per-wanna was affixed to the door of the Judge Sahib's cutcherry in Nuddea, stating that it was optional with the ryots to sow indigo or not.

1252. President.] Then have you had any deliberation amongst yourselves as to whether you would sow indigo or not?—We had a consultation on the subject with one another, when it was agreed that every man should act according to his own mind and understanding.

1253. Mr. Fergusson.] Was it after the first proclamation that you first refused to sow indigo?—Yes, it was after the first promulgation; before that, we did not understand anything.

1254. Did you have any communication with any missionaries or other Christians on the subject?—I never saw any of those gentlemen, nor any of the Christians.

Kulin
Mundal.

JURAN MUNDAL, Mussulman, Inhabitant of Ramkistopore, Thannah Mirpore, near the Katuli Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

Juran
Mundal.
—
5 June
1860.

1255. President.] WHAT is the amount of your jumma, and how many beegahs do you sow with indigo?—I have a jumma of 50 rupees; I have about 150 beegahs of land at three beegahs for the rupee of rent. Ten or 15 years ago, I used to sow four beegahs by the factory measurement; when the former planter was there the measurement was correct; lately, that is, for the last 11 years, I have been made to sow eight beegahs. During the former proprietorship I used to get advances every year after giving in my plant; last year I gave in 96 bundles of plant, that is, the factory admitted as much, but if it had been properly measured it would have been 200; it was on eight beegahs of their measurement, but 16 according to mine. In my accounts I was credited with nine rupees, which was credited to my rents. In the last 11 years I have been fined to the extent of 280 rupees. In 11 years, 11 rupees, or a rupee a year, have been taken from me, because the Sahib lost a bet also for road-making; 50 pice have been taken from me, at one pice for every rupee of rent. Roads have been made within the limits of the concern; eight annas were taken from me, because the hoofs of the cattle had made marks in the plain. Another time they sowed indigo in my early rice, and ordered me to weed it; I was fined 22 rupees for the rice that had grown up. Then another time I was fined 11 rupees for a ryot who had absconded from another part of the village; he was not my dependent ryot. Another time we all went to complain to the factory against the dewan; the naib turned us away, and I was fined 22 rupees. On another occasion a man of my village died of epileptic fits; the factory amla came and settled with the Daroga of Mirpore, who came to investigate the matter, and 700 rupees were levied on the village; this was about five or seven years ago. The reason for the Daroga's coming, was that the man's corpse was found dead upon the plain. My share of the fine was 15 rupees. This last year we were told that there were 1,400 rupees deficient in the indigo return; my share of this was 130 rupees cash. I had a boat as well as a plough and bullocks, and some rice, which I sold to make it up. There were other small fines of two and four rupees which I cannot remember; but I have this account written out by my younger brother, who can write; I cannot write. There is also a small marsh where we go to catch fish; when we were caught doing this we were fined. A Chandal has got the Julkar, or right of fishery, but he never says anything. My boat was one of 150 maunds. I never complained at the Sudder Station, or to the Daroga; if I ever complained to the Sahib, he sent me away.

1256. Mr. Temple.] Seeing that you did not think fit to complain to the authorities at the time, what has induced you to come down here to do so?—Since we heard in the months of Kartik and Posh that the authorities were ready to listen to complaints, we have come down. We came once before to Alipore to complain to the Lord Sahib. He told us to go back to the Commissioner of Kishnagur, and said that we should be heard. Nothing, however, was done, and I came back to Calcutta, and hearing that this Commission was sitting to hear complaints, which would not require stamp papers, I came here; I have spent money in stamp papers at other times, but to no purpose.

1257. Do you mean to say that, in this instance, the mere absence of stamp paper is the only cause that has induced you to come before this Commission?—Not that only; we hear that the real state of things will be known here; we hear it from each other.

1258. Where are you staying at this moment?—At Rada Mullick's Garden; there are coolies and people from our part of the country there.

1259. Are there any other ryots besides yourself in that garden?—Yes, there are nine or ten more men.

1260. To whom does this garden belong?—There is no real garden there, but the land belongs to Rada Mullick, but there are some huts there, one of which is empty by reason of a man having absconded.

1261. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you cultivated indigo this year?—No, not this year; and I cannot say whether there is a suit in my name for breach of contract.

1262. Mr. Temple.] If you were to sow indigo in future, what profit would you require?—I have lost everything by indigo. When the factory was first established, they excited our cupidity by promising us profits, and by talking in this way; but now whatever we are promised, I would rather be killed than sow.

1263. President.] Did you hear of any order on the part of Government to sow or not to sow?—I heard last Magh of a law passed that the ryots should sow indigo or not as they liked. People said that there was a perwanna at the judge's cutcherry. I cannot read, but I stood there and heard some one read it; I was very well pleased.

1264. Did the police in the Mofussil give circulation to the perwanna?—The magistrate of Kurrimpore came to Amjhupi, and there he read out the perwanna. The Naib Daroga gave me a copy of the perwanna, and we took it home.

BHAGU MUNDAL, Hindoo, Inhabitant of Kalaidunga, Thannah Mirpore, near the Amjhupi Factory, [Katuli Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

Bhagu
Mundal.
—

1265. President.] WHAT is the amount of your jumma, and how much do you cultivate with indigo?—I have a jumma of 10 rupees comprising 30 beegahs of land, at three beegahs for the rupee; I cultivate four beegahs with indigo. At the time of the Raja the rental was four beegahs for the rupee, but since Mr. Smith has come, it has been reduced to three. The four beegahs is the factory measurement, by mine they would be seven; I have sown indigo for 10 or 12 years. The first year I got two rupees in advances for cultivating one beegah; that is to say, they were given me in the shape of deduction for rent; I admit that I received the benefit of it. Two years afterwards afterwards they increased my cultivation by one beegah, and after two other years by another, and so on for the last time up to four beegahs. If ever I was entitled to any thing I never got it, as it was deducted, because the factory lost a bet. Whether it were a poor man or a respectable householder, we all paid at one rupee a head; besides this, we have to give the dewan, the amin, and the tahidgir one rupee each. The reason of our giving the same fee to inferior servants, is because the tahidgir has more power to harm us when measuring our lands. Then we have had to cut jungle round the village in order that indigo might be grown; and also that Gobind Baboo, to whom the land belongs, might get his rents, so that both these parties, that is, the planter and the zemindar benefit, and we get nothing.

1266. Mr. Temple.] Have you been beaten or shut up in a godown; has your house been pulled down, or have your trees been cut?—No, none of these things.

MANIRUDDIN MUNDAL, Son of Sheik Aradhan, Inhabitant of Paikpara, Thannah Hardi, near the Katchikatta Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

1271. President.] WHAT is the object of your coming here?—I had a quarrel with a man named Gholam Mundal; I was attacked one night by this man, who was the foster son of the mohurrir of the factory, one Raghunath Biswas. He aimed a blow at me with a stick, but it missed me; this was in Jyeshtho 1265, thereupon I ran away; I went to the factory to complain to the Sahib. There was a potter in the village whose daughter had been taken away by this Raghunath Biswas; the father of the girl was Bhandi Pal; this man's brother Shitul Pal had gone to the factory to complain to the Sahib; the Sahib finding the complaint established against Raghunath Biswas fined him 30 rupees, and gave him 30 stripes with the rattan. My case did not come on that day; I put in a petition to Kedar Nath, the English writer of the factory; he does not receive petitions without a present, consequently my petition was returned. On this I presented a petition on the 2d of Asharh to the Daroga of Hardi, charging Gholam Mundal with having procured the abortion of his mother-in-law. He had first intrigued with her and then done this; this was a true case; I was told to complain at Karimpore. I did so, but the order passed was not the one I wanted, but one that I should issue a subpoena for my witnesses; I had not the money for the subpoena, so I went home to fetch it. I had got the money, and was sitting down to eat, when Gholam Mundal went and asked the factory servants to interfere. Hansa Raj Jemadar came and took me to the factory; that day I was kept in the godown, and a heavy weight put on my chest; they kept me thus five days. They then carried me to Raghunath Biswas's house three koss off. I got some rice to eat, though I never ate before in the house of a Hindoo; I was then taken to the factory and fined 55 rupees. I had a good fruit garden, and half a beegah of mulberry, which enabled me to pay it. It was the dewan that fined me, not the Sahib; they then let me go. On the 19th of Sraban, I complained at Kurrimpore, and the Daroga was ordered to investigate the matter; but unluckily the Daroga Bhadrinath Baboo, who is a good man and does not take bribes, was absent, so the mohurrir and jemadar took up the 1267. Then what force has been used to compel you to sow indigo?—If I had sown none I should have been beaten; but having sown I have escaped. We have all seen others beaten, so that I was afraid and sowed.

1268. Have you had your cattle seized?—No; but I have been fined for cattle trespass in Asharh last. They make us sow oats for which they pay nothing, not even the rent of the land, and if the cattle eat them, we are fined.

1269. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you ever had anything to do with the courts?—I have never had anything to do with the courts, civil, criminal, or any other.

1270. Mr. Sale.]—Have you ever been to the Sahib's cutcherry in the factory?—Yes, I have been to the planter's cutcherry; he levies fines, and sometimes we benefit by going, at other times not. There is also a bad custom, which is, that when a ryot runs away, the factory makes us accountable for his indigo balances.

case. These men never went to my village, but went to the factory, and they reported that my case was untrue. Dissatisfied with this, I made another petition to the magistrate, and was ordered to issue a subpoena. On the 15th Asharh, I put in the peon's deputation allowance. I got 42 witnesses up to Karimpore, but the magistrate went to Paikpara and Katchikatta Concern, and without taking one of my witnesses, drove me away on the 12th of Agran, on a Friday. After this the dewan and mohurrir of the factory issued a proclamation in the village, that if any one took me in, he should be fined 25 rupees, and receive 25 blows with a slipper. On this I collected all my papers and money, and was going away to my uncle's house at Kurrimpore; on arriving at a ferry of the river, I met Raghunath Biswas, who was going to the woman whom he had abducted, and who had become a Bushtomi; he and four other men with him laid hold of me, bandaged my eyes, and took me to the factory at Paikpara. When a report was made to the planter, he said I had cost the factory a great deal of money, and that I should be confined in the indigo godown; whereupon three servants of the factory held me, one by my head, the other by my feet, and the third pressed a bamboo on my chest: they took away 225 rupees that I had with me; they kept me five days there, and then took me to Katchikatta; they then beat me, and cut me over the head. In the meantime they cut down all my babul trees, and ill-treated my mother. I was kept 15 months altogether in one factory or another, and then two months in the house of the dewan of the Belgachia factory; and after this the Dewan of the Paikpara factory said he would give me 200 rupees and make up all my losses, and told me to tell a plausible story that I had been in Calcutta for the past 15 months, and that I had been robbed of 100 rupees by one Buddun Mullick, who had complained against the dewan's son. I got away at last by pretending to agree to do this; but I presented a petition on the 25th of Chaitro to the deputy magistrate of Damuhuda, and there were present the deputy magistrate, the Sahib of the factory, and the dewan; something was said which I did not understand, Bhagu Mundal.

5 June 1860.

Maniruddin Mundal.

Maniruddin Mundal.

5 June
1860.

understand, and my petition was given to the dewan, who tore it up because it was written on unstamped paper. I was told to put in a petition on stamped paper; but I thought it of no use, as the Sahib and factory people were there. I have since complained to the Commissioner, but there has been nothing done; I cannot say on what date I did so, but believe it was about a month or six weeks ago; it was a few days before the old Commissioner went away, and the new Commissioner came. Had I sold my house, I should have got 500 to 700 rupees.

1272. President.] Are you an indigo ryot of the factory?—I was formerly, but for the last 10 or 12 years I have not sown indigo; this complaint has no actual connexion with the cultivation of indigo.

1273. Mr. Sale.] You formerly used to sow indigo, how is it you do not sow now?—I was half ruined, and therefore got rid of it.

1274. President.] How is it that you managed to pay all these fines?—I had a very profitable fruit garden and some ginger.

1275. Mr. Sale.] Who is your zemindar?—Tilak Chunder Choudari.

1276. Mr. Fergusson.] If the police had been bribed, don't you think that they would have taken up your case?—If the police got 100 rupees or a large sum, they would do justice.

[Commission adjourned at Six p.m.]

Thursday, 7th June 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C.S., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., C.S.; W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Rev. J. Sale;
Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

Rev. CHARLES HENRY BLUMHARDT, Missionary of the Church Missionary Society, called in; and Examined on oath.

*Rev. C. H.
Blumhardt.*

7 June
1860.

1277. President.] WILL you state to the Commission the districts or places in which you have acquired your experience of the ryots?—I have been for 21 years in the Kishnagur district, and have been residing almost all that time at the Sudder station, but have occasionally had charge of Chupra also, and a short time of Solo. I have had charge of several villages connected with the Sudder station, at about eight or ten, or as far as 16 miles from it. In former years I travelled a little more into the district than I have lately done; some of the people of my villages have settled elsewhere, and I have now only three villages connected with my division of the Kishnagur district.

1278. Can you state from about what date the ryots have evinced an increased dislike to indigo, and under what form or shape this dislike was first manifested?—I beg to state that the dislike to indigo planting has been evinced nearly from the time when I first came to the district; of this I can give several proofs. I remember that from the first time of my arrival at Kishnagur, when going round into the villages, constant complaints were made to me against indigo cultivation. At that time I did not take so much notice of it, because I thought it was simply a propensity of the natives to complain; however, sometimes more serious complaints were made to me of oppression and of the impossibility of proceeding with indigo cultivation, because it did not pay them. Very often the factory servants complained to me that for many months they had not received a farthing of pay; as an instance of this, I will just mention what occurred about 17 or 18 years ago in the Khalbolia factory. After

Mr. Harris's death, who was the former proprietor of that factory, a relation of his, a Mr. Andrew, succeeded him. It happened one day that the planter was locked up in his own house, and by his own factory servants; they watched the house from outside, armed, and ready to kill him, and threatening to do so if he did not pay their wages in a day or two. The factory servants were numerous; Mr. Andrew was kept as a prisoner in his house for two days. On one of these days, however, he managed to thrust a note through the door for one of his servants to take to the magistrate of Kishnagur, asking him for immediate aid. The magistrate sent a large number of burkundazes for his relief, and they happened to arrive there at a happy moment when most of the factory servants had gone to eat their food. On the arrival of the burkundazes, Mr. Andrew was delivered, and the servants ran away. Mr. Andrew told me this himself at my own table a day or two after his release, and added as the cause of this that the men had not been paid for two years; this delay of the payment may have been caused by a confusion in the accounts at the time of Mr. Harris's death.

1279. Mr. Fergusson.] Are you aware that Mr. Andrew had not command of money, and was shortly after this obliged to give up the factory on that account?—Mr. Andrew himself told me that he had no money at the time, and begged the factory servants to wait for a few days, as he shortly expected to receive money from Calcutta; Mr. Andrew very soon after this left Khalbolia, but I do not know why he did so.

1280. President.] What form did the complaints

plaints you allude to take some years ago, and what form have they taken lately?—The form of complaints then were much the same as now; the ryots complained that their carts and bullocks were taken away, and little or no remuneration given for them. They also said, that the indigo crops did not pay them, and further that the debts of their parents were handed down from father to son for generations. I remember one of the bearers of the chapel of Bahirgatchi, a head man of the village, sowed some indigo. This man often complained to me, but I did not much listen to his complaints; he died about nine years ago, and his indigo liabilities have been transferred to his children; they have been sowing up to the last year. I may mention also of another instance in a village called Pipligatchi, when the bearer of the chapel, the head man of the village, continually complained to me that he could not remain any longer in the village. His story ran thus: he first sowed indigo on a few beegahs of land, but the season having been bad, other adverse circumstances brought him so deeply in the books of the planter, that gradually he had to give up all his lands for indigo cultivation. One evening when I was in the village, he complained to me most bitterly, and declared he could not remain in the village any longer; I spent about three hours with him, talking with him. He asked my advice on the subject, and I told him that he had better remain in the village; but a few weeks afterwards I received the news that one night he had taken his wife, children, and cattle, and left the village; the man is now in Chupra, his name is Noor Mahomed; he is a Christian; this case occurred about six years ago.

1281. Mr. Fergusson.] On what concern did this take place?—At Bahirgatchi, which is connected with Bansberri and Pipligatchi, a small out-factory of the Bansberria concern.

1282. President.] What form have these complaints taken of later years?—I believe there are various reasons for the present increased dislike to indigo planting. First, I would mention the great rise in the price of food and all articles of bazar supply, which makes it very difficult for the poor people to live. It is no exaggeration to say that everything is twice as dear as it was only six years ago. The planters have unfortunately not gone along with the times in raising the wages of labour and the price of the indigo plant, and therefore the cup of the patience of the ryots is at last full and now runs over. I believe also, that the insurrection in the Sonthal districts has greatly encouraged the natives of Bengal to come forward with their complaints, asking for the same rights which the Sonthals have obtained. It is also very probable that the late mutiny has inspired the ryots with some energy which till now was latent.

1283. Then, is the Commission to understand, that it is your opinion that the increased dislike is solely owing to the causes just mentioned, and that it is not owing to more grievous acts of oppression, injustice, and violence, such as cutting down trees and gardens, kidnapping men and keeping them in confinement, burning or breaking down houses, forcibly carrying off cattle, or gross outrages upon women?—I would not say that the causes I have just mentioned are the only ones to account for this dislike; there may be others of which I am not aware. At the same time it is my opinion that such acts of oppression and violence as you have just mentioned in the question, are not more numerous in the present day than they were some 15 or 16 years ago.

1284. Can you not state the grounds on which you form that opinion, and has any person ever distinctly complained to you of having himself suffered from any one of these acts of violence or oppression?—I cannot say that any person has ever come to me to complain of having so suffered, though I must say that I have often heard of many such instances from third parties.

1285. Mr. Fergusson.] As far as you know, do you think that within the last six or seven years such acts of oppression, as are mentioned, are less numerous than formerly?—I believe that of late they are less numerous, and there has been on the whole rather an improvement among the indigo planters, and most of the complaints that have from time to time been brought to my notice had reference to the oppressions of the servants of the planters. I have often been told by the ryots that they do not so much blame the Sahib himself, as the servants connected with the concern.

1286. President.] Then, are the Commission clearly to understand, that your opinion as to the existence of any of the graver acts of oppression mentioned, whether at any time few or numerous, is based for the most part on popular estimation and current report?—I have had no personal or practical knowledge of any such acts, at the same time I have heard of many such acts of oppression which I have not stored up in my memory so as to be able to relate them, and the accuracy of which statements I have had no means of testing.

1287. Mr. Sale.] Have you never had reason to believe or to think that a village has been plundered by lattials?—I had once an opportunity of witnessing the consequences of an affray which took place about six years ago, in a village only five or six miles from Kishnagur; the name of the village is Maharajpore. I happened to be going to Bahirgachi to pay a visit to my congregation there, and on my way I had to pass through this village, which had been attacked by lattials only the day previous; the village was plundered and partly destroyed. I passed through the village early in the morning in my palankeen, and did not then observe, as I passed through, that anything had happened; but when I arrived at Bahirgachi, I found all the people, both non-Christians and Christians, in a state of great excitement and fright. When I inquired into the cause of it they seemed surprised that I did not know what had happened the day before, and then they told me all about it; but rather in a cautious way, being evidently afraid lest they should have to suffer for revealing the facts to me. I was told that the planter of the Bansberria factory had been anxious to get a footing for indigo in the village of Maharajpore, which belonged to a zemindar; it may be, that some of the ryots had received advances. The zemindar was determined that no indigo should be sown in his village, and when at the seed time the planter sent his people to sow indigo, they were driven back. The planter then made another effort, and sent some lattials to force the ryots, but these also were driven back. The planter then collected a larger number of lattials, and sent them to the village; the planter himself was not present, and these men commenced the work of destruction.

Rev. C. H. Blumhardt.

7 June
1860.

Rev. C. H.
Blumhardt.

7 June
1860.

I was told that one man was killed, one was missing, and two or three severely wounded, and that the houses were plundered and pulled down, and the women stripped of their clothes. I remained that day with my people at Bahirgachi, and in the following morning, on my return to Kishnagur, I stopped at the village of Maharajpore to verify the statement I had heard. I found the village wholly deserted; not a man, woman, or child was to be seen; I saw also several broken down houses, but did not notice any burnt ones.

1288. President.] Was any investigation made into this matter by the authorities, and if so, with what result?—The case was tried in the Court of Kishnagur, and came also to the Sessions Court. About 10 of the factory servants were sentenced to various periods of imprisonment, varying from four to 12 years. An appeal was afterwards made by the planter to the Sudder Nizamut, and there the case was dismissed, and the prisoners released. The Court was of opinion that there was not sufficient evidence of an affray having taken place at all.

1289. Then, is the Commission to understand that no person came to you to complain of this outrage, and that your passing through the village was purely accidental?—Quite so.

1290. Mr. Fergusson.] Were not you summoned as a witness on the trial?—No one was aware that I had been in the village.

1291. Would you have had any objection to go to the court as a witness?—I would have had no objection whatsoever.

1292. Mr. Sale.] Has it been your practice to search out and make complaints of oppression against the planters?—No, never; on the contrary I have always made it a point to be as ignorant of these matters as possible.

1293. President.] Since the increased dislike to indigo cultivation has become apparent, did the ryots ever refer to you on the subject; and if so, what line of conduct have you recommended them to adopt?—No, they have not referred to me for advice; but since the new Act has been in operation, some of them have occasionally passed my compound when I met them, and, as usual, they brought their complaints against indigo; but I advised them, by all means, to sow indigo for this year, telling them that their interests were at the heart of the Government, and that I was sure, in course of time, everything would be righted.

1294. Did you ever explain to any of them that the new law was only for this season, and as they had sown indigo for many years, it would be better for them to sow indigo for this year, and that afterwards it would be optional with them to make new arrangements?—I have told them more or less the purport of this; but I did not tell them exactly that after this year they could make their own arrangements; for I was not sure whether the Government would not make arrangements for them.

1295. Mr. Fergusson.] Did any of them ever tell you that they understood that Government had given orders to put a stop to indigo cultivation?—Some of them did so; but for some time they were perfectly confused; such different orders having been issued from time to time by the Government officials with reference to indigo sowings, which made it really difficult for them to understand the real state of the case.

1296. Mr. Temple.] Did any of them refer to any order to have come from the Queen or the Supreme Government on the subject?—No, they knew that a commission of enquiry was to be appointed, and that satisfied them.

1297. President.] You have stated that the ryots often appeared to be confused by the different orders, apart from the summary law, to what do you allude to?—I refer to an order given by Mr. Herschel, the magistrate of Nuddea. I believe that the joint magistrate of Damuhuda was acting upon one order, when Mr. Herschel issued another almost opposite. The order was something to the effect, that the ryots were not obliged to sow indigo where they had sown rice before.

1298. Have you any reason to believe that any perwanna issuing from Kalaroa, in the south of the Nuddea district, had reached the ryots with whom you conversed, and that they were in any way affected thereby?—I cannot say whether the persons with whom I conversed had heard of this perwanna; but I had reason to believe that the sum and substance of that perwanna spread far and wide in the Kishnagur district. My reason for believing this was, because it was the common bazar talk; every body talked about it.

1299. Then is it mainly to the belief in that perwanna that you attribute the unwillingness of the ryots to sow indigo, and can you say about what month you first heard of it?—I have already in a former answer stated some of the chief reasons which led to this extreme unwillingness to cultivate indigo; and therefore, I am not inclined to think that this perwanna was the main spring in setting the machinery at work; but it may probably have been one of the smaller wheels needed, without which the machinery would not have worked.

1300. Are you of opinion that if a perwanna were issued to-morrow, enjoining the ryots to discontinue the cultivation of tobacco, mulberry, mustard, or any other crop, commonly cultivated in the district, the ryots would act upon it?—My opinion is that the ryots would say, "Tell us what other crop we shall cultivate, and one which will give us the same profit as those you prohibit, and we will do so."

1301. Mr. Fergusson.] If the ryots were under advances for the cultivation of this supposed prohibited article, do you not think they would avail themselves of the prohibition, so as to escape the re-payment of their advances?—I do not think they would, neither do I think it is a leading motive with them to escape paying their advances; but I am not well prepared to answer this question, because I do not see that the cases are parallel.

1302. President.] Do you think from your general knowledge of the Bengali character, that the ryots generally, and the inhabitants of Kishnagur in particular, are in that condition, that they would pay any regard to the expressed wishes of the Government regarding their agricultural pursuits?—I do not think they would willingly disobey the orders of Government; but I believe they would consider it a hardship to be dictated to, as to what crops they should sow or not, as they know their own interests best.

1303. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Do the ryots willingly take advances?—Generally not.

1304. When a ryot refuses to take advances, is he not generally compelled to take it by force, however unwilling he may be?—He is not exactly forced to take advances. In the first instance, the advance for indigo is given him by persuasion. A man may be in distress, and glad to get a few rupees in hand; but I have been repeatedly told that that when a ryot once takes advances, he never comes out of the books of the planter, and therefore the advances given afterwards are very often forced upon him some how or other.

1305. If a ryot persists in refusing to take advances for cultivating indigo, is he not kept in confinement by the planter, and forced to take them?—I have heard of such cases, but have no personal knowledge of them.

1306. Do you know whether the planters keep lattials to commit affrays?—No; the planters do not exactly keep a staff of lattials, but they all keep burkundazes for the protection of their property; if they want lattials for special purposes, they are easily procured. There is not, however, much difference between a lattial and a burkundaz.

1307. Do you think that a ryot can contend fairly with a planter for his just rights in the Foujdarry court, or in any other court?—Never, never; it is a hopeless case, because the planter has his mookhtar in the court. The ryot has not the means of employing a mookhtar to plead his cause. At the same time, it must be remembered, how difficult it is for a ryot to bring any case into court. He has first of all to pay for a stamp paper, then to get the petition written out, for which he has to pay; he has, besides, to deposit six or seven rupees for the witnesses, and if he does not bribe all the amlas in the court over to his side there is no chance of his obtaining satisfaction. But suppose that by some extraordinary chance he gains the case, the man is marked, and cannot remain any longer in the village, because he will be persecuted by the planter.

1308. President. Can you state any particular case, in which the want of means to bribe has defeated the just cause of the ryot, or when a ryot having gained a case against a planter, has been obliged to leave his village?—I cannot mention any particular instances; but judge from what has happened to me personally when I made complaints in the courts about some cases in which I knew the plaintiffs had a right on their side; cases in which I had even seen the petitions drawn up myself in the court in behalf of my people, but nevertheless I lost such cases, because I could not and would not bribe the amlas and the mookhtar. In fact, I have never gained any case in the court for my people, however clear it may have been, so that long since I have given up helping them in their complaints in the courts. From this I conclude that the ryot would not meet with any better fate.

1309. Do you know of any instances of people in the Mofussil having been ruined by fighting with planters for their just rights?—No, I do not remember any such case.

1310. Do you think that Europeans, not British subjects, treat natives better or worse than British born subjects?—I know no difference; the natives do not make distinctions between Englishmen and other Europeans.

1311. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee. If planters, British subjects, were subject to the same laws and equal punishment with the natives of the country by the Mofussil authorities, would they not then refrain from committing affrays, plundering villages, and committing other unlawful acts?—I do not think that they would act otherwise than they now do. If a man is determined to do anything wrong he will find ways and means to do it.

1312. President. You have resided a good deal at the Sudder station; are you of opinion that ryots and poor people, living within a reasonable or moderate distance of that station, enjoy facilities of obtaining redress?—Of course, those who live near the station have some facilities, because they can come easier to the station, have the police and the magistrate near, and can have their cases quickly investigated into, and in so far they have an advantage over people who live further off.

1313. Then you are of opinion that, generally speaking, the police and the magistrates, European or native, have been disposed to treat the ryots with fairness, and to redress their complaints?—I have every reason to say that the European and Eurasian magistrates, and, with few exceptions, the natives also are anxious that justice should be administered in the land; and it is only their misfortune that their efforts are very often frustrated by the roguery of the native subordinates in the courts. As an instance of this, I would mention what a magistrate of Kishnagur, who had been three years full magistrate there, mentioned to me one day, saying that he could look back with satisfaction to only one case which he had decided according to justice, and that was a case which he decided when he was yet an assistant magistrate. He went to the spot where an outrage had been committed, and having fully satisfied himself of the merits of the case, he gave his decision, which was afterwards appealed to the judge, and the judge reversed the order. At last an appeal was made to the Sudder Court, and then the magistrate's order was upheld, simply because he had been to the spot and satisfied himself about the case there.

1314. Are we to understand from this, that in your view, what is necessary for the ryots is the establishment of some subdivisions, and the frequency of the practice of magistrates going to the spot?—Yes, decidedly so; especially as the police (as it is at present in the Mofussil) are so very corrupt.

1315. Do you think that, in the late disturbances, the police have been biassed against the ryots, and have acted unfairly?—I am not competent to answer that question, as I have been too far away myself from the seat of the disturbances.

1316. Mr. Temple. Since you have been in Kishnagur, have you observed any increase in the cultivation of waste lands or improvement in the general condition of the people, and, if so, do you attribute such to indigo planters?—I believe a great many beegahs of chur lands have, within the last twenty years, been used for indigo, which formerly lay waste; but I do not think that the planters generally take new land, which requires a great deal of labour before it can be made useful for indigo cultivation; as for the condition of the people, I am sorry to say that I see no change. Their houses, their mode of living, and every thing connected with their domestic affairs, are just as they were 20 years ago. If anything, many are even poorer now than they were then, though their bodily appearance may not indicate want.

1317. Mr. Fergusson. Has the condition of the zemindar improved within that time; have they become richer?—It is very difficult to say, as natives generally keep their own affairs close to themselves.

1318. Has not the condition of the mahajans, as evidenced by their purchasing landed property and other circumstances, improved within that time?—I believe the mahajans have become richer;

Rev. C. H. Blumhardt.

7 June 1860.

Rev. C. H.
Blumhardt.

7 June
1860.

richer; there is no doubt of that; and I wish they were a little more moderate in accumulating wealth by extortion, fraud, short weights, and other unfair proceedings at the expense of the natives.

1319. Are not the ryots generally in debt to the mahajans, and is it not as difficult for a ryot to get out of a mahajan's books, as you say it is for them to get out of a planter's?—Yes, they are; and I believe it is generally quite as difficult for them to get out of a mahajan's books. The mode of proceeding is as follows: A poor villager has nothing to eat; he goes to the mahajan, makes an agreement with him to supply him for the year with rice from his golas; the rice is measured out to him perhaps once a week. At the end of the year, before the rice crop comes in, the mahajan makes up his account, charging, of course, as much as he likes for his rice, with interest; the villager cuts his rice in the fields, but is not allowed to carry it home. The mahajan first of all takes his portion out of it, and then, if anything remains over, which is generally very little, the man is permitted to carry that home; but very often, before two months are over his head, the villager must again resort to the mahajan for advances.

1320. Do you know if it is customary for any written agreement to exist between the ryot and the mahajan, or if it is merely verbal?—I cannot say; but I think it is verbal. The fact that so very few natives can read and write gives the mahajan an advantage over the ryots at any time.

1321. Do you know if it is the practice for the mahajans to sue the ryots in the courts for their debts?—To the best of my knowledge these cases are very rare.

1322. President.] If a ryot borrows a maund of grain, can you say what proportion he has to repay?—I cannot positively tell.

1323. Mr. Fergusson.] Is it the practice with your brother missionaries to keep themselves aloof from the planters, and can you give any reason for their doing so?—I cannot say that it is the practice for them to do so. On the contrary, I know from experience, that nearly all the missionaries, more or less, have associated with the planters, and the planters with the missionaries.

1324. Then the missionaries must have had good opportunities of judging of the general condition of the planters, and of knowing if they habitually behaved oppressively to the people, and have they done so?—Yes, I believe they had opportunities; but I can now only speak for myself in this case; and I can only say, that I have not shrunk back occasionally to point out to some planters the unfairness of the system on which they cultivate indigo, which, though generally admitted, was put aside by them, under the plea that it would not otherwise pay; and on some occasions also, when ryots complained to me about minor oppressions, I went straight to the planter himself and told him all about it, because I thought openness and straightforwardness was the best course for me to pursue. I generally had a friendly hearing from the planter, and redress was also given.

1325. You stated that notwithstanding the general rise in prices, the planters had not raised the wages of the servants; has the Government, in any instances you know of, raised the wages of its servants about the courts or other places?—No, I do not think that Government has made any change; but I think it highly desirable that it should do so.

1326. President.] Are you not aware that within the last year, the salary of the mohurrir of the thannah, has been raised from seven to thirty or forty rupees a month, that of the jemadar from eight to fifteen and twenty, and that of some of the burkundazes from four to five and six; the whole involving an outlay of some lacks of rupees, and embracing all the districts in Lower Bengal?—No, I never heard of it before, and I am very glad to hear of it.

1327. Can you state any concerns or factories in which schools or dispensaries are established for the benefit of the surrounding population?—I know that Mr. Forlong had, some years ago, established a school and hospital at Mulnath, to general satisfaction, but I do not know of any other instance.

1328. Mr. Temple.] When you stated that you have had to remonstrate with the planters regarding the existing system, were such occasions frequent or otherwise?—They were by no means uncommon and took place generally either at my house or at the planter's place.

1329. Have you been acquainted with planters who have behaved justly and considerately to their ryots?—Yes, I know planters who, to the best of their ability, under existing circumstances, and with a bad system, try to behave kindly to the ryots. There are some planters for whom I entertain a sincere respect.

1330. Have such planters been able to keep their indigo ryots tolerably contented?—I am sorry to say that they have not met with better success than the rest. However kind and considerate a planter may be, he cannot lift the ryot out of the mire in which he is swamped.

1331. But do you not think that by offering various and collateral advantages, a planter may manage to keep his ryots content, especially if he be a landlord?—He can do so only by cultivating nij abad.

1332. Do you not think, that if you had the ijara of a village, you could induce the ryots to sow with indigo, say three or four cottas out of each beegah, without impoverishing the estate, and without creating discontent?—I do not think that I could without injuring my tenant; though he might not be ruined by doing so, he certainly would not profit by it, and this is injury enough.

1333. But considering the great influence which a landlord must always possess, is it not worth a tenant's while to cultivate a little indigo in order to please him?—Up to the present day the ryots have exactly done this out of respect to their landlord, whom they look upon as their father and mother; this relation has now become rather estranged, and the ryots now consider their own interests first.

1334. Can you suggest any remedy which might cure the existing estrangement?—I can only throw out a few hints; but I am not very sanguine as to my suggestions answering. The first would be to have all through the district only nij cultivation, and no more ryotti. I know that the planters will say that this would not pay them; but I know also two or three planters in my neighbourhood whose cultivation is mainly nij, and they have had no trouble this year.

A second suggestion would be, if the planters can possibly persuade the ryots to cultivate indigo, that they must raise the salaries of the servants of the factory very considerably, and thereby prevent their oppressing the ryots by exactions exactions and extortions. They will also have to pay more, for the indigo itself than they now pay for it. A third suggestion is that the planter should enter into a contract with the ryot, that is, to give him a certain sum of money yearly for each beegah of land on which he cultivates indigo, whether the season prove a good or a bad one. By this I mean that the planter should pay, say ten or twelve rupees for each beegah of land; the ryot will have to sow the seed and see that the land is weeded and cared for, and the crop will be the property of the planter.

1335. Do you think that with these terms the ryots would willingly cultivate indigo?—I believe a few years ago, they would have most willingly done so, but their minds are at present so agitated that it will be difficult to come to any terms with them.

1336. Does this agitation proceed solely from the causes you have mentioned or from any external instigation, such as from the police, the zemindar, or others?—I believe hunger is the chief instigator, and any other little excitement coming in contact with it, makes them strive to satisfy their desires.

1337. But have you any knowledge of instigation proceeding from the police?—No, I have not.

1338. Do you think that if the police had used such instigation, the fact would have come to your knowledge during your intercourse with the people?—I believe it would have come to my knowledge; but the truth is, I have never troubled myself much about such temporal work, as I was afraid that by doing so I would neglect my chief work.

1339. Do you think that the police could have had any motive or interest in fomenting this agitation?—I cannot see what motive they could have had in instigating the ryots against the planters, especially as the darogas are generally kept on good terms with the planters.

1340. Do you think the zemindars have in any way fomented this agitation?—Although I know that the zemindars are often at loggerheads with the planters, yet I do not think that on this occasion they have fomented this disturbance.

1341. Do you think that the ryots could, without a sense of support in some quarter or other, take the line of conduct they have, and is their doing so consistent with their general character?—The ryots have certainly lately been under the impression that they had the support of Government, and particularly that of the Lieutenant Governor, and that I suppose has inspired them with that boldness and energy with which we now see them come forward; though certainly I cannot quite reconcile it with the previous notion I had of their character.

1342. Do you then think that formerly the ryots entertained the belief that the cause of indigo planting was especially supported by Government?—I certainly believe that some 15 or 20 years ago they laboured under that impression, especially if they did remember that the planting of indigo was 100 years ago (if I am not mistaken) a Government monopoly, and that many of the civil servants had many years ago indigo plantations together with their civil appointments.

1343. But what has been the belief of the ryots for the last 10 years on this subject?—They certainly thought till lately that the planters enjoyed the sanction of the Government in carrying out their present system of cultivation, but they have been otherwise informed within the last year, and they have discovered that it is not so.

1344. Then do you think that the agitation is fresh and sudden, or has it been gradually growing up for years?—The present agitation as it exists now is certainly a new and sudden thing.

1345. Mr. Sale.] Have you any reason to believe that a recent order of some of the planters regarding October sowings in the Kishnagur district has had anything to do with the agitation?—I have heard of no such order.

1346. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Do you not think if the ryot were allowed to cultivate all his lands with rice and other crops of his own liking, that he would very soon be able to pay off his mahajan's debts, and become independent?—That is just what the ryot is fighting for, and although I do bear no ill-will to any planter, but like to live in peace with everybody, I do think this is the only means of making the ryots independent, happy, and contented.

1347. Mr. Sale.] Do you know whether many of the planters act in the capacity of mahajans as well as in that of zemindar and indigo planter?—I know that Mr. James Smith, of Katuli, does so, and Mr. John White, of Bansberria, within the last two years has tried to make arrangements to become a mahajan; I don't know however whether he has succeeded or not. Besides these I do not know of any other.

1348. Are you able to say whether their system is nearly the same as that of the Bengali mahajan?—I am afraid it is not much better.

1349. From what you know of what is called the contract between the planter and the ryot, would you say that every ryot who endeavours to free himself from it is necessarily dishonest?—By no means dishonest; on the contrary, it is amazing that the ryots have till now been so patient. A planter told me only the other day, that he knew the ryot was a loser on each beegah of land of about 11 or 12 annas by his own calculation. If this be so, it is only astonishing that any ryot remains connected with the indigo cultivation.

1350. Mr. Temple.] But under the circumstances, is not the ryot's freeing himself from the fact of an unfulfilled contract much the same as breaking it, and is this morally justifiable?—I cannot consider that what is called a contract, or what the planter attempts to prove from his books as a contract, is in reality a contract. A contract ought to be renewed after a certain period and last only for a definite number of years, but in the present case this is not so.

1351. Mr. Sale.] From what you have seen of the new summary law for the enforcement of the fulfilment of contracts, do you think that if that law were made permanent, it would work beneficially to the ryot?—No, it would not, and indeed the law could not be permanently enforced. The ryots would rather die in jail than sow indigo.

Rev. C. H. Blumhardt.

7 June
1860.

[Commission adjourned at 5.30 P.M.]

Friday, 8th June 1860.

PRESENT.

W. S. SEATON-KARR, Esq., C. S., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., C. S., W. F. Fergusson, Esq., Reverend J. Sale, Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

JUNOO MUNDAL, Inhabitant of Ikhtyarpore, Zillah Nuddea, Thannah Dowlutgunge, Factory Birkishtopore, Sudder Factory, Khalispore, called in; and Examined on oath.

Junoo
Mundal.
—
8 June
1860.

1352. President.] How many years have you been sowing indigo, and what amount?—My grandfather and three brothers used to sow indigo. They held land jointly; I cannot say what proportion they sowed. My father separated from the common mess and sowed, and I have sown as long as I can recollect; my share of the family property is 10 rupees jumma at about four beegahs per rupee, i. e. 40 beegahs in all. Of this I sow six beegahs with indigo, which they call three. I never receive any advances; I cannot say how much indigo these three beegahs have produced, as I never go to the factory.

1353. Can you not say how much indigo you returned last year?—I cannot say; sometimes I take 10 carts, sometimes five carts.

1354. Can you state how your account now stands with the factory?—No, I cannot.

1355. Can you read and write?—No, I cannot read or write.

1356. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you sown indigo this year?—No, I have not; I could not stand the oppression of not being paid for indigo plant and cart hire. Last year, in the month of Jyeshtha, they ploughed over some young date trees.

1357. Have you complained to the magistrate?—I have not complained to the magistrate; wherefore should I?

1358. Have you been sued under the new Act?—Yes, I have; I cannot say whether my case was dismissed, or struck off the file. The account books were called for at the Cutcherry at Damuhuda; I was present, but cannot say whether the final order was favourable or not, nothing of mine has been sold off.

1359. President.] Then, if you have not sown indigo this year, and the suit against you has not been attended with bad results, what have you to complain of?—I don't know what they are going to do to me, and I hear that a case for breaking up indigo has been brought against me. I believe it has been brought by the planter, but I know none of the particulars; therefore I have come here.

1360. Mr. Fergusson.] Where and with whom have you been staying since you have been down here?—I am living in Short's Bazaar, in the house of a Mahomedan woman who keeps lodgings; I pay a pice a day. There are five or six ryots there.

1361. By whose advice did they come down?—They did not come down at anybody's advice. They came down to make known their condition.

FAKIR MAHOMED, Inhabitant of Shuta, Thannah Dowlutgunge, Factory Birkishtopore, Zillah Nuddea, called in; and Examined on oath.

Fakir
Mahomed.
—

1362. President.] WHAT jumma have you, and what amount of it do you sow with indigo?—I have a jumma of 12 rupees, about 28 or 29 beegahs, of which I sow two beegahs with indigo, but according to my measurement it would be 4½ beegahs. My father and grandfather used to get advances, I never did. As long as our village was under the zemindar, I used to get a rupee or two, but since the factory has got the lease from the Deh Chowdry's of Ranaghat, we have not received anything. The zemindary is divided into seven shares; of these two shares have been given in putni, and five in lease.

1363. After they granted the ijara or putni was any increase of rent demanded from you on any pretext?—We were called upon for 1½ annas ijaradari on each rupee of rent.

1364. Did you not protest against this demand?—We did not like to pay it, for who likes to pay more money, but it was useless to protest.

1365. Besides the above, had you anything to pay in the shape of fees to the amla?—The ijaradari amounted to 18 annas; besides that we had to pay to the collecting gomashita as much as made it up to three rupees; this was all on account of rents, and had no connection with indigo. We are told that a bonus had to be given for the lease to the zemindar, and that we must make it up.

1366. Independent of this, can you state exactly how your account is with regard to indigo?—I am not in a position to state how my account is exactly; but the amin, takidgir, and devan all take a rupee or two from me yearly.

1367. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Do you cultivate yourself?—Yes, I do; I have a brother who does too.

1368. Are you not in the employ of a native gentleman of Ranaghat?—No, I am no servant; I don't know how to read or write.

1369. Can you state how many bundles of plant you delivered last year?—Last year I delivered nine bundles, I got a hath chitti for the same; I was credited by the factory with nine bundles. In other years the produce has been five, nine, and even 20 bundles.

1370. In what year did you deliver the 20 bundles, and did you derive any profit that season?—That was the year before last, but I got nothing for it; they pay us at six bundles per rupee.

1371. Mr.

1371. Mr. Fergusson.] After delivering the 20 bundles, did you not get fresh advances for the next year?—No, I did not.

1372. Have you sown indigo this year, and if not, how did you avoid sowing?—No, I have not sown, but a suit for breach of contract was instituted against me; the factory withdrew the suit itself. I cannot say for what reason; but the cases brought against other ryots are dismissed, because they received only two or three annas for two or three beegahs. On seeing this, as I understand, the factory withdrew the case against me, and 17 or 18 cases have fared likewise.

1373. If you did not sow, and your case was dismissed, then what have you to complain of?—When the magistrate finally dismisses a case against any of us, of course it is all right; but in this case the factory withdrew its own suit, and we don't know what may happen in future.

1374. Are you in debt to the mahajan, and to what extent?—I am in debt, and so are nearly all of us, and I have been so since the lease was taken by the factory. Formerly I could clear myself every year; now I don't know what the amount of my debt is.

1375. Is your debt in money or kind, and what rate of interest is demanded?—Two pice in the rupee for money, and for grain 50 per cent.

1376. President.] In what months do you generally borrow in kind?—From Magh, and each successive month till Bhadro, when the new rice comes in.

1377. When you are obliged to borrow, can you say what the bazar rate is?—In this month 12 palis of grain are given for the rupee.

1378. Then, when the new rice comes in, that is to say from Bhadro to Posh, at what rate is the market then?—In these days there is not much difference, perhaps it is a pali or two more for the rupee.

1379. How many beegahs did you sow with these or other crops?—After my three and a half beegahs for indigo, I sowed five beegahs with rice, but could not cultivate and weed them properly, because my time is taken up in attending to indigo.

1380. Have you any garden or bamboo land?—I planted some plantain and date trees, but they were all destroyed by the factory people.

1381. Did you not complain to the magistrate or daroga?—Where should I find a magistrate to complain? Damuhuda is about eight or nine miles from my house. Last year I was confined in a godown for three days. I was wanted to go and give evidence in the case of a kabulyat against the people of two villages, but I refused, because I could not give false evidence. They kept me confined three days; after this I was taken to the court.

1382. Mr. Fergusson.] You say that you cultivated 3½ beegahs according to your measurement; do you mean to say that it occupied so much of your time that you could not attend to your field or other matters?—From Posh to Baisakh we are never allowed to go near our rice fields.

1383. Before the lease was obtained by the factory, did you sow less indigo?—Yes, I used to sow a beegah and a half of factory measurement. In my estimation they then took 25 cottas in the beegah. Since that time when I can fee the amin they take three beegahs; if I cannot, then they take three and a half.

1384. Before the lease was taken by the factory, did not the zemindar and his servants require more presents in the way of marriages, births, deaths, poojas, &c., than during the Sahib's time?—I have a jumma of 12 rupees. The most I had to pay including everything was 12 rupees 8 annas; now it costs me 15 rupees.

1385. President.] What kind of people and what rank in life are the devan, amin, and tahid-gir?—The naib of the factory is Sham Gosain, and the Dewan is Grihish Moulik, a Brahmin; they are highly respectable people. Since they have been in the service of the factory they have built pukka houses in their respective villages of Boyli and of Dunghaut, and Grihish Moulik's house in Joyrampore.

1386. Is Grihish Moulik still employed?—No, he was removed in Chaitro last, and since then he has been imprisoned on a charge of dacoity.

1387. Has Grihish Moulik instigated you or any one of you not to sow indigo?—No, in our opinion he acted towards us as a dacoit, and many people are glad that he has been confined.

1388. What rank in life is the factory amin?—There was a Kayast amin, but he has been lately exchanged for a Brahmin, but whether Kayast or Brahmin, they are equally oppressive to us.

1389. Mr. Fergusson.] Have many of the Joyrampore ryots come along with you?—None; Joyrampore is eight miles from my village.

1390. President.] What sums did you spend at your marriage?—I was married in 1251, Bengali year; I borrowed the sum from the mahajan, and have paid it off since.

1391. Did you never borrow from the factory without interest, or receive any other assistance?—No, I never got any; I never got my just dues, and have become very poor. If I wish to complain, the amin and factory people don't let me go near the Sahib.

Fakir
Mahomed.

8 June
1860.

ALAM BISWAS, Inhabitant of Shatgarri, Thannah Kaloopole, Zillah Jessore, Khedjura Factory, Sinduri Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

1392. President.] Did you sow indigo this year, and if not, why not?—I did not sow this year, although I have sown before; I have sown, and my father and grandfather have sown before me. Last year I sowed two and half beegahs; formerly I used to sow one and a half beegahs; by degrees the extent has been increased; the year I could afford to fee the servants, it was not increased; my reason for not sowing is that I am required to give all my time to the cultivation of indigo. Last year I managed to sow 12 beegahs of rice lands; as I could not sow it early enough it got burnt up; had I sown it early it would have got strength. We are compelled to crush the clods and weed the indigo fields, consequently we have no time. This year we heard that it was the order of the Queen that ryots were to sow indigo or not, as they liked; I did not hear or see it as a written order, but everybody was talking about it. We heard of this order this year in Agran last, and did not take advances; in the other year the advances were merely a form by word of mouth. We did not consult about it, but every man resolved in his own mind that he would not sow. After hearing this, we presented a petition in thannah Kaloopole in

72—I.

Alam
Biswas.

K 4

Magh

Alam
Biswas.
—
8 June
1860.

Magh or Phalgun, praying for protection against being obliged to sow indigo, on which the daroga granted us assistance. After that some of the villagers went to the magistrate's tent; I did not; I heard that they were imprisoned; some said for making a riotous attack upon the tent, and some said it was for a breach of contract.

1393. Before this year were you ever imprisoned or ill-treated by the planters or the factory servants?—No, I was never beaten or imprisoned, nor were my bamboos ever cut or my fruits taken. I have had to give two rupees for road making, and also two rupees for the races, but I did not go to see them.

1394. Were the roads made for which that money was taken?—Yes; roads were made from Sinduri to Golder, and from Golder to Khedjura factory; there is also a road from Caragoda to Kaligunge. When our carts go on these roads, we are called on for four pice for each trip.

1395. Mr. Fergusson.] Is that a Government or a factory toll?—It is a factory toll; this tax they have not exacted this year. There is no toll-bar on the road; but beyond Shambunuggur they take this tax on the pretext that our carts cut up the roads.

1396. Does not the indigo plant come on these roads?—Yes, but the road does not lead to the market that we go to.

1397. President.] This year there has been a suit against you; what amount of damage have you paid?—This year I was cast in 52 rupees damages, i. e., at the rate of 20 rupees a beegah; I was three days kept on bail on the breach of contract case, before I raised the money.

1398. You have had to pay this money; would it not have been much better for you to have sown this year?—I have only one man to cultivate; I don't drive a plough myself, and that man was afraid to go near the factory, and I was tired of the business. I have always been giving indigo to the factory, and sowing for so many years; I thought that if I looked into the accounts I should have come out on the right side in the case; in fact, I thought there would have been a squaring of past accounts for many years. I have pawned my cattle to get the money, but my homestead remains; my jumma is eight rupees on two beegahs and 18 cottas of land, paying a rupee of rent.

1399. Mr. Fergusson.] Will you sow indigo if a new arrangement is made?—No, I cannot sow under such oppression.

1400. Mr. Salé.] How much indigo did you give last year to the factory?—Last year I gave nine bundles.

1401. How much did you get for it?—I got nothing.

1402. To whom did you pay rent?—I am a be-ilaka ryot, and pay rent to Radha Gobindo Chowdari.

1403. Mr. Fergusson.] How many cows did you pledge to raise the 52 rupees?—Four cows; I had no money in hand; they were plough bullocks.

1404. If you had four plough bullocks, how did you make out that they were so much employed in cultivating two-and-half beegahs of indigo that you could not attend to your rice fields?—They make us plough so much backwards and forwards that we have no time for anything else.

1405. Mr. Temple.] What reason induced you to come down?—I paid the money, got the receipt, and have brought it with me to show it here, to see if I might be able to get the money back.

1406. President.] Do you clearly understand that that order is final, and that we have no power to interfere?—Now that it has been clearly explained to me I understand it.

1407. Mr. Temple.] How did you come to know that the Commission was sitting?—I came down to appeal to Government, but coming here I heard of this Commission sitting.

1408. Where have you resided since your arrival here?—At Cassia Baghan, in the house of one Buxu; he is a generous and kind man, and allowed me to use his house, which is empty.

1409. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you heard of Hurris Baboo?—I have heard of him since I came here.

1410. Mr. Temple.] Are there any other ryots in the same house with you?—Yes, four others.

1411. By whose advice did you come down to Calcutta?—Nobody's.

ISLAM MUNDAL, of Khaskarra, Village Thannah Damuhuda, Factory Ailhans Sinduri Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

Islam
Mundal.
—

1412. President.] What jumma have you, and how many beegahs do you sow with indigo?—I have 51 rupees jumma, I sow six beegahs with indigo; my father sowed before me; I have always been in the habit of sowing.

1413. Have you sown this year; and if not, why not, and what has been the result?—I have not sown this year; I am quite unable to sow any more. The planter has been in the habit of taking 20 rupees extra for the last four years since my brother's death. I have never complained about this. The factory people have cut down 40 or 50 bamboos every year; I have also been fined five rupees or so every year on pretext of road making, or cattle trespass, or for weeding, and two or three rupees are taken by the amin and takidgir; also I get nothing for carting the indigo when it is put into the vats; also the Commissioner went to Doorgapore, and we presented a petition to him to the effect that we would not sow indigo; whereupon we were told that it was optional with us to sow indigo or not. Formerly we were under the impression that the Government had a share in the produce, so after being there I did not go near the factory again, and did not sow. Wherefore in the month of Chaitro a suit for breach of contract was instituted against me; one of the principal men of my village was also sued, and he put in a razi-nama, and I was told to put in the same; but I would not consent. That case, so far as I know, is still pending, and I have come down to Calcutta on account of it.

1414. Would it not have been much better for you to have sown this year instead of being sued for breach of contract?—I thought after the Commissioner's information I need not sow. I did not then understand what was the real state of affairs.

1415. Mr. Fergusson.] Last year how much indigo did you deliver to the factory?—I believe ten or twenty boat loads, but in this there was the indigo of three or four other ryots; I received no hath chitti.

1416. Did

1416. Did you go to the factory last year?—Some days I went, some days I did not; I don't know whether I have to get anything from the factory or not.

1417. Did you receive anything from the factory either as settlement of accounts, or advances last year?—Nothing.

1418. Is your potta for a term of years and at a fixed rent?—It is a potta at a fixed rent.

1419. Mr. Sale.] Who is your zemindar?—My zemindar is Bhagwan Ghose.

1420. Mr. Fergusson.] If a decree is given against you for breach of contract, would you sow or pay the damages?—I would rather pay the damages than sow. I would sell my cows and borrow from the mahajan; I cannot bear this oppression of paying twenty rupees more than I ought to pay.

1421. Is that twenty rupees on account of rent and not indigo?—It is on account of rent, but I do not owe such rent.

1422. Mr. Temple.] When you came down to Calcutta to complain, to what court did you intend to appeal?—I heard that ten other people were going to Calcutta, and I said, I will go too.

1423. On arriving at Calcutta, who told you that this Commission was the proper place to apply to?—Two other people were coming, and I joined them.

1424. Did any one tell you in the district that this was the proper place to come to?—I heard at the thannah that there were no orders forthcoming in the zillah, and that we had better go to the Huzoor.

1425. Who told you this at the thannah or police office?—I saw a dozen people going and coming about the thannah, and they told me.

1426. It was not the daroga that told you?—No, he did not tell me.

1427. What took you to the thannah?—I was taken there on account of my case.

1428. Are you and the men who came down from Nuddea together putting up at the same house?—There are some people from my country who are working here as coolies, and I get a meal here and there.

1429. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you know Hurris Baboo?—No.

A. S. SAWERS, Esq., of Culna, in Burdwan, called in; and Examined on oath.

1430. President.] WILL you state to the Commission in what districts and concerns you have had experience in indigo planting?—I have had experience in Kishnaghur. I was partner in the Big Union, which comprised Sinduri, Katchikatta, and Katuli. For the last nine years I have been in Culna, opposite Santipore, in Burdwan.

1431. Your system in Culna is almost all nij?—Entirely nij; I have not a single indigo ryot.

1432. Will you state to the Commission the establishment which you keep up for your nij, and how you manage it?—I manage it the same way as a farm in England, with my own work-people and my own ploughs, of which I have from 300 to 400, with about two bullocks to each. Including women I have 700 Boona coolies; I have no desi coolies. I have 17,000 beegahs of indigo in cultivation. I find this sufficient, because one-half of my cultivation is what is called chitani, which is sown with the hand after the inundation subsides, without any previous preparation of the ground.

1433. By what tenure or right do you hold your lands?—Entirely under terminable ijara pottas obtained from zemindars; also I hold a small portion of rent-free lands obtained from the owners, who are brahmins.

1434. Did you not find ryots established on the lands, the leases of which you obtained from zemindars; and if so, how did you manage with any such ryots?—The lands appertaining to those factories have been held by the proprietors from time immemorial, at least ever since the factories have been in existence, which is some time since the end of the last century. Although I have stated that my indigo cultivation extends over 17,000 beegahs, I have a large quantity of land which I give out to the ryots to sow rice on; those lands I generally give for one or two years, and then resume them and give them other lands, with the object of making a rotation of crops. These are the only ryots within the limits of my concern. I have besides a large talook and villages and ijaras, where indigo is not cultivated, by which I have a command of labour.

1435. Did you find it expedient to endeavour to purchase the zemindary right for your nij lands, or have you been called on for enhanced rents, or molested in any way?—The zemindar has always the preferential claim to all alluvial accretions, and I never had the chance of purchasing the proprietary right. I have not been troubled or molested by the zemindars, because these lands, or the greater portion of them, are only suited to the cultivation of indigo; but recently, some of my leases having expired, the native proprietor of a neighbouring factory entered into competition and coerced me to pay an enhanced rent. The original jumma having been 4,300 rupees, I had to agree to pay 5,000 rupees per annum, being an increase of 700 rupees yearly; besides, I had to pay 5,000 rupees, peshhi, bearing interest at 3 rupees per cent., and re-payable at annual instalments of 1,000 rupees in deduction of the yearly rent.

1436. Was this the only case?—No; there is another, when the same party offered a jumma of 900 rupees yearly for a chur which has appertained to the factory for 50 years, at an annual jumma of 600 rupees; the lease was renewed from time to time for seven years, the last for 15 years.

1437. What was the cause of the lease being for 15 years in the last instance?—It was because a neighbouring native proprietor, by a decree of the principal sudder ameen, upheld by the judge of Nuddea, dispossessed the Gosain, who held under a mourussi potta, when the proprietors of the factory undertook the appeal to the Sudder Dewanny, at a personal cost of 7,500 rupees, against the decision of the judge, confirming that of the principal sudder ameen; the case was gained in special appeal in favour of the Gosain. On this account the lease was granted for 15 years in order to pay from the rent the expenses incurred. Under Section 6 of Act 10, of 1859, I endeavoured to claim the right of occupancy, but did not succeed, the collector being of opinion that having a lease, I could not hold on beyond that term, and that the proprietors might resume it. The lease last year was given to other parties in my absence, and I lost it. These are

Islam
Mundal.
8 June
1860.

A. S. Sawers,
Esq.

A.S. Sawers, the only two instances in which I had any difficulty with the zemindar.

Esq.

8 June
1860.

1438. Do you ever find that the ryots, whom you may have established on your nij lands, try to dispossess you or to set up rights of small tenant proprietors to your prejudice?—No, never; I don't give them pottas; I only allow them to occupy for a year or two. The lands those men hold are extra lands, and their homesteads are in other villages, some are ilaka, and some be-ilaka; some of the ryots, coming from a considerable distance, merely put up temporary sheds and go back again as the lands get inundated.

1439. Do you ever find any difficulty in procuring a sufficient supply of labour; and for this object, do you ever have recourse to any method beyond the fair market value of labour?—Besides my own ploughs, I hire ploughs to cultivate as well as to sow my lands; and for these ploughs I pay at the rate of eight for the rupee.

1440. Mr. Fergusson.] Would you not find a difficulty of that kind, if you had not zemindary rights to help you?—Certainly, it is with this object that I take ijaras of villages and purchase talooks.

1441. President.] How do you manage in hiring labour to avoid interfering with the other agricultural pursuits of the ryots?—My lands being low, it is necessary to sow them as early as possible; and if in the end of January, or beginning of February, I could get a good sowing joe, or moisture, I should sow as much land as I possibly could, as the ryots have little or nothing to do at that time with their ploughs. Then their late rice land is so hard that they cannot work it, but in a season such as the present, when we have no sowing joe till the beginning of May, I took only from my ilaka ryots one plough when a man possessed two, and that only for a day.

1442. Is the whole of your nij cultivation sown with indigo, or also with other crops?—Nearly three-fourths of my cultivation is sown in October; and with the indigo I sow other crops, such as mustard, oats, and wheat. I have had as much as six maunds of oats from a beegah, and 20 bundles of indigo from the same beegah. Such a crop I obtain from lands which have been under rice the preceding rains.

1443. Are we to understand, then, that you have no lands which you set apart and cultivate exclusively for other crops besides indigo?—Yes, I grow no other crops exclusively; what I grow, is with the indigo, and for my own use, and oats for sale. I have about one-fourth spring sowings, and I can generally manage this with my own establishment and with a little additional hiring; but were I to sow only one-fourth in October and three-fourths in spring I could never do it; and for this reason, I consider that it would be perfectly impossible to convert the ryotti indigo concerns of Kishnagur into nij abad concerns.

1444. Mr. Fergusson.] The reason being, I suppose, that it is impossible to get any sheets of land, and whatever number of ploughs a concern had, it would be impossible to move them from spot to spot to carry out the cultivation?—In the first place the lands belong to the ryots, and you cannot sow them in a large space together, and while, on a sowing morning, the ryots of the respective villages can come out and sow the lands around the villages, and thereby get through in one joe a large amount of cultivation, it would be impossible to move a nij-abad establishment from the factory to village after village; some being two or three cos distant from the village.

1445. President.] Do you think that even in thickly-populated districts like Jessore and Kishnagur, a planter, by purchasing jummas, or taking pottas from ryots or from the holders of rent-free lands, and otherwise by watching his opportunity, might be enabled to increase his nij cultivation to some extent even in the absence of large tracts of waste or unoccupied lands?—Of course, by buying jummas he must increase his cultivation; but many years ago the experiment was tried by Mr. Shuttleworth at Mirpore in Pubna, who took it into his head to convert what had always been a ryotti concern into a nij abad, by buying up jummas, and getting possession of the actual lands to cultivate them as nij abad; anyhow he could not; but by so doing, he ruined himself, because the ryots having no lands left, deserted villages, and he could not get the cultivation effected. Mr. Hills also, at one time, took it into his head to increase his nij abad cultivation, but the lands pertaining to his factory being of a strong clayey soil, and requiring great cultivation, he found it would not pay, and therefore he abandoned it to a great extent.

1446. Mr. Temple.] But could not that gentleman have imported Boona coolies to carry on the cultivation?—To a certain extent he could, but as I have said before, he could not sow the land, as he could not move his establishment about with sufficient rapidity, the fields being so scattered; whereas in a large ryotti concern, such as Munnath, with two good showers of rain, the whole cultivation, extending to 26,000 or 27,000 beegahs, might be got through.

1447. But supposing a planter bought up a whole village or several holdings compactly situated; could he not then locate Boona coolies together, so that they might sow the whole of the available lands?—He might locate coolies, but he would also have to locate ploughs and cattle, which would be so costly that it would be impossible.

1448. Then are we to understand that a nij concern such as yours could not be carried on profitably on high lands?—Certainly not.

1449. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Do you not think that unless the planters have ryotti cultivation, they will never make a profit by cultivating indigo?—Certainly not in the Kishnagur or Jessore districts. I know nothing of other districts.

1450. Could you say how much per beegah of rice, mustard, linseed, sugar, tobacco, potatoes, and other crops, would pay the ryots?—I put in a comparative statement of the cost and yield of a beegah of adus rice and indigo, with the value of rice at one rupee per maund, the former valuing price:—

BEFORE THE MUTINY.

A. S. Samers, Esq.8 June 1860.

RICE.		INDIGO.
POTIT OR FALLOW LAND.	Per Beegah.	Lal Land.	—	Per Beegah.
	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.		Rs. a. p.
Rent (Burdwan rate) - - - -	1 12 -	1 12 -	Rent - - - -	1 12 -
Ploughing - - - - -	1 - -	- 10 -	Ploughing - - - -	- 7 -
Seed - - - - -	- 8 -	- 8 -	Seed - - - - -	- 6 -
Weeding - - - - -	3 - -	2 - -	Weeding - - - -	- 6 -
Cutting and winnowing - - - -	1 - -	1 - -	Cutting - - - - -	- 5 -
Co.'s Rs.	7 4 -	5 14 -	Co.'s Rs.	3 4 -
High yield of rice, 7½ maunds, at one rupee per maund - - - -	7 8 -	High yield of indigo, 20 bundles per beegah, at four bundles per rupee (exclusive of yield of seed) -	5 - -
Straw - - - - -	1 8 -
Co.'s Rs.	9 - -	Co.'s Rs.	5 - -

At the present price of rice, i. e. two rupees per maund - - - Co.'s Rs. 15. 8.

1451. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] You have stated the price of rice; can you state the price of other articles?—This you will find in a statement which I shall fill up and forward.

1452. Could you tell us what a beegah of pottol would pay the ryot?—I have known a beegah of pottol yield 30 rupees. I had a ryot who defrayed the marriage expenses of two of his children out of three beegahs of pottol.

1453. Mr. Fergusson.] Is that statement of the cost and produce of rice derived from your own experience among your ryots, or how?—Yes. And I may here state that at the former prices of rice, it was very seldom a paying crop to the ryot, but I believe that even were a beegah of indigo to pay better than a beegah of rice, the ryot would give a preference to the rice; the rice is his staff of life; it feeds himself and his family, and the straw feeds his cattle and thatches his house; therefore it is not fair to compare the indigo with the rice. Further, under the former prices of rice, a ryot was very seldom clear of his mahajan, and I am pretty certain that if we have for another two years a continuation of the present high prices, the mahajan's occupation will be gone.

1454. President.] It has been stated in evidence to the Commission that indigo is not profitable to the ryot, and several witnesses have, in their evidence, testified to the great dislike of the ryot to that cultivation; can you, from your own knowledge and experience, explain the causes of that dislike, and suggest the remedies?—I think there are several causes, which may be assigned for the present discontented state of feeling; the first and chief reason, I consider to be the great rise that has taken place in the value of rice, which, at present prices, is much more profitable than indigo; and for this reason, I don't believe that, from my knowledge of the character of the ryots, they are altogether free agents in the present resistance, which in Kishnagur they are making to the cultivation of indigo. It is clearly the interest of the mahajan as well as of the talookdar to increase the cultivation of rice, and therefrom I think that they are very much instigated in their present proceedings. Further, I think there are parties in Calcutta who have instigated them to oppose the cultivation of indigo, such as the proprietors of the "Hindoo Patriot" and the "Indian Field;" I say so not from personal knowledge, but such is my belief. I further believe that that feeling arose among those parties in Calcutta, from a feeling of jealousy, that so many indigo planters should have been made honorary magistrates. There is another reason. In former years, before the failure of the Union Bank, a great deal of money was, I think, lavishly squandered in the cultivation of indigo in the Jessore and Kishnagur districts; but since that failure, money has not been so easily obtained; added to which there has been a succession of very bad seasons, which has caused the planter not only to be more careful in the expenditure of his money, but to look more carefully and strictly into the collection of his rent; and since I have entered this room and heard the evidence of one ryot, named Adam Mundal, of Ailhans factory, I am the more confirmed in this opinion. His great grievance appears to be that he is now called upon to pay rents, which he never paid before. These are some of the reasons, I believe, which have led to the dissatisfaction which has recently come to a climax; these reasons I may compare to the faggots which only required a spark to ignite them: that spark was Mr. Eden's per-wanna, which set them all in a blaze, and since then the flames have been well fanned by the police, and also, as I was told, while lately in Kishnagur, by emissaries from Calcutta going through the villages and inciting the ryots. According to the statement which I have produced, indigo may be a paying crop to the ryot, but there is another matter which should be considered. A very large portion of the rice lands of Jessore and Kishnagur cannot go on and bear a perpetual succession of white crops; they require

A. S. Savers,
Esq.
8 June
1860.

require rest, and for this rest, indigo, being by no means an exhausting crop, may be substituted; and, independent of the profit which the ryot would thereby obtain, instead of having his land lying fallow and unproductive, there are other collateral advantages, which, I maintain, notwithstanding what may be said to the contrary, he does derive from his connexion with the factory; and, I think that, perhaps, if some change were to be made in the present system, the ryots would all return to the cultivation of indigo. I think the Kishnaghur planters may still continue the two rupees per beegah of advances, and take four bundles per rupee, but instead of charging the ryot with the price of the seed, let him take all that expense (as I am obliged to do) on himself. But in the event of the ryot obtaining from his stumps a seed crop, let him return to the factory the actual quantity of seed he has received, and take the rest to the best market he can find. I would further suggest, that the planter should take the expense of carting upon himself. I have known instances, within my own knowledge, when the ryot being in want of money, came to the factory, and received advances, without interest, either to buy cattle, to repair his house if it was blown down by the storm, or to weed his indigo.

Commission adjourned at 5.45 P. M.

Saturday, 9th June 1860.

PRESENT.

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C. S., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., C. S., W. F. Fergusson, Esq., Reverend J. Sale, Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

A. S. SAWERS, Esq.; Examination continued.

A. S. Savers,
Esq.
9 June
1860.

1455. President.] It has been stated by a planter of great experience, that in some places even one rupee a bundle would not prove profitable to the ryots, and many ryots have declared their unwillingness henceforth to sow on any terms whatever. Can you reconcile this with your opinion, that four bundles per rupee would satisfy a ryot?—My answer to that is, that the statement of the experienced planter is merely his opinion, or ipse dixit, unsupported by any proof; whereas I yesterday produced a statement, in which I showed that upon an expense of three rupees four annas per beegah, the ryot obtains a return of five rupees, exclusive of the value of any seed which the khoontees (stumps) might yield. I, therefore, cannot reconcile the statement of the experienced planter with my view of the matter. If the planter alluded to referred to lands which would not grow any crop, not even a thistle to feed a donkey, his statement might be perfectly correct; but there are no such lands in the districts of Jessore and Kishnaghur, that I am aware of, ever taken for the cultivation of indigo.

1456. It has been stated in evidence to the Commission that whatever ryots may have to receive at the time of squaring accounts, is subject to various deductions by the factory servants, viz., the devan, amin, and tahidgir, and that, in addition to this, the ryot is called upon to fee them out of his own pocket; do you think that one rupee twelve annas profit is a sufficient inducement to the ryot, knowing that he may have to run those chances?—The proceedings alluded to in the question are not consistent with my practical experience; that dustoori may be, and is, taken on cash advances, I believe to be possible, but dustoori is not an English institution; it is the custom of the country, and the English planter must accommodate himself to it, and it is a custom with which the ryot is associated from his birth. I don't believe that upon a trifling sum of one rupee twelve annas of excess payment, any gomashtha of a factory would dare to charge dustoori, and certainly if he did so, the planter would, on hearing of it, immediately order a refund, and censure him for his conduct.

1457. Then is the Commission to understand that within your experience in the Big Union, in former years, it was the custom with all planters to check extortion, and to lend a ready ear to the complaints of the ryot?—Certainly, it was so.

1458. Mr. Fergusson.] Putting aside all questions of justice and right feeling, would it not be suicidal on the part of the planter to allow such oppression as is stated to have been practised on the ryots by the gomashtha and native establishment of the factory; and must it not be his object for his own self-interest to make the ryot willing and contented to cultivate indigo?—Certainly; the welfare and prosperity of the ryot must be co-existent with the welfare and prosperity of the planter, and I believe that there is no planter of the present day, or during the last three and twenty years of my experience, in the districts of Jessore and Kishnaghur, who would, for a moment, knowingly permit any such oppression on the part of his servants. But I may state that I have no doubt there have been many instances in which ryots in a village having disputes or differences amongst themselves, have applied to the gomashtha, without any reference to or knowledge of the planter, to settle their differences; in which case, it is quite possible that the party who feed the gomashtha highest, might have gained the case over the other party, however unjustly; such proceedings are no part of the system of indigo cultivation.

1459. President.]

1459. President.] Are you aware that rather than cultivate indigo this year, many ryots have submitted either to be cast into jail, or to have their cattle or houses sold, and have in consequence encountered total ruin; do you think that the causes given by you yesterday are adequate to explain away this apparent stubbornness?—Yesterday, I stated it to be my firm belief that the ryots in this matter are not free agents, and that they acted under instigation, and, it might be, an assurance that their interests would be protected by those instigators. Further, I believe that those ryots from the commencement of their recusancy, were under the impression that they were acting in accordance with the views and desires of Government; and having had legal proceedings instituted against them under the new Act, they had no chance of getting out of the difficulty. And further I may state, that it is consistent with my knowledge and from information I have to-day received, that there are villages in the district of Kishnaghur, which are already beginning to change their tone in the matter, and that, as I stated yesterday, I think that if they are left to themselves, they will return to the cultivation of indigo, on a certain modification or change in the present system.

1460. Within your former experience in Kishnaghur or Jessore, did any ryots manage to clear themselves and to get completely out of the factory books?—I have a perfect recollection of some ryots having not only cleared their balances, but having had something to receive, when they gave ten bundles for a rupee instead of four; I may further state, that I believe, that among the causes of balances having been brought down for a number of years against ryots, is that Mr. Hills altered the system of advances, and increased it from two rupees a beegah to four; and his example had to be followed generally over the whole district. Ryots greedily took advantage of this liberality, and involved themselves in the heavy balances which have since accrued.

1461. Within your recollection, did those ryots who had any excess to receive, freely enter into new engagements, or did they bid good bye to the cultivation of indigo?—Certainly, they at once entered into new engagements, finding it profitable.

1462. But within your remembrance, did any ryot, who found the cultivation of indigo either irksome or unprofitable, ever manage by any means to pay off his debt to the factory and get clear?—I do not remember any such instance.

1463. And you have no reason to believe, that in the case of those ryots, who after clearing themselves, entered into fresh engagements, that any undue influence was ever exercised?—No; I have no reason to believe so.

1464. Within your experience did the factory measurement for indigo lands exceed that of the zemindars' measurement; and what was the size of your indigo beegah?—No; I have no recollection of any such difference so far as I can recall. The size of the Kishnaghur beegah is 55 ells of 21 inches.

1465. In your time were contracts with ryots for a term of years or undefined; and did the ryot actually affix his name to blank stamped paper?—So far as I remember, the contracts were annual and not for any term of years; and invariably the ryot attached his signature or mark to a blank stamp-paper.

1466. Mr. Fergusson.] So is it not almost the universal custom in the country for bargains and contracts to be verbal and without writing?—A. S. Sawers, Esq.

Generally verbal. 1467. President.] But when a ryot borrows either in cash or in kind, does he not usually sign a bond on stamped paper for the amount?—I believe in his transaction with the mahajan he does; but at the time I refer to of my experience in Kishnaghur, he was seldom called upon by the planter to sign a bond for the amount of any cash advance, if it was of trifling amount.

1468. Can you state what the cost of indigo in your own factory has stood you in a maund (every thing included), and what has been the average sale for the last three years?—I should consider that if ever indigo should come down in price below 150 rupees a maund, I should be badly paid on my nijabad concern. For the last three years, it has been fully 50 rupees a maund above that.

1469. Mr. Fergusson.] Does that cultivation of 150 rupees a maund include interest and charges on your block and outlay?—Yes.

1470. Mr. Temple.] But supposing the planter had to borrow the capital at a considerable rate of interest, would the 150 rupees cover the interest at that rate?—That depends entirely on the rate of interest he would have to pay. I believe that the indigo planters generally in the districts of Jessore and Kishnaghur are in a very different position now to what they were before the failure of the Union Bank; my reason for this is, that on the failure of the bank, most of the indigo concerns in those districts changed hands, and were purchased at a very cheap rate, and in consequence of such cheap purchases and two seasons very profitable to the planters, the money which had been borrowed to purchase the factories was paid off, and the planters had a clear block and were comparatively independent.

1471. At the present time, are not the planters in those two districts working on borrowed capital so far as you know?—I know that they are working on borrowed capital, but that merely for the year's outlay; as security for which to the lender they give, it may be, 10 or 12 per cent. interest, with the produce of the season and a mortgage on the block of the concern.

1472. Does it ever happen that the planter has had to borrow money in the first instance for purchasing the block, and has also to borrow money for his annual outlay, and has to pay double interest; can you tell approximately what this double rate of interest would amount to in the aggregate?—In olden times almost every factory was purchased with capital borrowed from large agency houses, which also supplied the funds for the annual outlay. The rate of interest in those days used to be 10 per cent. on the amount borrowed for the block, 10 per cent. for the outlay, 2½ and sometimes 5 per cent. commission, and 1 per cent. on the accounts. There was also a charge of 2½ per cent. on the net proceeds. On the whole, in a good season, there would be from 17 to 20 per cent. to be defrayed from the proceeds of the crop; besides this there would be the amount of interest on the block capital, whatever that amount might be, which would be defrayable from the same source.

1473. Does not this amount to a somewhat heavy charge on the proceeds of the season, amounting to, say 30 per cent., or perhaps more?—It may be so.

1474. Do you know of any concerns which are carried on without borrowed capital; either

9 June.
1860.

A. S. Sawers,
Esq.
9 June
1860.

for block or for annual outlay?—I know one or two; but there are very few.

1475. Mr. Fergusson.] Whether a man invests his own capital in an indigo factory, or borrows money for it, does he not in the first case expect the same return for the money invested in the trade as the lender does, the latter adding a commission for the risk he runs; and is not the last commission, which you mentioned, i. e. 2½ per cent., the usual charge for such work and labour expended in selling the produce?—Certainly, if a man is a capitalist, and invests his money either in the purchase of an indigo factory or share in any company, he looks to crediting that capital with interest before carrying any amount to profit, and 2½ commission is the usual charge.

1476. Are the rates of interest and commission charged upon indigo higher than on any other mercantile transactions that are carried on throughout India?—Not to my knowledge.

1477. Mr. Temple.] Are not those high rates of interest and commission consequent on the insecurity of property in the Mofussil?—Certainly; and I think from what has occurred, and the slight degree of protection that the planter has recently received, a party lending him money would be perfectly justified in demanding a higher rate of interest and a higher commission.

1478. Do you then consider that the new summary Act has not given adequate protection to the rights and property of planters; if so, in what respect or respects?—I think there are certain views which have been taken of the meaning of the Act, which have not given the planter protection, viz., a planter has to receive a sum of money from a ryot as rent, and at the same time has to pay that ryot an equivalent as advance for his indigo cultivation, and upon this arrangement the account was closed in the month of October last; that sum, under the new Act, has not been held to be a cash advance. These cases must, I believe, be numerous, as the planters are such large zemindars.

1479. But when some hundreds of ryots have been put in jail, and when the property of others has been sold to satisfy the damages, and when many other ryots have borrowed money from mahajans to pay the damages, do you consider that the law in these respects has not been adequately enforced?—I consider that the indigo planter does not look merely to a return of interest alone, which, as already stated, he may have to pay over to a third party, but he looks for an amount of profit besides. In a crop, which is undoubtedly one of the most precarious in existence, the planter, after a series of seven years of scarcity or poor crops, cannot, I should imagine, consider himself as compensated by the proceedings that have taken place under the new Act and the damages given.

1480. But do not the damages unavoidably amount to tenfold the amount of advance; and if not, what rate of damages do you think would be adequate?—These damages, under the Act, I apprehend, are intended to cover what may be considered the produce of the factory.

1481. What becomes of the block?—The closing up of the factory entirely annihilates that. I am not prepared to say what amount should be awarded to cover it.

1482. President.] Then do you think that in an average season a planter might look to a return of produce per beegah in indigo which would be adequate to 20 or 22 rupees?—Yes, I would consider such amount of damages legitimate.

1483. Then do you consider that a system possesses the elements of soundness and permanence where one of the contracting parties very reasonably looks to a return of 20 rupees a beegah, and the other to a profit of 1 rupee 12 annas?—I consider that the ryot looks merely to a return for his labour and the value of his land; what is a good season for the planter must be a good season for the ryot, but before the planter's manufactured indigo can reach a market, it is liable to expenses and vicissitudes, to which the ryot is not exposed; I am not prepared to say that the system which is followed in Tirhoot, might not, as a compromise between planter and ryot, be substituted in the districts of Kishnaghur and Jessore.

1484. Mr. Fergusson.] Would not a manufacturer in Manchester who has contracted for a supply of raw material, such as silk and cotton, on failure of which his mills would be stopped, be entitled to much more damages than the actual cost of the raw material?—Unquestionably, and I think the cases are quite parallel.

1485. In the damages which have been assessed at 23 rupees (and which I believe in some instances were modified to 10 or 11 rupees), is not a very large proportion represented by the expenses of the planter's interest, &c., which won't be increased, independent of the actual cost in raising the plant?—Certainly.

1486. President.] Supposing one factory to have 5,000 beegahs of nij, and to have the same quantity of ryotti, could you tell us what would be the probable expenditure and the returns of them respectively?—While the actual expense per beegah on each might be the same or nearly so, the cost of the indigo produced from those beegahs would be considerably more from a nij cultivation, such as mine, than from the ryotti, because the produce or yield from the ryotti indigo would be much greater, in many instances twofold, than from my nij abad. I mean that while the Kishnaghur ryotti planter gets a yield of 75 to 100 maunds per 1,080 beegahs, I seldom get a yield of more than 50 maunds per 1,000 beegahs. This, I apprehend, arises from the difference in soil between chur and high lands, and nij is generally on churs.

1487. Mr. Temple.] You mentioned that the insecurity of property in the Mofussil is one cause why the high rate of interest is charged on the capital borrowed, will you specify in what respects the property of the planter was insecure previous to the disturbances?—One cause was the unsatisfactory nature of the land tenures. An indigo concern being dependent for its prosperity on the property that it held in putni or dur-putni talook; and until the passing of Act XI. the putnidars or dur-putnidars had no real security for the continued possession of their property; and with regard to myself I mentioned a case yesterday when, after an uninterrupted possession of 50 years, a chur by a large bonus and bribe, and an enhancement of rent, was, without any reference to myself, and three months anterior to the expiring of my lease, taken over my head.

1488. Are the factory and premises generally safe; is the standing crop generally protected from damage; is the ryot, through supervisors and other men, generally kept to his engagements; are these results attained or not?—I do not consider the state of the police in the country at all satisfactory, but from that I would not infer any danger to my buildings or to my crop; and during the whole of the mutinies in the North-

North-Western Provinces I was never under any apprehension of any disturbance or attack from the ryots or population in my neighbourhood, but, as I have stated, I am in a different position from the planters of Kishnaghur and Jessore; at the same time, previous to the present crisis in the district of Kishnaghur, I do not think that any planter there had any apprehension for the safety of his buildings or of his crops.

1489. Then if, as you consider, the factory and premises were safe; if, on the whole, the crop was protected; if the ryot was kept to his engagement by means of supervision, in what did the insecurity of property to which you alluded consist?—Beyond the unsatisfactory state of land tenures to which I have alluded, a ryotti concern was always subject to the risk of the cultivation being interfered with by the influence the zemindars have over their ryots. As an instance of this influence I may state that a gomashita, who had been turned away, and is about now to be reinstated, made it a stipulation in my presence that a certain sum which he had expended since his dismissal in putting up the ryots of a village in which he is a shareholder against the factory, should be reimbursed to him.

1490. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Are there not other articles of produce to cultivate, which are more profitable to the ryot?—I dare say there are other crops, there may be, but I don't know of any other. I never made any inquiries on the subject.

1491. Do the ryots willingly take advances?—In my time I never had any cause of complaint on that score.

1492. During your experience in Nuddea and Jessore you knew of no instances in which you found a ryot unwilling to take advances?—I cannot bring any to my recollection, as I left the ryotti cultivation in 1842, 18 years ago.

1493. Do you not think that ryots would be thankful to get out of the planter's hands, by paying up the balances due against them in the factory accounts?—I think if left to themselves not many would care much about it.

1494. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you remember hearing from ryots and others of the manner in which the Government conducted their silk advances, and in what way it was different from the indigo planter's system?—I remember, I think in 1839, when a relation of mine purchased the Meerpore indigo concern where there was a Government filature, and which concern I went to take over from the party representing the seller. Having some conversation with the silk people I learnt from them that Government used to make advances to paiikars, who were the parties alone debited in the filature books with those advances; those paiikars I believe purchased the cocoons from ryots.

1495. Was there a large amount of balances outstanding?—A large amount of balances stood against those paiikars, but they repudiated them and charged the Government amla with having written against them sums much in excess of what they received.

1496. Is it not the custom for Government and other parties in this country to make advances for every description of work, and can they get it done without their doing so?—In the Mofussil you can get nothing and do nothing without advances, that is to say, in the way of work or of purchase in the market.

1497. Has the cultivation of indigo increased or diminished in the Kishnaghur district within the last six or seven years?—It has not increased, and my impression is that it has decreased; generally the district of Kishnaghur has had a succession of bad crops during those six years, and you do not find an increase of cultivation in the face of annual losses.

1498. Mr. Sale.] Do you think that the facilities for the cultivation of indigo which you enjoy in Burdwan could be obtained to any considerable extent in your neighbourhood or any other part of Bengal?—I can't speak of any other part of Bengal, but there are some factories on the Bhaggerutti which have partly chitani cultivation, which I know may be had very cheap, but chitani cultivation is only available on the banks of rivers which are annually inundated and form alluvial accretions.

1499. Mr. Temple.] On the whole does there remain in Lower Bengal much char land fit for cultivation still uncultivated?—I don't think there is much.

1500. President.] It has been variously suggested to the Commission that the planter in future should charge nothing for seed, should pay the rent for the ryot's lands, and should remunerate him at the rate of a rupee a bundle, leaving him nothing to do but plough, sow and weed, and it has been suggested that the planter should offer the ryot a bid for his land, say 10 to 12 rupees a beegah, taking all the risks of cultivation. Do you think the planter could afford any or all these modes?—I do not think the planter could afford a rupee a bundle, and in preference to those other suggestions I think the Tirhoot system would be better, by which the ryot would get a fair remuneration for his labour and land, and would seldom or never be in debt to the factory.

1501. Is four bundles per rupee, which you mentioned yesterday, the highest price a planter could give a ryot?—Yes.

1502. Mr. Temple.] Have you, on the whole, suffered anything at the hands of the police, or have they directly or indirectly impeded your labour?—I am glad to say that for the last nine years I have had nothing to do with the police. I have had no cases in the magistrate's court.

1503. Have they extorted money from you?—They never had the chance.

1504. Mr. Fergusson.] When you had anything to do with the civil courts of Burdwan and Kishnaghur, did you find it necessary to bribe or pay expedition money to the amla?—I never had a case in court that I did not receive a letter from my Mooktear, saying that it was necessary to fee the hakim's amla; I could not be sure to whom the money went.

MANIK SHAH, Inhabitant of Thakhpore, Thannah Damuhuda, Zillah Nuddea, Taltolla Factory, Sinduri Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

1505. President.] WHAT are your means of livelihood, and what jumma have you?—I have a jumma of 25 rupees on a potta of 15 years' standing. I am also a Naib Kazi of the Pergunnah.

The Sudder Kazi registers, but I get five annas on the rupee as a registry fee. I also marry people, and read the Koran to Mussulmans; I have mullahs under me. I can read the Koran in Arabic.

A. J. Sawers,
Esq.

9 June
1860.

Manik
Shah.

Manik
Shah.

9 June
1860.

Arabic. I have one dependent ryot and one plough and ploughman, and only two bullocks left; all the rest have died. For the last 10 or 12 years I have been in the habit of sowing three beegahs for the factory; they call it two beegahs; some years ago I got two rupees advances, and the year after I got two more. After that I received no more. I have received no payment from the factory for excess of plant. I have never received anything at all since those advances. I can't say how my account stands. For the last two years I have never been near the factory, nor has my ploughman. Last year I sent six or seven cart loads to the factory; I can't say how many bundles there were in those cart loads. Last Agran I set out to make my rounds to my mullahs, to receive my share of fees, and I returned home on the 10th of Phalgun.

1506. Have you sown this year, and if not, why not?—No, I have not; my reason for not sowing is, because it is a dead loss to me, and I am tired of the business. Besides, what they call two beegahs is by our measurement three. Moreover, my servants are made to plough up and down and across, and then round in a circle, and then to pick out every little clod and throw it away to a distance. They are also obliged to weed twice, if not three times. And with all their labour, if we get a good crop, we do not benefit by it. Formerly, they used to measure the plant properly; now when they see a cart coming, they make a guess, and say it is three-fourths of a bundle. This is what my servant tells me, and what I hear all round, and what I have observed myself, before the last two years when I used to go to the factory.

1507. But if this has been the case for the last 10 years or so, why is it that you have objected to sow this year?—Some of our people went to the Commissioner when on his tour, and complained about indigo, and we were told to complain to the magistrate, and in the end we were told that we need not sow by force, but if we had taken advances, we ought to sow.

1508. As you had taken advances once, why did not you sow, on hearing that?—I did not think it necessary to sow, even though I knew the penalty for not sowing would be five-fold.

1509. Are the above-mentioned the only reasons for your not sowing?—I have half a beegah of thatching grass; they cut this grass every year and don't pay for it; they also cut my bamboos, and don't pay for them also; last year they sowed a piece of land with indigo, which I had prepared for rice. It was about one beegah and 15 cottahs. Of this I complained to the dewan of the factory, and after all I got about 15 annas as rent for this plot, but I received nothing for cultivating it. Also my son last year was beat very severely by the tahidgir, and of this I made no complaint. Beyond this I have nothing more to complain about.

1510. Have you rice lands, and can you state what yield they give?—The produce of early rice is on an average about three solis a beegah. The price of this would be six or seven rupees. This year it is seven rupees. Then, after the early rice is cut, I should have a crop of mustard or peas. A good yield for mustard would be about five to six maunds a beegah. Last year the price was about two rupees four annas a maund, i.e. in all 11 rupees 4 annas.

1511. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Can you not tell us the exact expenses for the cultivation of a beegah of indigo, and the return of the plant?—Rent is 12 annas 9 pie a beegah. Supposing eight ploughs go to the beegah, the expense would be two rupees at four ploughs per rupee. Then, to weed a beegah requires 16 men for the two weedings, these men, at one anna each would be one rupee, but at this rate of hire it would be necessary to feed them besides, and for cutting there would be four annas, in addition to feeding them. Then there is seed at four annas a beegah, stamped paper two annas, total Rs. 4. 6. 9. exclusive of the feeding. An average yield is 10 bundles a beegah, which would be Rs. 2. 8. at four bundles for the rupee.

1512. Besides these charges are there any other illegitimate ones?—A tahidgir demands Rs. 1. 8. the dewan 8 annas, and at the poodja 4 to 8 annas, also for road-making one anna on the rupee for every rupee of advances; in this way I paid 4 annas.

1513. You have sown for the last two years and have never been to the factory, then how and when did they take all this from you?—This year they have taken nothing; last year the amin and tahidgir came to my house and took it.

1514. On what conditions will you be willing to sow indigo in future?—If the Sovereign orders us to sow indigo, saying that the State would otherwise be injured, we would; otherwise we would not sow on any account.

1515. If the planter was to agree to pay you the rent of your lands, and to charge nothing for seed, stamped paper, carting or cutting, and to require nothing from you but ploughing, sowing, and weeding, and if he were to give you a good price for the bundles, would you be willing to sow?—No, not on these conditions.

1516. If the contracts were yearly, terminable every year, and the accounts were simply cash accounts, would you be willing to sow?—No.

GADU BISWAS, Thannah Damuhuda, Zillah Nuddea, Factory Ailhans, Sinduri Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

Gadu Biswas.

1517. President.] HAVE you sown indigo this year, and if not, why not?—I have sown in former years, and am quite ruined; I can't sow any more; I have two ploughs and eight bullocks, and a jumma of 41 rupees and 81 beegahs of land. Of this I have been required to sow 15 beegahs with indigo; the factory people call it seven and a half. We are required to plough from the month of Aswin to Chaitro and Baisakh. Last year we managed to sow 15 beegahs of rice lands. I have a garden and some mango, jack, and bamboo trees; the factory people are in the habit of taking them and not paying. I pay rent at the rate of 5 pice in the rupee to the planter, and 14 annas 9 pie to the zemindar; my native zemindars were Ishwur Bhattacharjya and Mudhu Bose; they do not practise extortion in the same way. My rent account with the factory is quite correct. My complaint against the factory is that they cut my mango and bamboo trees; my mango trees are cut for the purpose of making boxes for the indigo. I have never complained to the magistrate of Kishnaghur, as I could not cross the river for fear.

1518. Then

1518. Then how have you had the boldness to come here?—The magistrate, about six weeks ago, told us that there should not be any more oppression. I never heard of any order from the Queen about sowing indigo or not sowing.

1519. If there were an entirely new arrangement, would you then sow?—Putting indigo out of the question, I would agree to anything.

1520. Will you sow indigo if you are only required to plough, sow, and weed, all the other charges being borne by the factory (rent included) and you being paid at two bundles for the rupee?—No; I will not, if I am paid at two rupees a bundle, let alone two bundles for the rupee.

1521. Mr. Sale.] How much indigo did you give to the factory last year?—About 41 bundles. There was no account made out. I got nothing.

[Commission adjourned at 6 P.M.]

Saturday, 11th June 1860.

PRESENT.

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C.S., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., C.S., W. F. Fergusson, Esq., Reverend J. Sale,
Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

A. GROTE, Esq., C.S., at present Officiating Member of the Board of Revenue, called in; and Examined on oath.

1522. President.] You have had considerable experience in revenue matters as Collector and as Secretary to the Board of Revenue, and as Commissioner of a division?—Yes.

1523. As Secretary to the Board of Revenue, have you not enjoyed opportunities of obtaining information as to the facility with which the Government revenue is collected in all the districts of Bengal?—Yes.

1524. Are you in a position to state whether the collection of the Government revenue is at all facilitated by the influx of cash into a district, whether such influx be due to the operation of indigo planting or to the operation of the Government monopolies of salt and opium?—I have no doubt that the collection is facilitated, but the operation of cause and effect is not very clear from the returns made to the Board.

1525. Then you do think that in districts where there is little or no indigo cultivation, no cultivation of the poppy, or no salt manufacture, it is more difficult to collect the revenue of Government, than it is in districts where these operations are carried on?—The revenue of the district of the 24-Pergunnahs which is above 16 lacs (I mean the land revenue) in which district there is no such cultivation, is got in with the same facility as it is in Nuddea and Tirhoot, which are both large indigo districts.

1526. Does this hold good with regard to the district of Backergunge, or that of Dinagopore, or Sylhet?—As regards Dinagopore, and Backergunge, I should say certainly. In Sylhet the comparative difficulty of collecting the revenue is attributable more to the very small size of the estates there.

1527. Within your recollection, was the sale law for the realization of the Government revenue often applied in those districts, and do you recollect whether the collectors were in the habit of complaining that the revenue could not be realised without putting the sale law in force?—No; the actual sales which take place yearly in any district in Bengal, are very few.

72—I.

1528. Then is it your opinion that if the Government were to discontinue the manufacture of opium throughout all the districts in which it is now cultivated in Behar, the collection of the revenue would still go on with the same ease and punctuality as hitherto?—Yes, I think so; the cultivation of the poppy would be replaced by something equally sufficient to enable the landowner to meet the Government demand for its present revenue.

1529. As regards the collection of rents, do you not think that advances made or money spent on account of either indigo, opium, or salt, must facilitate the realization of their rents to proprietors in such districts?—Undoubtedly.

1530. If in any large and populated districts, the manufacture of either indigo, opium, or salt, were to be discontinued henceforth, would not zemindars and proprietors encounter difficulties in the collection of their rents?—It might be so in Hidgelee and Cuttack; for instance, the stoppage of salt advances would occasion zemindars a good deal of embarrassment in the realisation of their rents. This I can say from my own knowledge and observation. With regard to indigo or opium, I am not in a position to give so conclusive an opinion, but I think the same consequences might happen from the stoppage of cash advances on either of these articles of produce.

1531. If the salt manufacture were discontinued, would there be anything else to take its place?—No; nothing else would be produced on the land, which now produces salt, unless, indeed, after great outlay on embankments. The molunghee profession is quite distinct from any other profession, though many of them also cultivated land.

1532. But in the case of either indigo or opium, might not their absence be supplied by other products of agriculture?—Yes, of course.

M

1533. Mr.

Gadu Biswas.

9 June
1860.

A. Grote, Esq., C.S.

11 June
1860.

A. Grote,
Esq., s. c.

11 June
1860.

1533. Mr. Fergusson.] Would not the withdrawal of the cultivation of these articles lead to the extension of grain cultivation and the lower sorts of produce?—Yes, probably.

1534. Would not an extension of cultivation in that direction tend to endanger the collection both of rents and of the revenue of Government?—I hardly think so; undoubtedly it is better to have various kinds of cultivation, and various sources from which to draw rent or revenue.

1535. President.] Do you think that if every beegah of land now sown with either the poppy or with indigo in the districts of Bengal or Behar, were placed under another sort of cultivation, such as the cereals or pulse, the result would be a glut in the market?—No; I don't think so.

1536. Do you think, in that event, that the increased amount of these products would be easily consumed in the home market?—There would, I think, be an ample demand for them, but the present high prices would, of course, come down.

1537. Mr. Sale.] As far as the security of the Government revenue, and the facility of collecting rents are concerned, is it not desirable that the greater portion of the lower provinces should be sown with the less precarious crops?—The less precarious the crop, the more certain is the zemindar of recovering his rents, and the Government their share of them as revenue.

1538. Mr. Fergusson.] In the district of Nuddea, is not the cultivation of rice almost as precarious as that of indigo?—In some parts of Nuddea, the early rice crop is precarious, inasmuch as the success of the crop depends on the contingency of rain at particular times. The crop is hardly as precarious as that of indigo.

1539. President.] Has it not been brought to the notice of the Board of Revenue, that in consequence of high prices in the Behar and Benares provinces, a considerable portion of the cultivators of the poppy have thrown up that cultivation?—Yes; and it was found necessary to raise the price of the crude opium four annas per seer, i. e., from three rupees four annas to three rupees eight annas last year, and from that to four rupees this year. But the price had been as high as three rupees twelve annas, about eight years ago, (1850-51, I think) and it had been reduced in order to contract what was thought to be too extensive a cultivation.

1540. Mr. Fergusson.] Do the Government make advances to the cultivators of the poppy, yearly, and do they do so in all cases?—In all cases.

1541. Have the Government given any increase of rates to the molunghees, or salt manufacturers, within the last three years?—The rate was lower than it now is, when I was Junior Secretary to the Board, some eight years ago, but the increased rate was given some five or six years back. There has been no increase during the last three years.

1542. Is it customary for Government to make advances to the molunghees or manufacturers of salt yearly, and in every case?—Yes; to commence the manufacture, an outlay is necessary for pots, fuel, and also for labour, for which they must be provided with funds; advances are made in all cases.

1543. President.] Can you state whether the molunghees, through their various agents, were in the habit yearly of demanding a higher rate of remuneration, say, an anna or two, on the maund, and with what result?—I am not sure whether any complaints have been made lately; the practice in the department is, in the beginning of each season, for the Board to fix what is called a taidad, i. e., the quantity of salt which it is expedient to make in the year; if a larger quantity than usual were to be required, the price per maund might probably have to be raised, but the quantity producible would, of course, depend on the capabilities of the agency.

1544. As Collector and Commissioner, you are necessarily familiar with all questions relating to the rights of middlemen, sub-proprietors, and small tenant proprietors?—Yes.

1545. Is it, or is it not, within your experience that in many districts in Lower Bengal, many of these rights are enjoyed by persons who hold at fixed rents, who possess more than a mere occupancy in the soil, and can sub-let, transfer, or otherwise deal with the rights as they please?—Yes; a great many.

1546. Is it not the fact that many of these rights are constantly put up to sale for arrears of rents, for decrees of the civil courts and so forth, and are eagerly sought after by zemindars, planters, and others, who have the superior rights?—They are frequently put up for sale, but I can't say whether they are often bought by planters; my impression is, that when they are put up for sale, they are generally bought up, if possible, by the zemindar or decree holder, but they are open to purchase by anybody.

1547. Mr. Fergusson.] Is the object of the zemindar in buying them to cancel the tenure?—Generally; at least I presume so.

1548. President.] Is it within your knowledge and experience that jummas and right of sub-proprietors are constantly purchased by parties who either wish to establish a footing in a village where they have no rights, or who wish to retain that footing, after a lease of the superior proprietary right has terminated?—I am not aware of purchases being made with that object, but I think it is very likely that they are so made.

1549. Have you never known cases in which powerful zemindars have purchased jummas within the zemindary of an opponent, either in their own names or in the names of their dependents, to serve their own purposes?—Such cases have been reported to me as Commissioner of Police, and disturbances have been traced by the magistrate to such causes, but it is only in this way that I should hear of them.

1550. Mr. Fergusson.] Are such fixed rights as are above referred to, determined on a sale of Government for arrears of revenue?—Such rights would be liable to be challenged by the new purchaser, but if of a date anterior to the settlement would be protected by a special provision of the sale law.

1551. Has not the tendency of recent legislation been to consolidate and protect these rights?—Certainly; the provisions of Act X. give the ryot ample protection.

1552. And will not the provisions of that Act, especially the sixth section, tend very much to increase the number of rights of permanent occupancy?—It will, certainly; not however of such transferable tenures as those referred to above, of which the rents are fixed.

1553. President.] Under the new law (Act X. of 1859) is not an award of an actual sum of money claimed as rent, final, up to 100 rupees, when made by the collector?—Yes, unless a question tion of right is raised. In this case it would be appealable to the judge, but if between two parties, one of whom admitted liability, it would be final.

1554. But if one person sued another for a sum of money, not rent, in any civil courts in the country, would an award of even one rupee be final?—No; not final.

1555. Suppose a case of money payment was decided by a moonsiff or sudder ameen, there would still be an appeal to the principal sudder ameen or judge?—Yes.

1556. And, after the appeal as matter of right had been heard, would there be anything to prevent a dissatisfied or litigious person from attempting to get his case admitted in special appeal before the Sudder Court, thereby causing additional delay and vexation to the other party?—There is nothing to prevent the attempt being made.

1557. Might it not then happen that a party suing for rent up to 100 rupees should obtain a final decree capable of speedy realization, before one court, that is the collector, while the same party suing for one-tenth of that sum on a bond, might not obtain a final answer till his case had been before three successive courts?—Yes; it might happen frequently.

1558. On the whole, within your experience, are you in a position to state whether the rights of tenant proprietors and of occupants of the land were entirely obliterated, or only partially obliterated, or were inadequately protected until recent legislation?—They were inadequately protected in practice until Act X. was passed. I have no doubt that a great many tenures have succumbed in the natural struggle between landlord and tenant; though many again have survived; the success of the struggle would depend mainly or in a great measure on the determination shown by the tenant.

1559. But if a landholder wished to take land to build a factory, or to establish a haut or for any similar purpose, would he not, however influential, naturally have recourse to getting possession of the tenant's rights by potta or otherwise?—Probably he would; at all events he would be bound to do it where the ryot had a right of occupancy. He might make arrangements with the latter by giving him land elsewhere. If in such cases he took possession without making any such arrangements it would not be by any custom, having the force of law, but by illegal violence and brute force.

1560. Mr. Fergusson.] Is not a tenant right to perpetual possession of small holdings at a fixed rate of rent one of the greatest possible bars to industry and improvement that can take place in any country?—No; I should not think so.

1561. President.] Are you aware that a good deal of increased date cultivation is due in Jessore and in other districts to the exertions of head ryots and substantial small proprietors?—Yes, I believe so.

1562. Were you Commissioner of the Nuddea Division for a considerable portion of the years 1857–58 and 59, and did you make your annual tour through the districts under you, viz., Nuddea, 24-Pergunnahs, Jessore and Baraset?—Yes; in 1857 and 1858; my locum tenens, not myself, made the annual tour of 1859.

1563. Did you perceive, in any of those years, any increased dislike to indigo cultivation on the part of the ryot, and if so, will you state what form of expression such dislike took?—No; I did not notice any increased dislike.

1564. Did you notice any dislike at all, or were any complaints preferred to you by the ryots against any parties?—I don't recollect any complaints being preferred during that period; there has always been a dislike to the cultivation within my experience as Commissioner, which dates from 1855.

1565. From what causes within your knowledge does the dislike you mention proceed?—It has always been alleged as a cause of dislike to the cultivation that it is not remunerative.

1566. During those years were any special reports made to you by any of your subordinate magistrates as to the dislike of ryots to indigo or of the conduct of planters to ryots?—General reports were called for in 1856 by Government as to the causes of disputes during the sowing season, and in those reports the magistrates entered a good deal into the question of the relation between planter and ryot. Those reports are all published.

1567. Did you record your opinion on the proposal to revive parts of Regulation V. of 1830, and if so, what was the nature of your opinion?—At the time of making those reports I don't think that there was any proposal in agitation to revive that law, and I don't think that in my report I gave my opinion specially on that point, but I reported generally in favour of a summary measure for the settlement of disputes between planters and their ryots.

1568. With your knowledge of what has taken place, are you still of opinion that such a summary law is requisite?—Yes; I am in favour of a summary law, and I think that the re-enactment of the provisions of Regulation V. of 1850 would be sufficient.

1569. Mr. Temple.] How would you propose to arrange the registration of these contracts, especially in the cases of concerns where the ryots were very numerous, in some cases, perhaps several thousands in number?—I think that the sub-divisional agency now generally given to the magistrates would be sufficient. If more agency were required, I think the agency of moonsiffs might be employed.

1570. Do you think there would be any difficulty in identifying the ryots, or in preventing false impersonations?—Not more than there is when parties ordinarily attend to execute powers of attorney, or to register deeds in the Register's office, or on any other occasion on which personal identification is necessary.

1571. Mr. Fergusson.] But would not one difficulty consist in this, that all these contracts in great numbers would have to be registered and attested during the same season of the year and nearly about the same time; or do you think the registration might be spread over a considerable portion of the year?—Where a voluntary system prevailed, I think the registration need not be confined to one season, certainly it would not be so necessarily.

1572. President.] Then, in advocating this summary law, do you hold that the engagements are now voluntarily entered into by the ryots?—No; I can't apply the term "voluntary" to the practice which is reported to have prevailed hitherto.

1573. Then what particular state of things did you contemplate when you advocated a summary law?—Purely voluntary contracts.

A. Grote,
Esq., s. c.

11 June
1860.

A. Grote,
Esq., s. c.

11 June
1860.

1574. If hitherto you do not suppose the contract to have been voluntary, how do you propose to test the free agency of the ryot?—If the contracting ryot would come before an officer of the Government and consent to registration in any shape, I should infer that he voluntarily entered into the contract.

1575. Mr. Temple.] Then we are to understand that you would have no exercise of the summary law, unless there had been previous registration?—Yes.

1576. Mr. Sale.] When the planter happens to be a zemindar, do you think that with the present numbers of sub-divisions, the Government can so protect the ryot as to secure his position as a free agent?—I think so, with an efficient officer at the head of the sub-division.

1577. Mr. Temple.] Supposing the ryot has been heretofore cultivating indigo unwillingly, by what means do you believe he has been induced or coerced to carry on the cultivation?—There has been a combination of causes; first, the advantage of having cash advances at a convenient time; secondly, it has been the custom to grow indigo for many years; and the personal influence of the planter has no doubt operated strongly.

1578. Has the ryot enjoyed any collateral advantages in compensation for the trouble of sowing indigo?—Yes; I think he has, in many cases; such as protection from mahajans and zemindars, loans, &c.

1579. Have you any positive reason to believe that force or coercion has been frequently employed to compel the ryot to sow indigo?—I have reason to believe it from incidental mention of it in reports from magistrates, and from what I have learnt in conversation.

Baboo BHOYO GOVINDO CHOWDHARI, Residence Tanti Bundu, Thannah Pubna, Zilla Pubna, called in; and Examined on oath.

Baboo B. G.
Chowdhari.

1580. President.] HAVE you zemindaries or factories in your possession?—I have zemindaries. I had formerly two factories, which are now closed. I pay 40,000 rupees revenue to Government in Pubna; a very small amount in Furreedpore and Bograh, and about 10,000 in Rajshahye.

1581. Have you had any thing to do with planters?—Yes; I have had to give them leases.

1582. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] At what bonus have you given leases, how and when?—I have given one to Messrs. Watson & Co., of the Diluri concern (manager, Mr. James Phillips); I gave my own share of the zemindary amounting to 4,000 rupees; I don't remember the amount exactly, but I got from 400 to 500 rupees bonus. Also to Messrs. Gordon, Stuart & Co., of the Dobrakole concern (manager, Mr. Stephenson). I gave a lease of about 1,000 rupees jumma and a perpetual jote of 200 rupees.

1583. Did you willingly give these leases to these gentlemen?—I willingly gave the first lease to Messrs. Watson & Co., but the other I did not. Mr. Stephenson brought a complaint against me in the criminal court, that I had burnt the houses of his Boona coolies and had plundered his office. I was personally summoned to appear before the magistrate. I applied to be heard by my regular agent, but this was refused. The magistrate, Mr. Morris, told my agent that I had better make it up with the planter, otherwise it would not be good for me. Accordingly, I was obliged to negotiate with the planter. I had formerly given him a lease of 1,000 rupees, which had just expired, and then came on the criminal case. The planter required the renewal of the lease for five years, and a perpetual lease of a chur on the river Podda, of which the rent was, some at four annas, and some at eight annas a beegah, and some at one rupee for the homestead of ryots established on it. When I consented to their terms, the case was ended by razinama on the part of the factory. I got no bonus for this.

1584. Did that case cost you any money?—Yes; it cost me about 2,500 rupees. I had to send my agent to Calcutta to have the proceedings translated and to get counsel's opinion, besides my mofussil expenses. I likewise had to pay 200 rupees to the dewan of the factory of Sujal Nuggur.

1585. Mr. Fergusson.] Were the coolies' houses really burnt down and were the offices plundered?—My belief is, that the Boonas' huts were burnt down on purpose, and the charge laid to my doors. There was no plundering of the offices. This was done a year ago; in 1859.

1586. Had you or your people nothing to do with it?—Nothing whatever.

1587. If you and your people were so perfectly innocent, why did not you allow the case to go on in the magistrate's court?—When the magistrate threatened my agent, I thought it was best to compromise the case, as I was afraid of unpleasant consequences. I thought that if I was put into prison by the magistrate in person, it would take me two or three months to get an appeal heard. I know I might have been admitted to bail, but mere going into prison for four or five days involves loss of respect.

1588. Then, however innocent you might be, you had no confidence that you would obtain justice in the magistrate's court?—If I had confidence, why should I have compromised the case?

1589. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Have you any thing else to complain of?—The factory made an attack on my cutcherry and plundered it. The magistrate came in person to investigate it, and he took up his quarters in the Bhowdanga factory, where an European assistant was living. The magistrate did not pitch his tent. He held cutcherry in the house for three days. My agents and witnesses were not allowed to go into the house by the factory servants, as the factory held possession. At last, the magistrate sent one of his own orderlies to bring my plaintiff and his witnesses. The magistrate then returned to Pubna and dismissed my case, and punished the complainant as for a malicious complaint, with six months' imprisonment and 20 rupees fine. I appealed, and the sentence was reversed, and the fine returned by the judge of Rajshahye.

1590. Have you had any other dealings with any other factories?—I have given a lease of some of my zemindaries to the Belnabari concern. This lease I gave willingly, and for it I got a bonus. The lease was of 18 or 19 villages. There was no trouble about this. The lease has been twice renewed for periods of five years each. For the last year or so the planter has been sowing by force on lands of men who had not entered entered into contracts with the factory, and for the lands occupied in this way, he pays no rent, and forcibly employs the ryots to work and does not pay them, either for work or ploughs, and on this account there have been disputes in the criminal court. Several of the ryots have absconded, and when I recover the villages two years hence, I may find it difficult to collect my rents.

1591. Mr. Fergusson.] Will you be prepared to renew the lease at the expiration of the term?—I can't say what I may do two years hence, but at present I would not.

1592. But you complained in your last answer of your not getting your rents; if the planter offers to renew the lease and give you your full rents, what objection have you?—No; the same process will go on at the expiration of that next period; and I shall be left with the bare soil.

1593. When you renewed the lease of this land in former years, did you get an increased rent and a bonus?—The rent was the same, but I always got a bonus, the amount of it I don't remember.

1594. Is it not as injurious to the leaseholder as to the zemindar to drive away the ryots?—If the ryots are entirely ruined and they leave the place, then both will be sufferers; but if there remain a small number of ryots, the leaseholder planter will still get his work done and be no sufferer.

1595. Have you had any further dealings with any other planters?—Yes; I had two annas' share of a village, in which Mr. Kenny, of Salgurmudia, had 10 annas, and two small talookdars had the remainder. Mr. Kenny, or his manager of Mirpore, got these last shares from the small proprietors in putni. I refused to give out my share. The planter offered me only 10 per cent. on the Government revenue. Now, as my revenue is only 150 rupees, and as my mofussil collections were about 450 rupees, out of which I had to pay 60 rupees expenses of collection, leaving 240 rupees profit, I did not consent. The Sahib now forcibly takes possession of my rents. When I return to Pubna, I mean to sue in the collector's court.

1596. President.] Have your ryots ever said anything to you about granting leases to the factory or not granting them, with a view to the protection of their own interests?—The ryots of Bhowanipore and other villages in Mr. Stephenson's concern have preferred requests to me, saying that they would willingly enhance their rents four annas on the rupee if I would not give the lease; but, for the causes previously stated, I did not like to comply.

1597. When the lease to the Diluri concern expires, do you think you shall renew it?—Yes; I think I shall, because I am friendly with the party, and they treat the ryots well; but I shall not in the case of the other two.

1598. What caused your own two factories to be shut up?—They were on the banks of the River Podda, and were washed away, buildings and all.

1599. When they were in existence, what was the amount of your cultivation?—About 2,000 beegahs for the two. This was during my father's time.

1600. Is it the practice in zemindaries to take extra sums from the ryots on occasions of marriage, on the weaning of a child, or at the time of religious festivals?—The zemindars invite the ryots to be present on such occasions, and give them a feast, and the ryots come, and, according to their means, give one or two rupees, and some even 10 rupees. Ryots do not come on these occasions in my zemindary from further than a day's journey; i. e., 10 kos on the outside.

1601. If a zemindar got a khillut or a title from Government, would the ryots make him presents?—No; he would be more likely to give them alms. I have heard that on the occasion when the Dighaputti Raja received his title, he did this.

1602. Mr. Fergusson.] Are you a member of the British Indian Association?—No, I am not.

1603. Mr. Sale.] Have you any home farm in cultivation by your own ploughs and servants?—Yes; I have eight ploughs and 32 head of cattle, some of which are buffaloes. On these lands I grow early and late rice, peas, vetches, mustard, linseed, barley, and wheat.

1604. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] What would a beegah of early or of late rice give in a year?—I could not tell without asking my servants.

KADIR BISWAS, son of KHAS MULLICK, Inhabitant of Bidamari, Thannah Hardi, Factory Goldar, Mussulman, called in; and Examined on oath.

1605. President.] HAVE you sown this year, or has there been a case instituted against you for breach of contract?—No, I could not sow indigo, on account of the oppression which lasts from the commencement of Kartik to the end of Baisakh. We are obliged to cultivate, and if by any chance we get away for a day or two, the amin and takidgir are at us. After the indigo is sown, we are given from 15 to 20 days to sow our own rice; but as that land has been left neglected for so long a time, we can't clear it sufficiently for the rice to grow properly. After that, we are called upon to weed the indigo three times, and we can't get time to weed our rice. Then, besides this, there being no establishment of ploughs in the factory, our ploughs are taken for the nij abad, and are not paid for; and we are also called upon to weed and cut the plant of the factory. Also I have a beegah or two of thatching grass, which is taken to the factory for thatching purposes, and is never paid for. Such grass land produces five rupees a beegah, and requires no cultivation; you have only to leave the land alone. There are no bamboos in our villages; but there are babul trees, which they have cut down; I don't know for what purpose. Last year they cut down 25 babul trees of mine; I never complained, for I could not get away. These are my reasons for not sowing this year. A suit has been instituted against me, but no decision has been come to.

1606. Have you heard anything of any orders not to sow indigo?—The magistrate came into the Mofussil in Phalgun last, and told us that those who had entered into contracts should sow; but those who had not, need not. I have never signed a kabulyat. I have sown all along by compulsion.

1607. In other years, how many beegahs did you sow with indigo?—I sowed what they called five beegahs and I call 10. I have 20 rupees jumma at two and a half beegahs per rupee of rent.

Baboo B. G. Chowdhari.

11 June 1860.

K. Biswas.

K. Biswas.

11 June
1860.

1608. Mr. Sale.] Who is your zemindar?—The factory has 12 annas in putni, and Shama-churn Baboo, of Belgachia, the zemindar.

1609. Does the factory exact any more rent from you?—No, there is no more oppression in the matter of rent.

1610. Do the amin and takidgir and other servants commit any oppression?—I have to give five rupees a year to the amin and takidgir, two to the dewan, and one to the mohurir. If I ever go to complain to the sahib, the dewan tells him that, if he listens to the complaints of the ryots, he won't get on.

1611. If any third person beat or oppress you, do you not get redress from the planter?—Yes, on such occasions we do; i.e., when the sahib takes the matter in hand, we get justice; if the dewan does, we don't. The sahib sits some days to do justice.

1612. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you borrowed any money from the mahajan?—Yes, about 100 rupees, from Dokaori Baboo, a Brahmin.

1613. President.] How came you to be in debt to such an extent?—It was all on account of the indigo, as I had no time to cultivate my rice lands. I shall not be able to clear myself this year.

1614. Mr. Sale.] Do you never borrow from the factory without interest?—No, I never asked for such a loan.

1615. Mr. Fergusson.] Did you give a bond to the mahajan?—Yes, when I first borrowed; without a bond, mahajans don't advance.

1616. Is there a fresh bond given every year?—No; we make up accounts every year, and write at the back of the bond what is paid. When the whole is paid up, the bond is torn across or destroyed.

1617. Did you ever hear of a ryot paying up his debt to the mahajan?—Yes.

1618. Mr. Sale.] Has anybody in your village recently paid off a debt to the mahajan?—No; we are all in debt in our village.

1619. Were you paid for the indigo you delivered last year?—No, I got nothing; and the gomashta tells me that I am not credited with anything in the factory books, nor in the rent accounts.

1620. President.] Would you be willing to sow indigo again on fair terms?—No.

ADU JOTEDAR, Inhabitant of Bagurkhal, Thannah Hardi, Zillah Nuddea, Factory Goldar, called in; and Examined on oath.

A. Jotedar.

1621. President.] WHAT jumma have you, and what do you sow with indigo?—I have 10 rupees jumma, and when the village was resumed, I had only 10 cottahs to sow with indigo. Now it is increased to a beegah. I have 10 beegahs of land rented at one rupee a beegah. Last year I did not produce any crop; my land is alluvial deposit, and got submerged. Also last year the planter broke up one beegah of my mulberries, and those of other ryots amounting to 15 beegahs, and the year before that they uprooted some date trees.

1622. Did you sow this year, and if not, for what reason?—To the right and left of me nobody sowed, so I did not sow either. I also heard that those who were under contracts ought to sow, and those who were not need not sow. I had entered into no agreement; I have all along sown by compulsion. The order of the amin is fourfold worse than the order of the sahib. It is no use complaining to the sahib, because the servants tell him that, if he listens too much to the complaints of the ryots, he will get no indigo.

1623. Has there been a suit against you this year for breach of contract?—No; but there are suits right and left and all around me, and so I came here, thinking it would be best for me.

1624. Are you in debt to the mahajan?—Yes; I owe him 10 rupees; I shall pay him off this year by selling one head of cattle. I shall be able to get 10 or 12 rupees for it.

[Commission adjourned at 6 p.m.]

Tuesday, 12th June 1860.

PRESENT.

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C. S., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., C. S.; W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Reverend J. Sale, Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

Reverend JAMES LONG, of Calcutta, Missionary of the Church Missionary Society, called in; and Examined on oath.

Rev.
J. Long.12 June
1860.

1625. President.] WILL you state to the Commission what opportunities you have had of ascertaining the feelings and habits of the lower orders, both in districts where indigo is cultivated and in districts where it is not?—I have not lived in indigo districts, though I have visited many; and have received much information on the subject of the indigo ryotti system from indigo planters and others; my two main sources of information have been, mixing much with natives of all classes, both in Calcutta and in the villages, some of whose interests are mixed up with indigo cultivation; as also from having been a regular reader for the last 16 years of the vernacular newspapers and periodicals, which constantly treat of the subject of indigo cultivation. This subject has been forced on my attention in connection with the questions of the education of the masses, and of the creation of a body of intelligent peasantry, in inquiries into the effect of English influence in attaching natives to the Government, and setting a Christian example; Missionary preachers, even in Calcutta, are sometimes met with a remark, "Why do you not tell your countrymen, the indigo indigo planters, to be less oppressive; go, preach to them first." And I have frequently heard even boys in Missionary schools say, "Why are your Christian countrymen as bad as we are, and yet you say your religion is better than ours."

1626. In your reading in connection with the vernacular press and your conversation with all classes, have you noticed many facts which might lead you to think that the lower orders of Bengalees have lately adopted more independent habits of thought?—Yes; I have seen it very much of late in connexion with the rise of prices, and the increased value of labour, thus enabling the natives to be, to a certain extent, independent of the Europeans; and, I believe, it has had much to do with the immediate causes of the opposition to indigo planting. It will not cease here, but will, I believe, have a very important social influence on the mass of the people, freeing them from a slavish feeling, and showing them that they can, in various cases, declare terms to the Europeans. The mutiny has also roused the native mind, and has made the people feel that they have some power. I would mention one illustration of the effect of the rise of prices that is now felt, namely, the difficulty experienced for some time in the Kishnagur district in getting boats at a reasonable rate of hire to come to Calcutta; many boatmen have abandoned this occupation and have devoted themselves to labour, which gives them a higher rate of wages; such as on railway embankments, which is paid at a very high rate. But my own inquiries and duties have brought two causes prominently to my notice, as conducing to independence of mind among the masses; first, English education, happily spreading in the country among the natives, is giving them a sense of freedom, leavening their minds with a regard to a sense of justice, and imparting to them an English tone of revulsion against oppression. It is also welding the natives of the different Presidencies into one patriotic mass, with a community of feeling on Indian subjects. Thus a native of Calcutta, on a recent visit to Bombay, was enabled to address numbers of Parsees and Guzeraties in English; though they knew nothing of each other's vernacular. A pamphlet was published by a native in this city some time ago in English, and was reprinted by his countrymen in Madras, and circulated widely. Madras and Bombay, like Calcutta, have newspapers in English, conducted by natives, and advocating the views of educated natives. This influence is radiating downwards. The substance of those newspapers and pamphlets in English are being communicated orally, or by means of translations to the masses of the people. The vernacular press is rising into great importance as a genuine exponent of native opinion, and it is to be regretted that the European community pay so little regard to its admonitions and warnings. It is the index of the native mind. In 1853 I visited Delhi, Agra, and Lucknow, and particularly examined the statistics connected with the vernacular press in the Upper Provinces, and I remember the impression with which I left Delhi, after I had been through its lanes and gullies, exploring the localities of its vernacular presses. I felt then very strongly how little the Europeans of Delhi and other cities were aware of the prodigious activity of the vernacular periodical press, and the impression it was evidently producing on the native mind as tested by the avidity with which books, treating on native and political subjects, were purchased. The progress of the vernaular press in Calcutta may be thus shown:—

Works printed for sale were:—

In 1826	-	-	8,000	} copies.
In 1853	-	-	300,000
In 1857	-	-	600,000

Social questions occupy much of the attention of the vernacular press; thus the controversy on widow marriage gave rise to 25 different publications in Bengali. The subjects of early marriage and female education have also been amply discussed. The agri-horticultural Society of Calcutta has deemed it worth its while to publish a volume on agricultural subjects for the ryots. A native, under the soubriquet of a "Tekchund," with the wit of a Dickens or a Moliere, has exposed the evils of spirit drinking, female ignorance, and Young-Bengalism, among his countrymen, and his works have met with a large circulation. Next, Bengali newspapers, such as the "Bhaskar" and "Probhakar," are circulated widely even as far as the Punjab, for wherever Bengalis go (the Bengali, like the Jew, is a wanderer, and is to be met with in every part of Northern India) they keep up a correspondence with each other in their own language and read their native papers. Thus on a visit to Benares, three years ago, I was in a part, called the Bengali-tolli, inhabited almost entirely by Bengalis, who used the Bengali language. Two Bengali newspapers were printed there. These Bengali newspapers have mofussil correspondents, who give them the news of the district, and to each Bengali newspaper is attached a translator of English newspapers; hence the native mind is much more familiarised with political movements both in Europe and India, than the Anglo-Indian commonly imagines. I take up the Bhaskar of last Thursday as a specimen of what is ordinarily given in a Bengali newspaper: there is an editorial on the income tax, in which the policies of Lord Auckland, Lord William Bentinck, Lord Hardinge, Lord Dalhousie, and Runjeet Sing are reviewed; then an editorial on Lord Clyde's leaving India; then an article on Sir Charles Trevelyan, and on the Raja of Burdwan; then news about China, and about the Indigo Commission; the price currents, Assam steamers, Sir George Clerk, Gwalior, Oude, and Lady Cannings. A Bengali paper is also published in the remote district of Rungpore; the last number, for instance, contains offers of prizes for vernacular essays; an editorial on the Moslem rule; the Rajah of Kooch Behar's movements; the Indigo Commission, and an article on gas. The amlas of the courts, the state of the police, the character of magistrates, are constant subjects of criticism in those papers. I remember reading 16 years ago, a series of powerful articles in the Bhaskar, exposing with the most caustic wit, the abuses of the courts. Now, to my certain knowledge, indigo planting has been for the last 16 years the subject of incessant attacks in those native newspapers, and the opinion of those papers filters down to the mass. News is spread among natives through channels which Europeans know little of. Thus, at the period of the mutiny, the bazaar had often anticipated the Government in political information. I beg to hand in, in illustration, a translation from the Som Prakash, of 21st May 1860, an able weekly journal published in Calcutta, of an article headed "The sense of Religion of the Indigo Planters." In this and other papers, which I hand in, I do not hold myself responsible for

Rev.
J. Long.

12 June
1860,

Rev.
J. Long.

12 June
1860.

for the opinions, but merely give them in as an expression of native opinion. I also submit a translation of the "Native Friend of India, Bharut Bundlu." Another source of ascertaining native opinion, are popular songs; songs have a powerful effect among Bengalis, and are used for religious and other purposes with great success, justifying the remark of Burke, "Give me the making of the ballads of a nation, and I will give you the making of the laws." I beg to submit a pamphlet published in Bengali and widely circulated, called "The oppressions of the Indigo Planters;" it contains songs which have been sung far and wide among natives, and set to music. The drift of some of those songs is the following: that the interest on the planter's advances accumulates for three generations; that though the people sell their pottas (leases) they do not cross the Ganges, i. e., get free from the planter; that when the planter first applies to the ryot to sow indigo, he comes like a beggar, but at last he makes grass to grow on the ryot's bones; the indigo planters come in like a needle, but go out like a ploughshare, and are desolating Bengal like flocks of locusts; the king looks on while the subjects are drowned—all is gone—to whom shall we apply but to Almighty God? Should we shut our eyes at night, we see the white face before us, and through fear, our lives fly away like a bird; our souls are burning in the strong flames of pain. (Translation and original handed in.) Another source of ascertaining native opinion, are native meetings. The Hindoos are fond of dramatic exhibition, or jatras, which abound in wit and ridicule. In these the evils of Kulin polygamy are held up to contempt; nor do the defects of Europeans escape attention. A friend of mine was present at one of these meetings some two years ago, when the European was brought forward for ridicule with his slang terms of "cursed nigger," "stupid ass." Indigo planting is also occasionally the subject of ridicule in these meetings. I can assure the Commissioners, that no language can depict the burning indignation with which indigo planting is and has been regarded by the native population. It alarms me seriously for the future peace of India, unless an equitable adjustment of the question is made. Some how or another a feeling is arising in rural districts and spreading through the country, that the Government and officials wink at a system of oppression on the part of planters, more ruthless, the natives say, than any in Moslem times. In connexion with this, the notion has long been established in the North-West Provinces, but is now spreading in rural districts in Bengal, that the French and Russians are anxious to get a footing in India, and of late natives have repeatedly said, How can we do worse under any foreign government? They see the magistrates and deputy-magistrates, when sent to adjudicate disputes between the ryots and the planters, becoming in various cases the guests of the planter while the case is pending; nor is this feeling against indigo planting confined to the natives of Bengal, or to the lower orders. Various educated natives are aware that the French press has brought forward the indigo planting system as a blot on English administration. I myself, at the beginning of the mutiny, read a pamphlet published by one of the courtiers of the king of Oude, in which he argues that the indigo planting oppression is as great in Bengal, as any system of oppression that has been alleged to be practiced by the king of Oude; and that if the king of Oude is to be deprived of his kingdom on account of the oppression practised in his territories, the English Government ought also to be deprived of Bengal, on account of the indigo and other oppressions they wink at. Feelings existing among the people in Bengal, can be orally communicated to the people speaking the Hindi and Maharatta languages, cognate tongues; I found myself, while at Benares, that I could make myself soon understood by the Hindi speaking population, in consequence of the affinity of the languages.

1627. Do you consider that the newspapers and pamphlets to which you allude, have any circulation in the indigo districts, or say beyond 30 miles from Calcutta?—Of late years they have had; I calculate that though native papers have a limited numerical circulation in the Mo-fussil, yet each paper is probably read by from five to 10 natives, and the information in it is orally communicated to a far wider sphere. There are hundreds of Bengali book hawkers employed, who gain their livelihood by selling books, pamphlets, and almanacs, in various districts. I myself have sent a book hawker out for the sale of useful Bengali works in the Hoogly district, and was surprised at the success he met with. In one case the natives had subscribed for a Barowari Pooja, but on my sending them useful works, they appropriated one-half of the money collected for the Pooja to the purchase of these works.

1628. Mr. Sale.] You have stated that a Bengali paper would be read by five or 10 persons; should a number of the Bhashur go into the zemindary cutcherry, do you not think it would be read by a much larger number?—Yes; and in such cases it is the practice of Hindoos to have one person at night to read to a large number; and the power of communicating information orally, is a well-paid profession among a class of Hindoos called kathaks. I have been present at an assembly where 300 males, and more than 100 females behind the purdah, were listening to an eloquent discourse in Bengali by a kathak for one hour and a half; and during that time, the attention was so profound, that the dropping of a pice could be heard. Nor are the popular songs of Bengalis sung at these assemblies always confined to subjects of love and religion, they occasionally touch on politics; for instance, on the appointment of indigo planters as honorary magistrates, strong feelings of indignation were excited among natives, but especially among ryots. A common remark was, je rakkhak se bhakkhak, the man appointed our protector is our devourer; or, in the language of English-speaking natives, the wolf is appointed the guardian of the flock. This remark was made to me frequently; those feelings found vent in song. I heard one of these songs condemnatory of planters as magistrates, set to music, and sung with enthusiasm by a band of native singers in the Kishnaghur district. (Translation put in.) I have mislaid the original.

1629. President.] Are we to understand, then, that from the vernacular publications you have been in the habit of perusing, as well as from conversations you have had with natives, the dislike to indigo cultivation is not of recent origin?—To my certain knowledge, the vernacular press has for 16 years at least, been assailing the evils lately expressed by the ryots. In a visit I made to Kishnaghur in 1842, I found the same complaints complaints as are now made; and in a correspondence I had in 1844 with a Kishnaghur missionary, the same objections as others lately brought forward, were then urged by him.

1630. Do you recollect the precise nature of those complaints?—Such as, “The ryot is caught in the planter’s net, and from 20 beehas, even in a good season, the ryot could not make more than 15 rupees; he then becomes plunged into debt, and eventually becomes a perfect slave to the indigo planter, not being able to liquidate his debts.”

1631. But, in your visit in 1844, do you recollect any precise complaints being made to you, not by third parties, but by the ryots themselves?—I was not then sufficiently acquainted with the language to get direct information from the ryot; but I heard only one opinion, which was, that the system was oppressive, and the source of much secret discontent among the ryots.

1632. Can you state in what subsequent years you have paid visits to Kishnaghur?—I visited Kishnaghur generally, on an average, once a year, having to go to the district every 18 months to a missionary conference; and I never heard anything but one loud and unanimous voice condemnatory to the ryotti system of indigo planting. This I heard from missionaries and natives.

1633. On the occasion of these visits did you remain at the Sudder station, or did you go into the interior?—I generally went into the interior.

1634. Mr. Fergusson.] Are you aware that exactly the same complaints were made 50 years ago?—It is impossible now to ascertain, because the English papers of that day, which I have consulted, but of which very few now remain, were in the interest of the great mercantile establishments, and like the Anglo-Indian press of the present day, carefully suppressed all facts reflecting discredit on the English; while it is only 40 years since the vernacular press, under the auspices of Ram Mohun Roy, started as a power in the country.

1635. Mr. Temple.] Did you ever see the statistical reports of Dr. Francis Buchanan on the districts of Dinagapore, Rungpore, and Purnea?—I have carefully studied them as some of the most valuable statistical documents that have ever been published; but I understand that Mr. Montgomery Martin, the editor, has not published all in full.

1636. Mr. Fergusson.] But there was a copy of the Dinagapore Report published in Calcutta, which is accurate, and which contains the remarks on indigo to which I refer, and in which it is stated that the complaints are consequent on the dishonest and fraudulent nature of the natives; do you not recollect that report?—Yes, but at the time when those reports were compiled, indigo cultivation was only about 20 years established by Europeans, and competition in the trade was not likely at that early period, or 1805, to have led to the results of later years.

1637. When you were on your visit to the Upper Provinces did you inquire into the system and practice of indigo planting there?—I did, in connexion with inquiries I made as to why, in the Benares district, a security of tenure was given to the ryot under the permanent settlement, which did not exist in Bengal and Behar. I received much information on the subject from Mr. E. A. Reade, and he, having thoroughly studied the question, informed me that the security of tenure obtained for the ryot by Jonathan Duncan gave the ryot great power of protection against the planter or the zemindar; I was told, also, that the Benares ryot was a more honest person than the ryot of Bengal, and had the courage to defend himself when oppressed. I was also informed that in the North-Western Provinces and Behar the indigo planter gives a fair price for the land, and takes all the risk of the crop.

1638. President.] Are you aware that the revenue of Benares is, like that of the Lower Provinces, settled in perpetuity?—Yes.

1639. Mr. Fergusson.] Did you hear any complaints against indigo or indigo planters in the north-west?—I had no opportunity to make particular inquiries on the subject, but, as far as I could incidentally learn, the system seemed to be pursued in a different way from what it is in Bengal.

1640. But if the system is the same in the North-Western Provinces as in Bengal, is it not reasonable to suppose that the complaints in Bengal are in consequence of the less truthful and honest nature of the Bengalis, whereby they do not fulfil their engagements?—I believe there is a great want of truthfulness and straightforwardness among the Bengali peasantry, yet still I believe the system of indigo planting to be oppressive; but I believe, too, that it would be utterly impossible to carry out the ryotti indigo system among a brave and martial peasantry like that in the North-Western Provinces.

1641. But are you in a position to say whether the system in the North-Western Provinces is identical with that of Bengal?—I can’t say; as I stated before, I merely heard incidentally of the system of the Lower Provinces.

1642. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] You have stated that the Benares ryots have courage enough to defend themselves; do you not think that on that account the planters there dare not oppress the ryots as they do in Lower Bengal?—The remark made to me by an official in Benares was, that if a planter in the North-Western Provinces attempted half the oppression laid to the charge of the Bengal planter, his head would be at the bottom of a well in a very short time.

1643. Mr. Sale.] It appears to be your opinion that a great part of the oppression which you believe to exist in the Lower Provinces, is attributable to the cowardice of the Bengali ryot; how do you account for the recent general resistance to the demands of the planter by the indigo ryots?—I do not attribute the oppression wholly to the cowardice of the ryots, but I believe the continual sufferance of it to be attributable to that cause. I, for instance, have found in my connexion as a missionary with Christian congregations, that the spirit of freedom imparted by Christianity has led Christian villagers to complain and vindicate their rights against their countrymen, who were oppressing them; and had the ryots a feeling of independence, they would bring the gomashta’s extortions in every case to the notice of the planters, so that, at any rate, the planter would not be, as he now is in various cases, unacquainted with what goes on at a distance from the factory. To my knowledge, the ryots have for many years complained of the factory system, but it is the last straw that breaks the camel’s back; the rise in prices, the increased value of labour, the ferment of mind produced by recent political events in India, together with the sympathy which is increasing between the educated natives and the masses, has led to the late movement. I believe the Rev.

J. Long.

12 June
1860.

Rev.
J. Long.

12 June
1860.

perwannas of the magistrate (Mr. Eden) have been only the occasion that has brought matters to a crisis, and showed the ryots that it was the wish of the Government to deal impartially with the question.

1644. Since the recent excitement arose, have you had any opportunities of conversing with the ryots from indigo districts, and what use have you made of them?—About five or six weeks ago a body of ryots from Kishnaghur called on me, stating in the strongest language their complaints about the indigo planting system, and that the Government officials were siding with the planters and were the planters' guests, that therefore they had no hope of redress in the Mofussil. Feeling the case to be a difficult one, and abhorring the character of a political person, I consulted with four or five missionaries of different denominations what was to be done in this emergency; we all felt, that as ministers of the Gospel, we could not turn the ryots out of the house without listening to their complaints, and without endeavouring to calm their minds and placing ourselves in the position of peace-makers. We heard the case and advised them to submit to the law, above all, not to resist, not even, to use my own expression, to lift their little finger against a planter, but that they should appeal to the authorities in Calcutta. These men, about 50 in number, went with 1,200 ryots, as I understand, and presented a petition to the Lieutenant Governor; these soon after returned to their own district; lately another body of ryots came to me, but I purposely avoided having any communication with them lest I should be considered a prompter of evidence. I beg here to say on behalf of myself that I have endeavoured to use my influence with the ryots on the side of peace and good order. I assured them that the intention of Government was to do justice to all parties.

1645. As far as your proceedings are concerned, and so far as the proceedings of others have come under your own personal knowledge, have you any reason to believe that influence has been exerted over the ryots with a view to giving the evidence they may be likely to deliver before this Commission any particular turn?—None, I believe. I have heard the evidence of the ryots given before this Commission, and it is on the whole substantiating the same style of complaint as what I have been hearing of and reading in Bengali newspapers for the last 16 years. The only difference is that the ryot's feelings have been exceedingly embittered by the working of a clause introduced by Mr. Wilson into the late Indigo Act which renders the ryot responsible for the old balances, and the working of this clause in the law has led to a more serious state of exasperation of the ryot's mind, and to a state of feeling among the natives at large, stronger against certain classes of the English than I have seen even during the mutiny; hence a general impression among the natives is, that when the interests of the planter and the ryot come into collision, the interests of the ryot would be sacrificed by the local authorities to those of the planter, and that wherever a magistrate was disposed to do his duty it would lead to a demand from certain influential parties for his removal.

1646. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Have the zemindars had anything to do with the present excited state of the ryots, and their refusal to sow indigo, to the best of your knowledge and belief?—I see a good many zemindars in Calcutta, and during the last cold weather I lived a good deal among zemindars in the Mofussil, away from Europeans, and it is my conviction that the zemindars as a body are too much afraid of the reactive influence the indigo question may have on the rent question to take any active part in it. I have invariably found the zemindars of Bengal, as a class, hostile to any movement which would secure either knowledge, freedom of thought, or freedom of action for the ryots.

1647. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you found the same feeling as described in your last answer to exist on the part of the zemindar, also to exist on the part of the planter?—I am better acquainted with zemindars than with planters, but as far as the planter is a zemindar his position has the tendency to the same feeling except when counteracted by higher principles.

1648. Mr. Temple.] Previous to the past excitement were the zemindars within your knowledge and experience generally hostile to the planters, and if so how was that hostility evinced?—Not having lived in an indigo district, I could not give an answer from personal observation; but I believe that on the whole the native zemindar is a greater check upon the oppression of the ryots by gomashtas than a foreigner can be.

1649. But has the zemindar the same interest as a planter would have in preventing any oppression upon the ryots?—The planter, as a bird of passage in this country, is much in the position of a rack-renter upon Irish estates, who sacrifice the future to realise present advantages, whereas the zemindar and his family have a permanent stake in the country. According to theory, the planter from his training and habits as an Englishman, ought to be superior to a zemindar, but the testimony borne throughout in the Aborigines Protection Committee Report of the House of Commons has established the fact that throughout the world wherever the Anglo-Saxon colonists came into contact with natives, the natives were either extirpated or reduced to serfdom.

1650. Mr. Fergusson.] But the planter does not suck the orange, throw it away, and embark on board ship. It must be his interest to leave it full to enable him to get a good price for the factory, and sell what he possesses. Is not this the case?—Yes, as far as the buildings and the immediate property is concerned, but I never heard but one opinion as to the system, that, though the indigo planting benefited the planter, his relatives, and the factory servants, it tended to the pauperization of the ryot. If men's interests and their duty coincided, we would have had no slavery, because oppression is against a man's interest, yet the history of the world shows the opposite.

1651. Mr. Sale.] But under a fair system, with equitable laws and an efficient police, do you not think it possible that an Englishman may so conduct himself as not only to carry on trade successfully, but also to secure the affection of the ryot?—Most decidedly so, but planters themselves have told me that under the ryotti system of indigo cultivation it was almost impossible to secure both the prosperity of the factory and that of the ryots in Bengal. I have, in fact, heard stronger complaints against the indigo system from planters themselves than from any other class, but they were involved in it, and did not see their way out; hence I believe various indigo planters secretly sympathise with the present movement for reform of the indigo system.

1652. Mr. Temple.] But have you never known any any planter who, under the ryotti system, managed to keep the ryots content?—Never. I should consider it an impossibility under the present system.

1653. But have you known of just and considerate planters try, and fail in this respect?—Yes, but as in the police, educational, and other systems, men find they cannot, as individuals, reform a system.

1654. Do you consider on the whole that the feeling of the ryot is at the present time favourable towards the Government?—Throughout India the peasant does not look to the supreme authority; his government is the next magistrate or local authority; and the working of the present Act has created a feeling among all ryots, I have come in contact with, of bitter hostility towards the ruling authorities generally.

1655. But several witnesses, missionaries residing in the indigo districts, have stated their opinion to the fact that one reason of the ryot's recusancy during the present year was a belief that at least the authorities were on their side and against the planters. Do you concur in that opinion?—I believe the remarks of the missionaries and others refer to the state of opinion previous to the passing of the Act, but the working of the Act has very much changed that state of feeling.

1656. But in what particular respect has native opinion been influenced unfavourably by the working of the Act, i. e., what particular part of the process is it they complain of?—From what I have heard directly from natives themselves, and from what I have seen of their own letters, they complain that the statements of advances on the part of the factory are generally taken for granted by the magistrates without due and careful inquiry as to whether they are real, fictitious, or exaggerated, and one point that now and in former times has been constantly and bitterly complained of, is that when the officials go out to decide cases between the ryot and the planter, these officials spend much of their time with the planters, and in society where they are likely to hear only one side of the question.

1657. But has not the fact of inquiry being ordered had a pacifying effect on the minds of the ryots you have met with?—Yes, to a certain extent, because they feel that the attention of the authorities is directed towards them.

1658. President.] Is it your opinion that ryots clearly understand the object of this Commission, viz., that it is not one for redress of individual grievances?—They did not at first, and hence the flocking down to Calcutta of so many of the ryots some time ago.

1659. Mr. Temple.] But when commenting on the recent Act, have the ryots understood its temporary character?—No, they do not. Ninety-five per cent. of them cannot read, and the fear of the higher class of natives is that the Act may be permanent. This feeling descends to and influences the lower classes.

1660. Have the ryots understood that, before enforcing the recent Act, the authorities and the planters used every persuasion to induce the ryots to sow according to engagement, and that even men in jail had the option allowed them of being set free, on sowing indigo; has the consideration thus evinced had any effect on the ryots?—Yes, but the feeling of distrust, generated by the recent conduct of the local authorities in carrying out the Act has, to a great extent, neutralised the effect of this.

1661. Then do you consider that in the recent proceedings, at least, a full consideration has been shown to the interest of the planters?—My view from all I have known on the question is, as I expressed it to an official lately, that the clauses added at Mr. Wilson's instigation, made the Act essentially a slave law, and that in fact the working of it amounts to an attempt to sow indigo at the point of the bayonet.

1662. When ryots make general complaints, such as you have described, regarding the system of indigo planting, have you known any instances in which exaggeration has been made on a foundation of truth, or has the complaint been merely an invention?—From my own experience of the ryots, I have considerable distrust of ryots' evidence where their personal interests are concerned; but their statements on this question, coming from such a wide-spread variety of tests, in regard to which there could be no possible collusion, are corroborated so much by what is and has long been known of the indigo system as being a non-paying system, which therefore can only be carried on by coercing the ryots; and also on the grounds that the general statements they have made coincide with what has been known of indigo districts during the last 16 or 20 years, that I do not believe that the general statements made by the ryots against indigo are exaggerated.

1663. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you believe that the statements of the ryots as to outrages on women, destruction of houses, &c. are generally correct, which statements we were informed had been made in your house?—I certainly was informed by various respectable natives of the case referred to by Mr. Bomwetsch. It was the subject of general conversation at the time, and excited strong feelings of indignation among the natives. When the man related in my verandah the account to Mr. Bomwetsch, I was not listening, being occupied with something else. I had heard the account previously in Calcutta, but I did not tax my memory with the names of persons or places, as I felt we had to inquire about a system, and we might have a good man working a bad system, and a bad man working a good system. For instance, if it could be shown that in a certain district there were four or five missionaries guilty of immoral practices, this would not prove that the missionary system was bad; and so with alleged immoral practices of planters as bearing on the planting system. I, of course, can have no personal knowledge of this, any more than I can have of many vices in society, whether European or Native, which are deeds of darkness, and done in darkness. But mingling freely with natives of all classes, I have been obliged to hear such charges, and there is no question that the occasional occurrences of outrages, is a general belief of the natives, and tends to make indigo planting odious.

1664. Did you not give the tale circulation as an individual instance of a general practice among planters, and did you believe that instance to be true?—Not as an individual instance of a general practice, though I have been acquainted of late years with various facts relating to outrages; I am glad to acknowledge, however, that there is a great improvement in the morals of indigo planters. That such things should be of occasional occurrence in a certain state of society is not surprising; from the respectability and integrity of my informants, I find it morally impossible to disbelieve it; I have no inclination to blacken the character of my countrymen.

Rev.
J. Long.

12 June
1860.

Rev.
J. Long.
—
12 June
1860.

1665. Mr. Fergusson.] You have resided a good deal of late about 10 miles south of Calcutta; do you know anything about the salt manufactory a few miles further south, say at Tumlook?—No, nothing of Tumlook. It is a long way off; in fact a day and a half's journey from my residence at Thakoorpukur.

1666. Would you be surprised to be told that more oppression is practised on the molunghees or salt ryots, than what you have stated to be practised on the indigo ryots in Kishnaghur?—I believe oppression is the normal rule in Bengal, but I can know nothing of the molunghees.

1667. Do you consider generally that natives are fit to be trusted with magisterial powers in the interior of the country, more especially where there are many Europeans located?—Yes, a certain class of natives; and I think that for the sake of impartial justice to the native individuals of that class, morally as well as intellectually qualified, they ought to be appointed in due proportion, otherwise the antagonism of race, which is on the increase in India, will render it very difficult to get an impartial administration of justice between the Europeans and natives, if magisterial authority is confined only to the dominant race; besides the exclusion of natives from magisterial offices, would hereafter create very serious political hostility to the Government.

1668. Baboo Chundee Mohun Chatterjee.] If the European planters were subject to the same laws and equal punishment with the natives of the country by the Mofussil authorities, would they not be deterred from committing affrays, kidnapping people, and other unlawful acts?—As a matter of justice there should be but one law of moral equity for the European and the native; but unless the European officials appointed are well acquainted with the natives and their language, and able to judge for themselves, without the intervention of interpreters, the danger is that natives would have little chance of justice when their interests were brought into collision with those of Europeans, and that many European officials might be tempted to carry out the maxim, "Our own countrymen, right or wrong."

1669. Mr. Temple.] Then do you consider that the European would have nothing to fear, if he was subject to the Mofussil courts, but on the contrary, the fear would be for the ryots; is that your opinion?—Yes, but all would depend on the constitution of the court, and the administration of the law.

1670. President.] Are we clearly to understand that it is your opinion that if Europeans were subjected to the local courts, they would be more prone to oppression, and less amenable to reason than they are now; or in other words, that having to look to the local authorities alone, their powers would be increased?—In indigo districts there is not a due admixture of native and European magistrates; and I don't think impartial injustice would be likely to be administered were there only European officials, or that the natives would have confidence in the equity of their administration.

Reverend G. G. CUTHBERT, M. A., Secretary to the Church Missionary Society, Calcutta, called in; and Examined on oath.

Rev. G. G.
Cuthbert.
—

1671. President.] HAVE you ever resided in or visited any indigo districts?—Yes, I resided for nearly a year, 1846-47, in the Kishnagur district, and have visited the same district nearly every year since 1847.

1672. During that period did you have any opportunities of ascertaining the working of the indigo system, and becoming acquainted with the feelings of the indigo ryots?—I had some opportunity; first, by residing for nearly a year at an indigo factory, where I saw the work going on, and met several indigo planters with whom I had a good deal of conversation on the subject; and next by hearing statements from the ryots when visiting the district; also from the testimony of several of our missionaries residing in those districts, who constantly communicate with me.

1673. Did you then collect any facts which might lead you to form an opinion as to whether the cultivation of indigo was profitable or unprofitable to the ryot, liked or disliked by him?—The opinion that I have been led to form from what I have seen and heard in my hearing on many occasions by ryots is, that indigo cultivation is decidedly disliked by them, and is also unprofitable, and that on various grounds.

1674. What do you believe to be the causes of that dislike?—It is dislike, partly on account of its being unprofitable when compared with other crops; partly because the people are compelled to cultivate against their will, partly because they are subjected to several exactions and oppressions from the agents of the factory; and partly because it deprives them of a great deal of their freedom of action. These causes are gathered from my visits in indigo districts, and from what I have heard among the ryots.

1675. Did you not, some years ago, take part in a discussion on the cultivation, and, if so, state what led you to do so?—Yes, in the year 1856. What immediately led to the discussion at that time was a violent and abusive attack by a certain planter upon me and others for statements incorrectly reported to have been made at a Missionary Conference in Calcutta; but previous to that time I had felt compelled by a conscientious feeling of desire of duty to help people in distress, to take an interest in the subject. I may mention here that in my annual visits to the Kishnaghur district, as I stopped at the various mission stations, the ryots, chiefly Christians, hearing there was a Sahib from Calcutta there, used to come and state their grievances arising from indigo. This was done from year to year, and I was implored by the people to try and do something for their relief. I told them again and again that I had no power to help them, but they did not seem disposed to believe it. My missionary friends also urged me to do something either with influential parties here, or through the press. Thus partly constrained by my own feelings, and partly by the urgent entreaties of both these parties, I was anxious to do something, if possible.

1676. Mr. Temple.] In 1856 was there any excitement among the ryots similar to that which now prevails?—Not by any means so great.

1677. Was there the same discontent?—Yes, much the same, but it was not so plainly manifested by open acts.

1678. When you first became acquainted with the country in 1846, was there the same feeling?—Yes, I believe there was a feeling of hatred to the cultivation of indigo.

1679. Then the feeling has always been the same since you were first acquainted with the country?

country?—I think it has been always much the same; but it appears to be more intense now, because it has been exhibited by open demonstrations.

1680. Mr. Salé.] With regard to the discussion in 1856, it has been repeatedly asserted in certain newspapers that you made an assertion that every chest of indigo was stained with blood; did you make such a statement, and would you, on further reflection, adhere to it?—I did not make that statement as my own, but repeated an anecdote which was told to me by a friend to show that it was not missionaries only that heard things about indigo manufacture. The sentiment was that of a gentleman who had once been a planter himself. It is this (Mr. Cuthbert here read a note from page 10 of the second part of his printed statements on indigo planters and ryots).

1681. During your visits to Kishnaghur, had you occasion to remark that the indigo ryots were better housed, or better clothed, than other ryots?—Many of the estates in Kishnaghur are indigo estates. As far as I ever observed, with the exception of persons immediately connected with the factory (I mean the paid servants), the ryots generally are not better off than other ryots.

1682. Do you mean to say that there was no improvement visible to the eye, such as would strike any person passing through the villages?—I have not observed such.

1683. Mr. Temple.] Within the last 14 years, have you observed any material improvement in the condition of the indigo ryots?—I do not wish to speak positively, but my impression is that there has been a deterioration instead of an improvement. In travelling through the district from time to time, I have thought I observed a diminution, if not in the number, at least in the size and appearances of the villages.

1684. Have you formed a clear idea of the points now at issue between the planter and the ryots, and can you suggest any change in the system?—I consider the main point at issue to be whether the cultivation should be free or forced, and as to changes, I would suggest, first, that the voluntary character of the cultivation should be secured by law. Next, that contracts with ryots, if made at all, should be made for very short periods, say one or two years. Thirdly, that planters should be content with less profit than at present, so as to enable them to allow the ryots a better remuneration for their labour. Further, that planters should cultivate other crops as well as indigo, the profits of which would make up for the diminution of the profits of indigo cultivating, as some planters do.

1685. Then are the Commission clearly to understand, that under the present system the ryot is not a free agent?—As a general rule, he is not.

1686. Mr. Temple.] Then by what means do you consider that the ryots have been coerced, bearing in mind especially that the ryots are so many thousands, and the planters so few in number?—Though many thousand ryots may be connected with what is called an indigo concern, they are sub-divided among various out-factories. So there are not so many attached to each, and they are thus more easily coerced than they would be otherwise.

1687. Mr. Fergusson.] Mr. Forlong states that he has 19,067 cultivating ryots, and I believe he has not got above eight or nine European assistants; how could that body of Europeans coerce such a body of men?—Yes, but there are about 32 factories; and the native agents would be still more likely to coerce or oppress than the Europeans. I should have thought there were more than eight or nine European assistants over so many factories.

1688. To each of these 32 factories, would there not be a native staff attached, consisting of a gomashta, amin, takidgir, peons, and so forth?—Yes.

1689. President.] Within your knowledge and observation, what has been the general character of the planter, and what effect do you suppose it ought to have had on the cultivation of indigo?—I have met a good many planters, and have usually found them friendly, hospitable, and gentlemanly. As for their moral and religious character, they are very much of the standard of other Europeans in this country. This refers to their character as members of European society, but I think a distinction should be made between men as members of what is called society, and as engaged in carrying on a particular business. In the former character they may appear faultless, whilst in carrying on their business they may countenance practices, not introduced by them, but such as other persons in the same class of society would decidedly condemn.

1690. Mr. Fergusson.] In the same way might not Her Majesty's Indian Government be considered a good and Christian Government, but be justly condemned by others for carrying on the opium trade?—I suppose so.

1691. Mr. Temple.] But have you not known planters who were just and considerate in the actual carrying on of their business?—The planter I know best, and have lived in the same house with, was, as far as I know, just and considerate; he was a young man not very long in the country.

[Commission adjourned at 6 P.M.]

Rev. G. G.
Cuthbert.

12 June
1860.

Thursday, 14th June 1860.

PRESENT.

W. S. SETON-CARR, Esq., C. S., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., C. S., W. F. Fergusson, Esq., Reverend J. Sale,
Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

The Reverend SAMUEL JOHN HILL, Missionary of the London Missionary Society, residing at Bhowanipore, called in; and Examined on oath.

Rev.
S. J. Hill.

14 June
1860.

1692. President.] HAVE you resided in, or visited any of the indigo districts, and enjoyed any facilities for observing the working of the indigo system?—I was born in an indigo district, in the neighbourhood of Moorshedabad, and lived there up to the age of 11, when I went to England, and came back when I was 17; I was engaged for about four years in the manufacture of silk and the purchase of country produce; after that I spent a year in Mymensing, at Serajgunge, trading in jute. I joined the mission in 1852, and was ordained in 1853, and went back to Berhampore in 1853. I had no practical connexion with the indigo business, but there was a factory just opposite our house, on the opposite side of the river, called Gopalgunge. I have frequently spent a week or a fortnight at a factory as a friend, but I can't say that I made any examination into the working system of indigo planting.

1693. But whilst following your own business, or whilst moving about in the Mofussil, have you ascertained facts, or have facts been brought to your notice which would show how either the zemindars or the ryots looked upon that system?—I have had complaints made to me by natives about the oppression, not as arising from the head of the factory but from the amla, retainers, &c. The natives also look upon the plant itself as injurious to the soil. In proof of which I can repeat a verse of a ballad, which I have heard sung in various parts of the Moorshedabad district, as follows:—

"The enemy of the soil is indigo;
The enemy of labour is idleness;
So the enemy of caste is Padre Hill."

"Zaminer shatru nil,
Kormer shatru dhil,
Temoni jater shatru Padre Hill."

1694. About the advances, I have often heard men say that they never got the amount promised or even awarded by the planter; that the factory servants always deducted a large amount of it in various ways?—This complaint has also been made to me with regard to almost every other kind of business carried on in the Mofussil, where the money has to pass through the hands of the amla. This was not peculiar to indigo alone.

1695. Mr. Sale.] When you speak of amla, do you refer to native intermediate agency, or have you found the complaint to which you refer to prevail when money passes through the hands of the trader to that of the ryot without any intervention of a third party?—When I received such complaints I never asked the people whether they had received the money through the hands of a native or an European. But I believe, that when Europeans pay the money with their own hands, still the amla, under various pretexts, would make their pickings. In the case of one European, a servant of Government in the Public Works Department, I was told by several natives, that in paying the labourers he was in the habit of deducting 2 annas on every rupee he paid. Again, on a certain occasion, I was requested by the late Company's solicitor, Mr. A. Grant, to get out of the Moorshedabad Judge's Court the sum of 17,000 rupees, which was in deposit, belonging to the estate of some Begum; I presented my authority to the judge, and was told by him that I should receive the money the next day at 4 p.m. In the evening one of the amla of his court called upon me, and asked for a dustoori on this money. I asked whether it was a legal charge; that if so I was ready to pay it; he replied that "it was the dustoor, and that if I didn't pay it I should not get the money." I refused, and the result was, that when I waited on the judge the next day at four o'clock, I was told that a claim had been set up for this money; and Mr. Grant, after six months' hard fighting, only obtained the money with great difficulty.

1696. President.] Can you say by whom the claim was set up, and what was its ostensible nature?—The name of the party I cannot remember, as it occurred, I fancy, somewhere in about 1846; the claim, as far as I could ascertain, was set up by some female relative of the Begum.

1697. Did you obtain a copy of the petition of the opposing creditor?—No; I left Berhampore about a month after this, and placed the matter in Mr. Grant's hands.

1698. Might it not have been quite possible that the demand of the amla for illegal payments, and the opposition by a third party, were independent of each other, granting that they happened at the same time?—From the result, I was under the impression at the time, and am so still, that it was entirely got up by the amla of the court.

1699. What age were you at the time?—About 21 years of age.

1700. Had you any complaints from persons engaged in the cultivation of indigo that the same was burdensome, and caused interruption to their other agricultural pursuits?—When I was in the district of Mymensing my predecessor had obtained by force the land on which my bungalow was built. About seven years after, I had left Mymensing, I went there on a missionary tour with the Rev. Mr. Lacroix; when I arrived at Serajgunge, I visited the talookdars, whose lands I have referred to, and about the first thing they did on seeing me was to point out indigo growing upon land which they absolutely required for rice, and which had been forcibly taken possession of by an indigo planter. I asked them why they did not

didn't complain to the joint magistrate? They replied that they were under the impression that the joint magistrate and the indigo planter were on too friendly terms for them to hope to obtain any justice. I don't think that I ever had any complaints to the effect that cultivation, where they had engaged to cultivate, was irksome and burthensome. I heard nothing beyond the ballad above alluded to. A gomashta of a factory in which the cultivation was all nij-abad, upon my asking him whether they had many law suits in connexion with that factory, told me, that the only cases were when they wanted to get ploughs to plough the land. I understood him to mean, that the nij required ploughing when the ryots wanted to use the ploughs themselves, and this led to disputes, and so cases came on in the courts.

1701. Did the ryots or others ever make known to you any more serious complaints or charges of oppression against any one, such persons being the actual sufferers?—In a general way I have heard ryots complain that they could not keep goats or cows on account of the oppression of the factory servants, but nothing more.

1702. In many cases, when the complaints you have alluded to were brought to your notice, were they done so spontaneously and voluntarily, or were you the first to inquire about them?—It has always been a principle with me not to interfere with other people's business; so that whatever I have heard has been generally voluntary and spontaneous. The case alluded to in a previous answer, referring to ploughs on a nij-abad concern, I do not include in my reply.

1703. Mr. Sale.] Do you think it the duty of an Englishman, passing through any district in Bengal, to refrain from making any inquiries into the condition of the ryots?—I am not prepared to give a direct answer as to its being a matter of duty or not, as the lower class of natives in this country are so given to exaggeration, that I have preferred not to press any inquiries of that character further than merely asking them how they were getting on, whether they were well off, and such like.

1704. President.] On the whole, then, and from such facts as were brought to or forced themselves on your notice, did you come to the opinion that indigo cultivation was popular or not with the ryots?—Decidedly unpopular. I have heard of the unpopularity of indigo cultivation from natives in general of all classes. I can't say positively that it came from the indigo cultivators themselves. I would add here, that from all that I have heard, the principal part of the oppression was to be laid to the charge of the factory servants. The indigo planters of the present day, whom I have had the opportunity of knowing, are gentlemen, who might be placed on a par with civil servants and military men; and who would never give countenance to so much oppression, were it not for the defective state of the police, and the badness of the system of indigo planting.

1705. Have you ever had anything to do with the police yourself, or have cases been brought to your notice where the police acted unfairly either to the planter, zemindar, or ryot?—I have never suffered myself, as far as I can remember, from the police; but on one occasion, a darogah at Moorshedabad went to a dhobie's or washerman's house, abducted his wife, and took her away by force. He was convicted by the Sessions Judge, and let off by the Nizamut Adawlut. I have been told by natives, that whenever a darogah visited a village to make investigations, he never left it without ruining the people. I have heard this from some of the people who have paid money on such occasions. I don't particularly recollect any other cases.

1706. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you ever suffered from the proceedings of civil courts; and do you know of any instances of other persons having done so?—When I was in business at Berhampore, one of my amla brought three false suits against me in the civil court, and the false witnesses were so well got up, that had not the plea of minority been suggested to me and acted upon, I should have had to go to jail, or pay the money claimed. The cases were, as far as I recollect, as follows. The first was a case for money said to be due for some silk purchased; the second was for 125 rupees, the price of a horse; and the third was for land belonging to the Berhampore Mission, which was in my charge, and was said to have been given by me to the wife of this person. This last case, of itself, fell to the ground. The other two cases were substantiated as far as the false evidence went.

1707. Was there no truth in the claims, or any foundation whatever?—No; none whatever.

1708. President.] Did you take any steps in the management of your case, or did you leave it to your mooktyar?—They were managed entirely by my mooktyar. All the papers that were sent to be filed were sent to me previously for my inspection. My father advised me in these cases.

1709. In the two cases of debt, was any bond or documentary evidence, with your signature produced in court?—In the case about the purchase of silk, a blank form, signed by me and given to this person to write an order on for bringing in silk from a village about 14 miles away, was retained by him, and afterwards filled up as a receipt for the amount. He was my own servant, and had no filature of his own, and consequently could not have sold me any silk; in the other case of the horse, I can't recollect whether any written document was produced or not. I could not deny that the horse was in my possession, and that I had purchased it from him.

1710. As you admitted that the horse was in your possession, it became incumbent on you to prove payment. Could you not have proved it?—I took no receipt from the man.

1711. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] You stated that you were a minor when you made purchases of silk; who provided you with funds?—Messrs. Kilby, Ryder & Co.

1712. Were your agents aware of your minority at the time?—Yes; at least I imagine so.

1713. President.] Will you give us the benefit of your own experience in the practice of making advances for silk?—We generally, at the beginning of a bund or part of a season, used to make advances to certain people, who were called paikars. The paikars used to go to the villagers who used to breed the silk worms, and purchase cocoons, and bring them to the factory, where they were weighed. We counted a kahun or two, and then weighed the rest by the weight of the kahuns that were counted, then these were placed in different shelves in our silk godown. When they were worked up, each paikar was credited with the amount of silk supposed to be obtained from his cocoons, less a deduction for weight, in anticipation of the raw silk drying. There generally was

Rev.
S. J. Hill.
14 June
1860.

Rev.
S. J. Hill.

14 June
1860.

was a surplus at the end of the season in the godown, which surplus, properly speaking, belonged to the paikars, and at the end of the season should have been placed to their credit, but it was carried to the profit and loss account of the factory. To the best of my recollection the amount was about 400 or 500 rupees.

1714. How many paikars did you deal with, and were they generally men of substance?—If I remember rightly, the factory to which I was attached, had about 11 or 12 paikars. They were men of about the middle class.

1715. Were the paikars always successful in squaring their accounts with the ryots?—As far as I understood at the time, they were in the habit of purchasing the cocoons for cash from the breeders. I may state here that the reason why I am unable to say any thing certainly about its being a cash transaction, was, that they travelled 30 or even 40 miles to purchase cocoons.

1716. Could you state about what amount of money you advanced to each paikar?—As far as I can remember, some got 200 rupees, some 300, and some 400 rupees.

1717. Mr. Fergusson.] Were the advances made some time before the worms came to maturity, or only at the very period of maturity?—As far as I can remember, some time before, in order to enable the paikars to go about the district.

1718. President.] Do you know of any instances of Europeans rearing cocoons on their own account?—Yes, I know two. My father, the late Reverend M. Hill, on account of the London Missionary Orphan Asylum, and the late Mr. Diedrick Herklots; both these attempts however failed, I believe, through the servants' want of attention to the worms.

1719. Did you generally find the paikars faithful and trustworthy in their dealings?—I believe they would have been honest and faithful in their dealings if the manufacturer had been faithful to them. As far as I can remember, there was not a single paikar who had not a balance against him in our books; I can't recollect to mind a single instance in which a paikar got on the right side of the books. I was altogether about 18 months in this line.

1720. Then if the paikars were generally on the wrong side, why did they continue their dealings?—I was nine months at the factory of another party, so that I could not say what happened the season after I left.

1721. Can you state what the custom was when a paikar had not cleared his advances? Did you in the next season make him full advances, or did you make any deduction on account of his debts?—I do not remember the precise way in which we managed that.

1722. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Did you take any securities from the paikar, and upon what amount of cocoons did you make the advances?—I was an assistant in the factory. As far as I could understand, the owner of the factory used to settle, at the commencement of a season, at what rate he would purchase the cocoons, i. e., he used to say at what rate he would credit the paikar for a return. It was so many puns or so many cocoons for the rupee. Raw silk was bought by the seer weight. I found the paikars there when I came, and I understand that they had all of them given security but of what description I cannot tell, for the monies which they might from time to time receive from the factory.

1723. Would not the paikar first settle the price of the cocoons for each bund, or part of a season, before he brought the cocoons into the filatures?—In a former answer I have stated that the owner of the factory used to fix a certain price at which he would be willing to receive the cocoons. This price was fixed, I believe, with common consent. The owner of the factory would say, I can afford to give so much. The paikar, under this authority, went out and made the best bargain he could. The profits, within that limit, went to the paikar.

1724. Mr. Sale.] Then it might happen, that though the paikar had a balance standing against him in the books of the filature, he might make a profit on every bund. Is this not the case?—Doubtless it is most likely that he generally did make a profit.

1725. But if he made such a profit, did he keep it to himself, or did he bring it forward to clear off balances against him?—As I have before stated, that to the best of my recollection not one of the paikars referred to were out of debt to the factory. All such profits that might have accrued they kept to themselves.

1726. President.] The Commission understood that the balances occur against the paikars because they take away a certain sum, say 100 rupees, and only bring back cocoons to represent 80 rupees. What do you suppose has become of the remainder?—The balances may arise from two causes; one is, that they do not bring back a corresponding quantity of silk, as put in the question, and the other, that too large an amount is deducted for dryage. In the first case, I can't undertake to say what becomes of the difference.

1727. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Does the paikar sign an agreement when he receives any advances?—As far as I can recollect, the paikars used to sign some kind of a receipt for the amount of advances.

1728. Mr. Sale.] Supposing a paikar refuses to take advances, what course would you have adopted?—I don't remember any case in which the paikar refused taking advances. If he had refused, we should have demanded instant payment of his balance; or we should doubtless have confined the man in one of the godowns, if there was no probability of getting speedy justice. One paikar, who ran away in debt to the factory, and from whom my predecessors, I believe for the period of some six or seven years, had been unable to realise the balances due from him, was liable, according to orders from the factory, to be seized and brought there, whenever a factory servant might happen to see him. One of my burkundazes pounced upon him in the Khayra bazaar in Berhampore, and was dragging him by a cloth round his neck to our factory, when a deputy magistrate came up and caught my servant in the act and handed him over to the police. The result was, the factory had to pay a fine of five rupees on account of this assault; but we never obtained the amount of our balances.

1729. President.] Did the paikars never lay claim to any surplus silk that might be found at the end of the year, to the effect that it should be considered a set-off to their balances?—They complained of the hardship of the case; but as far as I can remember, they were told that it was the regular custom of factories in general, and no credit was given them.

1730. Will you state what was your plan with regard to the purchase of jute or any other country produce in Serajunge or elsewhere?—In Berhampore, I myself never made any advances, but went to dealers in hides, in sugar and land tallow, and paid, generally speaking, cash for what I purchased. In the case of hides it sometimes so happened that I heard of a quantity being stored at a village some 20 or 30 miles away, and sent my servants with money to purchase them. In Berhampore, when I made silk piece goods, the advances which I made to weavers were very seldom worked out. In Mymensing or Serajgunge, in purchasing jute or sugar, I never made any advances.

1731. But apart from your own practice, was it the practice of others to make advances for the purchase of these and other products?—In the hide business I can positively state that dealers to any large extent always made advances. One large dealer who has his residence in Calcutta, and with whom I was connected in business, stated to me that he had outstanding balances to the extent of two lacs and 50,000 rupees. Another pretty extensive dealer, who lived in Berhampore, I believe told me himself, and I also heard it from other parties, that he had outstanding balances amounting to near 50,000 rupees.

1732. Were the advances made to persons who went about the country and purchased wherever they could?—I believe that was the plan, as also that advances were made to butchers. I endeavoured to purchase fresh slaughtered hides in Moorshedabad, but I was prevented, as the butchers were all under advances to other parties.

1733. Was any supervision exercised on the party who had taken advances by the party who made them?—That I cannot tell. In the instance I refer to, the butchers themselves refused to sell me the hides.

1734. Can you state whether all these outstanding balances were eventually realised?—That would be a mere matter of opinion, but I should say not.

1735. Mr. Fergusson.] If such balances are not realised, are they not so much addition to the price paid for the articles?—I should say they would be.

1736. Do you consider that advances are necessary in almost every description of business in Bengal?—If you look at the general custom of this country, I should say that advances are positively necessary in every kind of business, as scarcely any native seems to be inclined to work without getting an advance, though in my business, having the example of so many sufferers before me, I fought against the system of advances and always purchased for cash. I have heard sometimes, after I had purchased articles, that the seller was under advances from other parties.

1737. President.] In the case of any agricultural produce, do you know whether the advances were made to the actual growers of the produce before the seed was put into the ground?—I believe that is the custom with grain, but with jute I am quite unable to say, having always purchased mine in the market.

1738. Mr. Sale.] You have stated that the advances made to weavers were scarcely ever worked off; did you form any opinion as to the cause of this?—Dishonesty; they generally ran away. It appears to me probable, and I have heard from natives generally, that the workmen never receive the full amount of their advances, and it is most likely that the weavers worked up the amount that they really had received, and ran away because they were unwilling to pay that which was deducted by the amlā. Similarly, in the case of the katanees, or persons who reel off the silk, who frequently ran away because they had not received their dues.

Munshi LATAFAT HOSSAIN, Zemindar, Inhabitant of Sura, Thannah Entally, Zillah
24 Pergunnahs, called in; and Examined on oath.

1739. President.] HAVE you any lands in your possession, and in what districts?—I had zemindaries in Nuddea and Jessore. I have not got them now, that is to say, I have settled them on my wife at the time of marriage, about eight or nine years ago. There are people appointed by her to manage the estates.

1740. When the estates were still under your management, had you anything to do with indigo planting?—Yes, both the Sinduri and Katchikatta concerns used to grow indigo within my estates; I never gave any of them in putni or ijara to those concerns, but I have had a good deal of trouble with planters who wanted to get them. My eldest brother, Munshi Hidayat Hossain, used to manage for myself and my other brother. I am the youngest. Both my brothers are now dead. When my eldest brother died, we were then young, but not minors, the proprietor of Katchikatta put forward a lease, stating himself to have obtained it from my eldest brother for the turuf of Gurgaria, Pergunnah of Sahoujial, whereupon the case was brought on, under Act IV. of 1840, by the magistrate, to settle the question of possession. The magistrate discredited the potta of the lease, and affirmed our possession. On this, the planter came with 200 or 300 men, and burnt down my cutcherry. Many of his people were imprisoned and fined. [The witness here filed a proceeding in the vernacular of the court of the magistrate of Nuddea, dated 9th September 1844.] After this, they went to sow indigo on the land of a ryot named Asshar, bearer, who opposed them and got wounded by a sword. The complaint was brought in the Jessore criminal court, and some people were punished. [Witness here filed proceedings of the judge's court at Jessore, dated 24th June 1845.] Also the people of the factory made an attack on the village of Mandarhuda, and killed two men, for which a sentence of imprisonment, for seven and five years respectively, was passed by the court of sessions on several of the offenders. [Witness here filed proceedings of the sessions court, of August and September 1846.] Again, after this, they brought forward another potta for 725 beegahs of land. A case of Act IV. of 1840 ensued, and the possession of the factory was affirmed. This was the case also with two other potas, one for 350 beegahs, and the other for 550. The magistrate's orders were affirmed by the judge. [Witness here filed the papers of the magistrate's court, dated the 27th July 1846.] My wife brought three suits to reverse the decision and regain possession. (See Sudder decision, dated 13th December 1859.) After the decision under Act IV. of 1840, many cases followed, in some of which the factory was successful, and in some of which I was. The planter then brought a case of damages to the amount of 39,000 rupees in the court

Rev.
S. J. Hill.

14 June
1860.

Munshi
Latifat
Hossain.

Munshi
Latafat
Hossain.

14 June
1860.

court of the principal Sudder Amin at Jessore. The whole case was dismissed, but on appeal to the Sudder Court, I was cast in damages to the amount of 10,000 rupees. The date of the sudder decree is about three years ago. The cases of the three pottas, and that for damages, were connected with the Sinduri concern; the first case was with the Katchikatta concern.

1741. You have stated that the planters used to sow within your estates; did this sowing on their part continue while all the above cases went on?—As long as the planter had possession of the land covered by the three pottas they sowed within these lands, but they could not get the ryots to sow. This was in connection with the Sinduri concern. But as regards the proprietor of Katchikatta, the ryots made it up with him, and agreed to sow for him for 10 years; 13 years have now elapsed. I never interfered or forbad the ryots to sow. Besides, I myself agreed to come to a settlement with the proprietor, and he promised to bring no more complaints, and so did I. I must not forget to mention that after the planter had failed to get the whole 16 annas in Gurgaria, he then brought forward a potta said to have been obtained from the mother-in-law of my brother, Hidayat Hossain. A case was brought under Act IV, and the magistrate gave possession of the five annas four pie share of the undivided joint estate of the factory; one share remained to us. (I will file the proceedings in this case.) I instituted a civil suit in the principal Sudder Amin's Court at Nuddea, whereupon matters were adjusted, and the planter cancelled his lease of the share. I said that if the ryots were agreeable to sow, I should not interfere, and so it ended amicably. At the time of making it up, the planter paid me 2,000 rupees for expenses I had been put to.

1742. Besides what you have related, were any complaints brought by your ryots of abduction of cattle, or cutting of trees?—No complaints of cutting of trees, but there have been complaints of abducting cattle; some were dismissed, and in some instances offenders were punished.

1743. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Are magistrates in the habit of using their influence to induce zemindars to give lands in putni or lease to the planters?—I can't speak of what the general practice may be, but the magistrate of Jessore sent me a perwanna recommending me to give a lease to Mr. McLagan. I file it. I did not give the lease, but I complained to the superintendent of police, who called for an explanation from the magistrate, and, I believe, reprimanded him. Since that I was very well treated by the magistrate.

Hookumnamah of the Foujdari Court of Jessore.

"To Munshi Khalafut Hossain, Munshi Latafat Hossain, Mussammat Budun Bibi, executrix of Hidayat Hossain, talookdars of Turruf Gurgaria.

"Whereas your servants and ryots, by deceit and trickery, and by force, and cutting of crops, have encroached on the land decreed to Mr. McLagan, proprietor of the Goldar factory, under orders, under Act IV., and are stirring up various disputes and quarrels; consequently, if this sort of thing goes on in future, there is a possibility of serious affrays; for this reason, and in order that for the future you may be vigilant and refrain from unnecessary quarrels, it is written to you that you shall threaten and advise those servants or ryots that they may refrain from such evil acts and keep quiet. Otherwise, if they shall not desist from unnecessary quarrels by such evil and false practices, they will be convicted and punished, and a report will be made to the Government; with a view to your above mentioned estates being confiscated (zabt). Practically, you get this friendly advice that you shall make some kind of arrangement for giving the aforesaid gentleman a lease or a potta of some of your mehals, and for terminating disputes."

1744. After the last event, was there any indigo sown for that factory by your ryots?—No; none. The factory had nothing but its nij.

1745. Mr. Sale.] What is the amount of revenue that your estates pay to Government?—Rather more than 10,000 rupees, that is to say, my wife's estates; not mine.

1746. President.] Are you, on the whole, willing that your ryots should be induced to sow indigo for the planters on your wife's estates where leases have not been given?—I have neither wish for it, nor have I objection to it, but the ryots have, because they have no time for their rice cultivation, and they are not properly paid. When the property was mine, they used to make all these complaints to me.

1747. Is it not an advantage for a zemindar to have his ryots under advances for indigo to a third party, and does not this facilitate the collection of rents?—No, it is of no advantage; and for this reason, that the advances were given in the last generation, or at least some years back, or if a small sum is given now, it is taken away by the factory amla before the ryot reaches home.

1748. But if the advances were fairly distributed to the ryot every year, would not this be an advantage to the rent-collecting zemindar?—I don't see that it would, because, if the rice crop grows, the zemindar can always get his rents, that is from other crops as well. Besides, if the ryot goes to cultivate indigo, he gives so much time to it that his other crops do not succeed.

1749. Can you state whether it is the custom of zemindars to demand extra cesses, for instance, on a marriage in a zemindar's family, on the weaning of a child, on great festivals, and if he is a Hindoo, at the time of a shraddha?—Sometimes if a zemindar is in any strait he may go to his ryots and say, I am in need of 1,000 or 2,000 rupees, when they will reply that they are very poor, but that they will give from 200 to 400 rupees. The very poor don't subscribe at all, but those that are well off do.

1750. Should any substantial tenant dig a tank in a village for the benefit of the villagers, does not the zemindar levy a certain sum for permission to cut it?—Yes, the zemindar would do this; if this tank was 100 haunts in length, and 80 haunts in breadth, and eight or 10 haunts in depth, the zemindar might demand 50 rupees; there is no fixed sum.

1751. Do the Mofussil amla, the naib and gomashta, demand their perquisites from the ryots?—At the end of the year when the annual accounts are closed, the gomashta and naib get something. A ryot who pays 100 rupees rent, may pay 14 annas or a rupee.

1752. Do the zemindar's sudder amla, i. e. those of his house, get anything from the ryot?—If the ryot comes, he comes to the zemindar direct, and he would then give a rupee as a nuzzur.

1753. But would the sudder amla allow him to go to the zemindar without getting their fees?—

I cannot

I cannot say what other zemindars would do. It was not so in my zemindary.

1754. Mr. Sale.]—You have had a good many law-suits, what is your opinion of the conduct of the police?—My opinion is that the police do not consider much about the rights of a case, but when they go to make an inquiry, the side that pays most is favourably reported on; they are also afraid of the planter, and always side with them for fear of being removed.

1755. But among the police you have known, have you never met with any just and honest darogahs?—Not in my estate of Gurgarria, but I have known honest darogahs elsewhere, on my other estates. When the darogah sees that the magistrate is in the habit of going and remaining in planters' houses, and racing and hunting with them, how can it be expected that the darogah will be impartial?

[Commission adjourned at half past five, P. M.]

Munshi
Latifat
Hossain.

14 June
1860.

Friday, 15th June 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C. S., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., C. S.; W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Rev. J. Sale;
Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

BURGATULLA, Son of Hadun Mandul, Inhabitant of Tetulbarria Barrobari, Thannah Bagda, Zillah Nuddea, near Katgarra Factory, called in; and Examined on oath.

1756. President.] WHAT jumma have you, and how long have you been in the habit of sowing indigo?—My jumma is 24 rupees eight annas, but it has been increased to 30 rupees. I had a quarrel with a ryot about some pieces belonging to this jumma; this jumma is in Gowaspore; I have also an utbundi jumma, or one which I pay rent for on whatever land is actually cultivated; this is in my village. It has been on this jumma that I have been in the habit of cultivating indigo for several years.

1757. Have you ever received any advances?—No; I never have; my father did. I was quite young when my father died; my elder brother used to sow. He is dead.

1758. Last year how much indigo did you deliver at the factory?—Last year, from four beegahs of land, I delivered 11 cart loads of indigo. I have never been to settle accounts, nor have I received anything from the factory.

1759. Have you sown this year?—I did not sow this year; they have forcibly ploughed up my rice and sown indigo on it.

1760. Has there been a suit against you for breach of contract?—I don't know; but I have heard that my property has been attached, I can't say for what reason; I, with other ryots, presented a petition to the Commissioner of Alipore on the 16th of Baisakh. I had previously presented a petition at the subdivision of Bongong, complaining that I was afraid of being apprehended, and also because the factory servants put a mark on our lands; my rice has been broken up on the 16th of Jyeshtha; of this I have not complained at Bongong or elsewhere, through fear.

1761. As you have come here with some rice stalks in your hand from your own field, could you not have gone in the same way to the local authorities?—Two ryots of Ramkistopore presented a petition at Bongong about ploughing up these lands, whereupon they were pointed out to the assistant manager and put into confinement. I came round by the station of Kishnagur, went to Santipore, crossed the river, then walked on as far as Chandernagore, and then got on the train; five or six other men were with me. I am now living in Entally, in the house of a man named Amir, a firewood merchant.

72—I.

1762. What is the name of the dewan of the factory, and can you say what his monthly pay is?—His name is Guru Dass Biswas. I don't know what his pay is, but one of the amla of the factory, Sarbo Biswas, whose pay is 3-8 a month, has built a pukka house in my village of Barobarri. I have seen it. The house has been standing for eight or nine years; formerly this man was glad to get rice to eat in the zemindar's house. His brother, Baoul Biswas, is a mohurrir of the factory.

1763. Do you clearly understand that you will get no redress here for any actual grievance or complaint?—Yes, but how am I to remain at home? All my family have taken refuge either with my sister's son or with my son-in-law.

1764. Mr. Fergusson.] Did you never receive a single rupee on any account from the factory?—No; not even for cart hire; no advances, nor for excess produce; I have received nothing for ten years, whatever any one else may say.

1765. President.] Then are we to understand that you have been going on sowing for the last eight or ten years, without receiving a pice?—Yes, I have sown on by compulsion, because my house is within the estate of which the factory has part in putni and part in ijara.

1766. Has anything been demanded from you in the shape of increased rent from the leaseholder?—I have said before, my proper rent is 24-8; instead of this, 30 rupees are taken, and receipts are given for this sum, but, besides, they levy four annas under the head of "general expenses" from me.

1767. Mr. Sale.] Where do you pay your rent?—I pay it to the gomashta of the factory, who has a cutcherry in our village.

1768. President.] When you pay rents and settle Burgatulla.

15 June
1860.

Burgatulla.

15 June
1860.

settle your account, do you not then take the opportunity to try and make up your indigo account?—No, I never tried it; besides, the gomashta who collects rents is not the gomashta who remains at the factory.

1769. Did you never try to complain to the assistant or to the manager?—I have done so, and have always been referred to the dewan, or the manager only sends a letter to the assistant by post.

1770. When the estate was still under the zemindar were not you then called on for excess payments?—If the owner calls on us to contribute to a shraddho we do so willingly, some four annas, some eight annas, some a rupee; I never gave anything for a marriage or for the Doorga Poeja, or for the weaning of a child, but I have been to Ranaghat to settle about my lands and have had something given me to eat.

1771. In your part of the country do not Hindoo zemindars sometimes let loose sacred bulls, who eat up the peasant's crops?—Yes, they do; when the bulls eat our crops, we drive them away; we don't beat or kill them.

ISHWAR CHUNDER CHOWDARI, age 52, Inhabitant of Baradee, Thannah Joydea, Zillah Pubna, Factory Dulnuggur, Salgurmudia Concern, called in; and Examined on Oath.

I. C.
Chowdari.

1772. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] HAVE you been in the habit of sowing indigo, and have you sown indigo this year?—About seven or eight years ago I used to sow for the factory; I then ran away for two years on account of oppression, but the planter sent me a letter telling me to return to my homestead, and that I should not be oppressed again. So I returned, as it had been my ancestral abode for seven generations. The same thing however began again. I have two ploughs with four bullocks. The factory servants were sent to plough with my ploughs and bullocks. I have never taken any advances; I can't say what my forefathers did.

1773. Mr. Fergusson.] When you came back after the absence of two years did you not get any advances?—No, I did not. I went, to make my salaam to the Sahib; he told me to go and live in my house. I went, and found it a good deal in ruins, on account of bad weather, and some of my mango, bamboo, and tamarind trees had been cut in my absence.

1774. President.] What amount of jumma have you, and have you any dependant ryots?—I have a jumma of 105 rupees, and about 40 dependant ryots. My rate used to be three beegahs for the rupee; last month of Chaitro the planter measured my lands and wanted to assess them at one rupee a beegah. I have a mourasi potta, and so I did not agree. I was taken to the factory and was confined in the guard room in charge of the jemadar for three days. I did not complain of this when I was released, but my name appears in a complaint made with others, on account of general oppression; that complaint has been pending, and witnesses have been sent for.

1775. Are you aware that there was a new Act, called Act X., passed last year for the benefit of men in your situation?—Yes, I am; but I have not been able to avail myself of it, because I was afraid to go to Comercolly or Pubna. I could not get witnesses to appear. They were afraid to go. The gomashta of the sudder factory is Ram Anondo Biswas, and the gomashta of the Dalnugger factory is Huri Joardar.

1776. Has indigo been sown on your lands again this year?—Yes, on the 17th of Jyeshtha, indigo was sown on my rice lands. I complained of this before the magistrate, and my petition was made over to the deputy magistrate, who advised me to make it up with the planter. My witnesses have been summoned, but no decision has been come to.

1777. Would it not suit you to sow a little indigo for the planter, on condition that your jumma should not be increased?—I have not made any such attempt, as I thought it no use. I am a respectable man, and I don't like to sow indigo. I can't carry the indigo on my head.

1778. Mr. Fergusson.] Has not Mr. Kenny made arrangements of this kind this year with the ryots, viz. that they should sow a small quantity of indigo, or pay an enhanced rate for all their lands?—No, I have not heard of any such arrangement.

1779. When you were confined were you never allowed to go out?—I used to be taken out in the evening when no one could see me. All I got was a little treacle and some cherra and murkhi (preparations of rice; the murkhi is rice boiled and dipped in treacle, the cherra is dry.)

1780. Were you beaten or ill-treated in any way?—No, I was not. They merely insisted upon my signing a paper about the rents. I gave two rupees bribe to the Burkundaz, and so got away.

1781. President.] You are a man of some substance, and you have two ploughs; what objection would you have to sow a moderate quantity of land with indigo for the factory, say a beegah or two?—If I undertake to cultivate indigo, the time of my servants is taken up by it. The dewan and takidgir pull the ears of my servants; they don't pull mine. It costs me 12 to 14 rupees a year in fees to the amin and takidgir to prevent oppression.

1782. If you will not sow yourself would you have any objection to let your dependant ryots sow for the factory?—If I talk to my dependant ryots about sowing indigo they abandon their homesteads, and go to another village. In my village there used to be 300 houses of ryots, and now there are only 100.

1783. Mr. Fergusson.] Would not the planter as zemindar lose very much if he drove away all the ryots?—No, he would not; he would sow indigo on the abandoned homesteads as well as on the ryots' other lands.

1784. President.] Where are you staying?—I am staying at a wood wharf at the house of a relative, Baikuntonath Choudhari.

1785. How long has the planter been collecting rents, either by lease or otherwise?—For the last 18 years. Formerly he had the lease; lately he bought some of the estates, i. e., about four or five years ago.

1786. Can you read and write?—Yes, I read and write Bengali.

1787. When the land belonged to the zemindar did you not have to pay extra cesses?—No, we had not. In those days I had four ploughs instead of two. I had then 100 dependent ryots; now I have only 40.

1788. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] To whom did the zemindary belong?—To the late Dwarkanauth Tagore.

AMIR BISWAS, Son of Kutub Biswas, Inhabitant of Matkoomra, Thannah Hobra, Zillah Baraset, Factory Hobra, called in; and Examined on oath.

1789. President.] ARE you still sowing indigo for the factory?—No, I have not sown for the last two years; I have a jumma of eighty-two rupees; when I used to sow indigo, I used to sow eight beegahs. I have three ploughs with 12 oxen.

1790. What has caused you to desist from sowing for the last two years?—I endured a great deal of oppression. Indigo is sown on my tobacco lands, which pay three rupees a beegah; that land only produced 10 to 15 bundles of indigo. Then I was charged 10 annas a beegah for seed. The amin and khalassi take four annas, and the other amla eight annas. Again, it costs me four to five rupees to prepare lands for tobacco. The four or five rupees go for manure and to raise the earth; besides that, there is the expense of ploughing, which is one rupee, and weeding, which is eight annas. After all this, I don't get a remuneration for 15 bundles of indigo, paid at five bundles a rupee. Suppose tobacco is cut in the month of Magh, the indigo is sown in Chaitro or Baisakh; after this we cannot sow tobacco, we might sow mustard, or some other grain.

1791. Mr. Fergusson.] But the expense of sowing and manuring the lands must have all been incurred for the tobacco; not for the indigo?—The first year that we prepare the ground, it does not produce so good a crop of tobacco as the second year. It is the second year that we have the best return. In my case I got the first year's crop of tobacco; the indigo was then sown, and after the indigo was cut, tobacco would not answer, coming after the indigo.

1792. If the indigo were not sown in Baisakh what would you do with the land?—I might sow early rice after tobacco, but in that case you could not sow tobacco again in the autumn; the proper plan is to keep the land only for tobacco, and to keep cultivating and looking after it for 12 months.

1793. Then unless the land lies fallow in the rains, a tobacco crop cannot be properly cultivated two years successively?—Tobacco lands every year require a little raising and manuring. If you do this and keep the ground fallow during the spring and summer, you can go on sowing tobacco for 15 or 16 years.

1794. But is not the custom in your district, when indigo is not sown on tobacco lands, to take a crop of rice off these lands?—Yes, it is the practice. Sometimes a man mortgages a couple of beegahs of tobacco lands and undertakes to sow rice on them, and, on the strength of this, he gets a loan.

1795. President.] State to us, how did you manage to escape sowing two years ago?—We brought complaints to the magistrate, and we were told that we were not forced to sow; protection was given, and so I escaped sowing, with some others.

1796. Mr. Temple.] What kind of protection was given you?—Police perwannas were issued to the Darogah of Thannah Hobra.

1797. Did the Darogah send any men to help you?—The Darogah went himself to the spot, and on one occasion the magistrate went also.

1798. What was the result of these visits?—The result was, that there was no breach of the peace, and we got protection.

72—I.

1799. Since then has the planter had anything to say to you?—Yes, the planter tried to persuade me to sow. Sometimes he threatens and sometimes he persuades, but I am not to be caught in either way.

1800. What will you take now to cultivate indigo next season?—My caste, birth, honour, all go if I sow indigo; let "by-gones be by-gones;" I won't touch it again.

1801. President.] What return do you get from your tobacco lands, a beegah?—Sometimes 20 and 25 rupees; sometimes 30 rupees, and sometimes even 40 rupees.

1802. What other kinds of produce do you cultivate, and what return do they bring you?—Our principal cultivation is rice and tobacco; from a beegah of rice, if it is a bad return, it is five arhis, if a good return it is six and seven, and sometimes even eight arhis; according to the current bazaar rate, eight arhis would produce 16 or 17 rupees. Then, after this early rice, we may sow peas or linseed. The return from this might be three rupees, three rupees eight annas, or perhaps four rupees a beegah. From a beegah of late rice, if it was sown well out in the jheel, we might get 10 or 11 arhis of rice, and for the late rice, if planted with the hand, we might get six or seven rupees; besides this, I have a fruit garden, the produce of which I don't sell, I eat it.

1803. Mr. Temple.] What induced you in the first instance to engage in the cultivation of indigo?—The planter held out abundant hopes to us, that the land would produce 10 or 11 rupees worth of indigo, and besides, that we might get a crop of seed, which would be about 20 rupees. And for the first two or three years we did get something, that is to say, four or five rupees a beegah, but by degrees it fell off.

1804. Did you realise the promised seed crop?—Yes, the first year I made 13 or 14 rupees a beegah, gross return.

1805. Out of that 13 or 14 rupees, how much do you estimate as profit?—It is 20 years ago; I can't tell; my present estimate is based on my tobacco lands.

1806. In those days how many bundles did you give to the rupee?—Five bundles; but in those days 1,000 bundles used to produce from three and a half to four maunds, now they produce eight or 10 maunds.

1807. What is the cause of this difference?—Formerly they used to measure a cart-load of indigo, at five or six bundles, now a cart only gives from half a bundle to one and a half bundle.

1808. Is there now a difference in measurement?—I have not been to this factory for some time, I have been so harassed.

1809. In those days then indigo did not interfere with your tobacco?—In the first two years the two used to get on very well together, but after that things grew worse.

1810. President.] Have you any dependant ryots, and have they sown indigo, or are they still sowing indigo?—Yes, I have about 20 or 25 ryots, and they ceased to sow when I did. They got off because the hakim took our part.

1811. Mr. Temple.] If you got a profit of 14 rupees a beegah, combined with kind treatment

O 3

as

Amir Biswas.

15 June
1860.

Amir Biswas. as you used to get, would you now be willing to sow indigo?—No, not for twice that.

15 June 1860. 1812. President.] Can you read and write?—Yes, I can read and write Bengali; I can't read the Koran; I have a mulla who does it for me, and my nephew can read it.

1813. Mr. Fergusson.] According to the factory accounts, do you owe them anything?—The accounts are not cleared, and I can't say.

1814. If you do owe any money to the factory would you pay it?—Yes, I am willing to pay my just debts, and if there be anything to receive, I ought to get it.

1815. If it had not been for the magistrate would you have gone on sowing indigo?—If they beat us and lay hold of us, we should be obliged to sow.

1816. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] What is the measurement of a beegah in your district?—Eighty-five baths, zemindary measurement, to the beegah. About the factory measurement there is no certainty.

1817. Mr. Fergusson.] Who is your zemindar?—Formerly the estate belonged to the Paul Chowdaries of Ranaghat, now it belongs to Deb-nath Chowdari of Satgarria.

1818. Does the zemindar make you pay for tobacco more than for other lands?—He requires more for tobacco, homestead, and garden lands from other ryots. But I have a mourusi potta; the estate only returned to the zemindar's hands lately, and I don't know what he'll do. But my potta is an old one, and the rate is the same for all the lands of my jumma.

The Rev. G. G. CUTHBERT'S Examination continued.

Rev. G. G. Cuthbert.

1819. President.] WOULD you please to state more fully to the Commission the reasons which made you take part in the discussion about indigo in 1856?—I mentioned some the other day, and will now add two or three more bearing on my own particular work. Our missionaries make extensive preaching tours in the cold weather, and almost always send their journals to me; and I found frequent mention of this kind of experience. On reaching a village where they were not known, and beginning to preach, the people used to ask them, "Is your religion that of neel sahibs (indigo planters), because if it is, we wish to have nothing to do with it, on account of the klesh (trouble, misery) which they inflict upon us." Again, they have said, "You profess to be our friends, and to come here to speak to us for our benefit; show us that you are so, by delivering us from these troubles, and then we will hear you." Further, what we desire to see in our Christians, and in the native peasantry generally, is an independent spirit, an ability to stand on their own legs, as it were. It seems to me that the connexion of ryots with indigo planting tends to repress that spirit; and further still, it is found in a thousand instances most difficult to improve the moral condition of a people whose social condition is extremely low; and hence Christian philanthropists in England, such as Lord Shaftesbury, aim at raising the physical and social condition of the poorer classes, whilst seeking to benefit them religiously; and we have thought that the poverty, distress, and unsettledness of mind, which the people complain of in indigo districts, stand in the way of their moral improvement, and their attention to religion: to use an eastern proverb, "An empty belly has no ears."

1820. The scene of the chief operations of the Church Missionary Society in Bengal being in Kishnaghur, you are of opinion that the facts you mentioned naturally pressed the condition of the ryots on you, as intimately connected with your missionary labours?—Yes; and not Kishnaghur only, but similar reports came from other districts in Bengal. I recollect at present Pubna, Rampore Bauleah, and Burdwan.

1821. The missionaries made their reports to you as secretary to the society; were you aware of the line of conduct adopted by the missionaries, and did you recommend any particular course that they might adopt?—They generally stated in their journals the answers they made to these objections; which answers were various, but usually to this effect: that those things were not their concern; that they compassionated the sufferings of the people, but that they came to speak to them on religious and not on temporal subjects, &c. As to the latter part of the question, I did not suggest any line of conduct; it was unnecessary to do so.

1822. During the late excitement, have you prescribed or enjoined on the missionaries any particular line of conduct?—Personally, I have not done so, for there was no occasion. I had ascertained from them what their line of conduct was; which was to discourage every kind of violent or illegal conduct on the part of the ryots. An indigo price current, published in Calcutta, on 8th March 1860, contained the following remarks, to which my attention was particularly called:—

"We deeply regret to inform you, that for some time the ryots in many of the largest indigo concerns in Bengal have evinced a disposition to break their contracts, and refuse to sow indigo, having been instigated thereto by evil-disposed persons, and aided by the police and some of the missionaries; emissaries have been travelling from village to village, stirring up the ryots to revolt, by telling them that the Government did not wish them to grow indigo, and giving them to understand they were not to sow," &c.

Upon this, I wrote to the compiler, to know upon what grounds he made the statement. I received the following answer:—

"Calcutta,
"Dear Sir, "16 March 1860.

"In the absence of Mr. R. Thomas, who is in England, I opened your letter to his address.

"The paragraph in our Price Current, about some of the missionaries inciting the ryots not to sow indigo, was put in in consequence of the receipt by the writer of a letter from Kishnaghur, containing the following remark: 'The two villages in Nischindepore giving trouble adjoin the village from which Padre Bomwetsch chose his wife, and both she and he are doing their utmost to make the ryots hostile to the factory.' And also because Mr. Terry, of Midnapore, stated openly, at the meeting of the Indigo Planters' Association, that a missionary in that district, whose name I forget, acknowledged to him that he told the ryots not to grow indigo.

"Should

"Should we hear of any names, I shall be happy to give them to you.

"Believe me, &c.
(signed) "J. P. Thomas."

I replied, showing that there was no ground here shown for the serious charge used against the missionaries, of "instigating the ryots to break their contracts." I required a retraction of the charge in the Price Current. This was promised conditionally; but the next issue contained no retraction of the unfounded charge. The compiler referred me, on my further inquiry for the reason of his not withdrawing the charge, to Mr. James Forlong, a gentleman to whom I did not choose to make any reference. There the matter ended with the firm of Thomas & Co. I wrote to the missionaries, inquiring whether they had given any grounds for such a charge, and here are their replies:—

[Mr. Cuthbert here read to the Commission certain extracts of letters from the Rev. Messrs. Schurr, Blumhardt, Dyson, Bomwetsch, Lincke, and Hasell, to his address.]

1823. Have you seen any of the ryots who have arrived from the disturbed districts, and can you say whether or not any persons have tutored these ryots as to their mode of giving evidence?—I have seen many of them. On the first occasion when they came down, hearing they were at our missionary station at Calcutta, I went to see them. They were some hundreds in number; there was no attempt made then to tutor them. The desire was to ascertain what they had to say, and for that purpose they were placed in groups, say five to ten persons from the same neighbourhood, with a native taking down an abstract of their statements. I think I should have heard of any of the missionaries attempting to tutor them, and I have not heard of it. In fact, it would have been impossible to "cram," as the newspapers allege, from 1,000 to 2,000 men, which was about their number in Calcutta at the time. Further, there was no necessity for it, as they were already cram-full, so to speak, with their own grievances, such as you hear in most parts of Bengal. And, thirdly, when the men whose evidence was actually taken were selected, I saw the President of this Commission selecting them from their intelligent looks, their difference of caste, and their residences in different parts of the country, so as to represent all classes of the peasantry.

1824. Mr. Temple.] Were these men generally the same men that you had seen in Mr. Long's house?—Many, or at least some of them, I know to be the same.

1825. Will you state how many men were in the compound of this office for one or two days that the selection was made?—I should think from 200 to 300.

1826. At Mr. Long's house what object did they assign for coming to Calcutta?—I did not hear them say, but I believe their main object was to present a memorial to the Lieutenant Governor on the subject of their grievances and the new coercion law.

1827. Mr. Fergusson.] Is it the case that Mr. Long ordered a day of humiliation and prayer at the passing of the Indigo Act?—I never heard of it; nor do I think it likely.

1828. Are not the natives and even your Christians very liable to be led by impulse or suggestions from others?—I think they are. But such suggestions must to a certain degree be in accordance with their own sentiments and interests.

1829. In the case of these indigo contracts, would not a very slight suggestion have led them to follow the course they have done?—I believe that for several years back the ryots have been strongly disposed to manifest their repugnance to indigo cultivation, and that a slight incitement would have encouraged them to do so.

1830. President.] Have you from facts brought to your knowledge formed any opinion as to the causes of the late excitement?—I have stated already that the people were decidedly and bitterly hostile to indigo cultivation. Several years ago I learnt from persons in constant communication with the ryots, that they were in a state of extreme irritation, and ready to break forth at any moment, and on any incitement. I think, that incitement came quite unintentionally from the present Lieutenant Governor, from some remarks made by him when visiting Kishnaghur in 1859, to the effect that the ryots should be left free to cultivate indigo, or not, as they chose. The excitement caused by this was strengthened by the letter addressed to Mr. Grote on the subject by the Officiating Secretary to the Government of Bengal, in October 1859, about a complaint against the planter of Bansberria. This led the ryots to believe that the Government were on their side, and in favour of their refusing to cultivate indigo. I think it likely too, that the people had taken a lesson from previous political events in this country, not only the mutiny, but the Sonthal rising a year or two before. The Sonthals had been much oppressed by native Mahajuns; they appealed again and again to the authorities for protection, but without success, which led them to believe that the authorities favoured their oppressors. They then resolved to rise and right their own wrongs. They did so. They were of course crushed by British power, but they gained their point. They made themselves feared, respected, and attended to. They are now a protected people under their own special Commissioner (since appointed), no man daring to oppress them. I think it probable that the people took a hint from this.

1831. Mr. Fergusson.] Is it not the case that the refusals to sow indigo have occurred chiefly in the neighbourhood of missionary stations?—I certainly think not. Because, when the excitement was at its height, its chief seat was said to be Malda, and some other places which I forget now, distant from our missionary stations at Kishnaghur.

1832. But have you not missionary stations in the neighbourhood of Hurra, Nischindipore, and Ruttonpore; and is it not in this neighbourhood that the ryots have shown the most strong disposition not to sow?—There are stations nearer Nischindipore and Ruttonpore, and about five miles from Hurra. I can't say whether the strongest opposition appeared about these places. Most of the names of factories where the opposition has occurred, which names I have seen frequently in the papers, are unknown to me; hence I conclude, they are remote from our missions.

1833. Have you any objection to explain why the Church Mission Society has employed Germans rather than Englishmen?—It does not employ them rather than Englishmen. There

Rev. G. G.
Cuthbert.
15 June 1860.

Rev. G. G.
Cuthbert.

15 June
1860.

have been nearly as many Englishmen as Germans in the Kishnaghur district; I may add that the society had for many years an intimate connection with the Basle Missionary Society, from which it has obtained several of its best missionaries, such as Weitbrecht, Leupoldt, and others.

1834. Is it not probable that foreigners would be more likely to misapprehend the conduct of Englishmen planters than their own countrymen?—I think it is likely; but we find that these foreigners on other subjects form correct judgments.

1835. Of all these missionary gentlemen who have been examined here none could tell us the cost or profit of rice cultivation; do not you think that you and these other gentlemen may be mistaken about the indigo cultivation?—I am rather glad to hear that they could not tell the profits of rice cultivation, it shows that they do not meddle needlessly with what does not concern them. As to indigo cultivation, its details have unfortunately been forced upon our attention only too painfully.

[Commission adjourned at six P. M.]

Tuesday, 16th June 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C. S., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., C. S.; W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Reverend J. Sale; Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

JOHN O'BRIEN SAUNDERS, Esq., Editor of the "Englishman" Newspaper, called in; and Examined on oath.

J. O'B.
Saunders,
Esq.

16 June
1860.

1836. President.] WILL you state to the Commission the districts in which you have had experience in indigo planting?—Allyghur, Muttra, and Furruckabad, in the North Western Provinces. I have also been connected with indigo in the Allahabad district.

1837. Is the system much the same in these districts?—The same in all, with the exception of Allahabad.

1838. Will you state to the Commission, a general outline of the system adopted in those districts?—The growing of the indigo plant for factories in the North Western Provinces, is of very modern date; it began in 1827. Previously to that, the planters were only dealers in gaud, which is the fecula of the indigo plant manufactured by the natives themselves, and brought to the factories in a wet state; the standard of consistency it is agreed shall be that five seers can be lifted with one hand. We were in the habit of contracting with traders, merchants, and large zemindars for the purchase of this gaud, under advances; these advances were made on regular contracts; we contracted with dealers on a small scale, for, say, ten maunds, and with others, up to as high as 5,000, at the market rate. There was an immense trade in the North West Provinces, independent of the Calcutta market. The prices were fixed at the time of making the contracts, whatever the market rate of the day was. When the trade in gaud failed on account of an increased production of a finer quality of indigo in Tirhoot and Bengal, which drove that quality of indigo out of the market, we were compelled to construct vats, and change our system. We then had much difficulty in purchasing the plant, but we made the contracts with the same people, who used to give us the gaud, merchants, traders, and zemindars, and very lately with the ryots, as we had very little success in introducing that system in 1827-28; but in 1830-32, the failure of the great merchants in Calcutta shut up our factories, and they remained closed for three years. New people then purchased the factories, and they found a large cultivation of indigo in the country, independent of Calcutta: we were then able to contract for large quantities of plant at fixed prices from regular dealers. The people of the country were very glad to get the factories we re-opened, and willingly grew plant for the use of the factories on the known contract system.

1839. Then are we to understand, that at no time in your experience, you ever came to deal, for the most part, with the actual cultivators of the plant?—A proportion of our cultivation was with the cultivators, but the greater bulk of the contracts were with the traders and zemindars. Those contracts were for the plant by weight; the prices averaged from 22 to 27 rupees per 100 maunds of plant, and when we dealt with the ryots we gave two rupees less, or say 20 rupees. The weight was 96 pounds to the maund.

1840. Did you find it necessary to exercise any supervision over the ryots with whom you contracted, either as to the selection of land, rotation of crops, ploughing, sowing, weeding, and watering?—Over the zemindar we exercised a general supervision, to see that he cultivated as much land as would probably enable him to fulfil his contract. The ryot or actual cultivator we supervised more closely, to see that he sowed, watered, and weeded, and we supplied him with funds for each operation.

1841. How could you prevent that supervision becoming vexatious to the ryot; and could you be certain that each amount of funds supplied would be devoted to the proper purpose?—We have very little trouble with our cultivators; they

J. O'B.
Saunders,
Esq.

16 June
1860.

they all understand their own interest fully, and are willing to fulfil their contracts. They all understand their own accounts, and in every village in the North-West there is a putwarri, or village accountant, who keeps the village accounts, both zemindary and trading accounts. There is a provision made for them in the revenue settlement. The terms of the contract were to pay in advance one-half at the time of the contract being made, which was not all given to the ryot at once, but distributed in each successive operation.

1842. Then are we to understand that the payments for the year to the ryot were fixed at the time of making the contract at the market rate?—At the market rate, and that market rate was very often not fixed for the ryots, until the price was settled with the principal mahajuns and large dealers, all cultivators wishing to get the best price going.

1843. Did you find it necessary to exercise any supervision over the traders?—None whatever; very often we did not even know where their cultivation was.

1844. What are we to understand by the term zemindar?—The owner of a whole village, or a large share in a village.

1845. Are we or are we not to understand, by the term zemindar, a person who is responsible for the Government revenue of 30 or 40 villages, or even of very large estates?—Yes, I mean proprietors of villages paying the Government revenue direct; there are many large proprietors to be found in the Allyghur and Furruckabad districts.

1846. Mr. Temple.] But does not the term zemindar apply to village communities, consisting of any number of small proprietors?—No, I do not mean to apply the term to the smaller proprietors; these I would designate as Putti-dars or Biswaddars.

1847. Are not such small proprietors distinct from tenant cultivators, called Kashtkars, and corresponding to the cultivators of Bengal?—They are distinct from the Kashtkars, and pay their revenue direct to Government, paying rent to nobody; whereas the Kashtkar always pays rent to some proprietor, and not revenue direct to Government.

1848. President.] Could you state the nature of the supervision you exercised over the zemindars?—The only supervision over the zemindar was when the sowing season came on; it consisted in taking a weekly examination of the arrangements he was making for cultivation, and the extent of land he was bringing under cultivation for us.

1849. Then you never interfered with the actual selection of the land?—No, never with a zemindar or a large dealer.

1850. Could you state what was the proportion you advanced to the cultivator when you made the advance?—The contract engagement was to advance one-half the price of the plant contracted for. For example, if a small proprietor contracted for 100 maunds of plant, he received an advance of the value of one-half, and he seldom delivered more than that half.

1851. Then at the end of the year, how did you square your accounts, and had you any bad balances?—There was always an average of balances against the small proprietor, which was carried forward to the next year.

1852. With the small cultivator, did these small balances terminate by their giving in a very good return?—Under a careful supervision, the balances are very small. The cultivation is not precarious.

1853. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] When the zemindars, traders, or ryots received advances, did they bind themselves to cultivate a certain quantity of land or to deliver so much indigo plant?—The contract was simply for plant, even with the smaller cultivators.

1854. Mr. Temple.] Your preceding answers, I believe, referred to small proprietors who pay the land revenue direct to Government; did you ever have dealings with the tenant cultivators, called Kashtkars, and subordinate to zemindars, and if so, were these dealings direct with these cultivators, or did you make them through the zemindar?—We dealt with Kashtkars or tenants at will, living in our own villages, or in the villages in which we were proprietors; but there are classes of Kashtkars in neighbouring villages not belonging to us, who are well off, having large holdings, with numbers of bullocks and ploughs; we contracted with them; in those cases we had never anything to do with zemindars.

1855. In these cases did you not consult the zemindar before making arrangements with the cultivators?—In some cases we arranged for the rent, so that the zemindar could not stop our crops, i. e. we guaranteed the zemindar's rent by previous arrangement, or we would get an acknowledgment from him that he had received the rents and had no claim against the cultivators.

1856. Did the zemindar never offer to you any opposition in these cases?—Never.

1857. Did you never engage with the cultivators without previously consulting the zemindar?—Yes, frequently.

1858. In such cases would no dispute arise between you and the zemindar?—Not since the 30 years' settlement.

1859. President.] For this supervision which you found absolutely requisite, was it necessary to keep up a large establishment?—No, very few peons were required.

1860. Mr. Temple.] Were lattials ever heard of?—Never in my time.

1861. But at any time, from say within the present century, have lattials ever been employed for the support of indigo cultivation?—No, never. It is true that at the beginning of the century, when the Doab was unsettled, armed men were kept at the factory for the protection of treasure and property.

1862. Has any class of men been employed in the North-Western Provinces corresponding to the amin and takidgirs of Bengal?—The peons that we employed are the takidgirs, who daily give in reports of the cultivation, but we had no amin to measure the lands, because with the traders we did not want to know where their cultivation was; with the zemindar and the small proprietor and cultivator the landmarks were so clear, and the division of the fields so well known, that we knew within a trifle how much land was irrigated and cultivated.

1863. Were not the field maps in every village and the accompanying records prepared under the direction of the revenue authorities, and kept by the putwary or accountant, sufficiently accurate and complete to be of assistance to you in your dealings with small proprietors and cultivators?—Yes, they were all very correct, but

J. O'B.
Saunders,
Esq.

16 June
1860.

we seldom required them, as the putwaries and zemindar knew all the divisions thoroughly.

1864. Were the peons who were employed in the capacity of takidgirs numerous or few?—A factory manufacturing 100 maunds had six peons, three being temporarily employed for six or seven months, from the sowing till the close of the manufacture.

1865. Did you ever receive complaints from cultivators or proprietors of trouble from the peons?—I have sometimes had complaints, but these were very seldom. The peons were much more apt to combine with the cultivators against the interests of the factory; by that I mean that the peon would go and report a larger amount of land in cultivation than was actually there in existence.

1866. Did you keep what are in Bengal called gomashtas; and what were their duties?—We employed gomashtas, whose duty it was to draw up the contracts, make the bargains, ascertain the substantiality of the contractors, and pay the money.

1867. Were the advances made to cultivators and small proprietors, as well as to traders and zemindars, disbursed by the gomashta, and if so, were the disbursements made in the presence of an European assistant?—I had no rule on the subject; sometimes the disbursements were made in the presence of myself or of my European assistants, or by the gomashta himself, not in my presence, as the case might be.

1868. Was any dustoori levied with or without your sanction, by the gomashtas or peons, from the recipients of advances or cash payments?—No dustoori was allowed or sanctioned by me, but larger contractors, zemindars particularly, very often paid my gomashta a handsome sum to get him to induce me to make large advances, and I am aware of smaller cultivators or proprietors paying douceurs to keep on good terms with my gomashtas.

1869. President.] Can you state to the Commission the kinds of land on which indigo is generally sown in those districts, the time of the year in which it is cultivated, and the other crops, if any, which are raised on the same land?—The indigo is cultivated on the best lands, what are called the wheat and cotton lands. The indigo is sown in April, May, and June, on wheat lands, commencing immediately after the wheat is cut. There are no other crops at that season of the year except tobacco and a pulse, chena, but none of these are extensive.

1870. Is there any other crop besides wheat grown on the indigo land, that is to say, does the same land give two crops or three crops in the year?—The lands only give two crops, but the rotation is thus: the rubbee or spring crop is wheat; as soon as the wheat crop is cut, indigo is sown, and when the indigo is ready for cutting, a portion is left standing for indigo seed, which is ripe with the khurreef or autumn crop; that land is allowed then to remain fallow for the next khurreef. In the cotton lands which have been fallow during the spring, the indigo is sown, and in the season completely cleared off. The lands are then ploughed up and a khurreef crop sown.

1871. Did the indigo lands require much manuring, irrigating, and generally a high state of cultivation?—No, they require nothing but irrigation and careful weeding. The wheat lands have been irrigated during the wheat cultivation, and the cotton have been ploughed during the cold season. The soil is very light and easily ploughed.

1872. And could you always depend upon the contractors sedulously attending to all these operations without any admonition or injunction on your part?—We could not; they always required supervision and persuasion.

1873. Mr. Sale.] Do you think that the need of supervision arose from any dislike to indigo cultivation?—No, not the slightest, merely the usual indolence and indifference of the people of the country.

1874. Mr. Temple.] In cases where you contracted with large zemindars, in which the zemindars would arrange with their own cultivators, had you to exercise the supervision you have described?—Not nearly so much; and with some of the better class of zemindars and mahajuns we never troubled them on the subject; with such men I would contract as soon as with any Englishman.

1875. President.] Did the ryots cut and carry the plant, or how?—By the contract the plant was to be delivered at the factory. The factory people arranged over night with the different contractors the quantity of indigo each was to cut for the next morning, and carts or carriage were arranged to bring the quantity to the factory. If we found the carriage, the expense was deducted from the contractor's accounts. They frequently found the carriage themselves.

1876. When the plant was delivered at the factory, was there any confusion or difficulty about the weighing, supposing a large quantity came at once?—There was no difficulty or confusion. We always had a sufficient number of scales at work, or if a very large number of carts came at once, the assistant and the contractor would agree to take the quantity on the carts by estimate.

1877. Was an acknowledgment given to each contractor at the time?—Each contractor and each carter had a farkhut in which the quantity delivered was written, and also, on the part of larger contractors and others, there was a writer in attendance to check the quantity weighed for his master.

1878. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Are not the indigo contracts written on stamp paper and signed by the parties before you give them advances?—The contracts are written out on stamp paper on all occasions except with the mahajan, or great zemindars, who always wrote their engagements on plain paper. I never knew of a contract being signed on blank stamp paper without the body being written out. I am aware that it has been done on a pressure of business, but that would only be for a day.

1879. Mr. Fergusson.] Did the people who contracted with you come willingly to enter into the engagements?—Yes.

1880. Did they admit that it was profitable, or did they generally complain, especially the small cultivators?—It was profitable to all the large contractors, who took a difference in price from their own cultivators, whom I have heard frequently complain that the indigo cultivation did not remunerate them.

1881. In fact, the actual cultivators in the Upper Provinces complained very much, as you have heard those in Bengal do?—I have heard the cultivators complain that indigo cultivation did not pay them, and if a money estimate were made of so much for irrigation, so much for weeding, cutting, and carting, it would appear to be a loss, but the indigo cultivation is entered into at a time when nothing else can be grown; and it

J. O'B.
Saunders,
Esq.

16 June
1860.

it produces so much cash for the cultivator's labour, which he could not otherwise gain. I have no knowledge of Bengal except from reading or hearsay.

1882. Is it not found almost impossible to ascertain the exact cost of a crop, say of wheat in England, and must it not be still more difficult to ascertain the cost of such a crop as indigo in this country, where two or more crops are taken annually from the same ground, and so very little labour is paid for in money?—I think it is very difficult to arrive at the cost of any single cultivation on a farm; that the only method of making an estimate is to take the whole cost of the production of a whole farm, deducting its whole charge of management, and then apportioning the cost of each crop. The same thing is the case in indigo, and it is not more difficult here than in England, I should think.

1883. Have you found it necessary in the course of your indigo planting business in the Upper Provinces to purchase or take leases of zemindaries?—Not absolutely necessary; besides, it is a very difficult thing to obtain estates on any terms in the Upper Provinces. There is an advantage in becoming a landed proprietor, as it is easier to secure an indigo cultivation on your own estate than on a stranger's, besides its being safer.

1884. President.] Did you, in those three districts, carry on the cultivation by the factory servants, or what is commonly called nij cultivation?—I have tried a nij cultivation, but found it a losing transaction, owing to the neighbours and my own people plundering me, and selling to me my own plant. It was also an expensive cultivation.

1885. Mr. Temple.] What would your nij cultivation cost you per beegah, of the third of an acre?—Between 10 and 11 rupees, of which watering would be Rs. 4. 8 a.; rent, Rs. 1. 8 a.; weeding, Rs. 2. 4 a.; cutting, 8 annas; carriage, 12 annas; the latter varies according to distance.

1886. Do you suppose that this expense, incurred by a cultivator, would be about the same?—The cultivator's only expense is that of the rents, weeding and carriage; I mean actual outlay of cash.

1887. What would be the yield of plant per beegah, the third of an acre?—Fifty maunds of indigo plant is very good produce.

1888. What price would you give for that?—To my large contractors I should have given Rs. 12. 8 a. for the 50 maunds.

1889. Then the profit to the zemindar would have been about Rs. 2. 8 a., and the interest of the money he received in advance; how would that profit be divided between him and the cultivator?—There would be scarcely any division of profits, but the mode of dealing between the zemindar and the cultivator was, that the zemindar gave the cultivator credit in his rent account, the ryot saved his wheat and gave the indigo he grew at 18 to 20 rupees per 100 maunds to the zemindar.

1890. But, on the whole, the practical result would be that nearly all the profit went to the zemindar?—Yes, if we estimate the labour of the cultivator at cash cost, the whole of the cash profit goes to the zemindar; but if not, the cultivator has an advantage in growing indigo.

1891. But considering the circumstances of the cultivation, do you consider that the cultivator's labour could fairly be valued at the same rate, as in the case of your nij cultivation?—Exactly the same, as an estimate; but the same number of people cultivating indigo could not find employment to hire themselves at these rates, and therefore it is profitable for them to grow indigo instead of doing nothing.

1892. Mr. Sale.] Has labour a market price in the districts of which you are speaking; and if so, is your estimate made with reference to the smallest price?—Yes, there is a market price; and any one wishing to hire would have to pay at the rate mentioned above.

1893. But practically, in the villages in the interior, is there any such demand for labour, and are the cultivators the classes who engage in such labour; that is to say, if a cultivator were not growing indigo, would he be hiring his labour at so much a day?—There is not that demand for labour, nor could the indigo cultivator find employment sufficient to make it worth his while to seek it and not grow indigo; these are not the classes that seek other labour than cultivation, nor would they seek day labour.

1894. President.] At the time when indigo seed is put in the ground, is there any other kind of cultivation going on in the North-Western Provinces?—There is no cultivation of any importance.

1895. Mr. Sale.] Do not these cultivators employ themselves in any other kind of productive labour?—They do not.

1896. Mr. Temple.] But supposing that your engagements were not made with a zemindar or contractor of any kind, but with the small proprietors or cultivators direct, in that case to whom would the profit of Rs. 2. 8 a. a beegah, and the interest of the advance, accrue?—In the case of a contractor being a small proprietor, I gave him a smaller price; that is to say, 22 rupees for 100 maunds, or 11 rupees a beegah, to cover the risk of the advance to a dangerous party. This would leave a profit of one rupee a beegah, which profit would be received entirely by this contractor.

1897. Then there would be a profit of three rupees an acre; now considering that besides this profit there would accrue to the small proprietor the profits of another crop in the year, and considering that the land tax falls at a rate of about two rupees an acre, would not a profit of three rupees an acre, if actually realised, afford a tolerable remuneration?—Under all the circumstances related, the remuneration to the cultivator, and more particularly to the small proprietor, is very good.

1898. Do you feel sure that the small proprietors and cultivators, dealing direct, did actually realise as much as three rupees an acre?—I have no doubt that if they cultivated their lands carefully they would get that return, and they do generally cultivate their lands carefully.

1899. Are not the small proprietors and cultivators in that part of the country a very industrious and laborious class, with a considerable reputation for husbandry?—Yes; in the immediate neighbourhood of my factories the villages are inhabited by Jats, Koormis, Kachis, Goalas, and Mewattis. These ryots are all particularly good cultivators.

1900. President.] Have you any Rajpoots who cultivate indigo for you, and are they good husbandmen?—I had one factory in the midst of Rajpoot villages, and I never could get up a good cultivation; and the Rajpoots generally are not good husbandmen.

1901. Mr. Temple.] Did the Jat women weed the indigo?—Yes, and the Koormi women too.

1902. Did

J. O'B.
Saunders,
Esq.

16 June
1860.

1902. Did the small proprietors or cultivators with whom you were dealing direct, ever complain of the unprofitableness of the cultivation?—They never actually made a formal complaint, but they have frequently said that it was not profitable, probably with the intention of enhancing the price to me.

1903. But in most of the cases, were there any old balances or other circumstances which could induce these men to continue the cultivation against their will?—No, we were never able to compel them to cultivate, and frequently settled with them by letting them off considerable balances and by compromise. They were always willing to cultivate.

1904. If you had wished to considerably extend this kind of cultivation with small proprietors and cultivators, could you have done so?—Yes, I could easily have extended my cultivation, and would have found plenty of small proprietors to take my advances on contracts, but I preferred dealing with responsible parties, large zemindars, and mahajuns.

1905. Had you ever any difficulty in finding zemindars or mahajans to take these contracts, and could you have obtained such contracts to any amount?—I had no difficulty; the only limit was that of price and the quantity that my factories could manufacture. The cultivation is now largely increasing in the North-West, from the impulse given to it by high prices, and the expected short-coming in Bengal.

1906. President.] Were you dependent in the North-Western Provinces on showers of rain for sowing indigo, or could you irrigate the lands and then sow?—Our principal cultivation is entirely irrigated; we have no rains in the North-Western Provinces in April or May. We also have a cultivation of a rain crop of indigo, which is very precarious, and very limited in extent. It is sown by the cultivator entirely on chance. It costs him nothing but a small rent and weeding.

1907. Then it is not necessary that all your sowings should be got over in a short space of time, and by irrigation you can spread the cultivation over a long period?—No; it is not necessary. It is a slow and gradual cultivation, dependent on physical labour, and not much on the caprices of the season; the profit and loss will, to a certain extent, depend on the rains, because the irrigated crop comes to maturity in the rainy season (August).

1908. Is the return very liable to be affected by too much or too little rain after the end of June?—The ryot suffers by too little rain. The manufacturer by too much. The plant grown under heavy rains gives less leaf and less dye, but weighs heavy. It runs to stick.

1909. Is there any cultivation in the North-Western Provinces carried on, on the banks or islands of the Ganges or Jumna?—There are churs on the Ganges, but the inundations set in long before our indigo would be ready.

1910. Could you give us any idea of the greatest extent of cultivation which you have superintended in those three districts, with its return in maunds?—The cultivation in my own concern in Allyghur was 8,000 beegahs; the average return was about 800 maunds.

1911. Will you explain the system of cultivation in the district of Allahabad?—In Allahabad contracts are made at 20 rupees the 100 maunds of plant; the lands are specified and carefully selected. There is no irrigation, and the indigo is sown only in the rains; that cultivation is cut in September, and the khoontee, or stubble, is retained for the next year. The contracts are always for two years, so as to include the second year's return. In the North-West the cultivators have to find their own seed, but in Allahabad seed is given them by the planters. The contractor receives advances for his first or rain crop, and again advances on his khoontee, according to what the out-turn of the rain crop may be. He receives credit for the quantity of plant he delivers from both crops. These engagements are made entirely with the cultivators, and seldom or never with the zemindar. I had nothing to do with advances to merchants in Allahabad.

1912. Did you never experience any opposition from the zemindars?—Yes; some of them would not allow indigo to be cultivated in the villages. I don't think that they like the cultivators to enter into engagements with the factory. There was always a certainty of the cultivator taking more advances than he would cover with his plant.

1913. Mr. Temple.] In those cases where the zemindars were consenting parties to your contracting with their cultivators, had you to give any kind of bonus to the zemindars?—No; I was never asked; all I had to do was to stand security for the cultivator's rent.

1914. Had you ever to pay up the rent in consequence of this security?—Yes; I generally paid the rent, i.e. it was understood that I was to pay the rent as part of the advance.

1915. Mr. Fergusson.] In the North-West Provinces, is there not a summary process, which enables a planter, who has advanced for a crop, to attach it or any other crop on the ground, in the event of the default of a ryot?—No; my only remedy in such a case would be the civil court.

1916. Mr. Temple.] In the Allahabad district, was the cost of cultivating indigo less than in the districts of Muttra, Allyghur, and Furruckabad?—Yes; the cost is much less as regards irrigation, but more ploughing and weeding are required. On the whole, however, the cost is less.

1917. Then on the whole, how much profit did the Allahabad cultivation obtain per beegah?—The crops at Allahabad are much more precarious, being entirely dependent on rain, and the khoontees are liable to suffer from frost, but in a good season it paid the cultivator very well indeed. As far as my experience goes, the result is very much the same in both parts of the country.

1918. President.] Did you find it necessary to exercise a more strict supervision in Allahabad?—Yes; it required a much more strict supervision in the selection of the lands; and on account of the differences between the zemindars and the grazing of cattle on the khoontee lands, I believe that if you had the same number of factories and the same extent of cultivation in Allahabad as in Kishnagur you would very likely have had the same trouble.

1919. Mr. Temple.] How many concerns and factories are there in the Allahabad district?—One in Allumchand, in that part of the district which is called the "Doab;" and one at Koor-sand, in that part of the district called "Trans-Ganges;" each concern had several factories, and the cultivation extended over many villages; our cultivation in Koor-sand has sometimes extended to 1,200 beegahs, of the large size, which is nearly equal to the Tirhoot beegah.

1920. Can

1920. Can you form any idea of how many villages were connected with these transactions?—Perhaps 200 in each concern.

1921. Are there not upwards of 4,000 villages in that district?—I have heard so.

1922. Did the cultivators often complain to you about indigo?—Yes, in the usual general way.

1923. Were these arrangements made entirely with cultivators or with small proprietors?—Partly with both.

1924. Then with the small proprietors the profits must have been much the same as you have described in the Allyghur and Muttra districts?—Yes, I believe so; very much the same.

1925. Did the non-proprietary cultivators complain of indigo cultivation not being profitable?—Yes; I have frequently heard the same remark made, that it did not pay.

1926. Was the same remark made by the small proprietors?—Yes; on the whole, it was.

1927. Were the lands selected, those which would grow superior crops, say sugar-cane, safflower, tobacco, &c.?—Yes; we were always anxious to get the best lands, but year after year, the value of produce rising, we found it difficult to get the best lands, and were obliged to be content with inferior lands; and I understand it is now very difficult to get lands at all, at the old rates, for the indigo cultivation.

1928. President.] How were the selections of the lands made; was it by local inspection?—We were obliged to employ our European and Eurasian assistants to go and inspect the lands offered to us, and to select carefully the best we could get.

1929. Then are we to understand, that without such inspection you would have been put off with very inferior lands?—Yes; very inferior lands.

1930. Can you account for this difference between the cultivators of Allahabad and those of the North-West?—Yes; the occupancy of the lands for two years was a very great objection. The occupancy in the North-West was not more than six months.

1931. Mr. Temple.] What was the reason that you gave a lower price for 100 maunds, as compared with the North-Western districts; especially considering the disadvantages you have just mentioned as peculiar to Allahabad?—The difference is in the history of the trade of the two districts. The price established at Allahabad is one of a very old date, and has always continued the same; and there is no market for indigo; whilst in the Upper Provinces the trade in plant followed on an extensive trade in indigo in another form; and there is a market as well as for the plant, as there is a large export of indigo from those provinces to the Punjab, Rajpootana, and Central India.

1932. A profit of three rupees an acre for a whole year would, after paying the land-tax, not leave much more than Rs. 1. 8a. to the acre as profit, even if it left that to the proprietor. Now, setting aside the superior crops, could not a cultivator in that district make much more profit than that by cultivating wheat, Indian corn, oil-seed, rice, or mustard?—The indigo crop at Allahabad is so dependent on the seasons that I have never been able to come to a fair estimate of an actual profit. I believe any other crop whatsoever is more profitable than indigo, but few crops provide a cash advance so readily as indigo.

1933. Such being the case, how did you manage to induce independent proprietors to undertake the cultivation?—The necessity of obtaining money on great occasions, as a marriage, or for rent to save an estate, or to meet a decree of court, would drive the small proprietor to the factory to offer his best lands to get large advances. I have known some of the large zemindars with a heavy suit in court come on the same errand.

1934. Besides this, had you any other opportunity of offering any collateral advantages to contractors, whether cultivators, small proprietors, or zemindars?—I know of none; the only opportunity I had of offering such collateral advantages was in estates belonging to myself.

1935. In those estates, what collateral advantages did you offer to the cultivators?—I could only offer them advantages as rent-payers.

1936. Did you ever offer the cultivators in your neighbour's estates to protect them against their landlords if they would sow indigo for you?—They never made such overtures to me, nor did I ever hear of such a thing.

1937. President.] Had you ever an occasion to offer your own tenants a decrease in their rents, provided they agreed to sow indigo?—Yes; I had an arrangement on my own estates, by which the cultivators agreed to sow one beegah in six with indigo; and on that understanding their rents were lower than if they had been treated entirely independent of indigo; and as rents were rising around us, we never increased the rents of our cultivators.

J. O'B.
Saunders,
Esq.

16 June
1860.

[Commission adjourned at 5.30 P.M.]

Tuesday, 19th June 1860.

PRESENT :

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C.S., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., C.S.; W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Reverend J. Sale;
Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

ROBERT THOMAS LARMOUR, Esq., General Mofussil Manager on the part of the Bengal Indigo Company, residing at Mulnath, Zillah Nuddea, called in; and Examined on oath.

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

19 June
1860.

1938. President.] WILL you please state to the Commission in what other places you have had experience in indigo planting besides Mulnath?—I have had experience in Pubna, Rajshye, Moorshedabad, Burdwan, and Jessore.

1939. Will you state the whole extent of cultivation under your present management in nij and ryotti?—The cultivation of the Bengal Indigo Company consists of 75,000 beegahs, of which 61,000 beegahs are ryotti and 14,000 nij-abad. Of the above quantity, 29,000 beegahs are under my immediate supervision; of this, 2,000 beegahs are nij cultivation, and the remainder ryotti.

1940. Is your nij cultivation carried on in jotes held by the factory, and by an establishment of ploughs and bullocks maintained by the factory, or by ploughs and bullocks hired temporarily?—The greater proportion of the nij cultivation is carried on in our talook villages; the remainder we hold in jotes and leases, and a portion we also hold under no documents at all, these lands having been in cultivation since the factory was built. The rents of the latter mentioned lands are paid direct to the zemindar. The greater portion of our cultivation is kopani, or land dug with the kodali; we also keep an establishment of ploughs and bullocks. In the Mulnath concerns, the nij-abad cultivation is dug by Boona coolies, of whom we employ 600. We have no ploughs.

1941. Then after the land is dug, do you cultivate by hiring ploughs?—The land first receives one kopani, or digging, and is then again dug. On rain falling the seed is sown, and the mui passed over the land. There is no necessity to employ bullocks, except for the purpose of giving the mui.

1942. Will you state the rate at which the bullocks were paid for the mui?—The rate paid depends entirely upon the distance the cattle have to go to the nij-abad land. Each man with two bullocks receives from two to three annas per diem.

1943. Could you state how many bullocks are required for your 2,000 beegahs of nij-abad?—Two hundred and fifty pairs.

1944. Do you find any difficulty in obtaining that number?—The nij-abad being in different places, is scattered over 15 villages and the churs attached to them, and there is never any difficulty in obtaining mujs for a day or even a couple of days, which is the only time they are required during the sowings.

1945. Are the nij-abad sowings in Mulnath mostly October or April sowings?—They are entirely spring sowings; we have no October sowings in Mulnath.

1946. Does the nij-abad preparatory cultivation go on at the same time as the ryotti cultivation of indigo?—The nij-abad cultivation begins in October and the ryotti cultivation in February, after the tobacco crop has been taken off the lands. The ryotti and nij-abad sowings take place on the fall of the first shower of rain in spring.

1947. Then does it ever happen that there is any interruption to the ryot's rice cultivation, owing to the necessity of putting the indigo seed into the ground, and the bullocks being required for the mui?—The ryots, mui being only required for one day, and that generally before their rice cultivation has even been commenced—their giving their bullocks for the use of the nij-abad causes them no great inconvenience, and, at that season of the year, no loss.

1948. Then are we clearly to understand that you have never had complaints made to you by ryots to the effect that the bullocks that they required for their rice lands were taken away for the nij-abad of the factory?—I never had any complaints; the ryots willingly gave their bullocks for a day.

1949. What proportion of mujs are required to any certain extent of nij land?—One mui will do eight beegahs of land in a day.

1950. Is it ever necessary to repeat the process of the mui, or will once suffice?—If the rain has been very heavy and the clods well broken, one mui will generally suffice; but if the rain is light and the clods not thoroughly broken, it will be necessary to repeat the mui the next day.

1951. At what time and in whose presence are the ryots usually paid for the use of their bullocks?—The ryots receive two annas each as advance previous to the rains, and the money in this instance is advanced by the nij-abad amin, and whatever balance the ryots have to receive, is paid either by myself or my assistant immediately after the sowings.

1952. What other concerns besides Mulnath are under your management?—The Katgarra, Baraset, Kalbolia, and Patkabbari concerns.

1953. Could you state generally how the nij cultivation is carried on in each of these concerns?—In Katgarra, Kalbolia, and Baraset, the land is almost entirely kopani (dug). In the Patkabbari concern the sowings are nearly all made in October. Previous to the inundation all lands are pochaneed, i. e. ploughed over, and the weeds are allowed to rot in order to manure the land, and on the inundation receding the lands are sown chittanee, or by scattering the seed without ploughing.

ing. A great number of ploughs are employed during August and September when the ryots have no ploughing of their own to do. In the Kalbolia concern they are never employed except for a day, or at most two days, during the sowings. In Baraset the establishment is quite sufficient without employing ryot's ploughs on any occasion.

1954. Then we are to understand, from the causes above stated, that, in your opinion, in no one instance is there any serious interruption to the agriculture of the ryot, owing to demands for labour on account of the nij-abad?—Yes; there is never any serious interference to the ryot's own work.

1955. Is the nij cultivation the largest in proportion at Mulnath, or what is the proportion of the other four concerns to ryotti?—The nij cultivation of the Mulnath concern in proportion to the ryotti is one-fifteenth. In Kalbolia it is one-fourth; in Patkabari it is one-third; in Katgarra it is one-twentieth; in Baraset it is merely nominal.

1956. In the four concerns where it is not nominal is the nij mainly within the limits of the Sudder factory, or is it allotted amongst all the out-factories?—It is scattered all over the concern, some factories having 50 beegahs, others 600 to 1,000.

1957. Is the greater portion under the immediate superintendence of the Sudder factory?—Yes, it is so generally. In the Mulnath factory there are 300 beegahs of nij-abad, and in the Bagardanga factory there are 600.

1958. Do the Boona coolies live habitually at each Sudder factory, or are they distributed in due proportion at the various out-factories?—They are invariably confined to one factory, in proportion to the amount of cultivation.

1959. Could you give us the details of the expense of cultivating a beegah of nij-abad?—Yes.

	Rs.	a.	p.
First kopani or digging	1	4	—
Second ditto	—	10	—
Sowing expenses, mui , &c.	—	4	—
Ura backcha , or collecting roots of long grass thrown up by preparing the ground	—	2	—
Weeding fresh weeds	—	5	—
Land rent	1	4	—
Cutting	—	5	—
Carting	—	12	6
Seed at the market price for the year	2	—	—
TOTAL	Rs.	6	14 6

1960. Are the operations of weeding, cutting, and carting performed by the factory coolies?—The weeding and cutting are done by the Boona coolies. Carting and boating is done by the ryots, not by our own establishment.

1961. At what rate are the ryots paid for carts or boats?—They are paid for carts generally per 100 bundles, the average being from four rupees to Rs. 4. 8 a., according to the distance. In some factories they are paid by the day, at the rate of Rs. 7. 8 a. a month. Boats are paid for at three rupees a hundred bundles, according to the distance. For instance, if four miles off, carts would be paid at the rate of Rs. 6. 8 a. for 100 bundles, and a mile off, at Rs. 2. 8 a.

1962. You have stated that some of your nij cultivation is carried on mostly in your own ta-looks; have you obtained the jumma within those talooks, or how did you obtain the actual occupancy of the land?—The land is in most instances bordering on the river, and the greater proportion of it is khass land, or the land of the home farm. Other land is obtained from the ryots, and the rents are paid to them. The chur lands about Mulnath, on which the nij cultivation exists, are mostly resumed chur lands, of which a settlement has been entered into with Government.

1963. Should a ryot die or abandon his homestead, do you generally establish another ryot in his place, or do you secure the land for the factory nij-abad?—We invariably endeavour to settle another ryot on the abandoned homestead or nuksani jumma, failing which, should the beeta or homestead lie convenient to other nij-abad lands, we would not allow it to remain fallow, but cultivate it as nij-abad.

1964. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you been anxious lately to extend your nij-abad cultivation or not?—No; our object always is to decrease our nij cultivation and increase the number of our ryots.

1965. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] What would be the produce of each beegah of nij, the total expense of which you have stated to be Rs. 6. 14. 6.?—The average return of the Mulnath nij cultivation last season was 24 bundles per beegah.

1966. Mr. Fergusson.] Is the expense of the nij cultivation at Patkabari, or where there are October sowings, the same or less than you have stated?—The expenses at Patkabari are one-third less than at Mulnath.

1967. Mr. Temple.] What is the average yield of the nij at Patkabaree in a fine season?—About 10 bundles.

1968. What is the reason that renders you anxious to diminish your nij cultivation?—It is always a great advantage to us to increase the number of our ryots; and as the Bengal Indigo Company's cultivation lies principally within their own talooks, the more ryots we can induce to settle by giving up our nij-abad, the greater the value of our landed property.

1969. Do you generally find the nij cultivation profitable?—Yes, it is profitable.

1970. You could then extend it considerably with profit to the concern?—No, not without ousting the ryots and taking their lands. In the Kalbolia concern, for instance, of late years, we have thrown up a great deal of nij-abad cultivation, which could not now be resumed without driving away hundreds of ryots, who cultivate a small proportion of the former nij-abad with indigo.

1971. Is nij cultivation more profitable on chur lands than on high lands?—It is; and it is only on chur lands that any quantity of land fit for nij-abad can be procured in one place, whereas on the high lands, supposing lands to be obtainable, they can only be obtained in scattered pieces, and this is one cause of the distinction between high land factories and the chur factories. In the chur factories the lands lie compactly together to a considerable extent, and can be supervised much more cheaply and readily than high lands.

1972. Then on the high lands there would be no hope of nij cultivation answering unless considerable tracts of land lying together could be purchased, which is an extremely improbable event?—Yes; it would be impossible to carry on a nij factory where the lands should consist only of high lands, few villages having more than

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

19 June
1860.

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.
19 June
1860.

150 beegahs suitable for indigo cultivation of any kind.

1973. Mr. Sale.] Are we to understand that your unwillingness to increase your nij cultivation does not arise from any difficulty in getting labour?—Labour can be had to any amount, that is, if we found it advantageous to increase our nij cultivation.

1974. When you say that labour can be had to any extent, do you refer to the labour of Boona coolies or to indigenous labour?—I refer to Boona labour principally; our nij cultivation being mostly hopani or by digging.

1975. Mr. Temple.] Are most of your Boona coolies old servants?—Most of them have been settled at the different factories for years, with their wives and families; and many of them have taken to cultivate indigo on their own account, and not as part of the nij.

1976. Do such persons receive wages for work they may do, in addition to the profits of the indigo?—Yes; they are paid by piece work, so far as regards cultivation, and during the manufacturing, they are paid at the rate of four rupees a month for beating the vats, &c.

1977. Mr. Sale.] Do you find the Boona coolies more efficient as workmen than indigenous coolies?—Yes; I think, generally speaking, they work with much better heart and temper than the Bengali coolies, and are always ready to put their hand to any thing.

1978. President.] Are the details of the expenses of the nij cultivation which you have given calculated at the market rate, or at so much per piece, which you pay to your Boona coolies?—They are calculated at the rate we pay our factory coolies for piece work.

1979. Mr. Fergusson.] Would the land which you cultivate for nij, say at Mulnath, be cultivated otherwise, if you did not so use it?—It being principally low chur lands, it would answer for no other crop but indigo.

1980. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Are you quite sure that one mui with two bullocks will, in one day, be able to go over six or eight beegahs of land?—Yes, I have no doubt of it.

1981. Mr. Sale.] You stated in a former answer that the ryots do not complain, and that they give their bullocks willingly for the nij cultivation; are we to infer from that, that you have encountered no opposition from the ryots, as far as the nij cultivation is concerned?—No; I have never encountered any opposition from the ryots.

1982. President.] Are we to understand that the ryotti cultivation, which at Mulnath is 27,000 beegahs, is mostly carried on within estates held by the concern?—The greater proportion of the ryotti cultivation is on our own talook and ijara property; of the whole cultivation of the Bengal Indigo Company, 58,000 beegahs lie within our own zemindaries, putnis and ijaras, and 17,000 beegahs lie within villages, over which we have no control, and in which we have no interest; familiarly known as be-ilaka.

1983. In these latter villages, where you have no interest, have you experienced any difficulty in inducing the ryots to cultivate, or have you had any interruption from ryots or from zemindars for the last few years?—The ryots of the be-ilaka villages, unless when instigated by the zemindars, have caused me no difficulty as regards the cultivation. They have, generally speaking, cultivated the lands as readily as our ilaka ryots. The ryots of Sham Chunder Paul Chowdari, at the beginning of the present season, being instigated by their zemindar, and also being under the impression that the deputy magistrate of Kullaroo would support them in not carrying out their indigo engagements, refused to cultivate their lands as usual. These are the only be-ilaka ryots within Mulnath which at one time showed opposition. I would also mention that ryots who have never held advances from the Mulnath concern, and who are be-ilaka ryots, have this year, since the passing of Act XI., come in and taken advances, and sown indigo for the concern. I have never experienced any interruption from any zemindars, except Sham Chunder Paul Chowdari. The village I allude to is Barrobarri, attached to the Mirzapore factory.

1984. Then are you of opinion that you would be able to extend your cultivation in villages in which you had no rights without difficulty, or without first obtaining the consent of the zemindar?—No; it would be necessary to obtain the consent of the zemindar, without whose consent no indigo could be grown.

1985. And for that purpose would you probably have to pay a bonus, or make the zemindar a present?—That would depend greatly on the character of the zemindar; many of them would not accept of a bonus. For instance, the zemindars of Taki and Goberdanga would not accept of a bonus. Merely asking their consent would do. They would either give it or withhold it.

1986. Mr. Sale.] Generally speaking, have you been able to obtain the consent and co-operation of the zemindar, without the offer of a bonus, in engaging the be-ilaka ryot?—Yes, generally speaking, I have not had to offer any bonus.

1987. Mr. Temple.] Do you believe that by offering bonuses to zemindars you would be able to considerably extend be-ilaka cultivation?—No; I don't think I would, to any great extent.

1988. Do you think that you could make contracts with zemindars to procure you a certain amount of indigo cultivation within their estates on certain terms?—I don't think that any zemindar would interest himself sufficiently to make it remunerative to me to pay him what he would be likely to demand for such services; i. e., if I made an offer of a sum I could afford to give, he would probably not undertake to do it for less than double the amount. But I can't say that I ever tried the experiment.

1989. President.] Do you think there would be any use in endeavouring to contract with the zemindar that he should sow indigo by means of his ryots, and deliver either so many hundred bundles, or so many maunds of weight for manufacture, you exercising no supervision over the cultivation?—Not in the slightest; the indigo crop requiring such extreme supervision, no zemindar could undertake such an arrangement successfully; I mean nothing short of European care and energy could produce a crop of indigo.

1990. Mr. Temple.] Are you aware that in the North-West Provinces engagements of this kind are entered into, both with large zemindars and other contractors: do you think that there is anything peculiar to Bengal to prevent a similar arrangement?—I have understood that indigo is prepared and manufactured by the ryots of the North-West Provinces, and then carried to the factory in mussuks or skins, where it is afterwards boiled down and made into cakes, but the indigo is of such a quality that it hardly repays the cost of production, and it is only when the market is extremely high that such indigo is saleable; but I was not aware of zemindars engaging to deliver indigo plant.

was

1991. With reference to the European care and energy required for the cultivation of indigo, is there no other crop in Bengal cultivated solely by natives, which requires these qualities in an equal degree, as for instance, betel-leaf tobacco, and sugar-cane?—No crop cultivated in Lower Bengal is so precarious as that of indigo, and when native superintendence fails, it is because they are never ready when the time comes. The energy of the European has the crop sown in the morning, whereas, if left to the native, it would not be sown till afternoon, when it would be a failure in consequence.

1992. President.] Have you never seen ryots going out cultivating their rice lands early in the morning, and working from seven or eight o'clock till 11 or 12, in the month of April?—Ryots generally work on an average about three hours a day, and often and often I have seen ryots lose the rice season, by not taking advantage of the rain when it fell, or not cutting their crop when it was ripe. I have frequently seen ryots at work early in the morning; in fact it is only in the cool of the morning that they do work.

1993. Can you state the extent of ryotti cultivation in the Bengal Indigo Company's villages, where the concern has rights and interests?—The Bengal Indigo Company have ilaka cultivation in 595 villages, and the cultivation of 58,000 beegahs; the annual jummas of the above villages consist of: ijara, or lease, 142,000 rupees, 166,000 putni rupees, 14,000 zemindary rupees. The total amount of the Bengal Indigo Company's collections is, in round numbers, 3 lacs and 22,000 rupees. Besides this we have jotes and mourusis (holdings and old hereditary tenant proprietorships), making a total of 3 lacs and 40,000 rupees.

1994. Were the zemindaries mostly purchased by public auction or by private transfer?—Both zemindaries and putnis were obtained by private purchase.

1995. In obtaining either zemindaries, putnis, or leases, did you meet with hard or favourable terms?—With one or two exceptions, previous to 10 years ago, the purchases were made on easy terms; all recent purchases have been made at an increased expenditure of 100 per cent. on the rates formerly paid.

1996. Mr. Fergusson.] In the cases of ijaras, or leases for short terms, have you not always had to pay enhanced rent for the increase of the rental you may have effected, and also a corresponding bonus?—In the renewing of ijaras, there is generally an increase on the jumma, as also on the amount of salami paid to the zemindar; and latterly we have had to pay enhanced rates on salami as well as on the annual rental.

1997. President.] Has the enhanced rate been in any instance more than you could fairly cover by your collections from the ryots?—Yes, invariably so. For instance, on an ijara of 9,000 rupees jumma which is renewable every four years, I have to pay a salami on each occasion of renewal of 4,433 rupees, and on that jumma of 9,000 rupees, I have a yearly loss of 800 rupees. In another instance, I have had to renew an ijara, the jumma of which was 4,092 rupees, paying a salami of 2,216 rupees, presents to amla 1,065 rupees, and an advance or peshgi of 30,000 rupees at an interest of only six per cent. In another instance, I was obliged to take a lease, the jumma of which was 5,775 rupees, for which I had to pay salami 1,200 rupees, amla 600 rupees, and an advance or peshgi of 4,000 rupees, for which I only received three per cent. I give these as mere instances of what is paid in the renewal of ijaras.

1998. Mr. Fergusson.] Can you tell us to what extent of indigo cultivation the instances you have mentioned would apply?—Yes; these three instances include about 3,000 beegahs of indigo cultivation.

1999. President.] In those instances, did you endeavour to make up the increased rent demanded from you by increased collections from ryots?—No, we made no attempt to increase the jumma of the ryots; and all our ijaras are held at a loss.

2000. In the case of putnis, did you ever attempt to cover the purchase money by extra collections from your ryots?—After taking a putni, we measure and assess the village to what we consider a fair rate, those rates being basto or homestead 2 rupees per beegah, baghat or garden 2 rupees 8 annas, mattan or field 8 annas.

2001. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Do you charge the ryots with one or two annas per rupee as ijaradari fees?—Not in all: ijara jummas of upwards of 50 rupees pay an ijaradari of half an anna, other jummas one anna per rupee, and many ryots do not pay any ijaradari at all, such as substantial ryots.

2002. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you measured and settled zemindaries and putnis to any great extent, and have such settlements increased or diminished the ryots on these properties?—Yes; I have measured and settled zemindaries and putnis, the annual collection of which amounts to upwards of a lac of rupees, and so successful has the measurement and settlement of the properties been, that not a lease is untaken or unoccupied.

2003. President.] Could you state what was the total increase to the jumma effected by these settlements?—About 18,000 rupees, which increase was principally by settling ryots on unoccupied jummas.

2004. Did you, either on measuring lands or in demanding ijaradari, make a distinction between ryots who cultivated indigo, and ryots who did not?—No, not as a rule. The condition of the ryot when assessing his jumma was always taken into consideration, every man being assessed at a rate that he could readily and easily pay. For instance, according to the land measured and held by the ryot, his yearly rent should, perhaps, be 50 rupees, but being a man down in the world, or in reduced circumstances, we give him a remission, say of 10 rupees yearly, until his circumstances mend.

2005. Mr. Sale.] To what cause do you attribute the rise of 100 per cent. within the last 10 years on the rates at which the zemindary rights can be purchased or procured?—The cause of increase in the value of landed property is owing to the increased insecurity of all trade and business throughout the Mofussil. Mahajuns, as well as indigo planters, have found a great change of late years in the character of the ryots as to honesty and fair dealing; and the rise in the Kishnaghur district in the value of property has been owing principally to the competition of the natives engaged in mahajani, or speculation and money lending, who, without the power of zemindars, consider it unsafe to make further advances or carry on trade.

2006. President.] Are you in a position to state the per-centage of ryots' lands devoted to indigo throughout

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

19 June
1860.

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

19 June
1860.

throughout your concern in the estates held by the concern?—The per-centage of indigo cultivation in the Bengal Indigo Company's concerns is about one-sixteenth.

2007. Mr. Fergusson.] Has the number of indigo ryots increased or decreased within the past few years in these concerns?—The increase of ryots has been very considerable, and they last year amounted to 1,080. The average annual increase of the Mulnath concern alone for the past three years is upwards of 500.

2008. What is the number of ryots that sow indigo in the Bengal Indigo Company's concerns?—Twenty-three thousand and two hundred ryots hold indigo engagements.

2009. President.] Have the older ryots been induced to sow more indigo than before, i. e., are there ryots who now cultivate two beegahs when formerly they cultivated one beegah?—Lands suited for indigo cultivation throughout the Kishnaghur district have gradually become unfit to produce to a great extent the crops of indigo that they did 10 or 15 years ago, and, consequently, a reduction in the ryots' engagements, not an increase, has generally been made.

2010. Then, on the whole, taking old and new ryots together, has your area of indigo cultivation increased, diminished, or remained the same?—On the whole it has decreased considerably; for instance, Mulnath concern, which has sown as much as 43,000 beegahs, now sows 29,000. About 1845, 42,000 beegahs were sown. In 1850-51 the cultivation was from 26,000 to 27,000, it is now 29,000 beegahs.

2011. Mr. Temple.] What is the cause of this decrease in cultivation; is indigo an exhausting crop?—The lands throughout the district have become higher. Indigo is not an exhausting crop. The crop of rice after the indigo crop is always better than from land that had been previously sown in rice without a rotation of crops.

2012. Then the Kishnaghur district generally has been giving less land suitable for indigo?—Yes.

2013. Does this reply apply to Baraset?—Yes. On the whole, I do not think it will be possible to sow as much indigo as was sown 10 or 15 years ago in the Kishnaghur district, with the chance of a crop.

2014. President.] The custom of most concerns is to give out advances in the beginning of and during the cold weather; is that your custom, and had you a considerable yearly outlay in advances?—Yes; it is customary with us to commence with our advances immediately as the cold weather sets in, and they are generally completed in January. Our yearly outlay varies from 50,000 to 75,000 rupees, according to the previous season's return of indigo.

2015. Have the majority of ryots who have cultivated in the previous seasons, fresh advances to receive either in whole or in part?—Every ryot who has given indigo the previous season, receives advances, no matter what amount he may be in debt to the factory, the general custom being, if he is in debt 20 rupees, and has given 10 rupees worth of indigo, that he receives five rupees in cash, and five rupees goes to the credit of his debt to the factory.

2016. Is the ryot never credited with his advances by a transfer to his rent account?—In the Bengal Indigo Company's concerns, the zemindary and the indigo account are kept quite distinct. But I am aware that it is the custom in many concerns to make a transfer of advances to the rent account.

2017. It has been stated to the Commission that planters find it necessary to select the land, to see that the ryot prepares the land with a view to cultivation, and that he sows at the right time; is all this according to your experience?—Yes; it is necessary to inspect the lands, the sowing, weeding, and every agricultural operation connected with indigo. Nothing can be done in this country without an advance, and that advance once made, it is very necessary to look after the ryots to get them to fulfil their engagements in indigo, as in every thing else.

2018. Do mahajuns who make advances of rice grain find it necessary to supervise the operations of the ryots regarding rice?—To a very great extent they are required to do so, and when the rice crop is cut, they require to exercise the same superintendence and watchfulness as the indigo planter has to do, when the indigo crop is on the ground, to prevent the ryot from making away with a portion of the rice crop. The inability of the mahajun to give this necessary superintendence has been the cause of the ruin of fully half the mahajuns of the Kishnaghur district.

2019. You mean, then, that the mahajun does not usually depute men to look after the ploughing of the land, sowing, weeding, and cutting of the rice crop?—From first to last he has to exercise a superintendence over the ryot's cultivation, the sowing, weeding, and reaping of the rice crop, but he does not do it in the minute way that an indigo planter does; I mean by that, that he does not go daily over the land. I daily go over my indigo lands, and I have frequently seen the mahajun or his agent inspecting the rice crop.

2020. May not that be more with a view to see how the rice crop is getting on, than with any intention of urging on the ryots?—I have no doubt it is with both intentions.

2021. Mr. Sale.] Then are we to understand that the ryot is in debt to the factory and to the mahajun, and frequently under the supervision of both parties at the same time?—Many ryots are indebted to both the mahajun and the factory, and consequently they have to look to the interests of both parties.

2022. Mr. Temple.] But would not the supervision of the mahajun be merely with an object of recovering the advance he had made, whereas the supervision of the planter would be for a further object, viz., not only to recover the advance, but to ensure the best possible crop. Would not this difference render the supervision of the planter much more strict?—Assuredly it would be to the planter's interest as well as to the ryot's to get as good a crop as possible by a strict supervision.

2023. Mr. Fergusson.] Is it not frequently the case that the ryot is bound to deliver his surplus crop to the mahajun at a fixed price, under the market rate?—It is the custom for the ryot to deliver all his rice crop to the mahajun, who generally fixes his own price upon it, deducting 50 rupees per cent. for the advance made, that is, if he has advanced one maund to the ryot, he receives in return for that, one maund and a half.

2024. Under the circumstances when the ryot is in debt to both planter and mahajun, is it not the interest of the mahajun to make the ryot sow rice instead of indigo, and do you not think that this is one of the causes of the present refusal to sow indigo?—Undoubtedly the mahajun will look after his own interests first, and I think it is very probable that the influence of the mahajun has been exercised this year to a great extent to induce induce the ryots not to fulfil their indigo engagements.

2025. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] You have stated that, after the passing of Act XI., ryots who never held advances before, came forward willingly and received advances; will you state what number of ryots have thus willingly taken advances, on what extent of lands, and upon what terms?—Eight or 10 ryots (I don't remember the exact number) offered to cultivate 10 beegahs of land on an advance of two rupees a beegah.

2026. Is the cultivation of indigo profitable or otherwise to the ryots?—That depends entirely upon the season. In the last season of the Mulnauth factory the average return per beegah paid to the ryots was 14 bundles per beegah. Upward of 100 ryots cut more than 20 bundles per beegah; 237 ryots cleared off their advances and debt to the factory, and received excess payments. The return of 20 bundles per beegah pays a ryot well, apart from the indigo seed which he also gets from the stumps. [Witness here filed a paper in English, referring to the factory books in original, which were also filed at the same time.]

2027. What number of ryots have you in the Mulnauth factory?—One thousand three hundred and seventy-eight.

2028. You stated that out of 1,378 ryots, 237 had cleared their advances, will you state how the account of the remaining ryots stood?—The last eight years of the Kishnaghur district have been very disastrous. The remainder of the ryots did not clear off their balances and debt in full, and consequently had no excess to receive.

2029. Could you tell us the result of the other factories of the Bengal Indigo Company's concern?—I could not without a reference to the books.

2030. Mr. Sale.] Does the statement regarding the Mulnauth factory fairly represent the average of the ryots of other factories?—I consider it better than the average of other factories.

2031. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Have those 237 ryots entered into fresh engagements this year?—Every ryot in the Mulnauth concern, amounting to 1,100, entered into new engagements and fulfilled them.

2032. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you had occasion to sue any single ryot in the Mulnauth concern for breach of contract?—In no single instance.

2033. Have you had occasion to sue any other ryots of the other concerns of the Bengal Indigo Company's?—Yes; in the Kalbolia and Katgarra concerns. In Kalbolia to the number of 1,000, and in Katgarra about 800 ryots. In Patkabari and Mulnauth none.

2034. Have the ryots in the Baraset concern renewed their engagements and sown indigo as usual, or have you had to sue them there?—The ryots of the Baraset concern have this year engaged and have sown the indigo to the extent of 5,000 beegahs, or one half the former cultivation of the concern. Last year the concern was closed. I have had no occasion to carry out any case against the ryots of that concern under the new Act.

2035. Mr. Sale.] When you state that 1,100 ryots entered into new engagements and fulfilled them, are we to understand that if they did not take fresh advances they would be free from all obligation to the factory?—I cannot say until the ryots' accounts are made up at the end of the season, but had they not taken fresh advances this year, they would have been liable for their own balances.

2036. President.] For what period of years is your contract?—The contracts are generally for three years, but they are renewed every year on a fresh stamp.

2037. Mr. Temple.] Are these contracts duly filled in at the time the engagement is entered into?—No, the contract is not filled up on the day the engagement is made, in the instance of every ryot. The advances of a factory are generally made in two or three days, and it would be an impossibility to write up these contracts at the time, and it is only in the engagements with the head ryots that the contracts are duly filled up.

2038. Then do the contracts of the subordinate and smaller ryots remain unwritten?—Yes, they generally do; very few ryots are able to write, and it is only a matter of form. No one ever dreamt of taking a ryot into court, to recover his balances.

2039. Does the stamp paper for these contracts remain in the factory?—Yes.

2040. Is the ryot ever reminded of their existence?—Not the slightest allusion is ever made to the stamp.

2041. Is he charged with the stamp?—Yes.

2042. President.] If your contract is for three years, is it absolutely necessary to renew the stamp every year, and thus charge the ryot with two additional annas?—No, it is not absolutely necessary; but, as it has been the custom, and as the charge was a trifle, it attracted no attention.

2043. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] If the planters never think of suing the ryots, why do they charge the poor men with the price of the stamp paper?—It has been an infatuation that planters laboured under, that redress could be had against a ryot in the Civil Court, and they have kept up appearances by renewing their engagements with the ryots on stamp paper.

2044. Is it not possible for a planter, in case of disputes with the ryots, to convert those blank stamps into a legal instrument, to enable him to bring the ryot before the Civil Court?—It may be possible, but I don't see what advantage it would be to the planter in any way, as the result, under any circumstances, must be the same. If you get a decree against a ryot, there is never any property forthcoming to realise the amount from.

2045. If the ryot was a troublesome one, whom the planter wished to put down, might you not put him into gaol on a decree gained on such an instrument?—Yes; if the ryot could be caught, he might be put in gaol, and be supported at the planter's expense.

2046. Do you think that getting blank stamp papers signed is a strictly correct way of doing business?—No, I certainly do not; but under the circumstances of advances to an immense number of ryots being made at one and the same time, it is the only course to be adopted, and I have never known of any planter taking advantage of this custom in transacting business with the ryots.

2047. The ryots generally give shattas or agreements to the planters; do the planters sign anything in return, making it reciprocal, and without a mutual agreement is such a contract binding?—The ryot on giving a shatta receives a hathchitti from the factory, and so long as he has given the shatta of his own good will, I certainly

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

19 June
1860.

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

19 June
1860.

consider it binding on him, without any further agreement from the planter.

2048. President.] The hathchitti is on unstamped paper, is it not?—Yes, it is.

2049. Can you give us the details of the expense of a beegah of ryotti cultivation in the Mulnath concern?—The ryotti cultivation of the Mulnath concern is almost entirely confined to tobacco land. The cultivation is as follows:—

	Rs.	a.	p.
Ploughing (being two ploughs) -	-	4	-
Sowing -	-	2	-
Mui -	-	2	-
Bida -	-	2	-
Cutting plant -	-	5	-
Cartage [in the Mulnath concern]	-	4	- the ryot pays a proportion of	-	4	- one-fifth]	-	-	-
Indigo seed -	-	8	-
Land rent -	-	8	-
	Rs.	2	3

A fair return is 20 bundles a beegah, which is Rs. 3. 5½, at the rate of six bundles per rupee; and I consider a moderate return from the stumps of the indigo two maunds, for which the ryot receives at the rate of four rupees a maund.

2050. What is the length of your measuring chain?—Five feet and a half.

2051. When the bundle is completed, taking the plant to be from five to six feet in length, how many men will it require to lift a bundle, and how many bundles go to a cart?—I do not think one man could lift a bundle; but, if put on his head, he could carry it. A well-loaded cart contains four bundles.

2052. Mr. Fergusson.] Do the books that you have put in show the account of every indigo ryot belonging to the Mulnath factory, and detail every item of his account, and are they signed by every one who knows how to write, and are there similar books kept at every factory?—Yes, the book contains every ryot's account, and similar books are kept in every factory in the Bengal Indigo Company's concerns.

[Commission adjourned at 5.30 p.m.]

Wednesday, 20th June 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., c.s., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., c.s.; W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Rev. J. Sale; Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

ROBERT THOMAS LARMOUR, Esq.; Examination continued.

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

20 June
1860.

2053. President.] IN your concerns, have you the same beegah for zemindary measurement as you have for indigo, or are there two standards?—In most of our zemindaries the beegah consists of 17,666 square feet, and the indigo beegah, throughout all the Bengal Indigo Company's concerns, is 21,511 square feet.

2054. Is the size of the indigo beegah founded on the common custom with regard to indigo?—Throughout all indigo concerns in the Kishnaghur district, the indigo beegah consists of 21,511 square feet, and that is the established custom of the district.

2055. It has been complained of by several ryots and others, while giving their evidence, that this difference operates to their prejudice; do you not think that it would conduce to the harmonious working of the system if the indigo and zemindari measurement were identical?—It would no doubt simplify the conducting of business; but a ryot, on entering into an indigo engagement, always perfectly understands that he is to give land according to the factory measurement.

2056. What is the standard beegah sanctioned by Government and used by its officers on all occasions where Government is concerned?—The standard beegah consists of 14,400 square feet.

2057. Considering the dislike that has been evinced to indigo in some quarters, do you not think that an assimilation of the standard in measurements would lead the ryots to sow more willingly in future?—No; I don't think that the assimilation would make any great difference.

2058. The registration of contracts has been insisted on in several quarters; considering the extent of your operations, do you think that if sub-divisional officers and moonsiffs were empowered to register, in addition to the officers who now register deeds at the Sudder stations, these other officers would be able to get through their work?—The difficulty in carrying out the registration of ryots shattas would be the impossibility of collecting the ryots at the sub-division or Sudder station of the district. For instance, Bongong sub-division, consisting of an assistant magistrate and a moonsiff, is six miles from the Mulnath factory. To get the ryots, 1,378 in number, to collect at Bongong, and to have the shattas registered would, in my opinion, be practically impossible. The only course that appears to me practicable, would be that an officer having the power to register, would be available to attend at the factory for the two or three days that are necessary for making the advances, and register the shattas on the spot.

2059. But if it is possible to assemble the ryots at the factory, might it not be equally possible to assemble them at the sub-division, or could not

not the registration be spread over a longer period of time, say a month or six weeks?—No; ryots would willingly come to the factory to take their advances, but they would not take the trouble to go to the sub-division for the sake of registering the shattas, and it would be impossible for us to keep servants in attendance at the sub-division until the ryots should come in, or say, for so long a period as a month or six weeks.

2060. Mr. Fergusson.] Would you, on any other account, have any objection to the contracts being registered?—Certainly not.

2061. You stated yesterday that your annual advances to the ryots were about 50,000 to 75,000 rupees on the Bengal Indigo Company's concerns; what is the total amount of your annual outlay?—The annual outlay of the Bengal Indigo Company's concerns varies from 375,000 to 440,000 rupees, the price of seed being a most important item in the outlay; some seasons it being procurable at from four to 10 rupees a maund, and in others from 20 to 25 rupees a maund. The Bengal Indigo Company's concerns require desi or indigenous seed for their cultivation; the yearly consumption of which is about 9,000 maunds.

2062. You generally purchase some up-country seed; will you say what used to be its price, and what it has been for the last four years?—When desi seed is not procurable, we are necessarily obliged to purchase a portion of up-country seed. The prices of the latter during the last four years have varied from five to 20 rupees per maund.

2063. What do you pay your ryots for the seed you purchase from them?—Seed delivered by the ryot from khoontees or stamps, we pay for at the rate of four rupees a maund, but when he grows the indigo for seed alone, we pay him at the market rate, which has lately varied from 15 to 25 rupees a maund.

2064. President.] Is such seed ever grown under advances?—A very large proportion of the seed used by the Bengal Indigo Company is grown within the Katgarra concern and its immediate neighbourhood; the ryots receive no regular advances for the production of this seed, but are assisted by loans from the factory on this seed account; the understanding being, that all seed grown within the Bengal Indigo Company's ilaka, shall be delivered to its managers at the bazaar rate of the season.

2065. Mr. Fergusson.] What is the amount of the balances due by the ryots to the Bengal Indigo Company's concerns?—The balances receivable from the ryots by the Bengal Indigo Company's concerns, amount to 7 lacs and 78,000 rupees.

2066. In addition to that, have you written off any as bad or irrecoverable balances?—The amount of 7 lacs and 78,000 rupees, includes all balances, good and bad, at present on the books. Of this amount, 3 lacs and 16,000 rupees are now in the act of being paid off by the ryots, or are due by ryots working for the concern; the remaining 4 lacs and 62,000 rupees are not immediately recoverable from the ryots.

2067. Then the whole amount of those balances represents cash paid to the ryots, less the cost of seed and stamped paper?—Yes, it represents cash paid to the ryots; the price of the seed and stamped paper was also paid in cash, but to the vendors of those articles.

2068. Mr. Sale.] Can you state whether the whole of these sums have been actually paid to the ryots as advances, or may not some part be represented, say by fines for cattle trespass, for neglect of work, or some other items of this kind?—These sums refer altogether to advances, and not to fines for cattle trespass, &c.

2069. Could you state how many years these balances have been in process of accumulation?—These balances have been accumulating, I should think, for the last 30 or 40 years; I cannot speak positively on this point.

2070. With reference to the accounts filed by you yesterday, are you prepared to state whether any ryot is aware of the state of his account, and acknowledges its correctness?—Yes; I believe that every ryot is aware of the state of his account, and were it in any way incorrect, he would, no doubt, make objections to it at the yearly settlement of accounts.

2071. Are the ryots in the habit of coming in person to the factory to settle their accounts?—Yes, invariably so, throughout the Bengal Indigo Company's concerns.

2072. In reference to the statement given in by you yesterday, of the expense of cultivating a beegah of ryotti land, are the various items for labour, such as ploughing, sowing, mui, cutting, &c., calculated at the market price of labour, or on what principle are they calculated?—Yes; the calculation was made on what it costs the ryots, at the market price of the day.

2073. President.] What number of ploughs can you get for the rupee in the vicinity of Mulnath, at the present time?—If the ploughs are to be employed in sowing lands immediately adjacent to the village where the ryots reside, the rate is eight ploughs for the rupee; but if it is necessary for them to go to a distance, they must be paid in proportion. In some instances, we pay as high as four ploughs per rupee.

2074. Mr. Sale.] What is the average rent of tobacco land?—The ryots invariably pay me eight annas per beegah as rent for that land.

2075. Mr. Fergusson.] Is it not frequently the case, that a shower of rain which would be sufficient to sow indigo would not be enough for rice; and is not a delay in sowing rice of little consequence, provided the rains are abundant afterwards?—Rice is seldom sown with the first showers that fall, and they are generally heavy enough to allow of indigo sowings being proceeded with. It is of the utmost importance that indigo should be sown as early in the season as possible; not so with the rice crop, which answers well if sown late in the season, and when the heavy rains set in. It is only in seasons when the first falls of rain are unusually late, that the interests of the indigo and rice crops interfere with each other.

2076. President.] But on the occasion of a moderate shower at the end of March or the beginning of April, sufficient to sow indigo, but not enough to sow rice, does not the ryot still wish to prepare his own lands by previous ploughing, with a view to his rice crop?—No; the ryot is anxious to get in his indigo crop with the first rain, if possible, knowing that it all depends on early sowings.

2077. If the ryot has ploughed for indigo in the morning, do you always let him have the afternoon to himself?—We never interfere with the ryot if his indigo land is prepared; and it is only in the first part of the day that he uses his ploughs for indigo cultivation.

2078. But supposing a shower of rain to fall favourable for both indigo and rice sowings, would you insist that the indigo land be looked after first?—Yes, I should endeavour as a matter

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

20 June
1860.

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

20 June
1860.

of course to induce the ryots to sow the indigo in the first instance.

2079. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Do you not think that if the ryot were allowed to cultivate all his lands with rice and other crops of his own liking, he would very soon be able to pay off his debts and become independent?—No, I don't think so; neither do I think that ryots generally would wish to put their whole risk on grain and rice crops.

2080. Mr. Fergusson.] You stated yesterday that your indigo cultivation was about one-sixteenth of the whole land in your ilaka; such being the case, the option referred to could only refer to that sixteenth part?—Yes, it could only refer to that.

2081. Mr. Sale.] You stated yesterday that indigo was generally grown on tobacco lands, can you state what proportion of land in your ilaka is fit for tobacco cultivation?—No, I cannot speak on this point with any approximation to correctness.

2082. Mr. Fergusson.] Can you give any statement of the cost and return on a beegah of rice land, similar to that which you put in yesterday regarding indigo?—The cost of cultivation of a beegah of rice land is:—

	Rs.	a.	p.
Ten ploughs, at two annas each	1	4	—
Mui and bida - - -	—	—	8
Weeding - - -	—	1	—
Seed - - -	—	8	—
Cutting and thrashing - - -	—	12	—
Rent for half year - - -	—	4	—
TOTAL - - -	Rs. 4	—	—

The return for one beegah is generally about eight maunds of rice in husk, which at one rupee a maund (which is the present price), would be eight rupees.

2083. What used to be the price of rice four or five years ago?—From eight to ten annas a maund.

2084. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Do you not think that unless the planters have ryotti cultivation, they will never make a profit from indigo?—That would depend entirely upon the situation of the concern; chur factories, where an immense amount of cultivation is available in one place, would no doubt pay very well as nij.

2085. Do you think the planters on high lands in Nuddea could make a profit on their nij cultivation?—In the high factories of Kishnaghur such a small quantity of land is available in one place for nij-abad cultivation, that I doubt if a high land factory could be worked to advantage on nij-abad cultivation alone.

2086. President.] Putting nij-abad out of the question, from your own experience, do you give any preference to ryotti cultivation on estates held by the factory, over ryotti cultivation on estates not so held, as being more easily and successfully managed; and if so, for what reason?—It is always preferable for security and freedom from interference from zemindars and others, to have ryotti cultivation within villages of which you possess or hold the zemindary rights; and I would certainly give the preference to a cultivation so situated, i. e., I prefer ilaka to be-ilaka cultivation.

2087. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Is it not the fact that many ryots would be glad to pay off the balances due against them in the factory accounts, if they were allowed to do so, to get out of the planter's hands?—No; I have no reason to believe such to be the fact; my ryots have always worked with me freely and cheerfully; and unless when misled and instigated against me, as in the present season, have always been glad to meet me when I visited their villages, and to point out with pride their indigo cultivation.

2088. President.] Can you give us a statement of the scale of your establishment, showing the salary of the manager or assistants in charge of either concerns or divisions; as also of the naib, or dewan, mohurrir, the gomashta, amins and the other servants, whether khalassi, takidgir or peon?—The salary of managers of concerns is 400 rupees a month, and that of assistants varies from 50 to 250 rupees, according to the time of their service and their abilities.

	Rs.	a.	p.	Rs.	a.	p.
The salary of the Naib or Dewan is	25	—	—	to	30	—
The Gomashtas of factories - -	12	—	—	to	20	—
Mohurrirs, &c. -	5	—	—	to	9	—
Amins - -	3	8	—	to	4	—
Khalassis and Takidgirs - -	3	—	—
Burkundazes - -	5	—	—

2089. Is anything further allowed to the assistants, either in the shape of horse allowance, bread from the Sudder factory servants, or a per-centage on the out-turn of indigo?—The managers and assistants are charged nothing for house rent; the assistants are allowed horse allowance, at the rate of 24 rupees for each horse; they keep two or three horses, according to the extent of cultivation, purchasing the horses themselves; they are also allowed bread, a bhistic or water carrier, and coolies for the garden; and the managers of concerns, but not assistants, are allowed 5 per cent. on the profits.

2090. Are the native officials usually residents of the neighbourhood of the factories?—The naib, gomashta and mohurrirs generally reside at a distance, but all under-servants, such as amins and khalassis, reside in the immediate neighbourhood.

2091. Do the higher officials usually reside within the limits of the concern?—Most of them do so; but they are not employed at the factory which immediately adjoins their residence; for instance, men from the northern part of the district are employed in the southern factories, and vice versa.

2092. Several statements have been made in evidence regarding the exactions of the factory amla; what means do you adopt to endeavour to check such practices?—So far as my experience goes, no Bengali ever placed in authority desists from making exactions, and the only check to such exactions is the employment of European superintendents; all money being paid through the assistant, and that a Bengali servant should be impressed with the knowledge that he is liable to instant dismissal if found practising extortion of any kind. The great trouble in the management of indigo is to keep a check on the numerous native servants that we are obliged to employ.

2093. Do you make any distinction between ordinary dustoori or perquisites, and heavier exactions?—I never countenance dustoori or exactions in any shape, although I am perfectly aware that giving dustoori is the custom of the country.

2094. Do you consider the above rates of pay to your native officials to be a sufficient guarantee against all extortions or exactions, except the usual usual dustoori?—Yes; I have hitherto had no reason to think to the contrary.

2095. Has it been your custom to allow all your ryots free access to you, and to listen to their complaints against the factory servants, or to give them facility of appeal against the orders of a subordinate manager or assistant?—Yes; I have never refused a ryot a hearing against anybody, and every day of my life I attend cutcherry for that purpose, from 9 to 12 o'clock, and from three to six, and every assistant in charge of a division has a cutcherry, and does likewise.

2096. Mr. Fergusson.] What measures do you take to see that money due to the ryots on any account is paid to them?—All money, whether as advances, fazil, wages, or hire, is paid directly by the assistant in charge of the division. He goes personally from factory to factory, and makes these payments direct to the ryots; no payment is made except in his presence or that of myself.

2097. Can you state if a similar practice prevails in other concerns in the district of Nuddea?—I can only speak as far as regards the Shikapore concern of Messrs. Robert Watson & Co., of which I have been the manager, and the custom there always was to pay the money direct to the ryot.

2098. Do you conceive it possible that, as stated to us here by ryots, monies should be due to them year after year, and that the whole was taken by the factory servants?—No; so far as I know the Kishnaghur ryots, they would never submit to such treatment.

2099. Do you believe that such a case could occur in any concern under your management?—No; I do not think such a thing is possible.

2100. Mr. Sale.] You never entrust natives with the powers of assistants?—No.

2101. President.] Have you any working factories, not under European or Eurasian assistants, but under natives?—No; all our factories are under European superintendence; assistants having charge of from one to four factories. In the Bengal Indigo Company's concerns, we employ 11 managers and assistants.

2102. Mr. Sale.] What are the duties of the naib?—The naib of the Mulnath concern exercises a general supervision over the zemindary and factory accounts, and attends to all cases in court, renewals of cases, purchase of putnis, and such like important business.

2103. Is it understood that the naib and other native officials have the power to levy fines from the ryots?—No; no native official in the Bengal Indigo Company's employ has any authority of that kind.

2104. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you know whether Amir Biswas, of Matkumra, who gave his evidence on the 15th instant, is an indigo ryot of the Baraset concern, or is his name on the books?—He is not an indigo ryot of the Baraset concern; his name is not on the factory books, nor has he ever taken advances from the factory. His nephews, who are quite distinct from him, have taken advances and sown their indigo this year as usual.

2105. Do you believe that his statement in his second reply, as to his having endured a great deal of oppression, as to indigo having been sown on his tobacco lands, and as to the amin having taken four annas, and the other amla eight annas, &c., is wholly untrue?—From the fact of his name not being on the factory books, I should say that his statement was without foundation.

72—1.

2106. President.] This man stated that he left off sowing two years ago; have you inspected any factory books more than two years old?—No, I have not.

2107. From whence do you derive your belief that this statement of Ameer Biswas is without foundation, is it from an actual inspection of the factory books?—No; it is from the information of the assistant in charge of the Simla division of the Baraset concern.

2108. Mr. Sale.] Might not a ryot sow indigo for factory without his name actually appearing on the books?—Yes; that is quite possible.

2109. The mohurrir and amin are generally educated men, are they not; can they be expected to be satisfied with salaries ranging from three to nine rupees, especially at the present prices of provisions and labour?—They are all able to read and write Bengali, and are quite content to work for a time on a low salary in the hopes of promotion. It is from these two classes of men all our gomashtas of factories are selected.

2110. President.] If one of the aforesaid officials lives near the factory, can go home every day, and has relatives or partners who can look after his jumma and cultivate his lands, is he not in a much better position than men in a corresponding rank in life who hold no such situation?—Undoubtedly, such men are much better off than others who are unemployed.

2111. Are they or are they not as willing to accept situations close to their own villages on five or six rupees a month as they would be to go to a distance for eight or twelve rupees?—A Bengali will always sacrifice a good deal to be within daily reach of his house. He would always prefer working on a lower salary near his home.

2112. Have you any knowledge, within the Bengal Indigo Company's concerns, of any practice of fining for cattle trespass, or fining for neglect of work, that is to say, of setting day labourers to weed the ryot's indigo, and charging him with their hire?—In cases of trespass we do not fine the ryots, but send the cattle to the nearest thannah, under the new Act, for the cattle trespass, and we never on any account fine ryots for not weeding the indigo. When a ryot is helpless and unable to attend to his crop, or to cut it, we assist him with labour or money, not as a fine, such labour or money being charged to his account.

2113. In what account or book would such charges appear?—Such charges would originally appear in the roha or cash book, and also in the khata bohi, or large red book, put in yesterday.

2114. In the books filed by you yesterday, are all the items seen charged against the ryot, on every account, with the returns placed to his credit?—[Mr. Larmour here explained the debit and credit accounts of three ryots taken promiscuously from the book by the President, viz., page 338, No. of account 906, Haniff Moonshee Mundal; page 260, No. of account 889, Hurri Chand Mundal; and page 380, No. of account 62, Sree Tajoo Mundul.]

2115. Mr. Fergusson.] At an early part of our proceedings, there were three men who represented themselves to be gantidars of Goaltolli, and who complained of your proceedings; do you wish to offer any explanation regarding their statement?—In the Katgarra concern belonging to the Bengal Indigo Company, there is a large putni named

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

20 June
1860.

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

20 June
1860.

named Dehi Holda. On this putni there was a yearly heavy loss, owing to the gantidars having ousted the khass ryots, that is, the ryots who paid direct to the zemindar, and having absorbed the lands belonging to their jummas. Attempts had been made by several managers of the Katgarra concern to induce the gantidars to disgorge the khass lands, of which they had taken possession, but it was difficult to do so, unless these lands could be measured and pointed out. In 1855 a man named Mohesh Chunder Mittra, a resident of Goaltolli, came forward and agreed to point out these khass lands. A short time after his undertaking to do so, he was murdered. On my taking the management of the Katgarra concern, I endeavoured to settle ryots in these villages, but on offering leases to ryots, they refused to accept of them, because the lands said to be contained in the leases were not forthcoming. I then decided on having a measurement of the villages. When I began the measurement the gantidars and their agents turned out and drove my people from the villages, threatening they would serve my agents as had been done to Mohesh Chunder Mittra. I applied to the police for protection to carry out my measurement; the gantidars came forward and were present during the measurement. When the measurement was completed, they were called upon to come forward, compare accounts, and restore to me all the khass lands which they had appropriated. Instead of doing so, they absconded from the village. As to the witness, Bheni Madub Mittra, who stated in his evidence that he was dispossessed of his ganti, and his wife and family were driven away from the village, neither he, nor his wife, nor family have been in Goaltolli village for the past 12 years. The same may be said of Muddun Mohun Bose; and Chunder Nath Sircar, another of the witnesses, absconded from the village, as I have stated, on the measurement being completed.

2116. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] In whose possession are those gantis at this moment, and who collects the rents?—They are in possession of the ryots who have always held the lands attached to them, and the rents are paid to me direct.

2117. President.] Then are we to understand that, practically, the ganti tenures are in abeyance, and that the gantidars are not collecting from the subordinate or dependent ryots?—The gantidars or agents on their part have not been present in the village since the measurement.

2118. After measurement did you demand enhanced rents from them?—No; immediately on the measurement papers being made out, they refused to mahabil, i. e., compare, and went away from the village.

2119. Did none of the three ever complain to you at Mulnath or elsewhere?—No, I have had no complaints from them, and have always been under the impression that they would have sooner or later come forward and made an arrangement that would have been fair both to them and me.

2120. Do you consider that their gantis were profitable to them, as held at low rates?—As regards Bheni Madub Mittra and Muddun Mohun Bose who resided in Calcutta, their gantis could have given them no profit whatever. Had they been residents on the spot, and managed their own gantis, they might have had a profit on the same. As regards Chunder Nath Sircar, I don't think that his ganti could have been worth much to him.

2121. Can you state the amount of your collections from the ryots of those three gantidars?—No, I cannot do so.

2122. Did you find on measurement that they had absorbed much of the khass lands?—Yes, to a considerable extent. Their policy had been to get rid of the khass ryots out of the village, and absorb their jummas within their own.

2123. How did you manage to identify and recover the khass lands?—After getting the protection of the police, head ryots of the villages came forward and pointed out the khass lands; this was in 1857.

2124. Have you sown indigo in that village?—Yes; we have always in Goaltolli, both nij and ryotti.

2125. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Have you since exchanged pottas and kabulyuts with the ryots of the gantidar?—Yes.

2126. Do you remember at what rate of rent you have settled with those ryots?—At the usual pergunnah rate, Rs. 2. 8. for baghat or garden, two rupees for basto or homestead, and eight annas matan or land in the plain.

2127. When you measured and took possession of those gantis were you then vested with the powers of an honorary magistrate in your division?—No; I was not invested with the powers of an honorary magistrate until six months after the measurement.

2128. When you commenced collecting rents, were you then vested with magisterial powers?—Yes.

2129. Mr. Fergusson.] Are you willing to settle with the gantidars on fair terms if they would agree to the measurement?—I should only be too happy to do so; and out of all the zemindaries I have measured and settled throughout the Bengal Indigo Company's concerns, it has only been with these three or four people that I have had any difference.

2130. And had the difference with them anything to do with indigo?—No connexion whatever with indigo.

2131. President.] Did you not ask them to use their influence with their dependent ryots to get them to sow indigo?—I never had any communication whatever with them on the subject.

2132. Were the lands measured from Katgarra or from Mulnath?—The establishment came from Katgarra, but I was cognizant of the measurement.

2133. Mr. Sale.] Were there any other gantidars or lakhirajdars (rent-free holders) who left the village of Goaltolli about the same time for similar reasons?—Yes; there was one other gantidar who left (Rajkisto Mittra) under the same circumstances.

2134. Mr. Fergusson.] Ameer Mullick of Khanpore was examined here on the 2d June; have you read his evidence as to your people having knocked down and plundered his house; and do you wish to give any explanation thereon?—Shortly after assuming the management of Katgarra concern, numerous petitions were presented to me at Mulnath from the ryots of Burra Khanpore village, complaining to the effect, that Ameer Mullick had collected a number of dacoits and settled them adjoining his own house. Two of these petitions appeared to me exceedingly truthful, stating that Ameer Mullick's gang had hitherto committed robberies at a distance, but of late that he had robbed the houses of the ryots at Burra Khanpore. These petitions were forwarded warded by me to the magistrate of Nuddea, with a request that he would institute an inquiry into what was stated in these petitions. He ordered the police to make a local investigation, and at the time they went to Burra Khanpore to carry out this investigation, a robbery had been committed at Kote Khanpore, in the zillah of Jessore. The police of Jessore tracing the property to Burra Khanpore, where 12 of the gang were seized, and four of them were convicted and sentenced to five years' imprisonment by the late Judge of Jessore, now president of the present Commission. From the time of the seizure of this gang, Ameer Mullick with his family absconded from Burra Khanpore, and did not return there again except on the sly. My people had nothing whatever to do with the destruction of his house; it being left uninhabited, very soon went to rack and ruin, and I believe there was not a ryot in the village, owing to what they had suffered from him and his gang, but was glad to have a pull at the straw and bamboos belonging to his house.

2135. President.] Was a report made by the magistrate to the Commissioner or other authority, to the effect that one of the sons of Ameer Mullick harboured these criminals, but that evidence was not forthcoming against him?—I remember the fact of Jalal Mullick, the eldest son of Ameer Mullick, being an outlaw, and the police being after him for several months after the robbery at Kote Chandpore.

2136. Mr. Sale.] What are we to understand by Jalal Mullick being an outlaw?—That the police of Jessore and Kishnaghur were in search of him all over the country.

2137. You have spoken of the ryot wishing to have a pull at the straw and bamboos of Ameer Mullick's house, are you not aware that his house was a pucka or brick one?—No; the house in which he resided, I have always understood to be a kutchra or thatched house, having two small pucka rooms on each side of the entrance to his compound.

2138. Was your opinion of Ameer Mullick formed from your personal acquaintance with him and his village, or merely from the petition to which you just now referred?—I had a personal knowledge of Ameer Mullick, and believed him to be exactly what the people represented him, i. e., under the cloak of professing Christianity, and directly getting the support of Mr. Sage and the factory servants, he did not hesitate to practise all kinds of oppression on the ryots and his own immediate relatives.

2139. Was the unfavourable opinion of Ameer Mullick formed before you got those petitions or after?—It was partly formed before I received the petitions.

2140. President.] Do you sow indigo in Ameer Mullick's village, either nij or ryotti?—I sow both nij and ryotti.

2141. Mr. Sale.] Supposing the people of Ameer Mullick's village knew that your opinion of him was unfavourable, and that you had differences with gantidars of neighbouring villages, do you not think it likely that they would get up statements of the kind you have referred to, about Ameer Mullick?—The people of Burra Khanpore could never have known, previous to their presenting their petitions, what my opinion of Ameer Mullick was, from the fact that it was only my private opinion, viz., that he, a man of 60 years of age and a Mussulman, and at that age professing to become a convert to Christianity, was, in my belief, an impostor. At the time these petitions were presented to me in 1856, I had never had the slightest difference with the gantidars. It was in 1857, and long after these petitions were presented, that the difficulty regarding the measurement occurred with me. The murder of Mohesh Chunder Mittra occurred in 1855, before I had anything to do with the concern.

2142. How far is Burra Khanpore from Goal-tolli?—It is the adjoining village, and lies quite close; I should say one mile.

2143. So that the intention of the factory to measure the village and resume the khass lands would be well known in both villages, would it not?—I should think that it would.

2144. President.] Has Ameer Mullick instituted a suit under Act X. of 1859 against you, and if so, with what result?—He has brought a suit against me for possession of three annas and a half share in Kanai Mullick's jumma of Burra Khanpore, and in the lower court has obtained a decree; the case is now under appeal before the Judge of Nuddea.

2145. Mr. Temple.] Have you given advances to the sub-ryots of this man Ameer Mullick, and if so, up to what date did these advances continue?—All his ryots hold advances and sow indigo at this present moment. But there are two other shareholders in the ganti tenure.

2146. Are those two shareholders consenting parties to these advances being given?—Yes; and they sow indigo themselves.

2147. Was Ameer Mullick a consenting party before he left home?—Yes, and he also sowed indigo up to the end of the season of 1855-56.

2148. Did he leave home in the year 1856, or subsequently?—He left home in 1856.

2149. Can you recollect the exact circumstances under which he left home?—Yes; I have already stated the circumstances fully, that he left home in consequence of the police being in search of him.

2150. Can you recollect the persons who presented the petition, charging him with harbouring robbers; and did you, at the time, satisfy yourself as to the truth of it?—I do not recollect the names of the parties presenting the petition. It was presented to me at Mulnath, when I was unable to hold any local inquiry, but I forwarded the petition on to the magistrate, for him to inquire into the truth of it.

2151. Did the petitioners present the petition to you in person?—I remember it was presented in cutcherry, but I have no distinct recollection who handed it to me.

2152. On the whole, did you believe, and do you believe still, that the petition presented was a bonâ fide one?—Yes, I believe that the petition was a bonâ fide one, and the result of the inquiry proved the truth of the petition.

2153. Mr. Sale.] Will you state in what way Ameer Mullick was a harbourer of dacoits?—By the fact of the dacoits who resided alongside his door and on his homestead being convicted and sentenced to five years' imprisonment.

2154. Mr. Temple.] Did his co-sharers ever complain to you of his harbouring thieves?—No; not of harbouring thieves, but of he and his gang oppressing them in different ways.

2155. President.] Can you state if the convicted men were his dependent ryots?—Yes, they were his immediate Koljana ryots.

2156. Mr. Sale.] If Ameer Mullick was guilty

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

20 June
1860.

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

20 June
1860.

of harbouring dacoits, would not his co-sharers have known of it?—No doubt everybody in the village knew about it.

2157. You are aware that Mr. Sage, who was at Khatgarra a short time before you took charge, was perfectly acquainted with the vernacular, and was in the habit of visiting the village of Burra Khanpore; do you not think that if Ameer Mullick had been the character you have described, Mr. Sage would have known it?—Mr. Sage was so elated at the idea of having converted Ameer Mullick to Christianity, that he could see nothing bad in his actions, and I think that it was quite possible that Ameer Mullick could have deceived him as to the character of the Koljana ryots.

2158. President.] Can you state whether the shareholders of this ganti each collected their share of the rents, or did one man manage for the whole?—I believe that one shareholder, Kanai Mullick, the eldest brother of Ameer, managed eight annas of the ganti, and the remaining eight annas were managed by another party, son-in-law of the widow to whom the eight annas belonged.

2159. You are aware that a dislike to the cultivation of indigo has been openly manifested in some districts this spring, and that in some concerns the ryots have entirely refused to sow, in spite of persuasion, and with the consequences of the summary law before them; will you give the Commission your opinion as to the causes of this dislike and refusal?—The present spirit of the ryots, especially in the district of Kishnaghur, has been caused in the first instance by a parwanna issued by the magistrate of Baraset telling the ryots of that concern they were at liberty to sow indigo or not, and if the planter had any claim upon them, he must have recourse to the civil court. The effect of such a parwanna could only have been construed into the meaning, that it was the magistrate's wish the ryots should not sow indigo; and the effect of this parwanna was, that the ryots did not sow indigo, nor did they pay their rents. This parwanna was again followed up by the magistrate of Baraset, sending out extracts of a letter from the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, addressed to Mr. Grote, Commissioner of the Nuddea division, which extracts were translated into Bengalli, and a parwanna sent round to the thannahs of the subdivision of Kalaroa, telling the ryots again that they were at liberty to sow indigo or not as it suited them. Those parwannas had the effect of rousing all the ryots throughout the Kishnaghur district, and inducing them to attempt to break their engagements. These parwannas were followed up by a letter from the Secretary of the Bengal Government to the Commissioner of the Nuddea division, finding fault with the conduct of the magistrate and deputy magistrate of Nuddea, in cases in which indigo planters were concerned, and which led the natives generally to believe that the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal was strongly prejudiced against indigo, and indigo planting. The ryots, labouring under the belief that they would receive the support of Government in not fulfilling their engagements, became very daring, and attacked and maltreated Europeans when riding about the country. A petition, dated 4th February last, was presented through the Commissioner of Nuddea by myself, begging for the immediate interference of Government to counteract the impression that the ryots had received by the reports that were being circulated, and the parwannas that had been issued. No notice whatever was taken of my representation, and when a notification was issued to disabuse the ryots' minds, it came too late, and had no good effect.

2160. Are we to understand that previous to the present year the ryots had not in any way evinced any dislike to the cultivation of indigo?—I have had no experience of their evincing any such dislike, except where they have been instigated by the officers of Government to resist the planter, as in the case of Moulavi Abdool Latif when in charge of the subdivision of Kalaroa, and of Mr. Eden when in charge of the district of Baraset.

2161. It has been stated in evidence to the Commission by several witnesses that the cultivation of indigo is not popular, and that it is not popular because it is not profitable to the ryots; do you coincide in their opinion, and do you think that that unpopularity had anything to do with the late disturbances?—That indigo may not be profitable or popular in some places I can readily believe, but I have not experienced any want of popularity on the part of my ryots; and a good proof of this is the fact that ryots throughout the district of Baraset, who last year refused to sow, have come forward, taken their advances, and sown indigo; and in a year like the present when ryots were in an excited state all over the Kishnaghur district, not a single ryot of the Mulnath concern has refused to sow his indigo. If it is not advantageous to the ryots to continue their connexion with indigo, they would not in a year like the present have done so.

2162. Mr. Temple.] Were the ryots you allude to free from all liabilities to the factory?—No, they were indebted to the factory.

2163. Would such indebtedness furnish any motive to continue the cultivation?—It has been shown that when ryots do not wish to sow indigo nothing can induce them to do so, even the passing of the summary Act having no effect.

2164. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Did the Mulnath and Baraset ryots sow before or after the passing of the Act?—The Mulnath ryots, as also those of Baraset, sowed after the passing of the Act, and most of the ryots' accounts in the latter concern were settled, and the advances made, after the passing of the Act.

2165. Did the ryots show any symptoms of refusing to sow before the passing of this summary law on the 24th of March?—No; not generally. In one part of the Mulnath concern, including the villages belonging to Sham Chunder Paul Choudari, there had been a bad disposition exhibited by the ryots, but in Baraset there was no difficulty of any kind.

2166. What made the Mulnath ryots so suddenly change their minds, so that they sowed quietly, whereas they had previously refused to sow?—The Mulnath ryots who had been refractory were again on good terms with the factory previous to the passing of the contract law, but rain not having fallen, they did not sow until the 6th of April, which was after the passing of the contract law. Their feeling towards the factory was changed in consequence of the magistrate of Kishnaghur coming to Bongong, and explaining to the ryots that it was not the wish of Government that they should break their engagement with the factory.

2167. After the passing of the summary law, did you present any petition to any of the authorities, rities, asking for assistance for the purpose of sowing?—No; all the ryots of Mulnath concern sowed willingly as soon as rain fell.

2168. Mr. Temple.] Do you think that the parwannas of the magistrates and the letters of the Government, to which you have alluded, could have produced the effect you have described, if the ryot had not been previously discontented or excited?—I certainly believe they could have produced that effect. I feel perfectly satisfied had I issued parwannas to the ryots of the Bengal Indigo Company's property to the effect that they could either pay the mahajans what they owed them or not, as it suited them, that the mahajans would have been ruined in the same way as the planter has been. If I say to the bearer who pulls the punkah, "You can either pull the punkah or not, as you please," he will draw but one meaning from such an order, viz., that he is not to pull the punkah.

2169. President.] But in order to the ruin of the mahajan, the rice crop must not be grown; are you of opinion that it would be possible by letters or paricannas of the kind indicated to stop the cultivation of rice?—I speak of it as if the rice crop were ready for delivery, that the payment was to be made to the mahajan. An order to the effect I have mentioned would instigate the ryot not to take his rice to the mahajan to whom he was indebted.

2170. Mr. Temple.] But the parwannas and letters alluded to, apparently related to sowing and to police interference, and were not issued at a season of the year when the ryots' engagements had been completed; how then do you consider that these documents incited the ryots to break their contracts?—In this country the spread of disaffection is slow, and it took some months for these parwannas and letters to take effect.

2171. For instance, supposing that a magistrate were to issue a parwanna in a given district, to say that the cultivation of betel leaf and tobacco was entirely optional with the ryot, and thereafter the Government were to issue a letter laying down the extent to which the police might interfere in respect to the sowing of these plants, and a further letter, finding fault with the conduct of the magistrate in certain disputes connected with the cultivation of the said plants; do you consider that the effect of such parwannas and letters would be to cause a considerable excitement among the cultivators of betel leaf and tobacco, and induce them to declare that they would not sow either plant any more?—I have no doubt such an order coming from Government would unsettle the cultivators of the mentioned crops, but that it would have the effect of preventing those crops from being grown, I do not think. The feeling and belief of the ryots was not that the Government was averse to the indigo crop itself, but that it was determined to crush all European interest in this country; the attack being on the European and not on the indigo plant.

Commission adjourned at Six p.m.

Friday, 22d June 1860.

PRESENT.

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C.S., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., C.S.; W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Reverend J. Sale; Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

ROBERT THOMAS LARMOUR, Esq., Examination continued.

2172. President.] Do you think that the reasons you have assigned sufficiently account for the refusal to sow in the cases instituted in the Khalbolia and Katgarra concerns?—With reference to the refusal of the ryots in the Khalbolia concern to complete their sowings in several villages, the zemindars in those villages have for years been at enmity with the concern. I would mention in particular Baboo Brindabun Chunder Sircar of Shibnibas. He, with others, taking advantage of the excited feeling of the ryots, prevented their completing their engagements, and came forward and paid up the damages decreed against the ryots for breach of contract. The Khalbolia concern is also in the immediate vicinity of the Mission Station at Kapasdanga, and in this particular place, the ryots were more excited and more obstinate than in other parts of the district, and consequently no amicable arrangement could be made with them. With regard to the small number of ryots, who at first refused to sow indigo in the Katgarra concern, they have been influenced by agents from Calcutta, and also, by the bad example of the ryots in the Loknathpore concern, which immediately adjoins the Katgarra concern, where the ryots refused to sow. Many of the ryots of Katgarra concern having had damages decreed against them, and having paid up the amount of the damages, came forward afterwards and had the amount of damages refunded to them, when they sowed their indigo as usual.

2173. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] What was the cause of enmity with Brindabun Sircar in the case of Khalbolia?—Principally, the Bengal Indigo Company having obtained a decree

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

20 June
1860.

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

22 June
1860.

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

22 June
1860.

in the Suddar Dewany for the possession of the village of Shibnibas; this decree was obtained in 1858-59.

2174. Mr. Temple.] Did he overtly incite the ryots of the Khalbolia concern to resist, or did he do so secretly, and, if secretly, how did his instigation come to your knowledge?—His instigation of the ryots was done secretly. It was generally known that great numbers of ryots, during the excitement as to indigo, were collected at his place, and representation at the time was made to the authorities, by the manager, Mr. Clarke, of the Khalbolia concern, from whom my information was derived.

2175. Will you please state your precise reason for believing that emissaries from Calcutta incited the Katgarra ryots to resistance?—I believe so, from the fact of having been told by ryots of the Katgarra concern, that a man, new to that part of the country, had been sent up from Calcutta, and resided in the village of Bullubpore, thannah Bagda, and on my going to the Katgarra concern, to inquire into the difficulties with the ryots, the man disappeared from the village. I did not see him myself.

2176. Did the ryots, who informed you as above, actually see and converse with this man, and can you give the names of these ryots?—The man in particular who told me of this man, was the gomashita of the family of Sircars, who reside in the Bullubpore village, and in whose house the agent from Calcutta had been residing. I don't at this moment recollect the names of the ryots, nor whether they had themselves seen the man, but I believe the mention of him was general among them.

2177. Can you ascertain, for the information of the Commission, the names of the ryots who were personally cognizant of this man?—Yes; I shall be able to do so.

2178. What was the date when this man was last heard of at Bullubpore, and did you, at the time, take any steps to trace him beyond that place?—The first week in April I did not endeavour to trace him, such emissaries being reported as general all over the district.

2179. How long was this man supposed to have been in Bullubpore or its neighbourhood?—About three months.

2180. When did you first hear of his being there?—I did not hear of his having been there till after he had gone, about the 12th of April, when I went to Katgarra to inquire into the difficulties.

2181. Had you no manager at Katgarra who could have discovered the presence of this man there?—At that part of Katgarra until the end of March or beginning of April there was no reason to suspect that the ryots would refuse to sow their indigo. Every thing was going on quietly, and consequently there was nothing to excite the suspicions of the local manager, so as to cause an inquiry.

2182. As such emissaries were reported to be general throughout the district, can you specify any of them, besides the above-mentioned man?—No, I cannot.

2183. Mr. Sale.] What did you understand was the line of operation adopted by this emissary?—That he told the ryots no more indigo was to be sown, and that they would have the support of Government in not sowing their indigo.

2184. Amongst other reasons for the refusal of the Khalbolia ryots to sow, you have stated the proximity of the Kapasdanga Mission Station, have you any reason to believe that any unfavourable influence has emanated from that mission station?—Kapsadanga Mission Station is distant from Khalbolia about six miles. There was a general feeling throughout the district that Mr. Schurr, of Kapsadanga, as also other missionaries, were countenancing, by their advice, the refractoriness of the ryots.

2185. Are you aware that the missionaries from Kishnaghur generally, and Mr. Schurr most distinctly, have denied before this Commission, that they ever gave such advice; on the contrary, they advised the ryots to sow for the season?—Yes, I am aware they made those statements.

2186. Mr. Temple.] Will you please specify as to how your knowledge is derived as to the prevalence of the above-mentioned reports regarding the advice given by the missionaries; for instance, did the ryots tell you that they had received this advice, or did you hear it from the other parties besides the ryots?—I did not hear from any ryot that he received such advice directly from the missionaries, but I heard, from the ryots who had been into the Station of Kishnaghur, that the missionaries had been giving them advice. I also heard it from my own servants.

2187. Could you name or ascertain the name of any of those ryots?—I remember the name of one of them, Hurmut Mandul, of Bhadurpore village, thannah Bagda.

2188. President.] Are we to conclude from your previous answers that it is your opinion that if there be no more parwannahs, or orders from Government, if the missionaries hold their tongues, and if no emissaries shall be seen or heard of in the districts, matters will settle down, and that indigo will be cultivated as before, in Kishnaghur especially, without any change in the system?—I am of opinion that if Government does not again act the part of partizan to the ryot, and will not in anyway interfere between capital and labour, further than to give all just and right support to parties investing capital in the country where nothing can be done without an advance; and if the missionaries confine themselves entirely to their religious duties, instead of making virulent attacks on the planters, and meddling in the worldly affairs of other people, and if emissaries are prevented from instigating the ryots to evil, there is no question but the ryots of the Bengal Indigo Company's concerns will cultivate indigo and act fairly towards the factory, without any change of material consequence in the present system.

2189. The present sowing law is for six months only; do you think that when it ceases to operate, the ryots will take advances and sow as before?—If before the expiring of the present contract law the ryots are satisfied that it is the intention of Government not to encourage them in acting dishonestly, and in avoiding engagements into which they have entered of their own free will, I have no doubt the ryots will take their advance and sow as heretofore.

2190. Mr. Temple.] Are you equally sure that they would be willing to enter into new engagements, supposing them to be willing to fulfil the old ones?—Yes, I have no reason to doubt to the contrary.

2191. Is your belief founded on the conviction that that the cultivation of indigo is profitable to them?—Yes, it is founded on the belief and knowledge that the lands on which indigo are grown would not give an equal return if sown by any other crop.

2192. On the whole, taking an average of seasons and of lands, what do you consider the average of return would be per beegah?—From one to two rupees, without seed.

2193. Do you consider then that the majority of ryots would make that profit on an average season?—Yes; I think so.

2194. In the Mulnath factory it appeared from the books, that out of 1,378 ryots, 237 cleared their advances and received excess, while 1,141 were still in debt to the factory; moreover, it was stated that the Mulnath factory was more favourable than the average, i.e., in other factories there were still fewer ryots who received excess, and still more ryots who were in debt. If then the majority are in debt, how has the cultivation of indigo proved itself directly profitable to them?—As I have previously stated, for the past eight years, the indigo seasons in Kishnaghur have been very disastrous, and ryots consequently have been getting into balance. The return of an average year is profitable to them, but not sufficiently so as to clear off the balance which has been accumulating during the previous bad seasons.

2195. President.] Besides these bad seasons, are you aware that during the last five years there has been a considerable rise in the price of labour, and in the price of all country produce, and has the Bengal Indigo Company in consequence made any concessions to the ryots?—Yes; notwithstanding the ryots falling into balances during these seasons, and being unable to clear off their debts with their crop of indigo, the Bengal Indigo Company has made liberal advances to the ryots although heavily in debt. The custom had been for ryots to first clear off their debt before getting further advances, but a ryot, no matter the amount of his debt, now gets a fresh advance.

2196. Mr. Sale.] Does your statement that indigo yields a better return than other crops refer to tobacco lands?—Yes; to the tobacco lands, and to the high lands immediately around the villages, and on which indigo is generally sown.

2197. A statement was made by a ryot who appeared before this Commission, that the tobacco crop is best the second year, that is, in order to get a good crop it must be grown one year, the land must be allowed to remain fallow during the spring and summer, and then be sown with tobacco; is this according to your experience?—No; the tobacco crop is sown on land every alternate year. It is not necessary to allow the land to remain entirely fallow. Indigo not being an exhausting crop, but quite the contrary, the taking a crop of indigo off the tobacco land does not injure it. It is the custom everywhere to manure tobacco land.

2198. Mr. Cockburn in his evidence stated, that the ryot generally pays three rupees rent a beegah for tobacco land; in your evidence you state that you are paid only eight annas per beegah, can you explain this apparent discrepancy?—It is quite possible that three rupees per beegah may be paid in some particular place where a superior quality of tobacco is produced, and where land for such tobacco is exceedingly scarce, such a rate would be paid by a ryot cultivating pykash; eight annas per beegah is the rate paid by ryots holding jummas.

72—I.

2199. Mr. Temple.] In a previous answer you stated, as your opinion, that the authorities should give just and right support to men investing capital in the country. Do you on the other hand consider that corresponding support is due to the ryots of the country?—The peculiar circumstances attending the settling of an European in this country with the object of carrying on trade in the Mofussil, requires a protection which does not at present exist. The European is one individual amongst hundreds of thousands. I settled down at Mulnath, a single individual, surrounded by 2,00,000 of natives, and think that Government, in legislating for the protection of the capital I may invest, should take this fact into consideration. I think also that every fair and just support should also be given to ryots.

2200. Do you consider then that more support should be given to an European capitalist than to a native capitalist, supposing the circumstances in both cases were the same; for instance, if the Mulnath concern were purchased by a native capitalist, and Patkabari and Khalbolia concerns remained in hands of an European, should the European planter receive a greater support than the native planter or not, in your opinion?—No; I think that all capital invested in the Mofussil should have equal support.

2201. Then are we to conclude that the support you have alluded to above should be accorded to Mofussil capitalists in general of whatsoever race, or to European capitalists in particular?—To Mofussil capitalists in general.

2202. President.] Then do you think it advisable to perpetuate the present contract law?—It has always been a great drawback and bar to the investment of capital in the Mofussil, the want of some protection, like the present contract law, to secure advances made; and unless some such law as the present contract law is made perpetual, capital must be withheld from being advanced in the Mofussil.

2203. Then would you confine this law to capital embarked in indigo speculation, or would you extend it to advances made for hides, jute, safflower, silk, or any other country produce?—I would extend it to all trade throughout the Mofussil; and were some such security given for the recovery of advances, I feel perfectly confident that millions sterling would be invested in the country, which is now held back by a feeling of total want of security. Indigo being the most valuable product of Bengal, I consider the contract law peculiarly adapted to that product.

2204. Mr. Temple.] In the case of indigo, is there no other circumstance besides its value that renders such a law peculiarly necessary for it?—Yes; there is the circumstance of the encouragement it would give to the settling of Europeans throughout the country, who are at present few and far between.

2205. Mr. Fergusson.] Would not such a law, if carried out by proper courts, tend to discourage the system of advances, by making people more careful in taking them?—I have no doubt that after a time such might be the case, but the system of advances is so grounded in the natives of this country, that any immediate change would be impossible; so far is the system carried, that chickens are advanced far before they are hatched.

2206. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] You have

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

22 June
1860.

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

22 June
1860.

have stated that indigo is more valuable than any other product. Is not silk more valuable, as it sells from 300 to 600 rupees a maund?—Yes; per maund silk is more valuable than indigo; but the total product of silk, compared to that of indigo, is a mere trifle.

2207. Mr. Fergusson.] In the papers that have been published by the Bengal Government respecting Mr. Herschel's proceedings, it is stated that in one of the parwannas the word "not" was omitted, and then Mr. Herschel adds, "the fault I found lay with the peshkar of my own office, who has been dismissed from Government employ in consequence;" do you think that such an alteration would have been made by the peshkar unless under the influence of emissaries and corrupt means?—In the instance alluded to, I believe from the well known and exceedingly high character of the peshkar of the Kishnaghur Court, that the mistake was altogether accidental, and the only point in which he was to blame was his neglect to read all the parwannas carefully. I understand the peshkar has only been suspended for three months on appeal to the Commissioner.

2208. When you were honorary magistrate, were any of your orders appealed against or upset by the magistrate?—No appeals were made from my decisions; no orders of mine were upset.

2209. Have you been instrumental in dispersing bands of dacoits besides those of Ameer Mullick's?—Yes; when in charge of the Shikarpore concern in 1850-51, I was instrumental in ridding the country of a gang of dacoits, who had long committed depredations in that quarter.

2210. Has not considerable jealousy been evinced by the British Indian Association, and other native gentlemen, at the appointment of yourself and other Englishmen as honorary magistrates?—Yes; I believe that native gentlemen generally were displeased at the honour conferred on myself and other planters (without our seeking), but they must have received intense gratification at the summary and shabby manner in which those powers were recalled.

2211. President.] Did you not yourself rather object, on principle, to Europeans, not officials, being invested with these powers?—Yes; I did object, and only came forward to accept those powers at the urgent request of Government, in the hour of their agony.

2212. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you believe that the jealousy above referred to has influenced the British Indian Association in their agitating against indigo planting, and how far?—I have no doubt it has done so; I believe that the withdrawal of honorary magisterial powers lowered our entire body in the eyes of the natives.

2213. Are Hindoos or Mussulmans among the ryots the most active in their opposition to the planter?—I think the greatest opposition has emanated from the Hindoos; generally, I believe, the whole thing is worked by the Hindoos.

2214. What is the feeling of the ryots in Kishnaghur towards the missionaries as far as you have been able to ascertain?—So far as I have opportunities of judging the feeling of the ryots towards the missionaries themselves is not over favourable to them.

2215. It has been stated that great excitement exists in Kishnaghur, in consequence of a charge of abduction against a planter; have you any knowledge of such being the case?—I can only answer for one-half the district, where the case alluded to was not heard of until the evidence of

Mr. Bomwetsch was published in the Calcutta papers; no excitement of any kind existed to my knowledge.

2216. Have you heard of such charges being made against Europeans, unconnected with indigo planting?—Yes; in the month of December last, Messrs. Hill and Johnson, members of the London Missionary Society, were passing up the River Issamutti in boats, on a preaching tour, and when moored at the village of Banniburria, the villagers assembled in great numbers, threatened to attack and sink their boats, stating that a woman had been forcibly carried away from the village, and taken on board their boats. Messrs. Hill and Johnson appeased the ryots by paying them 50 rupees; all this I learnt from these gentlemen themselves.

2217. Did you publish that story in the papers, and would you think it right to do so?—I would have scorned to have believed, or given circulation to, such an accusation against men of such high respectability and calling.

2218. I believe that you have been obliged to take putnis and ijaras occasionally upon heavy terms, and to a great extent; can you give any instances of the amount which such would add to the cost of cultivation?—The Bengal Indigo Company, in the purchase of zemindaries and putnis, have expended an amount of 5½ lacs of rupees. We have little or no profit from these properties, and the increase and cost of indigo per beegah annually, would be nearly one rupee per beegah from the interest on that purchase money.

2219. President.] Are all the concerns and factories the property of the Company, bought with the Company's capital, i. e. are, or are not, these concerns working on borrowed capital?—The concerns have been all purchased with the Company's capital, and there is no debt on the concerns.

2220. Mr. Fergusson.] In the case of the Katgarra concern, I believe you paid 80,000 rupees price for the talook, and agreed to pay a rent of 5,000 rupees per annum beyond what could be then collected; was not the interest on that sum, and the annual loss, an addition to the cost of indigo, or a payment to the zemindar out of your profits to that extent?—Yes.

2221. Did not that payment to the zemindar diminish, by so much, your ability to make further payments to the ryots for their cultivation?—Most certainly. Had we not to make large payments to zemindars for purchases of putnis and renewal of ijaras, we could afford to be more lavish in our expenditure on the cultivation of the concerns.

2222. What do you consider the market value of the landed property held by the Bengal Indigo Company's concerns?—The zemindary and putnis belonging to the Bengal Indigo Company's concerns were principally purchased many years ago, when the value of zemindaries and putnis was comparatively low. The present properties would realise, at the present market rate, 10 lacs of rupees.

2223. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Were you to part with your zemindaries, putnis, and other leases, do you not think that you would make a very handsome profit, according to the value given?—Yes, there would be a profit on the original purchase money. But there being no return from these zemindaries and putnis in the shape of profits or collections, the amount invested is dead block.

2224. Mr. Temple.] Seeing that no return is at at present received, and that these tenures might be sold at so great an advantage, what object has the company in retaining them?—Without these tenures, in the present state of the Mofussil, we could not expect to carry on our indigo business without great trouble, opposition, and law expenses.

2225. Could you not rely on the ryots cultivating to their own interest?—We require zemindary power to conduct our business in the Mofussil.

2226. Mr. Fergusson.] If the present crusade against indigo is successful, what effect will it have on the ryots in your ilaka?—If the capital yearly expended in the cultivation of indigo were withdrawn, and the Europeans obliged to leave the Mofussil, the consequences to the ryots would, in my opinion, be most disastrous.

2227. Would you not adopt every legal means in your power to enhance rents, and enforce payment of balances?—Yes, I would certainly do so.

2228. President.] Will you state whether any schools or dispensaries are maintained by the Bengal Indigo Company, or whether any sums have been contributed by them for the making of roads, or in aid of the ferry funds?—At Mulnath, Khalbolia, and Katgarra, we have village schools, one at each place; and at Mulnath there is a hospital and dispensary, superintended by a graduate of the Medical College of the Bengali class, and on which 1,000 rupees yearly is expended by the Bengal Indigo Company; some trifling amounts have been subscribed by the Bengal Indigo Company for making roads.

2229. Are you in the habit of affording any advantages to ryots, besides these schools and dispensaries?—We annually make considerable loans to ryots who may be in distress, from their houses being burnt down, and their cattle having died, without charging them any interest from these loans.

2230. The following changes in the system of indigo planting have been variously suggested to the Commission; will you favour us with your opinion on those amendments. 1st. That the planter should bargain with the ryots for any piece of land he might fancy, just when the sowings commence, as in question and answer No. 513. 2d. That the planter should take upon himself to pay a portion of the rents of lands sown with indigo. 3d. That bundles should be purchased at a lower rate, varying from four to one bundle for the rupee. 4th. That the factory should always pay for the carting. 5th. That the plant should be weighed, not measured. 6th.

That seed grown from stumps should be purchased by the factory at the market rate. 7th. That the factory should charge the ryot nothing for seed. 8th. That the ryot should derive some advantage from the out-turn of the manufactured indigo. 9th. That the planter should give a certain price for the crop per beegah; 8 or 10 rupees for a full crop, 4, 5, or 6 rupees for a middling, and a smaller sum even if, owing to unfavourable seasons, there should be little or no crop at all?—Answer to No. 1: It would be impossible to make bargains or arrangements for any quantity of lands at that season, and, under these circumstances, I do not think this suggestion is practicable, because it is physically impossible from the scattered cultivation available for indigo. Answer to No. 2: I don't think this proposition a good one, it would complicate accounts with the ryots. Answer to No. 3: I think that as to bundles, no definite system could be introduced, because no two men agree as to the size of the bundles. If the vats are measured, and to the one thousand cubic feet, sixty bundles are allowed, I think it would be a good and fair arrangement, and I have found it to answer well. Answer to No. 4: That I think is a fair proposition. Answer to No. 5: I am not prepared to offer an opinion. Answer to No. 6: that I think a fair proposition. Answer to No. 7: At the present price of seed, I don't think so great a concession could be made. Answer to No. 8: Whether the produce from the indigo plant is high or low, the price paid to the ryot for the plant remains the same; I should not recommend any such arrangement as that in the question proposed. Answer to No. 9: Some such arrangement might be practicable in concerns which have all October sowings; but in the high concerns of Kishnaghur, when frequently the sowings are not completed until the month of June, no such arrangement could be carried out. It would be a physical impossibility to go round a ryolti cultivation in that season and value each man's (keta) or lot.

2231. Mr. Fergusson.] After the disastrous inundation in 1856, did not the planters in Kishnaghur make large loans, without interest, to distressed ryots; and were they not particularly active in carrying out the relief afforded by Government?—Yes.

2232. Do you invariably release the lands claimed by poor Brahmins as rent-free, on presentation simply of a copy of the Collector's taidat?—Yes; in the zemindary of Mulnath concern alone, I have released upwards of 17,000 beegahs.

[After explanation, the following Witness was here Examined]:

INDRA NARAYAN RAI, Kyburto, Inhabitant of Borobari village, Thannah Bagda, Zillah Nuddea, Factory Katgarra, called in; and Examined on oath.

2233. President.] WHAT complaint have you to make?—On the 7th of Baisakh last, 20 or 25 lattials, with one Mr. Cockshott, and Mr. Larmour (now present), came to my residence at 12 o'clock at night. I was in the bungalow; my brother was in the uthchala house, or that which has a verandah on all the four sides. They could not find me; but they laid hold of my brother. The joint magistrate was there also, with 10 or 12 sepoys. The joint magistrate and sepoys remained outside; but these two Sahibs went inside. They took away Dinonath Rai, my brother, who is in prison. I presented a petition to the Commissioner, but no decision has been come to. Before that, I was accused of instigating the ryots; and a case was brought against me at Bon-gong, but I got off. Since then, there has been another complaint against me, of beating a peon and taking away some indigo seed. I don't know what has been done in it. Besides this, on the 28th or 29th of Jyeshtha last, the people of Katgarra broke up my rice and sowed indigo. I have come here on purpose to mention it; I now understand that no order can issue from this place. The two

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

22 June
1860.

I. N. Rai.

I. N. Rai. gentlemen went to my house; they plundered it, and I have made a general complaint of plunder, without specifying the articles plundered. I intend to specify them in my deposition. All my family are afraid to go home; they are living with their relatives. I was once an amin in the factory.

Mr. LARMOUR's Examination continued.

R. T. Larmour,
Esq.

2234. President.] You have heard what the witness, Indra Narayan Rai, has stated; do you wish to offer any explanation?—Indra Narayan Rai, with his brother, Dinonath Rai, are, with several others, defendants in cases of violent assault and theft of seed. Dinonath Rai was seized, and, with other defendants, was sentenced to nine months imprisonment by the joint magistrate of Bongong. Indra Narayan Rai is eluding the pursuit of justice, he having escaped when the other defendants were seized by the joint magistrate. I never saw the man's house in my life, nor did I accompany the joint magistrate to the village of Borobari when he went to seize the defendants. Mr. Cockshott accompanied the joint magistrate.

2235. Mr. Temple.] Has this man been a factory amin, and have you had any dispute with him about indigo?—Yes, this man was formerly an amin of Katgarra factory; I have had no disputes with him about indigo. He has always sown indigo until this season.

2236. Can you assure the Commission that the trouble and cases, to which this man has alluded, are in no way connected with the cultivation of indigo, and have no way arisen from his refusal to continue that cultivation?—His present difficulties have arisen from his intimidating other people from sowing indigo.

2237. Considering that he was formerly a factory amin, and therefore cultivated indigo, can you assign any reason for his conduct during the present season?—No.

2238. Are you morally convinced of his being guilty of severe assault and intimidation, and theft of indigo seed, and that there has been no exaggeration against him on the part of the factory servants?—Yes, I am morally convinced.

2239. President.] Do you think that any serious difficulty or impediment arises to the cultivation of indigo, either through the police, through the courts, or through the general administration of the law?—Yes, I think that the corruption of the police is a great impediment. The courts are also a great impediment from the great delay in getting a final decree; and the want of sufficient numbers of courts is also a drawback.

2240. Mr. Temple.] On the whole, do you consider you have anything in particular to complain, either with respect to the police, the magistracy, the courts, or the law generally?—Nothing further than the uncertainty and delay in everything connected with the courts.

2241. President.] Will you state in what particular way impediments to indigo cultivation are thrown by the corruption of the police; is it that they favour either the zemindar, or the ryot, or that they are not to be depended on in carrying out the orders of the magistrate?—Yes, I think that they generally favour the zemindar and ryot against the planter, and most of them are not to be depended upon.

2242. Mr. Temple.] In your own estates, have the police favoured the ryots, as against you their landlord?—In our own estates, we never have any cause for the interference of the police.

2243. Will you mention any instances on which you consider the police favoured either a zemindar or ryot in any estate, as against the factory?—I do not at this moment recollect any instances.

2244. Have the police ever attempted to extort, or extorted money from you directly or indirectly, or from your European assistants?—Yes, in an instance, when my indigo was being eaten down, I got an order from the magistrate of Kishnaghur (in 1854) on the darogah of thannah Sarsa, to the effect, that he was immediately to go to the villages, and prevent further destruction. He refused to carry out this immediately, unless he received 50 rupees. I do not, at this moment, recall any other instances.

2245. Have any such extortions been practised upon your factory servants, to your knowledge?—I don't remember.

2246. Or, upon your ryots?—I can't remember any instances.

2247. During your experience, have you met with opposition on the part of the magistrates, covenanted or uncovenanted; or, do you consider that they have been biassed against you (I mean in your capacity of manager of first-class concerns)?—In two instances, that of Moulavie Abdool Lutf, deputy magistrate of Kullaroo, and of Mr. Eden, of Baraset. I consider I have received persecution at their hands. I have no other officials to complain of.

2248. Have you ever, in time of difficulty, received support and counsel from magistrates, covenanted or uncovenanted?—Yes, invariably; except in the two instances above-mentioned.

2249. Then with the above exceptions you have generally received a fair degree of support from the magistracy?—Except in the late differences, when I received opposition from the deputy magistrate Hem Chunder Kur.

2250. With reference to the courts, have you had any experience of the recent code of civil procedure which was intended to simplify, abbreviate, and expedite proceedings?—I have had but little experience, but from what I have seen the decisions in cases have been very considerably expedited.

2251. Do you think that a still more expeditious, cheap, and easy procedure could be devised?—I think that that is quite practicable.

2252. President.] Do you think that Small Cause Courts, which have little or no record, could be established in the Mofussil, considering the isolation of courts in the interior, and the want of public opinion?—With very great advantage, if the present rising class of covenanted officers were appointed to them.

2253. Then you do not contemplate giving such powers to moonsiffs or sudder ameen?—No; where there is no superior check or appeal, I would not recommend such powers to be given to those officers.

2254. Mr. Temple.] Supposing Small Cause Courts presided over by officers such as you have described, were established in your neighbourhood, would you sue your ryots for breach of contract or for recovery of outstanding balances?—

If

If I ever had occasion to do so I would not hesitate to complain in such courts.

2255. In the present state of relation between planters and ryots, would you have any fear that such proceedings would deter ryots from continuing to take advances?—No, I don't think so.

2256. Does the difficulty you have described in getting decrees executed or the amount realised from the defendant proceed from any defect in or mal-administration of the law, or from the real poverty of the ryot, or from the real difficulty in getting at his effects?—It proceeds in a great measure from the dilatoriness in getting a decree executed, as well as from the difficulty of finding the ryot's property after the decree has been given.

Commission adjourned at 6 p.m.

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

22 June
1860.

Saturday, 23d June 1860.

PRESENT.

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., c.s., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., c.s.; W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Reverend J. Sale; Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

ROBERT THOMAS LARMOUR, Esq.'s examination continued.

2257. President.] Do you think than in ilaka cultivation your legitimate influence as zemindar might be sufficient to induce the ryots to cultivate a small portion of indigo for you without having recourse to this system of contracts and advances?—It has hitherto been quite sufficient, for with most of our ilaka ryots we have not considered it necessary to take sattas from them, but it would be necessary to make advances.

2258. Are we then to understand that the system whereby a ryot puts his name to a blank stamped paper applies principally or exclusively to be-ilaka ryots?—Principally to be-ilaka ryots.

2259. Do not native indigo planters use their influence, legitimate or illegitimate, as zemindars, to make their ryots cultivate, and without giving them advances?—Yes.

2260. Mr. Sale.] Will you be good enough to state from whom you heard those circumstances which you mentioned yesterday, with reference to Messrs. Hill and Johnson?—From Messrs. Hill and Johnson.

2261. Did you learn from them, or did you gather, that the missionaries and catechists had their wives and families with them?—I was aware that the wives and families of the above gentlemen were with them at the time; I cannot speak as to the wives and families of the catechists.

2262. Do you remember that Mr. Hill told you that he was aroused at night by a noise in the catechist's boat, and that on getting up he found the people on the bank, who charged the Mussulman boatmen with having enticed a woman into that boat; and on Mr. Hill's finding that the woman was actually on board that boat, and being under the impression that the boatmen had enticed her, he acceded to the demand of the people for money, in order that the woman might get back her caste?—The circumstances, so far as I remember, were, that a body of the ryots came down to the bank of the river, threatening to attack the boats, stating that a woman had been carried away from the village; but I do not remember the fact of the woman having been found on board that boat; my impression was, that the whole affair was a got-up story by the ryots. That was the impression that remained on my mind.

2263. Did Mr. Hill explain exactly what he had done in the matter, and did you not express your approval of what he had done?—Yes; I remember having agreed with him, that as there was no magistrate or police in the vicinity, the wisest thing that could be done was to appease the ryots.

2264. Have you any reason to believe that Mr. Bomwetsch, or any of the missionaries, have published the case of abduction mentioned by Mr. Bomwetsch, in any paper or periodical, or in any other way, except in reply to a question by the President of this Commission?—No, I am not aware of Mr. Bomwetsch having published the reported abduction case.

2265. President.] How has the working of Act X. of 1859 affected you as a planter or zemindar?—It has as yet made no difference to me either as planter or zemindar; but it will, no doubt, eventually destroy my influence over the ryots. The zemindar, heretofore, has possessed a certain degree of feudal right, in which he has had the support of the Government; that right will, I think, be completely set aside; for instance, if a dacoity occurs within my zemindary I am bound to report the fact to the authorities; Government still binds me to this; but at the same time the passing of Act X. destroys my authority and influence with the ryots.

2266. Do you object to that part of Act X. which withdraws from zemindars the power heretofore enjoyed of summoning their ryots for the adjustment of their rents?—Most decidedly; ryots never come forward to pay their rents; they must always be summoned to do so; and depriving the zemindar of this power is, I consider, both unfair and unnecessary.

2267. Mr. Fergusson.] Are you not bound by law to provide forage, food, and means of transport for troops or officials passing through your zemindary; and might you not be liable to punish

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

23 June
1860.

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.
—
23 June
1860.

ment under that Act if you summoned the ryots to aid you to carry it out?—Yes; and I have lately had to supply forage to the troops, during the late disturbances, stationed throughout my part of the district.

2268. President.] But do you object to those portions of the law which consolidate ryotti tenures throughout Bengal, and give security to the ryot; viz., Sections VIII., XIII., and XVI.?—Yes, I object to those clauses; I think that while the value of land is steadily on the increase, and will be (if European capital can be introduced into the Mofussil) still further enhanced, the zemindar should receive his share of that improvement, to which, in a great extent no doubt, he contributes.

2269. But when the zemindar has obtained, or is desirous of obtaining, the ryotti tenure, will not the Act be equally or more favourable to him, considering his superior knowledge, activity, and influence?—The instances are very rare in which a zemindar buys up the jumma of a ryot, and, comparatively, this law would be to him of no advantage.

2270. Mr. Fergusson.] You have been local manager of large concerns in, I believe, six districts, and have settled many zemindaries; have you or your servants ever been engaged in any affrays, or have any of them ever been punished by any of the courts?—No; I have never been engaged in any affrays, nor have my servants ever been punished by any of the courts.

2271. President.] Have the operations of the survey tended to adjust disputes and give security to the zemindar?—To an immense extent; in fact, disputes now, owing to this survey, are, in nine instances out of ten, amicably arranged.

2272. Have you any objection to the multiplication of sub-divisions, as tending to unsettle the relations between planter and zemindar?—Certainly not, provided those sub-divisions are placed under the charge of men in the covenanted Civil Service.

2273. Mr. Sale.] Is not Mr. Eden in the covenanted service?—Yes; but I am happy to say that he is an exception to the distinguished members of that body.

2274. Mr. Temple.] Have you observed recently any change in the ryots of the Baraset district with reference to indigo planting?—Yes; during the time of Mr. Eden's incumbency the ryots refused to sow their indigo or pay their rents; but since Mr. Cockerell has taken charge of the district, the ryots have sown their indigo to a considerable extent this season.

2275. At page 118 of the Government of Bengal's Selections it is stated as follows: "Instances are not by any means wanting to prove that an indigo factory and a station cannot exist on the same spot." Do you concur in that opinion or not?—Quite the contrary, as I have had charge of and worked a factory in the centre of Rampore Beaulah station. Bongong is six miles from the Mulnath factory, but immediately opposite to the factory of Joypore.

2276. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you been in the habit of resorting to the civil courts for the realisation of your claims upon ryots and others; and have you found delays and difficulties in prosecuting suits, without payments to the amla of the court as expedition money or otherwise?—Since the passing of Act VIII. a precise day has been fixed for the decision of cases; this obviates any necessity for giving what is termed "expedition money." I have not had many cases in the civil courts.

2277. Mr. Temple.] Do you, then, consider that this arrangement tends to prevent the amla from taking expedition money?—Certainly; the judges of the court fixing the day of trial.

2278. Mr. Sale.] Have you found that any recent simplification of the law or procedure of the courts has induced the ryots to complain more frequently against the factory?—Yes; I believe such has been the fact.

2279. So far as your knowledge extends, do you believe that the ryots understand that they are at liberty to complain against the factory servants; and that they can do so without the danger of incurring the displeasure of any of the factory officials?—The ryots are, I believe, perfectly aware that they are at liberty to complain against the factory servants; but being a most shrewd and intelligent race, they know that no man can be pleased at having a complaint brought against him.

2280. Then, in practice, would it not generally happen that they would carry their complaints against each other, or against the factory servants, to the factory cutcherry?—Undoubtedly; by seeking redress at the factory cutcherry they get justice without cost or charge of any kind.

2281. Mr. Temple.] Are you ever obliged to hire up-countrymen, or other men of that class, for special service, or for the protection of your rights and property?—I never employ up-countrymen for any purpose whatever; I employ men as burkundazes, to take charge of and protect property in the factory; not for any other service.

2282. Then you don't keep any of the men called lattials, or clubmen?—No; these men generally do not exist in Kishnaghur, though they do in Jessore.

2283. Do you consider that any improvement of the machinery in the manufacture of indigo, or any economy of time or labour, can be practically effected; and, within your experience, has there been much economy of expenditure introduced in the factory expenditure?—I think that, in the manufacture of indigo, machinery might very advantageously be introduced; I am not aware of its having been done up to this time. There has been no economy as to labour introduced. The great drawback to the employing of machinery is, that it is only necessary for two months of the twelve. In the general outlay of the concerns economy has been exercised to a great extent since 1848; and my opinion is, that a somewhat more liberal expenditure would be advantageous.

2284. Mr. Sale.] I think you stated that you had been successful in your measurements, and that the result was an increase of some 18,000 rupees. To what proportion of zemindaree did your statements refer?—Principally to the Mulnath zemindaree.

2285. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] You stated in your evidence yesterday, that the natives generally were displeased with the planters being vested with magisterial powers; will you please state your reason for believing this?—The British Indian Association, which represents the principal zemindars and native gentlemen of Bengal, publicly expressed their disapproval of indigo planters being made honorary assistant magistrates.

2286. Do you mean that they did so in their representation representation to Government on the subject?—Yes.

2287. Are you aware that members of the Civil Service are not allowed to hold lands, or have any money transactions with the people over whom they preside within their jurisdiction, by repeated orders from the Court of Directors and the strict orders of the Government here; and do you not think that on that principle, and on public grounds, the representation was so made to Government without any jealousy or party feeling?—I believe it was solely a party and jealous feeling that guided the representation of the British Indian Association to Government.

2288. During the time you were vested with magisterial powers was a petition presented against you to the magistrate of the district by a ryot complaining of oppression and other unlawful acts; and was the same petition referred to you for explanation by the magistrate?—I have no recollection of such a petition.

2289. Do you know of any of the planters who, during the time they held magisterial powers, abused those powers to serve their own interests?—No; I am not aware of any.

JOHN O'BRIEN SAUNDERS, Esq.; examination continued from 16th instant.

2290. Mr. Fergusson.] You stated in your former evidence, that a large quantity of indigo seed was produced in your neighbourhood and in the Doab for sale. Can you state about what quantity passed annually through Allahabad on its way to the Lower Provinces?—I have had careful returns sent to me of the quantities of indigo seed which passed the bridges of Cawnpore and Allahabad for many years, and they generally varied from one lac and 50,000 to two lacs and 20,000 maunds.

2291. Have you dealt largely in indigo seed in the Upper Provinces; and can you state at about what price the ryots sold this seed previous to the mutiny?—Yes, I have purchased largely. The cultivators get from 2 rupees 8 annas up to 4 rupees 8 annas per maund of 80 sicca weight.

2292. Were these purchases made in open market, and did the ryots get the highest prices current?—The cultivators generally contracted with native merchants, and received advances before the seed was ripe. They received the market value at the time that they made their contracts.

2293. Can you state the price at which indigo seed dealers contracted to deliver seed to planters in Tirhoot and Bengal?—The contract rates, up to 1857, have remained very steadily between 6 rupees 8 annas and 8 rupees, deliverable in Bengal and Tirhoot.

2294. Then, if the ryot in Bengal got 4 rupees as a fixed price from the concerns in Kishnaghur, did he not receive a higher rate for his seed than the ryot in the free market in the Upper Provinces?—Yes; comparing the one with the other, he got a full price.

2295. Mr. Fergusson.] Is the seed in the Upper Provinces ever grown from the stumps of the crop which has been cut and carted to the factory?—Never, in the countries west of Allahabad. In the fields intended to be kept for indigo seed a considerable quantity of the plant is cut out, and the rest left standing for seed; it is thinned out, the rest of the plant being left for seed.

2296. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you not frequently known of up-country seed selling in Bengal for a rupee or two a maund after the spring sowings are over?—Yes; I have known it selling for anything that could be got.

2297. Have you ever supplied the Bengal planters on commission; and at about what price did the seed stand?—Yes; in the years 1834-35-36, I supplied large quantities of indigo seed on commission; the average cost was from 6 rupees to 6 rupees 8 annas a maund.

2298. Are you aware that Messrs. Begg, Dunlop, & Co., and others, contracted to deliver seed for a series of years at 6 rupees 8 annas to 8 rupees a maund?—Yes, I know of some of these contracts at these rates; and I have heard that they have had extensive contracts at these rates.

2299. If they purchased the seed in the Upper Provinces at 4 rupees a maund, would the additional 2 rupees 8 annas do more than cover the loss in clearing, expense of carriage, insurance, &c.?—I think at 4 rupees a maund, after paying all charges, there might have been a profit of 8 annas a maund.

2300. President.] You have given us to understand, that you found in the Upper Provinces a large indigenous cultivation of indigo, quite unconnected with European enterprise; did you find the same thing in Allahabad?—No.

2301. Mr. Temple.] Has none arisen in Allahabad since the recent extension of indigo cultivation in the North West?—None. I should here add, that I believe indigo was introduced into Bengal from the North Western Provinces. The cultivation of indigo has existed in the North West from time immemorial. There is not a village of any extent in the North West which has not vats of its own for the manufacture of its own cultivation. I could manufacture good indigo to any extent in the Provinces, without setting up any regular factory buildings.

2302. President.] In the North West, or in Allahabad, had you any practical difficulty in the cultivation of indigo, arising out of the conduct of the police?—I never had any trouble from the police, except when troops were marching through the country, when my carts were seized. I had a fine bazaar, full of carts and bullocks, ready to hand, which were very convenient for the police.

2303. Mr. Temple.] But I suppose you got hire for these?—No, it seldom came to that, because, on reporting it to the magistrate, I got them released.

2304. President.] Had you any difficulty owing to defects in civil courts, or in the law?—The defects of the courts drove me to deal with the large contractors, natives themselves, who were better able to secure their cultivation, from their intimate connexion with the cultivators, than I could. I could only sue in a civil court for damages, on a failure of contract, against the cultivators, who had little or nothing. It was, therefore, useless to proceed against them in the civil courts.

2305. Did the uselessness of a civil suit arise from defects in the court or the law, or from a deficiency of assets in the defendant?—From the deficiency of assets in the defendant, rendering it useless to go into a civil court in the cases of small cultivators.

2306. But, suppose a small cultivator or proprietor

R. T.
Larmour,
Esq.

23 June
1860.

J. O'B.
Saunders,
Esq.

J. O'B.
Saunders,
Esq.

23 June
1860.

prietor did possess assets, could you then have obtained a decree against him, and realise the amount with tolerable certainty?—The process was a very slow one; and, after a decree was obtained, it was still longer before it could be put into execution; and when it was put into execution, the property was all mortgaged, or had been made away with.

2307. Mr. Fergusson.] In fact, was not the delay so great as to render it quite useless to sue in civil courts, even if a man had money?—It was not altogether useless, for we could hold the decree in terrorem over the debtors, and the example was useful.

2308. Mr. Temple.] Do you consider that the new procedure, that has recently been introduced in the North West, will greatly facilitate transactions between planters and cultivators?—No doubt it would facilitate all transactions, though not particularly the transactions between indigo planters.

2309. Have you known many or any affrays in the North West relating to the cultivation of indigo?—I never heard of any.

2310. Were you or your servants ever complained against in any of the criminal courts of any districts in the North West?—No, never.

2311. Were you or they ever accused of beating or imprisoning, or otherwise maltreating, cultivators of indigo?—No; never in any court, to my knowledge.

2312. Were you or they ever accused of cutting down trees, or forcibly measuring indigo lands, or forcibly sowing lands with indigo?—No, I never was; but I have complained against a Government officer, a tuhseeldar, for cutting down my trees for firewood for troops; the tuhseeldar's reasons being, that villages belonging to Europeans were of no private advantage to him whatever, the custom of the district being for each village paying small douceurs to the tuhseeldar, which an Englishman refused to do. My trees were cut down in 1830; I complained at once, and put an end to it.

2313. President.] Did any of your ryots ever apply to you for the settlement of their disputes?—They never have; never, except in matters in which we ourselves were interested.

2314. Mr. Temple.] Had you any serious disputes with zemindars?—Never, about indigo.

2315. Mr. Sale.] Would not the ordinary cultivators settle their disputes by punchayats?—Not that I am aware of.

2316. Mr. Temple.] Did any dispute, or other question, arise between you or your assistants with any of the missionaries stated in the North West?—No, never.

ADUM MUNDAL, Inhabitant of Daripara, Thannah Joydia, Zillah Pubna, Luckipore Factory, Concern Salgarmudia; called in, and Examined, on oath.

A. Mundal.

2317. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] WHAT jumma and land have you?—I have a jumma of 15 rupees, comprising 8 beegahs of land. I have never sown indigo. They laid hold of me to come and sow this year. This was in the end of Jyeshth, about 20 days ago. They told me to sign a contract for 10 years. I refused, and I was put in a godown under the care of a guard, to whom I gave something, and thus got away. They did not beat me. This was at Salgarmudia. As soon as I got away I came here direct. I heard from some coolies that I should get justice in Calcutta. I did not go to Pubna, because there were lattials in the way, and I had been caught once.

2318. Mr. Fergusson.] Do none of your relatives or partners cultivate indigo?—Two of my cousins sow, but this is for Mr. Macnair, of Jorada factory. They don't reside at the same residence with me. They have a separate residence.

2319. President.] Then what can be the reason that you were taken to the factory and asked to sow this year?—Those other indigo ryots were taken to the factory to sign a fresh agreement for 10 years, because the people of the factory thought that the ryots would refuse to sow next year; therefore the servants took them, and they took me along with the ryots, and I got away in the manner described.

2320. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you never been in the employment of any factory as a servant?—I was employed at Mr. Macnair's factory as a durwan or doorkeeper. I was told to pull the punkah, and refused, because my honour would be thereby lost. I used to be in charge of bags of thousands of rupees; how then could I pull the punkah?

2321. President.] How long have you been residing in your present village?—Since the month of Kartick last.

2322. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] How did you get your land?—My nephew, Amundo Mundal holds a jumma of 60 rupees, and he gave me a fourth share of it.

2323. Mr. Fergusson.] Has your nephew cultivated indigo on the above jumma?—My nephew has cultivated indigo for Mr. Macnair, but not in Daripara.

2324. How long were you in Mr. Macnair's service?—Ten years.

2325. Did you not go to Salgarmudia to ask for employment?—Mr. Macnair's nephew sent for me, but I did not go. I did not go to Salgarmudia.

2326. Have all the ryots of Salgarmudia been asked lately to sign an agreement of 10 years' long?—They have been asked, but I can't say whether they have done so.

JADU BISWAS, Inhabitant of Rungpore, Thannah Hardi, Zillah Nuddea, Factory Luckipore, Salgarmudia Concern; called in, and Examined on oath.

J. Biswas.

2327. President.] WHAT is your jumma, and how much land have you, and what is your general condition?—I have a jumma of 25 rupees, i.e. 50 beegahs of land; I have one plough and a pair of bullocks; I can read and write. The planter at Luckipore is in the habit of taking my bullocks and my plough, and sowing indigo on my lands; this has been going on for 15 or 16 years. I have never complained about it till this year, when I heard that the "great Sahib" had ordered that it was optional with us to sow indigo; on hearing this we took courage, and presented presented a petition to the magistrate of Pubna, who came to the Joydia thannah, and went to the village of Hurinarayanpore; and I made a general complaint against the proprietor of the Salgarmudia concern for forcibly taking away my bullocks and plough, but I got no redress.

2328. You state that you are within the limits of the thannah Hardi, zillah Nuddea, what made you complain to the magistrate of Pubna?—The magistrate of Pubna had come within six miles of our village, and we thought this a good opportunity of making known our complaints.

2329. Mr. Sale.] Did you never take advances from the factory?—No, never.

2330. President.] Did you sow last year, and what became of the produce?—I did; the factory people cut the plant and took it away; I have not been recently to the factory to settle my accounts; if I ever went there, I was made to wait the whole day, and was then sent away without receiving anything, by the gomashta.

2331. Mr. Sale.] Did you never understand that you were indebted to the factory, or that you had to receive anything from it?—I understand that they pay at 6 bundles per rupee, and my land produces from 12 to 14 bundles. They take seven beegahs of land for indigo; I have complained to the amlā, but found it of no use; I have also complained to the planter, but he has never taken the matter up.

2332. Mr. Temple.] Will you swear that you have never touched a single rupee from the factory?—Yes; I will swear that I have never received anything 2333. Are you sure that no claims of advances and fazil are set down in the factory books as having been received by you?—I do not know about this.

2334. Supposing that the factory books should show advances and excess receipts against your name, year by year, for some time past, what answer could you make?—I have never seen anything written in the books. If anything is written in the books, it has been done without my knowledge, and I know nothing at all about it.

BISWANATH GHOSE, Inhabitant of Futtehpore, Thannah Doulutgunge, Zillah Nuddea, Birkistopore Factory, Khalispore Sudder Factory; called in, and Examined on oath.

2335. President.] ARE you in the habit of sowing indigo?—Yes, I have sown by compulsion; about 20 years ago I got two rupees advance for one beegah.

2336. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] What land have you?—I cultivate bramuttur or rent-free land of 24 beegahs in extent; I pay 12 rupees rent for it; I have no jumma.

2337. Does the cultivation of indigo at all interfere with your other cultivation?—Yes, it does; it almost prevents our cultivating anything else. They take what they call three and a half, but what I call five and a quarter beegahs.

2338. Do the planters allow you to plough your rice lands so long as there remains indigo to be sown?—They never allow us to go to our rice cultivation, i. e., the dewan, takidgir and amin do not.

2339. President.] Have you sown this year; and if not, were you sued for breach of contract?—No, I have not sown this year; formerly I thought that the whole of Bengal belonged to the planters. Now, since the issue of the parwana, we know that there are Hakims or authorities.

2340. Do you owe something to the factory?—No; I don't owe anything.

2341. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] How do you know whether there is a balance against you in the factory books or not?—I do not know.

2342. Mr. Sale.] Do not they call you sometimes to make up your accounts?—Yes; they do sometimes, and when I go to settle my accounts they tell me I am in debt: in some years, that is in one or two years, they gave us one or two rupees excess, but this I have to give to the factory servants. I must give it them, or they won't let me cultivate my rice.

2343. President.] Have you never complained to the planter?—Yes; I do sometimes, but he does not look at the case very much; besides, the amlā tells him that if he hears such complaints, it will interrupt the cultivation of his indigo.

2344. Last year how much indigo did you deliver?—Ten boat loads; they were small boats; about 40 bundles by my calculation, by that of the amlā three or four.

2345. For what particular purpose have you come here?—I have come here merely to make known my condition; I am living at the house of Brojomohun Haldar at Pathuria Ghatta.

2346. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Whose bramuttur land do you cultivate?—That of Kinu Rai Mohashoy.

2347. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you cultivated rice this year, and how much?—Twelve beegahs, including the indigo land.

2348. President.] Has the indigo at all injured that land, or have you a good promise of rice?—No, it has not injured it. There has been good cultivation this year, and all my rice has come up well.

2349. Mr. Fergusson.] If the weather after this turns out unfavourable what will you do?—If this should happen I would trust to my cold weather crop, chillis, wheat, mustard, and so forth.

2350. If the rice should fail, won't you go to the planter for advances?—No, I hate the name of the factory.

2351. If there should be no oppression and no causes of complaint, if the advances should be paid so as not to be intercepted, would you be willing to sow?—No, I would rather go to a country where indigo is not sown.

2352. If you lose your cattle does not the planter give you a loan without interest to purchase others?—I have never asked him.

TILOK PARAMANIK, Inhabitant of Sonadangi Madpore, Thannah Jhodia, Pubna Zillah, Luckipore Factory, Salgarmudia Concern; called in, and Examined on oath.

2353. President.] ARE you in the habit of sowing indigo?—Yes; and I have sown this year also; I have a plough and a pair of bullocks. I have sown rice this year, but have been obliged to sow it after dusk. I have to sow what they call three and a half beegahs of indigo, but what I call five.
72—I.

2354. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] What s quantity

J. Biswas.

23 June
1860,

B. Ghose.

T.
Paramanik.

T. quantity of indigo plant did you deliver last year?—Thirty cart loads; but I can't say how many bundles.

23 June
1860.

2355. Did you go to the factory to make up your accounts?—Some of the lattials took me to the factory; when I got there the amin told me, if you stop here you will be put in the godown. Hearing this, I was afraid, and made off. By the quantity of indigo that I have delivered I ought to have something to receive, but I have never received anything. If they have written anything in the books against me, I don't know about it.

2356. President.] If you have sown this year, why is it you came down here to complain?—I have sown this year by compulsion. When the magistrate and the deputy collector came to Har-rinaraypore, I complained. They ordered me to make it up with the Sahib; some lattials came to the village and seized me, telling me to enter into a contract for ten years; but I gave a rupee, and got away from them there.

2357. Mr. Sale.] What jummas and what land have you?—Ten rupees jumma, on 14 beegahs of land.

2358. President.] Will you be willing to sow indigo next year?—No, for it does not give me time to attend to my rice. Besides, I get nothing for it; and they take our wives and children for the weeding, by which we lose our caste.

2359. Have you any other thing to complain of?—About four or five years ago they cut down four or five trees of mine, of which I did not complain. I have no other complaints to make.

MINU SHEIKH, Inhabitant of Furreedpore, Thannah Hardi, Nuddea Zillah, Gosain Durgapore Factory, Katchikatta Concern; called in, and Examined on oath.

M. Sheikh.

2360. President.] What jumma have you, and how much land do you cultivate?—I have two jummas, one of 10 beegahs, and one of 18, at two beegahs per rupee of rent. I sow 10 beegahs of indigo, which the factory call 5; I have sown in this way ever since the factory got the putni. Before the putni was taken, such oppression would not be practised. If we sow cold weather crops, such as wheat and mustard, they sow indigo amongst it.

2361. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Are you not allowed to cut your cold weather crops?—If the crop grows well, they let cows into it to eat it up; but if a poor crop, they don't mind.

2362. President.] But by letting in cows on your crop, do they not damage the indigo at the same time?—Where our crops are concerned, they don't say the indigo is damaged; but if one of our cows stray into their indigo, they make a great outcry. Last year the village was fined 60 rupees, of which I paid 3 rupees.

2363. Have you sown this year; and if not, has there been a suit against you for breach of contract?—I have not sown this year. A suit was brought against me, but I escaped; I was absent at the time the suit was brought. I came to Calcutta to complain to the Lieutenant Governor.

2364. Mr. Temple.] Did you sow indigo last season?—Yes.

2365. Mr. Fergusson.] What was the result of last year?—From 5 beegahs I was credited with 11 bundles of indigo. I brought my plant in 11 carts. I got a hath-chitti, but that was taken away when the manufacturing season was over.

2366. Did you get any excess or any advances last year?—No; neither one nor the other.

2367. Have all the ryots in your village been equally unfortunate as yourself?—It is not the practice in putni talooks to give advances, and I have not heard that the ryots got any excess payment.

2368. Do you know the village of Nurhurdi?—There is a village on the other bank of the river of that name.

2369. Mr. Sale.] Will you sow indigo next year?—No; as long as the talook belongs to the planter, so long there will be oppression.

2370. President.] Should the talook revert to the native zemindar, and the planter have to do only with indigo, would you then sow?—No; for with indigo there is oppression.

2371. Have any of your trees been cut down wantonly?—No, not mine. Those of other ryots have been cut. I have never been imprisoned, but they have taken my ploughs and bullocks for their nij cultivation.

SABIR BISWAS, Inhabitant of Hathiya, Thannah Hardi, Zillah Nuddea, Luckipore Factory, Concern Salgarmudia; called in, and Examined on oath.

S. Biswas.

2372. President.] What jumma and what land have you?—Fifty-three rupees jumma, and 106 beegahs. Out of this I sow what they call 7, but what I call 11 beegahs; I have sown this year. Some years they give me a rupee or two of advances, but the factory servants get it all; I never get any excess. Last year I delivered 20 or 25 boat loads of plant. They say a boat holds three or four bundles; I say it holds 12 or 14.

2373. Did you receive any fresh advances last Khartik?—Yes, I did; I got 3 rupees, and I have sown this year; but now they say that I must take boat advances in order to transport the plant to the factory. Last month Jyeshtha, they confined me two days in the godown at Luckipore.

2374. Mr. Sale.] Why did they confine you?—They wanted me to take advances for boats, and, on my refusing, I was put into the godown for two days. I paid a rupee to the durwan however, and got off.

2375. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Did you complain of this to the magistrate?—No; I came away here to complain.

2376. President.] On what terms would you be willing to sow indigo from henceforth?—On no terms. Even if I were to get 100 rupees I would not sow. There is an excellent crop of indigo this year, about four or five boat loads a beegah.

MIRZAN MUNDAL, Inhabitant of Bazemaju, Thannah Hardi, Nuddea Zillah, Poamari Factory, Katchikatta Concern; called in, and Examined on oath.

2377. President.] HAVE you sown this year; and if not, why not?—I have not sown, because I could not stand it any longer.

2378. Have you been sued for breach of contract?—Yes, I have, and I have produced my witnesses. I can't say what order has been passed in my case. I heard there was a Commission sitting in Calcutta to do justice, and so I came here.

2379. Are you aware that you can get no redress here in your case of breach of contract?—I am now aware of this, but I wish to explain my circumstances. The planter is planter, zemindar, and mahajan. If the market is 16 kattas of 5 seers each for the rupee, we get 8 kattas from the Sahib, and carts are sent round to force rice upon us, which we are obliged to repay at 50 per cent.

2380. How much grain did you borrow from the Sahib's barns last year?—I borrowed 21 bish of 8 maunds each, i.e., for my whole kindred. I have 44 people to feed. My complaint is, that I did not get this at the fair market price. When other mahajans allow 14 or 16 kattas, he allows only 8 and we are not allowed to go and borrow from other mahajans. I have also to complain, that since the month of Kartik last, the Sahib has cut down 700 bamboos, for which I have not been paid. The Sahib wanted to repair his barns with them. If he gives anything, it will be at the rate of four annas a hundred bamboos. Also, in the month of Kartik last, the factory people cut down a banyan tree, and burnt a lac of bricks with it, and also they have cut down some mango trees. I have 14 beegahs of land in the village, and about 40 beegahs in the plain; also, last year, we were obliged to cut a khal or watercourse, in order to bring water to the factory.

Mirzan Mundat.

23 June
1860.

Commission adjourned at 5 P. M.

Friday, 25th June 1860.

PRESENT.

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C. S., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., C. S., W. F. Fergusson, Esq., Reverend J. Sale, Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

ROBERT MORRELL, Esq., of Morrellgunge, in the District of Backergunge; called in, and Examined on oath.

2381. President.] YOU are a Sunderbund grantee, are you not. Will you state what you have done towards clearing your grants, and establishing ryots thereon?—I have four lots of Chuck Khowila Burrisaul, and another chuck, which I have lately received from Government, called "Jeodharra," also another one in ijara, or farm. Most of the grants are being cleared by myself. The whole extent of my grants is about one lac and 40,000 beegahs, of which, I believe, 60,000 or 65,000 beegahs are now cleared, and under cultivation. This has been effected in about 10 years.

2382. Do you consider yourself the absolute proprietor of the land?—Yes; as a grantee from Government.

2383. Will you state what kind of kabulyats, or pottas, you have interchanged with your ryots?—On the lands that I have cleared myself I have given them pottas for tenures, which we locally term howlahs, neem howlah, and neem-ousut-howlah, and kaim kursa; all the pottas I give are generally in perpetuity, at one rupee two annas per beegah of 1,600 square yards, such rents not being liable to enhancement; the talooks, howlahs, &c., are equivalent to gantidars and mourusidars in Jessore, or elsewhere. These tenures do not depend upon any quantity of land, as I have given talooks for 1,000 or 2,000 beegahs, as well as for 10 beegahs.

2384. Then you do not consider that the creation of these incumbrances is a bar to the improvement of the estate?—The immediate effect of this measure is, that I can get as many ryots as I wish; and the improvement of their land is a matter of their immediate interest.

2385. Were these tenants all established by yourself, or did you find any houses or cultivation on the grants when you took them?—When these lands were put up for sale, at the Sunderbund Commissioner's office, they were bought by me hasil sewai. Land already under cultivation, in extent about 800 beegahs, were made over to the former abadkars or holders; on these lands there were no ryots, such being cultivated merely by puttinahs, or men who merely came for the time of cultivation. I believe there were not more than two actual houses on the grant. The revenue of these hasil lands was paid by these parties direct to Government, and not through me; this arrangement exists up to the present day.

2386. Did you find any difficulty in commencing your clearances through the above tenants?—I found no assistance from them. On my first going I experienced great difficulty in procuring labourers,

R. Morrell,
Esq.

25 June
1860.

R. Morrell,
Esq.

25 June
1860.

labourers, as I was looked upon by every one as an intruder. After a week or so, I came across a man who understood Hindustanee, and induced some men to come and labour; by this means I, by degrees, cleared away about 200 or 300 beegahs, and found it necessary to adopt some system. After making inquiries about the Sunderbund grants, I adopted the following system, i. e., I made contracts with people, who engaged to clear a certain extent of ground at a certain rate, or for 2 rupees 12 annas to 3 rupees 8 annas a beegah; under this engagement, they were obliged to farm or clear away the jungle, and to settle ryots on it, or cultivate it for three years themselves. On the settlement of ryots, the engagements stated above were given first in the shape of amulnamas, or mere orders to remain in possession and cultivate, and then they were to pay rent according to the amount of beegahs which had been cleared, as regularly measured.

2387. What is the main staple of cultivation on your grants?—Rice.

2388. Have you endeavoured to introduce the more important staples; and, if so, with what success?—Yes; I have tried to introduce a better kind of sugar-cane than what is grown round about there; also sola, or gram; but I found the ryots unwilling to take the seed I offered them gratis, as they said it would introduce a system of dadun, or advances, of which they were afraid.

2389. Did they express no other unwillingness to any new kind of cultivation?—They said, if we take one thing from the Sahib, next year it would be something else, and so on, and eventually they would have to take nil or indigo.

2390. Is any indigo grown in the neighbourhood, and are the lands of your grant at all fitted for indigo?—No; there is no indigo grown anywhere in the neighbourhood, but the beeta lands, or lands on the edges of the khals on which sugar-cane and vegetables are grown, would be fitted for indigo. I know this, because in one of the packets of seed sent to me from Calcutta there was indigo, which was sown by my gardener by mistake, and grew up to about seven or eight feet high. I was in Calcutta at the time, but when I went back, the ryots insisted on having it pulled up and thrown away, and so I had it destroyed. At the same time, I was building my house and out-offices, and the division of the rooms in them caused them to think that they were intended for indigo vats; however, I soon made them understand that they were not intended for that purpose.

2391. Mr. Sale.] Are you aware that the late Mr. Rainey attempted to introduce indigo in the Sunderbunds south of Khoolnia?—No; I am not aware of this.

2392. Do you know from what part of the country your tenants come?—I believe from within two days' journey round about me.

2393. President.] When you first attempted yourself to cultivate by labourers, did you find it necessary to make advances to them?—Yes, I had to give a rupee a man to cut down the jungle. The ryots immediately commenced cultivating, and within the year there was a crop on the ground, and I got my rents at 1 rupee 2 annas a beegah.

2394. Had you to give them any assistance in the shape of money, to build houses, or any other kind of assistance?—Yes, I had invariably to give money; I had to give from 10 to 50 rupees to each man or family to enable them to buy in a stock of food, buy their bullocks, and build their houses; this money was always given out at interest. I first gave it at 12 per cent., but found my money never came back to me, so that after two or three years, I raised the interest to 37½ per cent. per annum, which is one-half of what is usually paid in that part of the country, being eight annas in the rupee for a loan of eight months. The reason why I did not get my money back at first was, that the party borrowing such would lend it to others at 75 rupees per cent. and more, thereby running the risk of losing the money they had borrowed of me, by some of the parties dying or absconding.

2395. So that, in fact, to get your dues, you were obliged to bring your practice somewhat in conformity to the practice of the country?—Yes; I had to make my money nearly as difficult to obtain as elsewhere.

2396. Are any cold weather crops grown on your lands?—Yes, vegetables, such as kiras, koomras, kuddoo, mustard, turmeric, chillies, tobacco, cotton, &c.

2397. Are these grown on lands from which rice or other crops have been taken during the same year?—Not generally; but they can grow on lands where sugar-cane or jute have been grown; the rice lands are invariably sown with rice, i. e., with aous and aumon on the same land; the aous crop is first taken off, and then the aumon sown; but the land on which the aous has been grown does not yield so much; therefore the ryots generally sow enough aous to feed them till the aumon comes in.

2398. Mr. Sale.] Is there any difference in the land reserved for rice and that reserved for other crops?—Yes; the rice land is lower.

2399. President.] Did you find any unwillingness evinced by the ryots to cultivate mustard, chillies, and the other cold weather crops above mentioned?—No; these crops are grown round about there.

2400. Then the unwillingness you before alluded to was only evinced to strange crops, not grown in that part of the country?—Yes; it was at the time to which I refer, which was eight or ten years ago.

2401. Was the same unwillingness evinced to sola as to indigo?—There was no unwillingness to sow gram, and I did not want them to sow it for me. I wanted them to grow it as a variety and a crop, that they might depend upon it; what they were afraid of was, that by giving them advances for gram, it would lead to other things, and so gradually to indigo; they could not believe that I had any interest in their welfare, and they thought that I must have some special object of mine own in view.

2402. Mr. Sale.] Do you think that their feeling has at all changed towards you since that time?—Yes; so much so, that I am thinking of taking down sugar-cane and gram, having been asked by one or two ryots to allow them to try it.

2403. President.] Could any of these ryots, either through themselves or friends, have had any practical experience of indigo cultivation?—None whatever. I don't think that one out of a thousand has ever even seen the plant.

2404. Then the dislike to indigo was merely a vague fear resting on hearsay?—Yes; on common report, to the effect, that having once taken advances, they never fairly got rid of it for seven generations.

2405. Mr.

2405. Mr. Fergusson.] Have they any fear of the same kind about salt?—I don't believe there is any salt now manufactured in the district; but some years ago, towards the south-east part of the district, I am told, salt used to be manufactured; and they had then the same fears about advances for salt.

2406. President.] In clearing your grant, did you meet with any opposition from the zemindars and ryots?—Yes; I did. They tried to prevent labourers from coming to my estate; and on the very outset, they sent about 20 or 30 men at night, and plundered my woodcutters' boats, thereby thinking that they would frighten me; my not knowing the language, and being troubled in this way that I would go away; however, about 20 of them were caught and put into jail.

2407. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] What led you to believe that they were sent by the zemindars, as you said they were known as dacoits, and might they not have come to exercise their own profession?—Some were servants of the zemindars, who thought it better, I suppose, to get those from among their ryots who were daring enough to attempt it; moreover, their object could not have been plunder, because the men who were attacked were woodcutters.

2408. President.] What motive had the zemindars for this opposition?—I presume they thought that my bringing a large tract of land into cultivation, would open out a large tract for the ryots, who might wish to leave the zemindary on account of illegal assessments.

2409. Mr. Fergusson.] Is not the land in this country valueless without ryotti cultivation, and would any zemindar or planter do anything to drive them away?—It would be valueless without ryots, but when thickly populated, the land is more valuable, as in that case there would be a competition for land amongst them. Oppressed ryots in a populous country could only run from one estate to another to be again oppressed, but by opening out a fresh tract of country it gave them a chance of escaping altogether from oppression, and obtaining holdings on better terms, which, in a measure, was a check upon the practice of the zemindar near me.

2410. Mr. Sale.] Is it not a fact that there is considerable competition amongst Sunderbund grantees for ryots?—I am not aware, as there are no grantees near me. I have no difficulty in obtaining ryots. Of the system of the 24-Pergunnahs Sunderbunds I am not aware.

2411. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Do you find ryots under zemindars generally contented or the reverse?—Most of the under-tenures in my part of the country are held by talookdars or howaldars, who having brought their lands under cultivation many years ago, got them at a low rate of rent. The only thing these men complain of are the cesses they are made to pay, such as marriage fees, a fee at the death of one of the family or at the birth; pooja expenses, and if a man puts up a sugar mill he has to pay a salami of two rupees eight annas for each mill. Then there is tahurrir, i. e., a fee to the tahsildar and writers at the rate of about one anna on the rupee, but most of these men are willing to pay these. They are generally very unwilling to pay the fines which are sometimes exacted quite apart from the above cesses. That is, if the zemindar be a Hindoo, and if any of the Mussulman ryots secretly kill a cow, he is fined according to his means, which is generally at about 200 rupees. Besides this they are subject to fines for little disturbances, which they would pay if they were moderate, but when obliged to pay 100 rupees, or more, it is then that these howaldars and talookdars become discontented and generally sell their jummas to any one who can protect them, and take under-tenures, paying a small profit, which talookdarri tenures are saleable without reference to the zemindar. There is a form of entering the name in the zemindar's sherista. These howaldars exercise the same kind of oppression on the ryots below them.

2412. Are the zemindars generally of that district in the habit of levying these illegal collections and fines, or are they only a few men known to be bad characters as zemindars?—The only one who I know does not practice these oppressions is Raja Sutto Churan Ghosal, a shareholder of Pergunna Selimabad.

2413. President.] You have established a large bazar on your grant, have you not; did you experience any opposition from any zemindars in establishing the same?—I have established a very large bazar, and I did at the commencement experience some opposition, i. e., from the zemindars forbidding their ryots to go to it; especially those zemindars who had little hauts, at, say, some three, some six hours pull by boat from my place. But by letting the shopkeepers have the lands rent free for six or seven years, and by reducing the price of salt from eight to six pice per seer, as well as of one or two other articles, by giving advances to the mahajan or shopkeeper, and also by my procuring salt direct from the Board of Revenue; by this I induced the ryots to come stealthily to my bazar, and so by degrees their numbers increased, and my bazar is now the largest in the Sunderbunds. I have pucka roads in it, and the people find it convenient during the rains, not having to wade through mud and water, and can get anything they like there, so they prefer it to others.

2414. There is no indigo factory working in the Burrisal district, is there?—I am not aware of any; I believe there are some indigo lands in the north-east of the district, near Furreedpore.

2415. Have you known instances of great lawlessness and affrays in the Burrisal district?—Yes; two or three instances; in one or two of which men were killed. In one instance, when the police were resisted, the magistrate called on myself and brothers to assist him, when two of them went with a few burkundazes, and the result was that the men came out and opposed them; the magistrate and his party were obliged to fire upon them, and 10 or 12 of the opposite party were killed or wounded; though they fired two or three shots, none of the magistrate's party were hurt.

2416. Were the attacking party dacoits; or were they supposed to be under the influence of any zemindar?—They could not have behaved in the way they did unless assisted by zemindars; for among them there were ryots belonging to one or two of the neighbouring zemindars. One of the men engaged in the affray became a ryot of mine, and I got a good many particulars out of him.

2417. Can you say whether it is the practice in the Burrisal district, for lattials to undergo a regular physical training, with a view to the exercise of their calling?—Yes, I have known many sirdar lattials get hold of a pupil, and regularly train him. These men have their own cultivation to attend to, but are ready to hire themselves out, when required.

R. Morrell,
Esq.

25 June
1860.

R. Morrell,
Esq.
—
25 June
1860.

2418. Have you had much to do with the police, and have you found them disposed to act fairly?—I have had very little to do with the police. I have not a single case in any of the courts, and I have not had any for some years. It is difficult to get them to act fairly. People, even when having just cases, are obliged to pay them, and I fancy higher than any other district, for this reason, that a burkundaz, who gets four or five rupees a month, has to keep a boat, with one manjhi, and one mulla, costing him, hire of the boat included, 14 to 15 rupees a month. He is obliged to keep a boat, as the Burrisal district is intersected by innumerable khals.

2419. Had you reason to think that the police were inclined to favour the zemindars unduly, and not to give you fair play?—No, I think they generally treated me pretty fairly, being afraid of being handed up to the authorities. In one or two instances I have done so. I remember one in particular, when a burkundaz was stationed near my bazar to search all boats, lest they should have sepoys concealed in them. This man I found had taken money and rice on this pretext. I handed him up to the authorities, and procured his dismissal.

2420. Then on the whole, with the exception of the police asking you for buckshish, you found them disposed to treat you fairly?—Yes.

2421. Mr. Fergusson.] I presume that you followed the custom of the country, and paid them occasionally?—I paid them when they did what they ought to do. As, for instance, for taking the depositions of witnesses as given by them, without any insertions or alterations.

2422. Mr. Sale.] Have you, or have your people been troubled by the police, or others conspiring with your opponents to get up false cases against you?—Yes, by the holder of a neighbouring grant. When he found he could not and had not cultivated the extent of land he was required by the Government to cultivate, he thought it the best plan to try and prove that I had prevented him. The case was, however, dismissed.

2423. President.] Do you think that the establishment of a sub-division near your grant would aid or would obstruct your operations as a grantee and zemindar?—A subdivision has already been established at Ferozepore, which is about six hours' pull from my place. I would prefer it on my own estate, and I have written to the Government of Bengal, offering as much land as may be required for the cutcherry, jail, &c., as the subdivision would improve my estate, as well as my bazar, and would relieve me from a great deal of trouble.

2424. Are we to understand from this that you are obliged to hold cutcherry, and settle disputes among the ryots?—Yes; and it is the only work which confines me to my estate. For unless I gave them justice in this way, they would proceed to greater disturbances. The disputes now are generally about money lent and borrowed, caste, divorces, and possession of land.

2425. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Do you punish the guilty parties, and how?—I sometimes fine them, and if the plaintiff has been really beaten, or his property been injured or destroyed, I adjudge the fines to him.

2426. Mr. Fergusson.] Is there any jealousy evinced on the part of the authorities, to your holding cutcherry in this way?—No; I have never found any; on the contrary they are convinced that if all the cases were taken up to them, they could not give them sufficient attention.

2427. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Do you know anything of the management of the zemindar of pergunnah Edilpore, Tuppa Nazidpore?—No.

2428. President.] Have you dealt with anybody except Government, in the acquisition of land?—No, with no one, except one or two smaller holders near my bazar, alluded to above.

2429. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you availed yourself of the offer of Government to redeem your tenure altogether, or have you any intention of doing so?—I have not done so. In fact I don't know what the Government require. I am at present still holding rent free under the Sunderbund rules, and shall do so until 20 years have elapsed from the date of my receiving my grant, after which, it will be two pice per beegah for 10 years, and so on up to two annas.

2430. President.] Have you been making your arrangements hitherto on your own, or on borrowed capital?—We are working with our own capital.

2431. Have you never made loans to your ryots to purchase cattle, or to repair their houses, without interest?—No, I have never made such advances, but I have remitted debts in cases of deaths or misfortune.

2432. Do you ever sue your ryots for arrears of rent?—No, I have never sued any ryot settled by me; when rents have fallen in arrears, from failure of crops, I have generally remitted them altogether. In some years I have remitted from 3,000 to 5,000 rupees.

2433. You have been on your grant 10 years; do you think your legitimate influence as zemindar would now induce your ryots to sow for you each a small portion of his land with indigo, the ryots taking no advances, and you exercising no supervision?—No, they have the same dislike to indigo as they had then; of course I could force them, but unless a man had 300 or 400 rupees staked on a homestead, he would abandon his tenure and run away. And the others who had homesteads would run away too. This would also prevent others from coming near the estate.

2434. Have you ever had occasion to buy country produce in the market, such as jute, rice, gram, and so forth, and have you had to make advances for that object?—No, never having dealt in anything of the kind, I have never made any advances.

2435. Mr. Sale.] Do you know anything of any system of advances for rice made by the mahajans?—No, no advances are made by any mahajans for any crop. Nearly the whole of the produce is brought in boats to the nearest market, and sold by the ryots themselves.

2436. Mr. Fergusson.] What has been about the rise in the price of rice within the last five years?—The price used to be about one rupee four annas, and is now one rupee 14 annas per maund; I put in a statement, in answer to a circular on the question of the prices of country produce sent to me by the Commission.

2437. Could you give us any information as to the cost of cultivation and the price of rice in your district?—I put in a statement which I have prepared, showing the cost and return of the cultivation of 10 beegahs of rice at the present prices.

Outlay on Ten Beegahs:

Labour for four months, at five rupees per month - - - -	Rs.	a.	p.
Hire of a pair of bullocks, at two rupees for four months - - - -	8	-	-
Price of a plough - - - -	1	-	-
Ditto of seed - - - -	2	-	-
Rent, at one-eighth per beegah - - - -	15	-	-
Reaping and thrashing of 10 beegahs paid in kind - - - -	27	-	-
Co.'s Rs.	73	-	-
Net Profit - - - -	37	-	-
TOTAL - - Co.'s Rs.	110	-	-

Return from Ten Beegahs:

From the sale of 40 beegahs of rice, at 2-12 per bish , or 150 maunds at 11 annas eight four-fifths of a pie per maund of rice - - - -	110	-	-
TOTAL - - Co.'s Rs.	110	-	-
	Rs.	a.	p.
Outlay per beegah - - - -	7	5	7½
Return " - - - -	11	-	-
Profit per beegah - - - -	3	10	4½

2438. Did we understand you to say that the ryots would refuse to take pottas, unless given in perpetuity, or for the term of your grant?—Some would not refuse it, but unless I gave such pottas, they would not come willingly and in numbers, and my object is to get as many ryots as I can.

2439. President.] What means do you take for the prevention of exactions by your servants and dusturi?—When I first commenced I paid, as is the custom, 12 rupees to my naib, six rupees to my mohurrir, and four rupees to my burkundaz, and allowed them, should a ryot give them a present willingly, to accept it; however, in a year or two afterwards, I began to discover that instead of taking what the ryot willingly offered, they used generally to oppress them for much more, and it was difficult for the ryot to prove whether he had given it willingly, or otherwise. However, on talking to my ryots on the subject, they all came forward and petitioned me, offering two annas a beegah more, if I would pass an order that no servant should be allowed to take dusturi or nuzzur; and they did this knowing that it would put me to greater expense by giving my servants higher pay. I agreed to the demand, and now I pay my naib 50 rupees a month; my sheristadar, 25 rupees; my peshkar, 15 rupees; my tahsildars, from 10 to 15 rupees; my mohurrirs, from 8 to 10 rupees; burkundazes, six to seven rupees; and my jemadar, nine rupees. These men are under agreements to me that any nuzzur, either of fruit or fish, must be sent up to me. I have not, since making this alteration, had a single complaint brought against any one of the servants; but it is possible that the ryots may give something to them, thinking they will have a better hearing. But I fancy my being on the spot is a great check to underhand proceedings.

2440. Do your principal officials come from the neighbourhood, or from a distance?—My naib, as well as one or two of my mohurrirs, and two or three of the tahsildars come from the district of Nuddea. The others, with the exception of the burkundazes, are from the country round about.

2441. Mr. Fergusson.] How many ryots' families do you think you have settled on your grants?—I don't exactly know; I should say about 1,500 families; but including temporary occupants, I should say about 8,000 souls.

2442. Do you find your ryots fulfil their engagements honestly, or do they do their utmost to evade them?—I have only had dealings with them in jungle cutting, and they fulfil their engagements. They pay their rents readily.

2443. President.] Have any of your ryots built pucha houses?—No.

2444. Can you form any idea of the period which would suffice to clear the whole of your grants?—Not exactly; but I fancy 10 years more will bring the whole under cultivation.

2445. Have you either a dispensary or school on your grant?—I had an English and a Bengali school; but the English department of it has now fallen away; the Bengali department is getting on very slowly. I have a dispensary and a dresser attached to it; one of my brothers being pretty well acquainted with medicine and surgery, used to attend to it; I have also established a post office.

2446. Mr. Temple.] Has the water traffic increased much within your recollection, and has it affected your operations, and if so, how?—The water communication has increased to a considerable extent; laden boats find it more convenient, as the channels near my estates are deeper, and they find my bazar of great convenience to them. Formerly they used to be afraid to go by that way, mostly on account of dacoits, and of course their passing to and fro has improved my bazar.

2447. Do you think that the Sunderbunds offer a fair field for European capitalists like yourself, and is there much suitable land available?—I have found it to answer, and there is lots of suitable land for the same description of cultivation. But the success would entirely depend on the capitalist residing on the spot, and on kind treatment of the ryots. However, I fancy that if too many capitalists were to enter the field at once, they would feel the want of ryots.

KALI DASS BOSE, Inhabitant of Abdulabad, Thannah Shibsha, Zillah Furreedpore, near the Cossimpore Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

2448. President.] WHAT zemindary or talooks do you possess?—I have an independent talook of 200 rupees sudder jumma, and I have also a potta of lands within other zemindaries. This potta is for 21 rupees, and is close to my house. My talook is scattered over five villages.

2449. Is there any indigo of the Cossimpore factory sown within your estate?—Yes; there 72—I.

is indigo sown there to the amount of 10 beegahs; this has been sown for a very long time.

2450. Does this amount of indigo cultivation result in any damage to you?—Yes; I don't get my rents every year from the ryots who cultivate this land, who are six in number; they say, As we have not had our accounts made up by the factory this year, and have not received anything, we cannot pay you. If I ever take proceedings

R. Morrell,
Esq.

25 June
1860.

Kali Dasa
Bose.

Kali Dass Bose.
—
25 June
1860.

proceedings against those ryots for my rents, the Sahib sends people to take me to the factory, and orders me to desist from proceedings against his ryots, telling me if I don't do so he will fine me. If I have to present a petition to the factory I have to pay four pice, which I drop into a box which stands before the Sahib in the kut-cherry; besides this I have not experienced anything unpleasant connected with indigo.

2451. What other lands have those six ryots who cultivate indigo on your estate?—I cannot say the extent of the lands, as I have never measured them, but I can tell the jummas:—

	Rs.	a.	p.
1st	-	-	7
2d	-	-	4
3d	-	-	2 8
4th	-	-	1 10
5th	-	-	3 14
6th	-	-	3 11
	Rs. 22	11	-

2452. Cannot these ryots manage to pay their

MUCHAI MANDUL, Inhabitant of Govindopore, Thannah Hardi, Zillah Nuddea, Factory Gosain Doorgapore, Katchikatta Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

Muchai Mandul.
—

2457. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] WHAT jumma and land have you?—I have a jumma of 12 rupees, that is to say about 30 beegahs of land. The planter has taken one-half beegah for a part of a bazar and gives me no deduction for it; also some of my lands have been taken for the railroad, and I have not had any deduction for that. In the month of Aswin last I had five beegahs of very fine rice, which the factory people destroyed by letting in cattle. The land was flooded soon after, and nothing could be done with it, but I sowed four beegahs of land with kalai or pulse, which they broke up and made me sow indigo on it. I have been in the habit of sowing indigo by compulsion for years. My father used to sow indigo.

2458. Can you say how your account stands with the factory?—I cannot say exactly. In some years when I have to receive a rupee or two, they transfer it to the rent account.

2459. How many beegahs did you deliver to the factory last year?—Twelve cart-loads, which would be 24 bundles; I sow what they call three beegahs with indigo, but what I call six. Also I have a cart which is pressed to carry indigo. Last year it was worked for two months and twelve days; I only got two rupees. The custom is for the gomashita to make an estimate of the cost of making indigo, including coolies, carting, boat and manufacturing, saying it shall not exceed so much. The upshot of which is, that the gomashita makes as much as he can, and gives us nothing. The Sahib is not to blame so much. If I were properly paid I should have got at the rate of 7 rupees, 8 annas a month for the two months and 12 days.

2460. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you mean to say that your cart was employed in carrying indigo for two months and twelve days, and for nothing else?—Yes, for when the manufacture of Door-rents by the cultivation of other lands besides their indigo?—They are able to pay by their crops, but they do not do so on that pretext.

2453. Mr. Fergusson.] For what reason have you come down, and how long is it that you have left that part of the country?—I have got a case pending in the Sudder, not about indigo; I came down about that, and have been here about 15 days.

2454. Mr. Temple.] Who suggested it to you to come before this Commission?—When I was at the Sudder I heard from one of the amla that a Commission was sitting to investigate about indigo, so I came here.

2455. Mr. Fergusson.] Was the former manager better or worse than the present one?—Mr. Dunlop, who has gone home, was a good man, and there was not so much oppression; after him came the present Mr. Smith. There had been another gentleman there for a very few days.

2456. Is there not a Sub-Division in your neighbourhood?—There is one at Mandaripore, about a day's journey from my house; and the station of Furreedpore is about three quarters of a day's way off.

gapore was over, which was two months and eight days, I was taken then to another factory, and I worked there for four days.

2461. Were you ever a servant of the factory, and were you ever discharged?—I was never employed as a factory servant.

2462. Mr. Temple.] Is the money that is paid, paid through the gomashita or by the Sahib himself?—By the gomashita, not in the presence of the Sahib.

2463. If the full rate which the factory professes to give to you, were paid you by the Sahib, would you be satisfied?—No, I can make 12 annas in the 24 hours by carrying ryot's produce, and if I buy things on commission I can get a rupee for my cart.

2464. Have you been inside a godown, and have you any complaints to make on that head?—Last Kartik I was so confined for four or five days. The Sahib was building a factory, as the old one was going into the river, and he wanted my cart to carry some timber; I refused; whereupon I was confined. After five days I agreed; I worked for a month and received one rupee subsistence allowance. I took some kalai for the naib on speculation, and the naib promised to get me paid, but he did not.

2465. What sort of a place is the godown, and what kind of food did you get there?—The godown is, as usual, a pukka one, with a door. I used to get a meal every day in the khansaman's house.

2466. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you been sued for breach of contract?—Yes, no order has been yet passed on my case.

2467. Mr. Sale.] Have you ever been beaten?—I have been beaten only twice. The Sahib, however, has cut two mangoe, one tamarind, and about 50 babul trees.

KAMOLO KANTO MALAKAR, Inhabitant of Megna, Thannah Pangsha, Zillah Pubna, Factory Dobracole, called in; and Examined on oath.

2468.] President. WHAT has induced you to come here?—In the month of Baisakh I sowed rice; the factory people came and sowed indigo on it without destroying it. I complained of this at Pubna, whereupon the Darogah was ordered to investigate it, after which the Magistrate came himself to the spot, and asked me why I did not produce my witnesses. He gave me two days to do so, and I did produce them. Another parwanna was issued to the Darogah, who went over the ground piece by piece; no final order has been passed. The Commissioner recommended me to come here.

2469. Have you been in the habit of sowing indigo for the factory?—Yes, I have been in the habit of sowing two beegahs of indigo. From the time of Mr. Rice I have sown indigo. I can't say what indigo I gave last year, because I took no account of it. [Witness here filed three hath-chittis of the years 1855-56 and 1860, showing that he was still in debt to the extent of four rupees, and had received no advance during those three years. The witness explained that the name of the person standing bail in the hath-chittis of 1860, was that of his eldest son.]

2470. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] But these hath-chittis do not show you to have delivered any plant for the last three years; how is this?—The factory cut the plant and carry it off to the factory. Then the amin and takidgir in Phalgun and Chaitro used to throw hath-chittis into our houses; as long as Mr. Rice was in the factory we got every pice of our just dues, as well as the rent of the land on which indigo was sown.

2471. Are you a gantidar?—Yes, I am. I have 100 beegahs of land; six or seven ryots under me; two ploughs, seven bullocks, and five milch cows.

2472. Mr. Temple.] Have you any particular oppression to complain of besides what you have already stated?—Yes, my trees have been cut down.

2473. Have you been beaten or imprisoned?—No, but the persons of the factory have been after me for the past four months to catch me, but they have not been able. The Sahib's lease of the talook is out this year, and he wants the lease of my jote.

[Commission adjourned at 6 P. M.]

Tuesday, 26th June 1860.

PRESENT.

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C. S., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., C. S., W. F. Fergusson, Esq., Reverend J. Sale, Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

DUDH MULLICK, Inhabitant of Bondabil, Thannah Hardi, Zillah Nuddea, Factory Par Durgapore, Katchikatta Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

2474. President. WHAT jumma have you, and what amount of land do you sow with indigo?—I have a jumma of 18 rupees and 32 beegahs of land, of which I sow 22 by my measurement, and 11 by the factory's. Last Kartik, I sowed these 22 beegahs with cold weather crops, i. e., wheat eight beegahs; linseed and barley 11 beegahs, two beegahs of mustard, and one beegah of chilies. After that, the amins and takidgirs scattered indigo seed, and when my cold weather crops came up, they plucked them up. I complained of this in the month of Magh, to the magistrate, and in Baisakh, I also presented a petition to the Commissioner of Allipore; I can't say what orders have been passed on it.

2475. Has a suit been instituted against you, for breach of contract?—Yes, but I can't say what order has been passed.

2476. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Did you present those petitions alone, or in company with others?—Before the magistrate, with the whole village. Before the Commissioner of Allipore, in twos and threes.

2477. President. Have you filed any answer in your case?—Yes; my answer was that, "I sowed indigo in Kartik; how then could I have taken advances in Agran?"

2478. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Does the cultivation of indigo interfere with your other crops?—Yes; in the month of Baisakh they don't allow us to cultivate our own crops until we have sown their indigo. This last Baisakh, I have not sown indigo, and consequently, I have been able to cultivate my other crops.

2479. Do they compel you to plough their nij-abad lands, and are you permitted to attend to your rice cultivation until that is finished?—Yes; they take our ploughs for their nij-abad. Last Kartik I was compelled to cultivate their nij for 10 or 12 days, i. e., I gave them 20 ploughs, including the mui; this, at two annas a plough, should have been two rupees eight annas. I have never been paid anything for this. I complained to the Sahib, who referred me to the gomashta, who said that, "I had been allowed to sow cold weather crops."

2480. Has it not sometimes happened, that to avoid detection, you have been obliged to plough your

Kamolo
Kanto Malakar.

25 June
1860.

Dudh Mullick.

26 June 1860.

Dudh Mullick.

26 June
1860.

your rice lands by moonlight?—Yes, sometimes in the evening, and sometimes after dark.

2481. Have you ever been thrashed, or fined, for attending to your rice lands?—I have never been beaten, imprisoned in a godown, nor individually fined; but about a year ago, the whole village was fined 20 rupees, and I had to pay my share of the fine, which amounted to three rupees.

2482. At what time of the year are you generally allowed to cultivate your lands for rice?—In the month of Jyeshtha we are allowed to cultivate our rice lands. In the previous months we may be able to do a little ploughing by night; but by sowing in the month of Jyeshtha, we don't get a good crop.

2483. Mr. Fergusson.] How many days have you been in Calcutta, and where have you been staying?—I live in Pathuria-Ghatta, where there are plenty of coolies, who come from my part of the country. I have been here 15 days.

2484. Did you sow indigo last year?—In the month of Baisakh last year, I sowed eight beegahs.

2485. How many bundles did you deliver at the factory, and what payment did you get from the factory?—I delivered 50 bundles; i. e., I had sown three other beegahs in the month of Kartik. I received 15 rupees eight annas, and my previous debt was entirely cleared off. The dewan took one rupee, and the amin and takidgir two rupees, which left me only 12 rupees eight annas.

2486. President.] At how many bundles per rupee did you deliver the plant?—Four bundles per rupee.

2487. Then by that calculation, you must have delivered more than 50 bundles?—I delivered a good many bundles, and they gave me 15 rupees eight annas. I did not go to the factory, but my brother went, and he told me there were 50 bundles.

2488. Mr. Fergusson.] According to your own account, you are free; why then did you recommence cultivating?—The soil was the ijaradar's; I could not help it.

2489. Did you get any advances last Kartik?—They told me to come to the factory and take some, but I did not go. I only understood in Magh and Phalgun that it was the order of the Queen, that it was optional to sow or not; we heard this from various people, and especially from the people of Pathuria-Ghatta, a village two or three days off from us.

2490. Did not most of the ryots in your village make a good season, and get a profit?—Yes; they all received something; some four rupees, some five, and some two.

2491. President.] Were there any who received as much as you did?—Yes; Idu Mandul and Ramchunder Mandul got as much, but I can't say how much.

2492. Then if all the villagers got some excess, is not indigo profitable, and will you not continue to sow it?—Twelve rupees is not enough to fill our bellies for 12 months; I have a large family, and what with brothers, servants, &c., about 15 mouths to fill; I can't speak of its advantages to others; they can speak for themselves.

2493. Mr. Sale.] From the land you sowed with indigo, what profit would have satisfied you?—If I could sow the land with rice I could get a bish and a half per beegah; and as a bish is selling at 10 rupees, I could get 15 rupees.

2494. President.] If the ijara belongs to the factory, do they exact anything as ijara fees?—The ijara has been the factory's for 22 years, and the rate demanded from us (including ijaradari and other fees) is 12 annas per beegah; this rate has always been demanded by the factory; i. e., I only pay eight annas per beegah on my jumma; but if I, or any one, want to take more land, we have to pay for it at 12 annas. Besides, in other zemindaries, the nirick is two and a half beegahs per rupee; this is the case with the proprietor of Maharpore; this is the zemindar who has given the ijara to the factory.

2495. Then are we to understand that you have nothing else to complain of except what you have above stated, with regard to indigo?—Yes. Last year the Sahib cut 24 bamboos of mine which he wanted for his vats. I asked the Dewan for payment, who told me to wait till it came out of the Sahib's hands. Also, the Dewan told me to get a cart for the factory use; I could not; because, in the first place I could not get a cart, and besides, my bullocks were too small to go in a cart; so I gave a rupee, and got off.

2496. Are you in debt to the mahajan?—Yes, I am in debt to the extent of 125 rupees. I had to borrow for my rents as well as for my marriage. I have besides an utbundi jumma, of five rupees, which is not enough to support me. My marriage cost me about 30 rupees; I have had this debt on me for about 11 or 12 years. Last year I borrowed 30 rupees and paid 20.

2497. Was your loan in money or in kind?—In both money and rice.

2498. Does the mahajan himself superintend your cultivation?—The mahajan does not come himself, but sends his gomashita, and if our cultivation is not good, he says he won't lend us any more. The gomashita comes two or three times in the month of Bhadro.

2499. Mr. Sale.] When your crop is ripe, what does the gomashita do?—He sends a peon to watch the crop as well as the cutting and carting; he gives us a bish or two to eat, and takes the rest away. He also gives us some from time to time, as we require it.

2500. President.] To whom do you prefer to be in debt to, the mahajan, or to the factory?—I prefer being in debt to the mahajan, because he gives me to eat.

2501. Did you ever beg a loan from the factory without interest?—No, I never did; the Sahib who was last there was very oppressive.

2502. Would you be willing to sow indigo, say for a native gentleman, or a mahajan?—No, I would not; I don't wish to hear of indigo.

SHADU BISWAS, Inhabitant of Village Binudpore, Thannah Hardi, Zillah Nuddea, Poamari Factory, Katchikatta Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

Shadu
Biswas.

2503. President.] HAVE you been in the habit of sowing indigo; and have you sown any this year?—Yes, I have sown indigo for the last 20 or 30 years; I have not sown this year. There has been a suit against me on breach of contract. I produced my witnesses; but no orders have been passed. My plea was that I had not entered into the contract, but had sown indigo by compulsion. I sowed some cold-weather crops last Kartik, but the amin and takidgir sowed over it with indigo.

2504. How

2504. How many bundles did you deliver last year?—I sow what I call 10 beegahs, but they make it out only five. The produce of those 10 beegahs the factory people cut and carried away; I can't state the amount, but I think it might be 20 or 40 bundles; I think 40 bundles. I received no excess payment.

2505. Mr. Sale.] Did the people of your village receive any excess?—I can't say about others, but some said they got eight annas, some one rupee.

2506. President.] Do the dewan or other factory servants exact anything from you?—Yes, the dewan takes one rupee for making up my accounts, the amin also takes one, and the takidgir eight annas; I also had to give eight annas to the peon who was sent to call me.

2507. To whom do you pay rent, and at what rate?—I pay to the factory, which has got the putni at two beegahs per rupee. The Sahib has not enhanced our rents; if we take new lands, we have to pay 12 annas, but we have to pay two rupees if we take land for sugar-cane or red pepper.

2508. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Who was your zemindar, and how were you treated by him?—My zemindar was Surbeshwar Mustofi of Sujyra. I was better off under him.

2509. President.] But if the planter has not enhanced your rent, how are you better off under the zemindars, and why are you worse off now?—All on account of indigo; the factory take leases not to make profit in rent, but in indigo; the factory measurement is twice as much as that of the zemindary.

2510. Did you in no year receive excess payments?—During the 14 years the factory has had the putni, I have received nothing; sometimes I have received a rupee or two by way of advances, but when they require the indigo land to be weeded, they send two or three coolies to do it, and charge me for 10. I do weed myself, and I weeded it for four days.

2511. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] By cultivating indigo is any interruption caused to your other cultivation?—I can cultivate 20 beegahs of my own land sooner than 10 beegahs for indigo, as I have to break the clods, plough the land, and weed it. I have also to pick up the clods, and carry them away in baskets.

RAM CHURAN BISWAS, Caste Kybarto, aged 74, Inhabitant of Baroda, Thannah Hardi, Zillah Nuddea, Katchikatta Concern; called in, and Examined on oath.

2520. President.] WHAT have you come here for, and what is your complaint?—I have come here to make known my condition. My complaint is that I sow indigo every year, and I get nothing from it. Last year I sowed 24 beegahs, but which the factory call 12; I got 29 bundles, the amin told me so; but I reckon that they were 50 bundles. I got no excess payment, nor did I take any advances last year.

2521. How much land have you, and what rent do you pay?—I have a jumma of 55 rupees, 133 beegahs, and 18½ cottahs. The reason I remember this so well is, because I was sued in 1224 Bengali year by the zemindar.

2522. Did you never in any year receive either excess or advances?—Formerly, about 35 years ago, there was a very just Sahib who, if we were five rupees on the wrong side, used to forgive us our debts, and he also used to give alms monthly to the blind, the lame, and the helpless. In those days the land used to be inundated, but now it 2512. Do the planters allow you to cultivate your rice lands before you have cultivated their indigo?—No, we are obliged to plough our rice lands by stealth at night.

2513. Do they compel you to plough their nijabad lands, and are you allowed to cultivate your rice lands before that is finished?—We are induced sometimes to cultivate their nijabad lands by being allowed to sow our cold-weather crops as a reward, but afterwards they pull them up again.

2514. President.] Do the factory people select the best lands for indigo?—Yes, they select the best lands as they think fit.

2515. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Were you ever beaten or imprisoned?—No, but my uncle was beaten for being late in going to the field. The dewan gave the order, and the takidgir struck him with a cane. I complained to the Sahib myself about this, but the Sahib would not take it up, but sent me away.

2516. President.] What extent of land, and what jumma have you?—I have 40 rupees jumma, about 32 beegahs, but I have got a garden with 120 or 150 mangoe trees, with about 30 clumps of bamboos. Since last Kartik, they have cut 18 mangoe trees; 125 bamboos, and seven babul trees, for which I got four rupees transferred to my rent account. The Sahib was making bricks for a new factory. The real value of the mangoes would be at least 36 rupees, and I should say about eight or nine rupees for the bamboos. This was in Kartik before last; but, in last Kartik, they cut one mangoe tree worth 10 rupees; I complained to the Sahib, who told me I had got an allowance for the trees.

2517. Will you not be willing to sow indigo in future on fair terms?—No; I won't.

2518. Are you in debt to the mahajan, and to what extent?—I, and about 20 other relatives, are in debt about 300 rupees. The bond is in my uncle's name. If we are allowed to sow our own crops, and not indigo, we shall be able to clear our debt in two years.

2519. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] How were you treated by the zemindar before the Sahib got the putni?—The zemindar used not to oppress us, and through his intercession the planter would not oppress us so much. Before the putni was given to the planter, we used to sow indigo there, but only one or two beegahs a man.

has become so high that the land has lost its power, and is only fit for rice.

2523. Do you mean to say that in the last eight or ten years you have not received any excess or advances?—If we get four or five rupees it is transferred to our rent account. To cultivate my 24 beegahs last year it cost me 70 or 80 rupees.

	Rs.	a.	p.
Rent - - - - -	12	-	-
Ploughs - - - - -	15	-	-
Weeding - - - - -	24	-	-
Harrow - - - - -	6	-	-
Seed - - - - -	3	-	-
Cutting - - - - -	9	-	-
Removing clods - - - - -	7	8	-
Stamps - - - - -	-	2	-
Dewan - - - - -	2	9	-
Amin - - - - -	3	-	-
Khalassi - - - - -	-	-	-

TOTAL - - - Rs. 82 3 -

Shadu
Biswas.

26 June 1860.

Ram Churan
Biswas.

Ram Churan
Biswas.
—
26 June
1860.

2524. Have you been sued for breach of contract?—Yes; I have sowed in October nine beegahs, and was sued for the remaining three beegahs at 20 rupees damages per beegah. The case is still pending.

2525. What led you not to sow in this spring, as you had sown in October?—I did not sow willingly in October, and the magistrate came to Gosain Durgapore in the cold weather. We went to him in a body, and he told us that the Company had nothing to do with indigo; formerly we were told by the factory people that it was the Company's property, and we must sow, but when we found that the Company had nothing to do with it, we resolved not to sow.

2526. But as you had sown for so many years, why did not you sow last year?—I did not consider that I was under contract, therefore I did not sow. I had never signed any paper, although I can read and write.

2527. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Have you any carts, and are they employed for carrying indigo?—I have no carts, but last year Ram Chundêr Banerjee, dewan, took 16 of us to the factory, and gave to each of us five rupees, and told us to get carts. The rest had to give a rupee each to the dewan out of that money. I took the money home, but could not get a cart. I offered to return the money, as well as 10 rupees besides. But they would not receive it. They then sent a peon, and took my two sons, and confined them in the godown. So I got a cart from Bagaree Sheik, and another man, and paid him six annas a day for 24 days, i.e., it cost me nine rupees and I only got four.

2528. President.] How long were your two sons imprisoned?—They were imprisoned in the morning, and when the cart went with indigo to the factory that day they were let off.

2529. Have you anything else to complain of in the way of extortion by the amla?—Yes; the naib levied 100 rupees on the village, in 1264, Bengali year, on the pretext of his son's marriage. And in 1266, Bengali year, he again took another 50 rupees on the same pretext, saying that the marriage did not take place on the first occasion. The factory people, last Agran, cut a tamarind tree, worth eight rupees, and four date trees, worth four rupees, without paying anything for the same. They also cut 35 bamboos, and a beegah, and three cottahs of thatching grass, worth five Rs. 5. 6., for which I received nothing. The date trees were taken to burn bricks with; there is no use complaining, as the factory servants will not let us get access to the Sahib.

2530. Mr. Temple.] Have you or your sons been carried about from one factory to another?—No, but I have heard of a case of this kind which happened some 25 years ago.

CHAITAN MUNDAL, Inhabitant of Durgapore, Thannah Hardi, Zillah Nuddea, near Pardurgapore Factory, Katchikatta Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

Chaitan
Mundal.
—

2531. President.] WHAT made you come here to complain?—The factory people have cut down 200 babul trees of mine, and have not paid me for them. I have nobody to complain to. These trees would give about 150 maunds of wood, the value of which would be 10 rupees 100 maunds. They took them to burn bricks, and make charcoal, and only paid me six annas.

2532. Have you sown indigo this year, and if not, what has been the result?—This year I sowed five beegahs under compulsion in Kartik, but in Baisakh I did not sow, and the factory could not compel me as the police gave me protection.

2533. Did you hear anything about orders from the Queen, the Company, or the Government not to sow?—No, I did not, but the magistrate told us that the Company had no concern in indigo. Formerly we were under the belief that the Company had an interest in the profit or loss. As I did not consider myself under engagement, I did not sow.

2534. Did you never receive any advances or excess payments?—Formerly I used to get something, three or four rupees, that is in Mr. Macdonald's time, about five, seven, or ten years ago.

2535. Mr. Temple.] Suppose several items should appear against your name in the factory books either as advances or excess payments, what will you say?—The books are in their hands, I can't say what they have done.

2536. Are you sure that various sums may have been given to the factory servants to give to you, which have stuck in their hands?—I can't say.

2537. Will you swear that for the last 10 years you have never fingered anything?—Yes, I will swear that I never fingered a rupee.

2538. Have you ever suffered any personal oppression?—I stood security for the factory tahsildar and a defalcation of 250 rupees was found in his accounts, which I was obliged to pay. Kedarnath Kirani told me to pay 90 rupees, and take the mahal and collect the rents, but instead of which he took the money from a Brahmin, and gave the mahal to him.

2539. Have you ever been in a godown in connection with indigo?—No.

[Commission adjourned at 6 P.M.]

Wednesday, 27th June 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C. S., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq.; C.S., W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Reverend J. Sale; Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.Mr. JAMES HORATIO REILY, at present Commissioner of the Sunderbunds, called in;
and Examined on oath.

2540. President.] HAVE you not had considerable experience as Deputy Collector in Jessore, in the settlement of lands, in land tenures, and in various questions relating to land revenue and rent?—Yes; I was in Jessore from 1838 to 1846, from 1846 to 1855 in the district of Backergunge, and since 1855, I have been in charge of the Sunderbunds.

2541. While occupied in the interior of the Jessore district, did you not enjoy facilities for observing the working of the system of indigo?—Yes; while in Jessore my official duties brought me into contact and in familiar intercourse with ryots, with planters, and with zemindars.

2542. Have you any facts within your knowledge which would show how the cultivation of indigo was at that time, that is, from 1838 to 1846, regarded by cultivators or by landholders?—In part of the district of Jessore where land is high, and better fitted for the cultivation of rice, the ryots I observed generally disliked the cultivation of indigo. But in parts of the district where there are alluvial formations, such as churs and light soil, indigo was not so unpopular. In fact, I remarked that in those parts where the land was high, it was impossible to grow indigo, unless the planter possessed zemindary influence. In my time, it was the object of every manager of a factory, to acquire zemindary rights, either temporary or permanent, as he could. On the high lands, the ryot's objections were that rice was profitable and indigo was not, and rice cultivation entailed less inconvenience. The ryots also objected to the system of advances; that they were given to them at a season of the year when they were in want of money, and they were thus tempted to give up more land than they could well afford to do; and that a large percentage of the advances was intercepted by the factory servants. I have been present when advances were made by the planter or assistant, to the ryot, and I have been told by the ryots that they were afterwards made to give up a portion to the servants; the said servants threatening to impound their cattle if they refused to do so, or otherwise to oppress them. The ryots also objected, that they had no option in giving up their lands for indigo cultivation. The best lands were marked off by the factory servants. Their time for several months, was also not then at their disposal; they were called upon to plough, sow, weed, and cut and convey indigo to the factory, and were at the beck of the factory servants; it was also urged that indigo was a very precarious crop. For five bad indigo seasons the rice crop failed but once; and they also complained of unfair measurement in the delivery of the plant to the factory; that the chain was drawn over the tops or leafy part of the plant, whereby three bundles went to one; these were the chief grievances.

2543. Mr. Fergusson.] You have seen plant being measured, and do you think it possible that by any means or force three bundles could be squeezed into one?—Yes, I believe it possible; and I remember, to meet this objection, the late Mr. Dunlop, of Meergunge, allowed the ryots of some villages to fill up vats, which were known to hold a certain number of bundles, and credited them for the same.

2544. President.] But within your knowledge was it the common custom to measure every bundle, or was there any system of measuring one or two bundles, and taking the rest at a guess?—Whenever I have been present, one or two bundles have been measured out of each boat or cart, and the rest taken at an average.

2545. But after stating their grievances did the ryots acknowledge having received any advantage from the cultivation of indigo?—Yes; they acknowledged they were protected from zemindary oppression; in former days, so long as a ryot grew indigo in the ilaka villages, his rent was not raised; no illegal cesses or extra contributions were demanded from him. He was protected from police oppression, and from that of the Resumption and Survey amins. In fact, he was regarded as the milch cow of the factory, and no one was allowed to milk him but the factory people. Some of the planters did a great deal of good, by hearing complaints, receiving petitions, and by administering justice. I have been present at Meergunge factory, where I have seen in one day a hundred petitions presented to the late Mr. A. C. Dunlop. These were on unstamped paper; at last he was obliged to levy a tax of two annas on every petition, to prevent the accumulation of frivolous complaints. In those days there was no subdivision, and the magistrate at the Sudder Station was considered sufficient for the wants of the entire district. The ryots, I found, were generally content with the planter's decisions, and rarely appealed to the regular courts. The planter, I believe, had better opportunities of arriving at the truth of the case, by hearing the statements of neighbours not interested in the dispute. The ryots seemed to me well pleased with the promptitude and finality of the planter's decisions. The execution of the decree was prompt and final. A simple chit or a transcript at the back of the petition, to the tehsildar or gomashtha of the village, was sufficient to carry out the order. I believe if the late honorary magistrates had been merely vested with judicial powers, and kept from interfering with the police in any way, they would have given general satisfaction.

2546. Mr. Fergusson.] Are you aware that

Mr.
J. H. Reily.

27 June
1860.

Mr.
J. H. Reilly.
—
27 June
1860.

the manager of the Meergunge concern got into considerable trouble with the magistrate of Jessore for holding these courts?—I am not aware of anything of the kind; not while I was in Jessore.

2547. President.] But can you state the feelings of the zemindar towards indigo and indigo planters?—The zemindar was always inimical to the planter, unless where he found he could get anything out of a planter, such as a bonus or salami, by letting him have a putni or a farm.

2548. But can you state the precise reason of the hostility?—The zemindars appeared to me to dislike the presence of the planter in the Mofussil, as interfering between them and their ryots. In one instance in the village of Khejura, opposite Jenida, when the late Baboo Ramruttun Roy had purchased a share of the pergunna of Mahomed-shahi, and endeavoured to raise the rents of the ryots; the ryots in a body handed over their jummas to Mr. John Tweedie, proprietor of Hazarapore factory; and when Ramruttun Roy brought about 300 summary suits in one day against the ryots, Mr. Tweedie deposited the amount of the claims, amounting to a considerable sum of money. The zemindars, I know, often instigated the ryots against the planter, and forced the latter to renew the lease of a village, by encouraging the ryots not to cultivate indigo till the lease was renewed. In those days there was no Indigo Association to settle disputes between planter and planter; one planter bid against another; there were no line boundaries between the indigo concerns.

2549. Then are we to understand that, in your opinion, the dislike which a zemindar might feel to the presence of an European in the Mofussil, was only to be overcome by the prospect of direct pecuniary advantage?—Yes.

2550. Mr. Fergusson.] Are you aware that Ramruttun Roy systematically opposed planters, in order to force them to take ijaras or putnis?—Yes, in my time, in pergunna Mahomed-shahi, he did so.

2551. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Are not the zemindars generally really averse on principle to giving leases to planters, because the zemindar's property is injured, and their ryots are injured thereby?—In cases of putni, the tenure is permanent, and the loss is the planter's; in ijaras, to my knowledge, whenever a planter wanted a temporary lease, he got it by paying for it.

2552. Do you not know that while you were in Jessore many affrays took place owing to zemindars refusing to give their lands to planters, either in putni or lease?—Yes, but it generally ended in the planter getting the lease. In Nuldi pergunna the Meergunge concern had either putnis or leases of all the villages it required. In Mahomed-shahi the different concerns in that pergunna obtained leases of any village they needed. In Begumabad, Mr. Kenny eventually became, I may say, the proprietor of that pergunna.

2553. Are you not aware that some magistrates persuaded or even insisted on zemindars giving leases to planters?—Not in my time, nor in my experience.

2554. President.] Then, on the whole, are we to conclude that whatever disputes took place, practically, in the end, each factory managed to obtain rights permanent or temporary in lands suited to ryotti cultivation, where there was money forthcoming to pay for the same?—Undoubtedly. Smaller factories, such as the late Mr. Parry's, near the station of Jessore, who had no capital at command to purchase rights in land, were obliged to be closed. But all large concerns supported by agency houses in Calcutta, particularly before the failure of the Union Bank, had money at their command, and obtained all leases they required.

2555. Mr. Fergusson.] Are not the zemindars in Jessore and Backergunge generally now resident on their estates?—In Jessore about half the landholders are absentees; in Backergunge nearly all.

2556. When an ijara given to a planter expires, is it not generally renewed on higher terms?—Yes.

2557. Did you ever know of an instance when it was renewed on the same or lower terms?—Only in the instance of Mr. Kenny, of Salgurmudia, and also of the Meergunge concern, when the factory had permanent possession of the surrounding villages, the zemindar was then glad enough to renew the leases of certain enclosed villages on the same terms as before. But generally the renewal was to the benefit of the zemindar.

2558. It appears then that giving ijaras to planters is beneficial to the zemindar?—If the zemindar has a regard only to his present interest, it is profitable; but I do not think giving a village in lease to a planter is of any advantage to the ryots.

2559. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Do the planters ever give salamis to holders of rent-free land, Bramutturs, &c., to gantidars, jotedars, or other tenant proprietors?—In ilaka villages certainly not. But in be-ilaka villages I have known planters to give a fair bonus to gantidars and holders of Bramuttur land, such men holding the whole, or a very large portion of the village; or if they don't give a bonus, they employed them as factory servants, according to their ability.

2560. Is it not on account of these gantidars, and other tenant proprietors, not being able to contest for their just rights, that they don't get a bonus?—Yes, in my time it was so. In those days there were no subdivisions, and the Darogahs were not so well paid as they are now, and they were less independent, consequently the holders of the under tenures were not so well protected as they are at present.

2561. Do you mean to say that those gantidars of the ilaka village, even now with additional protection, are in a position to get a bonus?—I consider the zemindary power in the Mofussil to be omnipotent, and when once the planter is zemindar, nothing can oppose him.

2562. Mr. Sal.] Do you know of any zemindar whose property has been seriously injured by his transactions with planters?—No; I can recall no instances.

2563. President.] On the whole, is it your opinion that when you were in Jessore, the indirect advantages preponderated with the ryots, so that they sowed willingly?—No ryots cultivated indigo willingly, save and except on lands where rice would not grow.

2564. Mr. Fergusson.] Does not the zemindar assume the power of forbidding his own ryots to cultivate indigo?—Yes, when it suits his interest. I have already explained that the zemindar's power is omnipotent. I have known instances of the zemindar's naib, summoning the ryots to the zemindary cutchery, and taking agreements from them, not to cultivate indigo, until ordered to to do so. This occurred with the late Mr. Russell, of Porahatty.

2565. Is the exercise of this power also extended to ryots holding at an invariable rent?—Yes.

2566. If the Manchester Cotton Supply Association were to send out to this country to sow cotton, would they first have to apply to the zemindar for permission to deal with the ryots before they could do so?—If the cultivation were profitable to the ryot he would cultivate cotton, independent of the zemindar, but if it were not profitable, like indigo, the Manchester Cotton Supply Association would be forced to purchase zemindaries, &c., like the planters, before they could cultivate cotton to the same extent.

2567. But so long as the zemindar got his rent, what difference would it make, whether a particular kind of cultivation were profitable or not, to the ryot?—When any cultivation is unprofitable, the ryot will naturally fall back on his zemindar for protection; it is then the zemindar takes advantage of his position, and demands a bonus for the cultivation of an unprofitable crop, as in the instance of indigo.

2568. But must not such expenditure add to the unprofitableness, and further, cause oppression to the ryots?—Such expenditure is generally an addition to the block of the factory, and consequently does not add to the cost of the manufacture.

2569. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Do you mean to say that the zemindar generally adopts the plan of handing over his ryots to the planter for cultivating unprofitable crops, or only those who are known to be bad zemindars?—There are exceptions to every rule. The only zemindar that I know who steadily resists indigo on principle, is the Hindoo lady, now zemindar of Mukimpore, in Jessore.

2570. Could the zemindars generally avoid giving the leases, if they wished it, and not be troubled by the planter with law suits, affrays, &c.?—If they wish it, they can of course avoid granting leases to planters, but this depends on the position of the zemindary lands. If they are scattered and situated in the midst of the planter's ilaka property, the planter has the power to annoy the zemindar and his ryots; and the zemindar might find it inconvenient to deny a lease of such scattered villages, but in compact large zemindaries, I do not see how the planter can force the zemindar.

2571. Mr. Fergusson.] If a planter did not obtain the renewal of a lease of the property in which his factories are situated, would not he virtually lose all his balances, and his property in block be destroyed?—Generally, he would have to close his factory, because the ryots would never cultivate indigo, when independent of the zemindary power and influence, which the planter formerly exercised over them. Practically, he could not collect his balances without having recourse to the civil courts, and that would be a very tedious and elaborate process.

2572. Then so long as a zemindar has his present powers the planter has no alternative, but to take the ijara or see his property destroyed?—Unless Act X. of 1859 has altered the powers of a zemindar, and made the ryots independent, the planter must take the ijara or be ruined.

2573. President.] The zemindar's power, as described by you in former answers, would be the same theoretically, either in the hands of the planter or the zemindar, and its exercise would depend on the character of the individual, would it not?—Yes, theoretically it is so, but the planter generally looks more to his profit from the indigo than to his profit from the rent. Taking the extra cesses and exactions on one side, and the losses for indigo on the other, I believe the two to be equally balanced, as far as the ryot is concerned.

2574. Mr. Sale.] Seeing that you consider the zemindary powers of the planter to be acquired for the purpose of growing a crop that is unprofitable, and therefore unpopular, is this not in the case of the planter a special likelihood of oppression, and is not that oppression likely to be aggravated by the extension of commerce, and the consequent increase in the value of labour?—Yes; there is however one check; if the planter is proprietor, he will not destroy his own property by driving away his ryots; he will insist on his ryots cultivating only a certain portion of land with indigo, allowing them to cultivate the rest with rice or other crops. So long as a planter can collect his Sudder jumma to pay the zemindar, that was all he looked to in my time. It may be different now, and the planter may seek zemindary profits as well as profits from indigo.

2575. Do you think the answer you have just given would apply to temporary leases?—That again depends on the kind of cultivation for which the ijara was taken. If ryotti he would wish to keep as many ryots as he could. If nij he would like to have the field clear for his own operations.

2576. President.] Is there, ordinarily, any interference exercised by the zemindar over the ryot as to the latter's cultivation of the higher and better kinds of produce; such, for instance, as sugar-cane, tobacco, potatoes, indigo grown from seed, and the like?—No, there is no interference in the cultivation of these crops, since their cultivation tends to improve the property. The rates for such lands are generally higher according to the pergunnah nirrik or rates; i.e. higher if the tenures are liable to enhancement.

2577. Mr. Fergusson.] If land that is usually devoted to the ordinary crop is subsequently cultivated with a higher description of produce, is the rent on such lands enhanced by the zemindar?—If held on a paikash tenure, the zemindar enhances the rate according to the pergunna rates.

2578. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Do you know of any other crop which is equally unprofitable to the ryots as indigo?—No; if there is a loss on any crop the ryots cease to cultivate it. There is not the same option with indigo.

2579. Is it only by compulsion that the ryots cultivate indigo?—On high lands the planter's influence as a zemindar induces the ryots to cultivate indigo. In chur lands they do so willingly.

2580. President.] Was it not in Jessore that the first subdivision was established, and that mainly owing to frequent disputes between a planter and a zemindar?—Yes; the factories were originally established by an European zemindar, the late Mr. Rainey. They subsequently passed into the lands of a Calcutta house of agency, who advanced large sums of money on them, and took possession of them, under a mortgage, and they deputed a Mr. Warner to take charge on their account. Violent disputes arose between their manager and Mr. Rainey.

2581. Were there not violent disputes between Mr. Rainey and Shib Nath Ghose, a native zemindar?—Yes; Shib Nath Ghose was a talookdar in purgunna

Mr.
J. H. Reilly.

27 June
1860.

Mr.
J. H. Reily.

27 June
1860.

purgunna Hogla; he was supported by the 12 annas shareholders of the zemindary of which Mr. Rainey held a four annas share, and these disputes led to the establishment of the subdivision of Khoolnia, about the end of 1843.

2582. Is it not within your knowledge that violent and premeditated affrays have of late years much decreased, and if so is not this decrease attributed to the working of Act IV. of 1840, to the establishment of subdivisions, to the revenue survey, and also to the working of Act V. of 1848?—Undoubtedly they have decreased, and this decrease is mainly attributable to the causes mentioned, and also to the darogah's being better paid, and a better class of men employed in that department.

2583. Mr. Fergusson.] Previous to these improved arrangements and laws, was there not practically no Government, inasmuch as a district containing 1,000,000 of people, were left to the charge of one magistrate?—There is no doubt property was not then protected in the manner it is now.

2584. Are not the planters to be in some degree excused if, after being left to themselves for so long, they have not at once acquiesced in new forms and regulations?—Doubtless, to some extent.

2585. President.] Have you any knowledge of instances in which Act IV. of 1840, or other laws being ill-suited to the purpose, recourse was had by the authorities to the Act for recognizance and securities against breaches of the peace, namely, Act V. of 1848, and the result of that law was almost immediate quietness?—I have known many such instances. As, for instance, in cases of disputes between holders of fractional shares of a zemindary, when Act IV. would not apply, penal recognizances have put a stop to all disputes. I exercise magisterial powers, and I have had practical experience in that department. Only the other day there was a dispute between a talookdar and his ryots. The ryots wrote over their jummas to certain influential parties, who employed lattials. One or two affrays took place between the lattials and the talookdar's people. I found Act IV. of 1840 did not apply; I was compelled to resort to Act V. of 1848, and bound the parties under heavy recognizances, which at once had the desired effect.

2586. Mr. Sale.] Do you think the part of country with which you are at present acquainted is sufficiently supplied with courts of justice, that is, is justice there sufficiently accessible to all classes?—In Jessore, I believe, there are a sufficient number of subdivisions. In Backergunge, one or two are required; but I understand the Government intend to establish them. There are not a sufficient number of Moonsiff's Courts in Backergunge. I can't say how it is with Jessore, not having been there for the last 14 years.

2587. President.] Have you known instances in your former experience, where jungle was cleared away, and cultivation was increased, owing to the operations of the indigo planters?—Great quantities of waste lands in pergunnahs Mahomed-shahi and Naldi have been brought into cultivation by planters, and khals have been cut through jheels, thus not only draining them, but allowing the reflux waters of the Ganges to silt them up; much land has been rendered fit for cultivation in this way.

2588. Were not the planters within your recollection and experience generally esteemed a frank and hospitable set of men?—Yes, I always found them so; and they generally afforded me assistance in the execution of my official duties.

2589. Mr. Fergusson.] Have not their presence and operation tended to improve the districts in which they were settled, both morally and physically?—I don't think that indigo cultivation has raised the moral character of the ryots. Some planters have done a great deal of good within the sphere of their operations, but I cannot say so of indigo cultivation in general.

2590. President.] In your former experience, were any schools or dispensaries maintained by planters?—Not in Jessore. Planters gave medicines when the ryots came to them; but there was no regular dispensary.

2591. Mr. Fergusson.] Was not the expenditure of such a large sum as the annual indigo outlay, beneficial to the district?—It tended to the security of the Government revenue, and it afforded employment to the people; but as I have before said, I do not think the cultivation of indigo has improved the general condition of the ryots; for instance, in Backergunge where there is no indigo, the ryots are better housed and better clothed than in Jessore.

2592. President.] What opportunities have you had for observing the working of Act X. of 1859; and from your experience in all matters of rent and revenue, what opinion have you formed of its tendency?—It has but recently come into practical operation; and I find that the lower classes of ryots in the southern parts of Jessore and Backergunge, have no knowledge of such a law. I have had some cases of ryots applying to me for pottas, to fix their rates of assessments; and I believe that when the law comes fairly into operation, it will tend to do a great deal of good to the peasantry. It will undoubtedly tend to render the ryots independent of the zemindar, which I believe to be a great step gained in the right direction.

2593. Is it your opinion that the law in question confers new rights on the ryot, or that it merely consolidates and secures to him the enjoyment of rights which were more or less common to all the peasantry, but which depended on the power and spirit of the individual to exert them?—There is nothing in the law which alters fundamentally the relation between ryot and landlord; it simply secures to the ryot the full enjoyment of rights which he has always possessed, and affords him summary redress when those rights are infringed.

2594. Then, in your opinion, there is nothing in Act X. violently opposed to the common law of the country, wherever such was not overborne by oppression or violence?—No.

2595. Previous to the passing of this law, have you known instances of determined or substantial ryots who managed to baffle the zemindars in attempts either to dispossess them or enhance their rent, and who resolutely maintained their ground in civil suits?—I have known a few such instances of ryots successfully resisting enhancement of rents, but they have been few, and such ryots have been much harassed, and almost ruined by law expenses.

2596. Do you approve of Section XI. of that Act, which withdraws from zemindars the power of summoning their tenants for the adjustment of their rents?—Yes; I cordially approve of it. I believe the power of compelling the attendance of tenants has been grossly abused. The zemindar has received an equivalent for the loss of that power, in the section which enables him to bring a ryot's a ryot's jumma to sale on the first default of any instalment due, instead of waiting to the end of the year, as was the case under the old law; I allude to section CV.

2597. Have you never known of cases, in which several ryots were summoned by a single peon or a single gomashta for the adjustment of their rents; and on their going to the cutcherry, landlord and tenant came to a mutual understanding, without any violence, or any recourse to a summary suit?—Yes, I have known of such instances, but I should consider them exceptional cases. In general the zemindar made use of this power to force the ryots to pay without receipts, and very often, in excess of their regular rents. And I have known of instances in cases of affray, where murder has occurred, and the naib or gomashta has summoned the ryots of an entire village, ostensibly for the purpose of settling their accounts, but actually taking agreements from the ryots, binding them under penalty to give their evidence in a manner which suited the zemindar; thus evading justice altogether.

2598. Then under the new law, will it be possible for a zemindar's servant, or the zemindar himself, to summon a ryot to his cutcherry, under any pretence whatever; and if the ryot be summoned for any other lawful object besides rent, will he not be likely to take advantage of the section and refuse to come?—Yes; the ryot is very likely to do so. But in Backergunge, when I was there as deputy collector, there were 9,000 summary suits instituted every year under the old law; most of these suits were amicable ones between the zemindar and ryot to enable the ryot to deposit the money in court, in order to obtain the collector's receipt that his rent has been paid. And the present law will, I think, have the same effect throughout the country; the tenants prefer paying through the collector to paying direct to the zemindar or his naib.

2599. Then are we to understand that in other districts the average number of summary suits is much less?—Yes; except in Jessore, where there were about 3,000. It must be remarked that the majority or body of the tenants in Bengal pay their rents according to kistibundi on fixed days; it is comparatively but a few who have summary processes to force them to pay.

2600. Then you do not think that the other provisions of Act X. would have been sufficient for the security and rights of the tenantry, unless this Section XI. had formed part of the Act?—I think it would have rendered the Act incomplete.

2601. Then if zemindars should be called on to furnish supplies or means of transport on account of Government, can they rely on being able to send a single servant into any village where there is the least ill feeling between themselves and the ryots, in order to effect this object?—I believe that this is the only instance in which a zemindar can plead that the section alluded to interferes with the performance of his duty. And I think that improved commissariat arrangements would enable the Government to dispense with that aid; and I further think that the power of summoning tenants has been so grossly abused, that Government should forego that aid, rather than revive the old law.

2602. Were you aware, when in Jessore, of an increase in date cultivation; and could you say to whom that was due?—Yes; there was a considerable increase; and it was due to the actual cultivators and gantidars or middle-men. They received no encouragement from talookdars and zemindars.

2603. Previous to the passing of this law, was it not the practice for zemindars, whether weak or strong, to buy, lease, or obtain the tenant right to the land if they wished to use it for any purpose of their own; such, for instance, as for the establishment of a haut or bazar, or the laying out of a garden, or the building of a factory?—Yes; they never deal with land as their own until they have purchased the tenant right.

2604. Have you never known of zemindars purchasing jummas within the estate of a rival zemindar, with a view to purposes of annoyance; or have you known of men who, during their lease of an estate, purchased up jummas and tenant rights, in order to retain a footing for their own ends after the lease had expired?—I may say, that nearly every dispute between rival zemindars originate in one of the modes described. And the object of every ijaradar or farmer is to buy up as many under tenures as he can during the period of his lease. I have sometimes thought on this account that there might have been an addition to Act X., in the shape of a provision, that if a ryot wished to sell his rights, he should first offer the right of pre-emption to the zemindar; this would tend to prevent a great many disputes.

2605. Mr. Temple.] On the whole then, do you consider that the new rent law has placed impediments in the way of a planter zemindar coercing his ryots to cultivate indigo?—Undoubtedly it has, and, moreover, I think it very probable that, in the district of Kishnaghur (although I have not visited that district lately), if the ryots have acquired a knowledge of the rights secured to them by this law, that knowledge might be sufficient to account for their recent excitement and resistance to the planters.

2606. Which part of the new law do you consider most likely to have produced that effect?—Section IV. to XI. inclusive, i.e. the sections relating to the right of occupancy after a certain period at fixed rents, and the withdrawal of the power to compel attendance for the adjustment of accounts.

2607. Mr. Fergusson.] From your former experience of indigo districts, do you consider that the planters used or abused the powers which existed under the old law of altering rents for the purpose of increasing indigo cultivation and compelling attendance?—The chief object of a planter in acquiring zemindary ilaka was to make use of the power of summoning ryots to increase his indigo cultivation; but I do not think he used that power, in my time, to enhance rents; in those days he seldom tried to enhance rents at all. I am told the planters of the present day measure lands, and re-assess ryots' holdings at a profit to themselves as well as extend indigo cultivation.

2608. Mr. Temple.] Then you apprehend that in future a planter holding absolute proprietorship or putni tenures or ijara leases, will have more difficulty than heretofore in dealing with his ryots?—Undoubtedly he will; moreover, I think that the planter will have to change his tactics, and to rely not merely on the possession of the superior tenures, but to buy up the sub-tenures, and cultivate nij more extensively, unless the cultivation of indigo is made more profitable to the ryots.

Mr.
J. H. Reilly.

27 June
1860.

Mr.
J. H. Reilly.

27 June
1860.

2609. President.] Are you aware of any other system of advances of growing crops in the Mofussil parallel to that of indigo, or of any other system of advances at all?—None parallel to that of indigo; the rice merchant lends money at certain times of the year, and takes his return in kind. He also lends money, and takes it in grain at the market rate. The rice merchant fixes the rate at which the grain should be returned to him; generally 50 per cent. on the money lent. For instance; supposing the mahajan lends a ryot one rupee, and the market value of rice is a rupee a maund, the ryot engages to return a maund and a half; at the present profitable prices for rice the ryots do not object to the 50 per cent. return.

2610. Mr. Sale.] Generally speaking, do you believe that the ryots fulfil their engagements with the mahajans?—Generally speaking I believe they do. The mahajan seldom complains. For the last two years I have had the management of a large estate belonging to Government, which yields a lac and 25,000 rupees rent; the staple crop of which is rice. The mahajans come in every year at harvest time, and take away the value of the money advanced to the ryots without any disputes. I have known of instances of the mahajans and ryots coming to me or the tahsildar, and the mahajan has paid up the ryot's rent; receiving the value of his money lent in kind, and also rice at the market rate for the amount he has paid rent as for the ryot.

2611. President.] Is not the market rate at the time of harvest generally lower than at those times of the year when the ryot usually borrows?—Yes; it is lower. The mahajan lends money in the month of September and receives his returns in December and January.

2612. Then, practically, may it not be the case that the interest is not 50 per cent?—Taking the variations of the market prices into consideration, it does not amount to quite 50 per cent.

2613. Does the mahajan find it necessary to exercise any supervision over the cultivation of the land?—No; the ryot cultivates at his own pleasure.

2614. Mr. Temple.] It has been stated in evidence that mahajans or their gomashtas are sometimes seen about the fields looking after the crops; have you ever seen them?—No; I have never seen or heard of such a practice; the only case in which I can conceive it possible is, where the mahajan and cultivator reside in the same village.

2615. Then, on the whole, do you consider that the evasion of contracts by the ryot proceeds from any general dishonesty of character or from particular causes?—The evasion arises from a sense of the unprofitableness of the indigo crop and not from any general dishonesty of character.

2616. On the whole, from your knowledge of ryots as a class, do you consider them inclined to act with tolerable honesty up to contracts in the profits of which they have a share?—That certainly depends on the profits. If the contract be unprofitable nothing will prevent them from evading it; but if it be tolerably profitable they will act up to their engagement. As cultivators I consider them tolerably honest.

2617. Mr. Sale.] In fact, you believe the contract entered into between the mahajan and ryot is generally profitable to both parties?—Yes.

2618. President.] Is not the relation between mahajan and ryot one of this kind; that if the ryot borrows in grain, or money, as he may choose, and that the mahajan finds it profitable to accumulate large stores of grain to sell or to lend; and not that the mahajan gives out advances, with any view to speculation or improving agriculture?—The mahajan's is simply a matter of business or trade; there is no question of agriculture between him and the ryots.

2619. Is it necessary to make advances for most kinds of work in the Mofussil; for instance, to burn a lac of bricks or to build a house?—The system of advances prevails extensively in the Mofussil.

[Commission adjourned at 6 p. m.]

Thursday, 28th June 1860.

PRESENT :

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C.S., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., C.S.; W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Reverend J. Sale;
Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

Mr. CHARLES HOLLINGS, Sub-Deputy Opium Agent of Gya, called in; and Examined on oath.

Mr. C.
Hollings.

28 June
1860

2620. President.] WILL you state to the Commission the other districts, or parts of districts, in which you have had experience in opium or in other departments?—I served for two years in the Customs department, and since 1838 I have served in the opium department in the Monghyr district and the whole district of Behar. Gya was subdivided in 1848, and I have been a deputy magistrate since 1857.

2621. Do you wish to file the letter and statements now laid on the table as part of your evidence?—Yes; I adhere to those statements.

2622. On what terms are agreements usually entered into?—In the cultivation of poppy, engagements are invariably confined to one year; but on occasions when assistance is afforded to the ryots, to enable them to sink wells for the purposes of irrigation, separate engagements are entered entered into, for periods not exceeding three years; for example, if a khatadar had engaged to cultivate a given quantity of land with poppy, and was desirous of receiving aid for improving his means of irrigation, he would, in addition to his engagement to cultivate poppy, separately engage to dig a well, or as the case might be, and would furnish separate security for fulfilment of the terms of contract.

Mr. C.
Hollings.28 June
1860.

2623. Are the contracts engrossed on stamped paper?—No; like all engagements of assamis with Government, they are executed upon plain paper.

2624. Are they renewed every year, and in whose presence are they signed?—They are annually renewed in the presence of the Sub-Deputy Opium Agent, or his European assistants. There are native assistants to all the district vutcheries, but they are not competent to attest the conclusion of engagements, or to witness the payments on account of advances or otherwise.

2625. Could you state about what time ryots annually renew their engagements at the Sudder Kooti of Gya, what time it took to fill up and renew the engagements, and from what distances the cultivators came?—The number of cultivators, for the five years ending in 1857-58, was from 67,752 to 81,331. There are individual cultivators, and the number of khatadars are about one-eighth to a tenth of that body; i. e., one khatadar engages for nine assamis and himself, and the assamis are at liberty to change the khatadar at the commencement of any season. The written engagement is made with the khatadar, and it contains in detail the names of the several assamis, and the quantity of land each undertakes to cultivate. The khatadars always ascertain the quantity of land each is willing to cultivate with poppy, and, according to his arrangement with them, he engages with the Government. The engagements are lithographed, of which I file a sample. [Witness here filed the ikarnama of Hiramun.] As regards time, the engagements are taken in August or September, and are generally completed within a month, the khatadars being previously summoned to appear, on fixed dates, according to subdivisions of zillahs, each zilladar having directions to produce the body of his khatadars on the appointed day. The zilladar is a distinct officer, who has charge of from 100 to 300 villages, lying contiguous to each other and convenient for inspection. With his aid all the Mofussil operations with khatadars are conducted; he is present at the engagements, at the measurement of lands, at forming the taidad or estimate of produce, at the delivery of opium, at the weighments and the adjustment of the accounts, and at the close of the season's operations. Shortly before the commencement of any operations, notice is served upon the zilladars, and circulated by them amongst the khatadars, so that the latter may be duly informed of the date appointed for the transaction of the business of each, and be saved the trouble and expense of unnecessary delay at the opium Sudder cutcherry, as well the detention of poppy growers from their other occupations. As regards distance, most of the khatadars have to come from comparatively a small circle (say within 50 miles); but there are outlying portions, as in pergunnah Kurruckdea in Hazaribagh, and some of the southernmost portions of the Shergotty pergunnah. They come from greater distances; probably the farthest come from not less than 80 miles. The average would be about 30 miles, and the nearest are within the station, and are only separated from the factory by a hedge. I have stated in my letter that the engagements are executed in presence of the engaging khatadars, and any number of their ryots who choose to accompany them, in the presence of two subscribing witnesses, and of the gomashtas and amla of the several kootis; and the engagements are executed within the premises of the opium factory, where the sub-deputy and assistant sub-deputy agents are also assisting in the same transaction; i. e., by receiving the khatadars as the several engagements are completed, and hearing them attest the quantity of land each engages for, and the amount of advances received on that behalf, the advances being always in the khatadar's hands at the time that he acknowledges receipt for the same; and occasionally the amount paid to any of them is recounted before the sub-deputy, agent, or his assistant, whenever it is thought necessary, and a hath-chitti, or license, is granted to the khatadar, of which I file a copy. [Witness here filed a hath-chitti of khatadar Hiramun.] On the hath-chitti is inscribed the name of the engaging khatadar, and the names of the several assamis for whom he undertakes the cultivation of poppy, the quantity of land which each khatadar or assami engages to cultivate, and the proportion of advance payable on the cultivation of each. The khatadar is not bound, in all instances, immediately to pay to the assami the full amount of advances received in his name, but may exercise a discretion with regard to withholding for a time, in doubtful cases, any portion of the advances, instead of giving it at once; but after a lapse of sufficient time to ascertain whether the assami is willing and capable of cultivating with such effect as to realise the whole advance, the khatadar is bound to pay the sum to the assami or to restore it to the factory.

2626. Will you state to the Commission the general system of advances and payments?—Upon the completion of engagements and the grant of licenses to the khatadar, a first advance, at the rate of four rupees a beegah, is given. Subsequently, after the lands have been sown and the existence of the cultivation has been ascertained, a second advance, at the same rate, is made, and afterwards a third, also at the same rate, about the period when the estimated produce of the season has been ascertained; but the second and third advances are always withheld in cases when the state of the cultivation makes it prudent to withhold them. After the taidad is completed, a further payment is made at the weighment, after the opium has been delivered, at certain fixed rates, upon the quantity ascertained at the scales. No further payment is then made until receipts from the Sudder factory at Patna enable us to decide the exact sum due to everybody. As soon as the Sudder factory's receipts reach the district officers, the calculations are made, a balance is struck, and the payment made; but at any period of the season, if there should be no expectation of realising the advances from the value of opium delivered, measures are taken to recover in cash whatever sum is likely to be due. The measures taken are a demand upon the khatadar or upon his security. The securities are generally one khatadar for another; in some cases, the landholder, or thikadar, is surety.

Mr. C.
Hollings.

28 June
1860.

2627. As these forms are lithographed, and only require to be filled up, how many, on an average, could you clear off in a day?—From 800 to 1,000; i. e., if I had a sufficient number of mohurrirs to assist me. There are three mohurrirs attached to each kooti, and during the engagement season we are assisted by two or three more, who are not regularly employed, and are not paid for that time, but who are employed on the weighment, when a regular extra establishment is employed. My own operations do not extend to more than 400 or 500 khattas and their counterparts, within a day.

2628. In how many places for the whole of the Behar district can these agreements be filled up?—In only one place, i. e., in Gya, where they are filled up for the cultivation in the Gya subdivision, and the subdivision of Tehta, both in the district of Behar. There are two offices in the Sudder station, one for the subdivision of Gya, under my superintendence, and one for the subdivision of Tehta, and under the superintendence of Mr. G. W. Brown.

2629. Mr. Sale.] Is the security given by the khatadars merely a personal security?—Only personal.

2630. On the demanding repayments from doubtful khatadars who would refuse to pay, do you proceed to sue them in the civil courts, or what other proceedings would you adopt for the recovery of those balances?—I have never had occasion to proceed by any process, save that of making a simple demand; and under the regulations we have a power, under sanction of the Board of Revenue, to recover the balances from the property of the khatadar.

2631. President.] Is any system of touting or canvassing for cultivation either openly permitted or tacitly winked at by the authorities?—All the members of the department are constantly engaged in using their best endeavours to extend the cultivation, with the consent of the parties engaging; and everything in the way of fair inducement or persuasion is not only permitted but encouraged.

2632. Are the zilladars allowed to take part in this, and rewarded for bringing in additional cultivation?—Yes; they are always encouraged to take part in it, but they are not rewarded. It has been sometimes mooted whether zilladars should not receive commission for extended cultivation and produce; but this has never been sanctioned.

2633. Mr. Temple.] Are they considered good and efficient men, in proportion to the number of men they bring in?—Certainly, they would be considered good and efficient men if they could extend the voluntary cultivation within their beats.

2634. Mr. Sale.] Generally speaking, is much tact or skill required on the part of the zilladars to bring in cultivation?—Certainly; there are no persons in the department whose skill and tact is more valued.

2635. President.] What sort of men, and of what rank in life, are the generality of your khatadars?—The khatadars are a large number and include a great variety of people; some are shareholders in the leases of villages, some of them are proprietors of villages, and some of them are simple tillers of the soil, chosen from the same class of people whom they represent.

2636. Mr. Sale.] Do you think it often happens that a khatadar makes a profit on the cultivation or on the contract, when the assamis do not?—Yes; because the khatadar has always a separate account as well as a joint one; and his own fields might be perfectly well cultivated, whereas those of the assamis, under less favourable circumstances, might be unproductive. Each man cultivates his own plot for his own benefit and behoof, although the khatadar takes and renders an account for himself and all others concerned with the agents of the Government; he has an account with each of the assamis, which he renders to them, and the principal elements for adjusting that account are obtained from the records of the department. On the other hand, an assami may cultivate his fields successfully, when the khatadar, by the effects of a hail storm or some accident, may lose his crop.

2637. In the latter case, what would be the result to the assami; would the khatadar allow him the full advantage of his superior cultivation?—Yes; and if the khatadar did not, the assami would have his remedy by appealing to the cutcherry.

2638. President.] Then, does the sub-agent adjust the accounts merely with the khatadar, leaving him to settle matters with the assamis, or does the sub-agent go minutely into each assami's accounts?—The accounts are annually settled with the khatadar, but all the important details connected with the cultivation of each assami are also furnished to him by the sub-deputy agent. In the hath-chitti or license is entered the quantity of land engaged for by each assami. At the measurements and at the taidat or estimate, the quantity of land actually cultivated, and the estimated produce of it, are recorded with the details of assamis. So, likewise, with the weighment, the opium delivered by each assami is registered in the office, and entered in detail in the receipt given to the khatadars. Then, at the final adjustment at the close of the season, when the khatadars receive their final account, or pay or receive whatever may be due; they are also furnished with a memorandum, of which I file a form, showing the quantity of opium delivered by each assami, the rate at which it is paid for, and the total value in money; this value forms the basis of adjustment of accounts between khatadars and assamis.

2639. Mr. Fergusson.] What remuneration does the khatadar receive for his trouble, responsibility, and for acting as representative for the assamis?—He receives from the Government commission at one rupee a maund for every maund delivered into the factory, and he receives from the assamis a maintenance allowance for each time he goes to and fro from the factory on business. I am not aware of any other remuneration that the khatadar receives.

2640. President.] How many times in this year does the khatadar have to go to the factory, on an average?—About four or five times a year, five times in every season, when the full number of advances is given; but, sometimes, in consequence of unsuitable weather and unfavourable prospects, the third advance would be withheld, then the number of visits of the khatadar would be reduced to four, as follows: for the first and second advances for the opium weighment, and for the final adjustment of accounts; in the districts of Gya they are reduced to three, because the final adjustment of one year and the first advances of the next, are made together, the documents documents and books being, however, all kept separate.

2641. Mr. Sale.] Could you state what proportion of the khatadars would, in an ordinary season, receive more than first and second advances?—I am not prepared to state it exactly, but I should say, 90 per cent.

2642. President.] You have stated in the appendix to your letter, that the average of cultivation per man is about 12 to 13 cottahs, or rather more; what is the measurement of the opium beegah?—We use the same standard as is used in revenue operations by Government. Our Behar standard is about one-half to the acre. Poppy lands are always measured by poles of five and half hand, and 20 of these go to a cottah.

2643. Are you aware of any distinction between this standard and between any zemindary or local standard, i. e., any pergunnah standard and measurement?—Yes, there are local differences, sometimes extending to seven and a half hands to the pole, within the limit of Behar proper. In Kurruckdea the luggi, or pole, is still more variable, being sometimes as much as nine haths.

2644. Do you mean us to understand that the difference in the local standard is always a difference in excess; or are you aware of any instances when it falls short of the Government standard?—To the best of my knowledge the difference is always one of excess; I am not aware of the difference being one of deficiency.

2645. Do you find it necessary to select the lands suited for the poppy, and to supervise the cultivation?—Certainly, we always endeavour to secure the best lands for poppy cultivation; but the greater part of the lands now under poppy cultivation have been so for many years, and selection therefore now is generally only necessary in the case of lands newly engaged. There is a general supervision to the extent of its being measured as soon as practicable, after engagements have been entered into, and visited occasionally by all the members of the department, from the zilladars to the sub-agent; but it is always an object of great consideration to avoid, as much as possible, vexatious interference with the field operations of the assamis, who may be much better left, in the pursuit of their own interest, to cultivate to the best of their ability, skill, and means; supervision, if carried unreasonably far, would cause a distaste to the cultivation of the poppy that would defeat its own object.

2646. Do you insist on any rotation of crops?—We have no power to do that. The only means by which we control the rotation is by recommending the assamis to sow such intermediate crops as will take least out of the land during the interval the poppy is off it, but if their disposition is to sow other crops we cannot interfere. The crop which in point of fact is generally sown intermediately with opium, is Murroa, a bread grain grown by the agriculturists for their own consumption, and Indian corn, not the American maize, but another kind.

2647. Mr. Fergusson.] Then do the assamis try to put you off with their second land?—No, I don't think so. The majority of them certainly enter into engagements with the intention of working them out fairly for their own profit, and from considerations of self-interest they would give the most suitable land.

2648. What time generally elapses between the sowing of the poppy and the gathering of opium?—From October to March, say about six months.
72—1.

2649. President.] In October is any other kind of cultivation there going on besides opium?—Yes, all the rubbi crops are then being grown, i. e. wheat, barley, and gram, &c.

2650. Do you take any measures to see that the land devoted for the poppy, should be sown previous to other lands?—Certainly not. They sow according to their own convenience. Provided that our crop be sown within a reasonable time, such for instance as from the beginning of October to the middle of November, we are quite satisfied. When khatadars or assamis cultivate any considerable quantity of poppy they sow the fields successively, so as to give them an economical use of their labour and other appliances for cultivation.

2651. Mr. Fergusson.] Then the sowing of the poppy does not depend upon the weather, but can be effected at any time within six weeks or two months, with an equal chance of a successful result?—Yes, except if the weather is unusually hot, when the germination of the seed will be weakened. It is of more importance that small plots of poppy land should be sown in due succession by aid of irrigation, than that advantage be taken of an accidental fall of rain.

2652. But supposing the sowing is not effected, what measures are taken to remedy the neglect? As a matter of routine the zilladar reports any failure in the sowings to the gomashta of his kooti, who deposes a burkundaz or special messenger, to call upon the khatadar to make good the full amount of his engagement to cultivate, and in case of the continued recusancy of the khatadar, or his inability to fulfil his agreement, a report of the circumstances of the case is made by the gomashta to the sub-agent, who generally orders the portion of the advances corresponding with the deficiency of cultivation to be recovered in cash. In cases of fraud and misconduct on the part of the khatadar, he is liable to prosecution under Act XIII. of 1857; but this course is very rarely adopted; individually I always carefully avoid it, for I consider that more injury is done to the interests that I am employed to care for by the exercise of severity than by indulgent proceedings. A hundred khatadars or assamis might be alarmed by a single case of imprisonment, of the merits of which they were not fully informed, and the cultivators would thereby be driven from the factory. The immediate recovery of advances paid for the cultivation that is not executed, prevents pecuniary loss to Government, and it is a great object to secure the good will of the community at large.

2653. President.] Will you give us an average statement of the cost of cultivation of a beegah of poppy?—I here put in two statements; one referring to a large class of cultivators who pay highly for the best land, employ the best means of culture, and reap the best produce. The other applies to a still more numerous class, who are also industrious and well to-do, but whose advantages of soil and means of improvement are not equal to those possessed by the first-class. The produce in both these cases is considerably above the average produce of any district, but both statements are founded upon facts, and, as far as I am capable of judging, they represent the profits derived by a large number of the opium cultivators. There are some growers of the poppy who from want of familiarity with its culture and X treatment,

Mr. C.
Hollings.

28 June
1860.

Mr. C.
Hollings.

28 June
1860.

treatment, derive no profit at all. In a great mass of cultivators there are also many who from idleness and neglect fail to derive as much benefit as they might from an article of agricultural produce, which requires much care and attention for its proper development. The two statements that I have submitted to the Commission, comprise the expense and returns for the double crop grown on poppy lands for the whole year; viz., for the intermediate crop as well as the poppy.

2654. Does the ploughing, watering, and weeding, apply to both crops, or to the poppy only?—To the poppy only; but all these operations are estimated at a fully remunerative rate of labour, so that people employing themselves in the cultivation of the poppy, derive an equal advantage as if their time were profitably employed at wages.

2655. What amount of cultivation is required for the intermediate crop of murroa and garlic?—The garlic is grown with the poppy. The murroa requires a very slight amount of cultivation, as it grows in the rainy season, but the cultivation of it would be much more extensive were it not for the superior tillage of the poppy lands. The return of murroa is calculated, after deducting the expense peculiar to it. We never send opium leaves or trash to Patna, on account of the great distance, and their small value barely remunerating the labour employed upon them.

2656. Could you state about the least amount which the average of bad or unfortunate cultivators have to receive at the end of a season?—Some of the cultivators engage for very small quantities of land through their khatadars, less even than five cottahs; and if the season were unfavourable and irrigation difficult to obtain, the produce would be almost nothing; less than a chittack, would be the quantity which an assami of that description would bring.

2657. You have stated that in some cases you refuse a third advance, and take immediate measures to recover the sums previously given; does it often happen that at the close of the year, khatadars who have had the third advance, are found on the wrong side of the books?—No, because the third advance is not given until the time when the produce can be pretty accurately ascertained, i. e., four-fifths of the produce are already gathered, and an estimate of the total produce is made with practical accuracy, upon which the third advances are paid. If any failure should have occurred, and the khatadars are unable to sow poppy to cover the third advance, they don't receive it.

2658. Then you have rarely anything in the way of bad balances at the end of the year?—Very rarely, indeed; but on occasions of calamities, such as hailstones ruining the produce, remission has sometimes been made by Government of irrecoverable balances.

2659. Suppose a defaulter at the end of the year were to desire to continue his cultivation without his having cleared his balances, would he be allowed to do so?—No; he would pay his balance before entering into any new engagement. This is a rule of the department. In most districts the adjustment of accounts and the renewal of contracts are made after an interval of some time, but in my district, in consequence of the great distances to which some of the khatadars have to travel to transact the business with the factory, they have been allowed to adjust and renew during the same visit, with an interval of a day or two.

2660. Mr. Fergusson.] In your statement of the cultivation of high culture, you put down the rent at 12 rupees per beegah, is a similarly high rent paid for any other land in the district?—The rent of poppy land is generally a shade higher than that of the land of all other produce except sugar-cane, which occupies the land for upwards of 13 months.

2661. Is it the zemindar that exacts that high rent, and on what terms do the ryots generally hold?—The zemindar generally exacts higher rents for the poppy lands. There are several kinds of tenures. Some ryots hold by written leases, but the majority have a customary tenure, which, sooner than relinquish, they submit to a moderate enhancement. Increased rent is prohibited by Regulation XIII. of 1816, section 17, but it is practically obsolete. This law has been partly re-enacted in Act XIII. of 1857 with the same result, because the ryots who complain of enhanced rents on account of poppy lands would have to prove the custom of the pergunna, and that the enhanced rent demanded was not the pergunna rate of poppy lands.

2662. Then does it not appear that the zemindar has appropriated a very large proportion of the profits of poppy cultivation?—I think that the proportion is not a very large one, but that he has appropriated a portion is undoubted.

2663. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] What is the rent of land for other crops?—It varies from less than a rupee, to in cases of sugar-cane, 15 rupees; some very productive garden land would yield as much.

2664. President.] Have the zemindars, within your knowledge, ever evinced a dislike to the cultivation of poppy, on account of the above law, or on any other ground?—They have sometimes evinced a dislike, which is generally traceable to personal feeling. I don't suppose that the apprehension of the law, above referred to, would have much effect, because it has been practically inoperative, and the extension and effect of poppy cultivation being to enhance and facilitate the collection of rents; the zemindars would have an interest in its extension, and would naturally wish it.

2665. Has any such dislike ever impeded the cultivation of the poppy, and has it led to disputes with the zemindars and ryots, or officers of Government, either in or out of court?—Such cases are not positively unknown, but I do not think that the distinction has been of any consequence. Certainly it has never affected the progress of the business of the department. Moulavi Ali Kurrim at one time was manager of the late Baboo Mudo Narain's estates, and he was aware to the progress of the poppy cultivation wherever he had influence, but the offer of profit to the ryot was more tempting. Moulavi Ali Kurrim has eluded justice since 1857. Generally the zemindars are ready to co-operate for the extension of the poppy cultivation whenever it is found remunerative.

2666. Do you and your subordinates generally visit most of the cultivation during the cold weather?—We visit during the cold weather as much of the cultivation as we can, but during four months it is not possible to see more than a portion of it.

2667. Is any advance made in the department for opium leaves and trash?—Yes, separate advances are made for leaves and trash, and separate balances balances are struck upon each after the delivery of the articles, and the balances are embodied in the general account at the end of the season. No advances on these accounts are made in the Gya sub-division for the reason already stated.

2668. Are the advances on wells kept separate and cleared off in the same way?—Yes, the well advances are made to the khatadars upon separate engagements on conditions distinct from those of opium advances. Well advances sometimes extend over a period of three years; they are paid off by annual or other instalments as may be agreed upon. The zemindar frequently remits to the khatadar rents corresponding to the well advances made by the department, or a portion of them. For example, the department grants an advance of 100 rupees for making a pucka well repayable in three annual instalments, i.e. 30 rupees in the first year, 30 in the second, and 40 in the third. The zemindar might in such instances remit rents equivalent to these instalments, or a part of them.

2669. Mr. Fergusson.] If a cultivator did not produce opium equal to the amount advanced to him, would you realise this amount from the khatadar?—We settle with the khatadar in the gross, and require him to square his accounts, but in case of his having both to pay and receive from different assamis of his khata, he would receive assistance from the department in adjusting his accounts with both, and the people in balance would be induced to pay up in order that those who had to receive might be satisfied. It is generally a sufficiently prosperous business to render the adjustment of accounts no very difficult matter.

2670. How are the debtors to be induced to pay?—There is no compulsion. As far as fair inducement goes we use every means. The man would be sent for, would be shown his balances, convinced of the fairness of the demand against him, called upon to pay, and told that by refusing he would destroy his credit with the department, and disqualify himself for receiving future advances. And if he had any property it would be looked up, lest ulterior proceedings might be considered necessary.

2671. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you never invite them to stay in the godown or factory till their accounts are settled?—Never.

2672. Who would have to undertake those ulterior proceedings against the assami as mentioned above. The Government or the khatadar?—In the case of the assami being a defaulter, the khatadar would ask for the assistance of the department, and the case of balance would be referred to the opium agent, who would report it to the Board of Revenue, but I cannot say that I have ever had such a case. The property of the defaulter would be attached at the time the reports were made, if there was any property.

2673. Mr. Temple.] Have such attachments been frequent?—No, very unfrequent.

2674. What proportion of the ryots, if any, at the close of a season are in debt to the agency?—Something very small. The percentage in rupees on the value of opium is about three per cent.

2675. Then about what proportion of names would be struck off the list annually?—None; they would not be struck off if they paid, and ultimately they all pay.

2676. Then do you never have to strike a man off for default?—No; never for default.

2677. Then do you never strike him off for any other cause?—Yes; sometimes, though rarely, for negligent cultivation or short cultivation, for illicit disposal of the opium, and the like.

2678. Is such striking off considered a punishment?—Yes, in all instances when the cultivation is profitable, as it generally is.

2679. Are all sums of money whatever paid in the presence of a sub-deputy or an European assistant?—Yes; all sums of money, without any exception.

2680. Are they all paid at the Sudder kooti of Gya, or some at Tehta?—All the payments connected with the Gya sub-division are made exclusively at Gya, and some of the payments connected with the sub-division are also made at Gya, but the opium weighments of the sub-division are completed at that place, and all payments at that time are made there. During the weighments, money is sent out under a guard specially entertained for this object.

2681. About what time does it take you at the close of the year to see the accounts squared, and the excess payments made?—About a month, from 10 to 3 p.m. daily. The factory is a quadrangular shed, enclosing a courtyard in which the khatadars and assistants are admitted, and the amla of the different kootis are seated in the surrounding sheds; one of these sheds is presided over by a sub-deputy opium agent, and the other by his assistant and the mofussil amla, namely, the gomashtah, mohurirs, mutasuddes, zilladars, and burkundazes are arranged on both sides. The khatadars, as before mentioned, are received in the order of the beats, distinguished by the zilladars, those from the greatest distance being taken first, and so on. The khatadars transact the business of engagement, and the business of advances and the necessary entries connected therewith are noted in several books and documents, namely, the hath-chitti, ikrar nama, or agreement, and the kooti cash book. Whichever of the factories has first completed the portion of work allotted for the day, including the payment of advances, comes first before the sub-deputy opium agent or his assistant, for the purpose of attesting in detail the payments that have been made. The cash book of the factory is laid before the sub-agent, or assistant, and each separate payment is attested by his initials. The khatadars come up in succession, and one after the other declare the several amounts they have received, the quantity of land for which they have made engagements, and receive the licenses which are counterparts of the engagements, and contain detailed entries of land engaged, and amount advanced, corresponding with the entries of the engagements, and the entries in the cash book. At the time when engagements are made as above for a new season in the Gya sub-division, the adjustments at the final close of accounts are effected in exactly the same routine, indeed, the khatadars make separate acknowledgments at the same time with regard to the sums received on the old account and on the new.

2682. Could you give us a scale of the pay of your establishment?—The pay of the sub-deputy opium agent in Gya Division is Rs. 870 --

The European Assistant - - - 300 --

The Native, ditto - - - 40 --

And Commission amounting yearly to - - - 1,500 --

Head Writer - - - 50 --

2d Head Writer - - - 25 --

Head Mohurir - - - 15 --

x 2

Two

Mr. C.
Hollings.

28 June
1860.

Mr. C.			Rs. a. p.
Hollings.	Two other, ditto, at 8 rupees each	16	- -
—	Mutasuddee - - - -	6	- -
28 June	Four Chuprasees, at Rs. 3. 8.	14	8 -
1860.	Duftari - - - -	4	- -
	Sweeper - - - -	2	- -

Mofussil Establishment:

Gomashtas of Kootis (4)	- -	40	- -
One, ditto	- -	30	- -

(The Gomashtas have a commission of Rs. 1. 4. a maund on the excess produce beyond a fixed standard of weight, and consistency which each Kooti has.)

One Mohurir	- - - -	15	- -
One, ditto	- - - -	10	- -
One Mustasuddi	- - - -	8	- -

There are 80 zilladars for my whole sub-division, and about 24 burkundazes. The zilladars and burkundazes receive four rupees a month.

2683. Do you consider the salaries of the native establishment, from the native assistant downwards, adequate guarantees against the practice of extortion or abuse?—I think the gomashtas are sufficiently remunerated. The mohurirs and mutasuddis might, I think, receive larger salaries. I would raise the scale for 1st Mohurir - - - 25 rupees a month.

2d ditto, and mutasuddi to 20 „ „

The zilladars also are in my opinion inadequately paid; I should be glad to see their salaries raised to at least 12, or that is to say, treble.

2684. Mr. Temple.] Do the ryots ever complain that the money which is paid them in your presence is subsequently abstracted from them by the amla?—Such complaints do occur, but rarely, perhaps once in a season, and generally there is found to be some private dispute.

2685. Does such a thing as dustoori exist?—The probability is it does, but we have no official knowledge of it, and whenever complained of, there is generally want of proof.

2686. Do you believe those exactions amount to any considerable per-centage on the receipts of the ryots?—No; otherwise the remedy is in the ryot's own hands. The amount, which is small, partakes of those conciliatory gifts which oriental dependants are in the habit of giving to their superiors.

2687. Do the ryots ever complain to you of dustoori?—Very rarely.

2688. Do you find the servants of Government generally faithful and honest in reporting on the extent of cultivation, in preventing the adulteration of the juice, and other matters within the sphere of their duty?—Generally, certainly. It has never happened to me to find deficient cultivation when it has been reported complete, or vice versâ; and with regard to the adulteration of opium, I believe that the establishment is faithful to prevent it as far as lies in their power, but adulteration may be effected in a moment, and it is impossible that the establishment can at all times be cognizant of it, especially as some forms of adulterated opium are made to simulate very closely the pure drug. I have no experience of complicity or mal-practices on the part of the opium amla in the Gya Division.

2689. Is the adulteration only discovered at Patna, or is it also discovered in the district?—The opium is most carefully examined at the district, and afterwards re-examined at Patna, when a very strict and chemical process takes place; all opium when presented in the mofussil factory is examined in detail by the gomashtas and purkias, or examiners, and afterwards in the same detail by the sub-deputy and his assistant, assisted also by other purkias or examiners. It is then admitted to the factory and taken to the scale to be weighed, and then packed in jars and sent to Patna.

[Commission adjourned at 5 P.M.]

Saturday, 30th June 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C.S., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., C.S.; Reverend J. Sale; Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

Mr. CHARLES HOLLINGS' Examination continued.

Mr. C. 2690. Mr. Sale.] ARE the servants employed in the opium department entrusted with police powers?—None of them are, either small or great; from the sub-deputy down to the zilladars and burkundazes, unless powers are specially conferred upon them by Government, police powers are not exercised.

2691. You have already stated that you have the powers of a deputy magistrate; for what purpose were those powers given to you, and why are they continued up to the present time?—During the disturbances in 1857, I was appointed a deputy magistrate in the Behar district, and the grounds stated in a communication I received from the Government of Bengal were, that it was supposed my services, as a deputy magistrate, might be rendered useful in the district. They have continued since then without any reason assigned.

2692. Would those powers be ever used to overcome any reluctance on the part of the cultivators, supposing such reluctance to exist?—No; because any attempt at compulsion or coercion, would be tantamount to a vacation of my office of sub-deputy opium agent, and cause my dismissal. There is a clause in the Act of 1857, which

Mr. C.
Hollings.
—
30 June
1860.

which provides, that coercion on the part of sub-deputy opium agents and other responsible district officers, as regards the continuance or extension of poppy cultivation, would render vacant their appointments. My duties as deputy magistrate have never had any connexion whatever with the duties of my opium office. It is very doubtful whether a tithe or twentieth of the people engaged in the cultivation of poppy are aware of my having any magisterial office at all.

2693. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] If you were a sugar planter in your district, and if you were at the same time vested with magisterial powers, could you not compel the ryots to take advances, even if they were not willing to do so?—I believe it would be very dangerous to attempt it, because holding a commission of any kind in the service of Government, would always create a more serious responsibility than is incurred by private individuals; and abuse of public authority, for the promotion of private ends, would certainly soon become known, and the abuse corrected.

2694. President.] As deputy magistrate, have you never had to try a case in which poppy cultivators, or a servant in the department were concerned, i. e., in which the cultivation of the poppy formed any part of the complaint?—No, never; I have only the powers of an assistant, and can only hold inquiries in cases which may be made over to me by the magistrate, unless during the time of my being in temporary charge of a subdivision, when cases of a very trifling nature could be disposed of on my own authority. With reference to the infringements of the opium regulations, the cases are made over to the magistrate of the district, for trial, after preliminary inquiries in my cutcherry; but I hold these inquiries in my capacity of sub-deputy opium agent, as is done by all other officers of the same grade in the opium department, and the decision of these cases rests with the magistrate.

2695. From papers forwarded to the Commission, they have been given to understand that a large number of cultivators have, in the last few years, thrown up the cultivation of the poppy in the Behar and Benares agencies; can you state, from your experience in the Behar district, what has been the cause of this?—The cause, in my opinion, is two-fold; first, that within the period which I understand the question to refer to, a reduction in the price paid by Government for opium has been made; and almost immediately after the rule was introduced for reducing the price of opium, a great rise occurred in the value of several articles of agricultural produce; the cultivation of those products was naturally more acceptable to the people, on account of their being more profitable.

2696. What is the form when a cultivator wishes to throw up his cultivation?—There is no form necessarily adopted. The cultivator intimates to the khatadar, that he does not wish to engage farther, and the khatadar excludes his name from the engagement he makes for subsequent seasons.

2697. Do the khatadars ever throw up their cultivation?—Yes; and in that case also, the notification to the department would not be a formal notification, but the fact would appear from the omission of the particular khata from the records of engagements. It sometimes happens that khatadars, as well as assamis, will verbally, in cutcherry, announce their intention of discontinuing the cultivation of the poppy; but no formal renunciation of it is usual or necessary, and it is not considered a matter of course that engagements continue from year to year. An actual renewal of the engagement every season is required, in order that the engagement should continue. Active and positive steps are necessary for the renewal of the engagements; it is never inferred that they are renewed.

2698. Mr. Sale.] Is the Commission then to understand distinctly that neither khatadars nor assamis would, under any circumstances, find any difficulty in relinquishing their cultivations, if they wished to do so?—Certainly; neither khatadar nor assami would find any difficulty in relinquishing any portion, or the whole of his cultivation, if he wished it.

2699. President.] Is no persuasion ever used to induce them to continue cultivating?—All fair persuasion is constantly used by all the members of the department. We are at present notifying as extensively as possible to all classes of the agricultural community, that the price of opium, from the commencement of the ensuing season, will be raised from three rupees eight annas to four rupees per seer; and all classes interested in agriculture, have been invited to avail themselves of the increased remunerativeness of opium; and to encourage and extend the cultivation of the poppy, wherever it is conducive to their interests to do so.

2700. Could you state about how many cultivators have thrown up the cultivation of the poppy in the Behar district, within five years?—I have a statement with me, which shows the number of agriculturists engaged in the cultivation of the poppy, from 1853-54 to 1857-58; and by the permission of the Commission, I file it, as part of my evidence. The number of assamis fell off after 1855-56, in consequence of the reduced price of opium. In this statement there is a difference between the rates of produce and the rates entered in the statements A and B, submitted with my letter, filed on Thursday. This arises from the calculation of produce; the present statement being made upon the portion of the land bearing a fair crop, after deduction of failures, but in the statements submitted on Thursday, the average was taken upon the whole land engaged for, without deduction.

2701. Do you think that the falling off of cultivation has been that there have been fewer assamis to each khata, or a good many khatadars have given up?—I think that the falling off has generally been amongst assamis rather than khatadars.

2702. Mr. Temple.] If a cultivator ceases to cultivate, do you practically summon or question him?—No; I should not trouble myself about it, unless the falling off was very general or extensive; in which case, I should think it necessary to ascertain the cause, merely for the satisfaction of myself and my superiors in the department.

2703. But except on the recent occasion, has such a falling off ever occurred within your experience?—No.

2704. It appears from the statement put in by you, that the falling off commenced in 1855-56, and continued to 1857-58; how was it in 1858-59?—In my district, about the same.

2705. Then in 1859 and 1860, how did affairs go on?—In 1859 and 1860 there was no perceptible improvement, although our rates of payment

Mr. C.
Hollings.

30 June 1860.

Mr. C.
Hollings.

30 June
1860.

were raised; and it became apparent from the season of 1859 and 1860, that a further rise in price would be required in 1860 and 1861.

2706. Do you feel confident that the effect of the increased payment will be perceptible in the increased cultivation in 1860 and 1861?—I am confident that the effect of the increased price will be perceptible in increased cultivation, but it is to be remembered that as the announcement was only made in April and May, much of the land which might have been devoted to poppy cultivation was taken for sugar-cane. The future increase of cultivation will no doubt be progressive unless indeed a rise in price in other commodities shall affect the relative value of opium.

2707. In which case you will have to rely solely on such further increase of price as may render the cultivation of opium remunerative relative to other kinds of cultivation?—Yes.

2708. Do you think that by what are called collateral advantages you could make up to the ryot for any deficiency of direct remuneration, such, for instances, as loans without interest to buy cattle, schools, medicines, protection from zemindars, lowering of rents, &c.?—Unless the thing itself pays, no incidental advantages will recommend it practically.

2709. Suppose that you as agent were the landlord of an estate or estates, and you wished the cultivation of opium to be continued without diminution at the rate of price which existed from, say in 1856-57, could you by offering the collateral advantages above mentioned induce the ryots willingly to continue the cultivation?—Decidedly not, in my opinion.

2710. Could you under such circumstances induce them to continue the cultivation by exercising the legitimate influence of a landlord, but of course without resorting to violence or other unlawful means?—The influence of a landlord would certainly induce cultivators to sacrifice their own interests to a certain extent, but this would be regarded as a voluntary tax to which they submitted, to a limited extent, in order to conciliate their landlords.

2711. You think then, that to a limited extent, say five or 10 per cent. of the land, this might be practicable?—I cannot state the exact limit to which such imposition might be carried, but I think to the extent of their ability the ryots would willingly sacrifice something of their profits to please their landlord.

2712. When the price of opium was at its lowest, did you see any symptoms of excitement or discontent among the opium cultivators generally?—No symptoms of excitement, because there was no pressure. The cultivators of the poppy who found it unremunerative, gave it up, and cultivated any thing else which pleased them better. During the late disturbances, no share whatever was taken by the poppy cultivators generally in the disorder that partially prevailed, and in the district of Shahabad, and I believe also in Bettia and Mootahari the cultivators ran considerable risk of loss and ill treatment in their endeavours to deliver their opium produce to the Government factories, and to save it from the hands of the rebels.

2713. President.] Then we are clearly to understand that the commencement of the decreasing cultivation is in your opinion solely attributable to the two causes of reduction; the price paid by Government, and the general rise of price in other products?—To these two causes combined, with the rise in the price of labour and the effect of emigration.

2714. Suppose at the time those causes commenced to operate, that the magistrate of Behar had issued a parwana, stating that it was optional with cultivators to cultivate the poppy, that certain missionaries had preached the doctrine of equality and justice to the ryots, telling them that they were suffering from oppression and injustice on account of poppy cultivation, and that an emissary from the hostile zemindar, mentioned in your evidence of Thursday last, had instigated the ryots not to renew their contracts, or not to take advances; do you think any of the cultivators would have been affected or excited thereby?—The effect of any such causes, or of all of them combined, in my opinion, depends upon the cultivator's actual experience of the remunerativeness or otherwise of the poppy cultivation. No persuasion would induce him to forego a positive advantage he knew he derived, and therefore to produce any effect, it would be necessary to make clear to the cultivator either that the production of opium was unremunerative, or to propose to him something that should be more remunerative and beneficial to him than the poppy. Supposing either of these contingencies to be established, I have no doubt that a public notice of the nature referred to, and the promulgation of doctrines mentioned in the question, would lead to disinclination to continue the cultivation of the poppy upon the old terms, and if compulsion were had recourse to, the tendency of it would be no doubt to create excitement.

2715. Mr. Temple.] Have you adopted any measures of precaution or severity towards the cultivators, to prevent the illicit production or smuggling of opium?—The illicit production of opium can easily be prevented, because it can only be effected during a considerable interval of time, and at any moment would be liable to discovery and punishment; with regard to smuggling, the difficulty is greater, because for six weeks or two months opium being left in the custody of the cultivator, and stored in every village, and in almost every hut, the disposal of it by the cultivators cannot be absolutely controlled, the precautions that are taken by the department against smuggling are carefully to estimate the yield of the crop, and to take from the khatadars attestations of the correctness of the estimates made. Then it is notified to the zemindars, to the police, and to the khatadars, what are the rewards and penalties bestowed and incurred in cases of convictions of opium smuggling. But it is still to be apprehended that the check is far from sufficient.

2716. Do you find that the measures you have to take, produce any disinclination on the part of the ryots to engage in the cultivation?—No.

2717. Are we to infer from a previous answer that you think opium cultivators could do as well without the present summary law for enforcing contracts as with it?—Such is my own individual opinion, but other officers of experience in the department I know think otherwise.

2718. Is there any difference in circumstances between your ryots and the others?—The difference is only one of opinion, the ryots are all equally circumstanced.

2719. Mr. Sale.] Have you or any of your subordinates the power of attaching property under this law?—No, for breach of contract the cases are tried in the collector's court upon the committal committal of the sub-deputy opium agent; the ulterior proceedings are taken by the collectors. In my district I have never had recourse to such proceedings.

2720. Mr. Temple.] Have you any other papers which you would wish to file?—On Thursday I filed a few papers connected with the opium transaction of a khatadar named Hiramun of Nadragunge within the circle of the Gya Mofussil factory; I have a complete set of papers relating to Hiramun khatadar, and exhibiting every operation in which a khatadar is engaged with the opium functionaries. I beg leave to file all these papers, with the permission of the Commission, with the papers filed on Thursday, they amount to 19 in all; I also would wish to file annual statements of 1858-59 of the Gya sub-division, that is a general account, No. 1, and an abstract account of aggregate advances made, lands cultivated, opium received, cost of the opium, and balance paid to, and received from, and due by, the ryots in the sub-deputy agency of Gya.

Mr. G.
Hollings.

30 June
1860.

ARMAN SHEIKH, Inhabitant of Porahatti, Zillah Jessore, Sub-division Magoorah, Thannah Jhenida, near the Pobahatti Factory, Pobahatti Concern; called in, and Examined on oath.

2721. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] WHAT jumma have you, and what quantity of land do you cultivate?—I have a jumma of nine rupees and 17 beegahs of land.

2722. Do you cultivate indigo?—I don't sow indigo. My father used to. After his death, which happened when I was a minor, the factory sahib took possession of 10 beegahs of that land, and used to sow it with indigo. Seven beegahs were in my possession, but in default of rent, they took possession of those seven beegahs also, the indigo land which the factory took possession of, they did not give me any remission for in the rent account. They claim rent from me for the 17 beegahs. I am not able to pay it, and therefore am obliged to absent myself from home.

2723. How many years is it since you have paid rent?—For 10 or 11 years I have not been able to pay rent.

2724. Then how do you manage to support yourself?—I carry letters for the zemindars and other people. By this means I get three or four rupees a month.

2725. Then what is your reason for coming here?—I come here in the hope of getting justice.

2726. Mr. Sale.] Are you not aware that we have not power to decide in cases of disputes about lands?—I heard from various parties that there was a Commission sitting here, who would decide very carefully on our behalf.

2727. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Have you ever complained to the magistrate?—I have when Mr. Seton-Karr was magistrate of Jessore.

2728. Mr. Temple.] Do you at present occupy your own land; if not, for how long is it that you have ceased to occupy it?—For about 10 or 11 years I have not been in possession of my land.

2729. Have you been actually out of possession during that time?—Yes, with the exception of one beegah on which my house is situated.

2730. During this period, who has occupied and cultivated your land?—Ten beegahs have been cultivated as the factory nij-abad, and seven beegahs have been given to four ryots, i. e.,

To Ameer Uddin Mulla	-	1 beegah.
To Chand Sudu	-	2 "
To Kalimuddin	-	1 "
To Chand Shah	-	1 "

and two beegahs were washed away by the river.

2731. Are the above five beegahs cultivated with indigo?—No, they are cultivated with rice.

2732. Were you ejected from these lands, or did you abandon them for any cause?—I didn't leave them myself. The planter took possession. I can't say that I was exactly ejected.

2733. Did you ever try to recover them?—I asked Mr. Oatts himself to give me the land, and he told me to go to his kooti; when I went there the amla interfered, and drove me away. Once I took a letter from my zemindar to the Sahib; nothing resulted therefrom.

2734. When you went to the magistrate, what was the result?—The magistrate gave an order to the darogah to keep the peace, but not to give possession.

Arman
Sheikh.

SADHU MUNDUL, Inhabitant of Daoki, Hardi Thannah, Zillah Nuddea, Poamari Factory, Katchikatta Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

2735. Mr. Temple.] WHAT particular oppression have you to complain of?—The factory people sowed indigo upon my rice unknown to me. I remonstrated with the amin and takidger, and they, professing to know nothing about it, went and reported it to the dewan, who went and called the Sahib, and pointed out the land, and said we were getting up a case against the factory servants; and the Sahib, through people who were there, we hiding in our houses, gave orders to plunder my house. This happened in Jyeshtha. They plundered my house, and took away the things to Gosain Durgapore.

2736. Mr. Sale.] What things did they take away?—Six bullocks, four milch cows, one cow, and one large wooden chest containing clothes and three rupees in cash, and some silver ornaments, and one maund and a half of wheat seed. They also took away my son and kept him for four days. About the end of Ashar we gave the dewan 11 rupees, and he let our cows go. For want of the cows I lost my rice crop. All these particulars I was prepared to state before Mr. A. Hills.

2737. Mr. Temple.] Were you yourself present when your house was plundered?—I was in the house of Muchai Sirdar, which is adjoining, and saw what was going on.

2738. How many men took part in this, and were the factory servants there?—I saw about 12 or 14 factory servants.

2739. Was Mr. Hills himself present?—No; he gave the order, and went away.

2740. Did you yourself hear him give the order?—Yes; I heard him very distinctly give the order to loot the house entirely.

2741. Did you complain to the magistrate?—I didn't complain, because my family and myself

Sadhu Mundul.

Sadhu Mundul.

30 June
1860.

would be obliged to quit the country; i. e., I didn't complain at the time, but last year I made a verbal complaint to the magistrate of Damurhuda, who would not receive it.

2742. Then how had you the courage to come here?—Some persons told me that two gentlemen were sitting in Calcutta to hear complaints, and I came here.

2743. Have you sown indigo this season?—We cultivated some lands, which they forcibly compelled us to cultivate with indigo; but this spring I have not sown any.

2744. Are you occupying your house and cultivating your lands as usual?—Yes, I am.

2745. What crop are you growing on the lands on which you used to sow indigo?—We have sown rice.

2746. Were you in the habit of receiving advances year by year?—Generally they put us off towards Phalgun, before they tell us our account. They then tell us that the account is made up, and whatever little is due is taken up by the devan's and takidgir's fees, and for seeds, stamp paper; and if there is a rupee or two beyond this, they say that they put it to the rent account.

2747. When did you last finger coin?—Not for 10 years; before, I used to get some. Since the factory got the permanent lease or putni I have never received any.

2748. Are you sure that there are no advances standing against you in the factory books?—If they have written anything, I can't say, but I have received nothing.

2749. What further request have you?—That I should be confronted with Mr. Archibald Hills and his devan. I have one thing more to say. I have heard that they have debited me in the factory books with nine rupees; and when I make my statement before them, I would wish that they be asked where they gave me the nine rupees.

[Commission adjourned at 6 P. M.]

Thursday, 5th July 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C.S., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., C.S.; W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Reverend J. Sale;
Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

Mr. EDWARD CHARDON, of the Goldar Factory, in Nuddea, called in; and Examined on oath.

Mr.
E. Chardon.
5 July 1860.

2750. President.] WILL you state what factory you have been at previously?—I have been three years in Goldar, and I was two years before that at Katlamari factory of the Sinduri concern. I have been ten years in Kishnaghur and Jessore altogether. Previous to being in this Sinduri concern, I was at Khalispore, near Khoolnia.

2751. Mr. Fergusson.] There was a ryot of the name of Alum Biswas, who appeared before this Commission and made certain statements respecting his dealings with the Goldar concern; what have you to state in regard to them?—This man did sow two and half beegahs with indigo, according to his khata. With regard to the statement that he paid two rupees for road making, the custom of the concern is to ask two pice in each rupee, in this way he having paid nine annas during four years. He never paid anything for the races; that is, I never authorised any such thing.

2752. President.] Can you undertake to say that no official of the factory made such a demand for the races?—I can say then, that if such a demand had been made, it must have been made known to me, as the ryots are in the habit of making known their complaints to me night and day.

2753. Mr. Fergusson.] What do you say about the tolls levied by the factory on the roads?—There is a Government toll just below Carragoda factory, where the bridge crosses the river; the toll has been leased to Mr. Meares by the Government, and therefore the factory people collect it.

2754. Was the man cast in damages in a breach of contract case?—Yes, he was. He had received two rupees cash advances from the factory gomashta, and I personally paid him as a loan five rupees to help him in his indigo cultivation for this year.

2755. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Could you swear that the two rupees cash advance was paid to him?—No, but it was entered in the books at the time, and I signed it a day or two after.

2756. President.] Are not advances always paid in your presence?—Always. This was an exceptional case, as I had a number of people in my house, and I could not go, even to Khejura. The five rupees were paid by myself at Goldar into the man's own hands.

2757. Mr. Fergusson.] Did he pay up the damages?—Yes; he paid them within a few days.

2758. Do you know how his account stands with the factory?—Yes, he owes me five rupees on a loan account, but I cannot say whether the late decision against him squares the other accounts or not.

2759. Can you state what (if any) sums of money you have paid him during the four preceding seasons?—Yes, I can. In 1857 I paid him him at Khejura six rupees eight annas of fazil, and he cut 21 bundles per beegah all round; besides, I paid him five rupees of advances. In 1858, I paid him four rupees eight annas of advances. In 1859, I paid him still cash advances; I think about two rupees eight annas, or three rupees. All these sums were paid by my own hands or by my gomashita in my immediate presence at Khejura factory. His statement of his being forced to plough continually is untrue, being a be-ilaka ryot. I have no power over him, nor have any of my servants, and I shall be only too happy to see him sow.

2760. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] When the advances are made, do the ryots sign agreements?—Those who can write do sign, and those who can't merely hold the pen. We don't take these from all who can write, but only from the budzats or evil disposed.

2761. What number of ryots are under your advances?—I don't know exactly, but I think there may be 2,000 or 1,800.

2762. Out of the 1,800 ryots, from what number do you take agreements?—I should say I have not in each factory more than 20 or 30.

2763. President.] Then you don't charge your ryots with stamp paper?—Yes, we do just the same, because we think it binds the ryots, i.e. two annas each.

2764. Then do you do this every year?—Yes, every year.

2765. For what period of years are your contracts?—Some are for 10 years, some seven, and some three; but whether it is for 10, seven, or three, we charge two annas every year.

2766. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Did Alum Biswas sign any agreement when he took the advances?—I don't remember, as I have had so many cases in court under the new Act.

2767. Do you not make the be-ilaka ryot sign agreements?—I say a few of them, the budzats.

2768. Mr. Sale.] During the four seasons you have had charge of Golar, did Alum Biswas get a profit from his cultivation?—Yes; he has had a good profit one year, and cleared his advances every season.

2769. Then the amount of advances is less and less every year; if he cleared his advances, how is that the debt was gradually increasing?—Because we have had two wretched seasons, and last year a gale of wind just while manufacturing, and planters have been far more injured proportionally than the ryots during these bad seasons.

2770. Then you do not always give advances at the rate of two rupees a beegah?—No; if the ryot does not clear his first advances, it is impossible for him to get fresh ones.

2771. President.] Do you use the same standard in measurement for the indigo as for the zemindary beegah, and, if not, will you state the difference?—No, I don't use the same standard of beegah. The indigo beegah is a little larger than the zemindary beegah. The indigo beegah has always been the same since the factory was established 30 years ago.

2772. Are your books regularly brought up according as each item of expenditure is made?—I say, yes; they are regularly brought up. I never allow those of the head factories to be longer than three days in arrears. Those of the out factories are brought to me once a week for signature.

72—I.

2773. Mr. Temple.] Will you be good enough to describe what measures you adopt in making payments to ryots for advances or other purposes?—At the head factory where I reside, I summon all the ryots to come the next day. My cutcherry is in my own house, and my amla are in the house with me, and my ryots come into the verandah. The accounts are all written before, and every ryot knows exactly before hand what he has to receive. They are all paid, either from my own hands or in my presence by the mohurrirs or amla. They generally have to receive so many rupees and some odd annas. The rupees are paid then and there, and then I make a list of the odd annas to which each is entitled, and the total in rupees of these odd annas are given into the hands of the most influential ryot of the village who takes the list, and on getting change, he distributes it. He generally sends a factory servant with him, to see that the distribution is properly made. Not only do I pay the advances on this myself, but in the same way I pay for ploughs, carts, bullocks, boats, &c.

2774. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you think it possible that the amla can take such sums as have been stated from the people when you pay in this way?—I think it is impossible that such sums as were mentioned by the ryots could be taken; but I believe that ryots pay to the factory amla dustoori, the same as the servants of native talookdars, native indigo planters, native railway contractors, or any other business which is carried on through native servants. I have tried to check this before; but the nature of the natives is so perverse, that they will have their own way. At Golar factory, two or three years ago, I had a lot of cash advances to a village of the Golar factory. I warned the ryots not to pay any dustoori to the amla, and I saw them go to their villages, with their advances in their hands; and when they thought that I could not see them, they went round to my amla's houses through the village, and then, of their own free will, gave them the dustoori, after I had directly prohibited them from so doing. Their object in doing this is to induce the amla to wink at their not fulfilling their contracts to plough, sow, weed, &c.

2775. Mr. Sale.] Then, besides the two pice on every rupee of cash paid to the ryots deducted for roads, you do not sanction any deduction from the cash paid to the ryots?—No, I do not; and if there were more taken, it must come to my knowledge.

2776. Mr. Fergusson.] Is a man named Kadir Biswas an indigo ryot of yours?—Yes, he was. He has not sown this year, and I am proceeding against him. I assert that it is not true that the factory ever took any thatching grass without paying for it, and I am certain that his ploughs have always been paid for by me at the end of every season. I assert that the factory never cut down 25 babul trees.

2777. President.] Do you believe it to be true that he paid the sums mentioned to the amin and takidgir?—No, certainly not; I do not believe it, and if he has done it, it is his own fault; and if he had paid the amount, he could always have had redress by coming to me, as, before these recent rows broke out, I had cutcherry every day for three and four hours, and my factory was always full, ryots coming from six to eight miles to get justice.

2778. Did you burn bricks last year, and where did you get the wood from?—I burnt bricks in the

Mr.
E. Chardon.
5 July 1860.

Mr.
E. Chardon.
5 July 1860.

the cold weather of 1858-59, but it was all done by contract. I pay a certain sum, and the contractor does everything.

2779. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Did you sue many ryots under the Summary Act?—Yes, several, both in Kishnaghur as well as Jessore. Nearly the whole of the Jessore ryots were on the point of paying the damages, when I came to terms with them, and they have finally sown the usual quantity. Only one Kishnaghur village did so, and that was through the influence of the Jessore magistrate, because it was surrounded by Jessore villages.

2780. President.] What proportion of your ryotti cultivation have you sown this year?—Out of 5,000 beegahs of ryotti, 900 beegahs have been sown.

2781. Can you explain the reasons of this extensive unwillingness to sow?—Yes; there were two or three different reasons. The principal one was, the perwanna issued by Mr. Eden. The contents were known to my ryots before the October sowings. I was surprised to find that this news had flown so fast among my ryots, and I had been told, and honestly believe, that it had been entirely spread through my ryots by missionaries at first, and that they incited the ryots to break their contracts, and, in fact, in the Mofussil it was a common saying of the ryots that the missionaries told them not to sow indigo, and that Government would support them. During this bad state of the country, Mr. Herschel, the present magistrate of Kishnaghur, arrived, and things got from bad to worse, from the extraordinary conduct of Mr. Herschel and the contradicting perwannas which he issued, that the ryots were quite bewildered, and did not know what to do. Then the police of Kishnaghur, which is corrupt from beginning to end, thinking that the Government was against us, supported the missionaries, and were at the head of the whole of those ryots; and as far as my factories are concerned, Mr. Herschel's police entirely shut my factories up. I can prove that the police in the Taltala factory were seen at the head of 500 or 600 ryots, preventing them from sowing; and after they had ruined my factory, they, with those ryots, went across to the Peerpore concern, and in a very few hours managed to get the whole of the ryots of that quiet concern to revolt. There is another European, not a planter, who could swear to the fact of having seen the police behaving in the way in which I have mentioned, and the gentleman in question, Mr. Ducas, gave his evidence regarding this matter before both Mr. Herschel and Mr. Maclean.

2782. Mr. Sale.] Can you state what ryots those were who told you that the missionaries incited the ryots to break the contracts?—I cannot mention any names in particular, as it is a thing generally accredited throughout the whole district of Kishnaghur.

2783. What missionaries are near your factories, and how far is the nearest missionary station from your people?—Kapsadanga is the nearest missionary station, and is about 15 or 16 miles from Goldar. Mr. Schurr is, I believe, resident there.

2784. Have you had any personal communication with that gentleman?—No; I have seen him, I think, at Sinduri, some time ago.

2785. Then you have no other reason but these flying reports that would lead you to believe that Mr. Schurr has done anything of the kind you have mentioned?—I most positively believe that both Mr. Schurr and Mr. Bomwetsch are in a great way the cause of the lamentable state in which the district is at present.

2786. President.] How many bundles do you give for the rupee, and do you think that what you give is sufficient to make it profitable for the ryots?—I give four bundles for the rupee in the Goldar division, and I feel quite satisfied that in that concern, where the lands are very fine, it is quite sufficient to make indigo as profitable as rice, if the ryots do not neglect their indigo lands.

2787. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] What could be the object of this neglect, if indigo paid them as well as rice?—Because for indigo they take advances in money, and that crop they cannot eat; and by the time the indigo is growing, they have spent all the advances they have received, and they have very little more to expect from that indigo, whilst the rice is then on the ground; and however indifferent the rice crop may be, they will always manage to rob the mahajan of some portion of the rice; whilst the indigo is of no use that way. Besides this, the mahajan invariably puts the ryot against the planter; as it is his intent to oppose the planter. In endeavouring to adjust accounts between the ryot and mahajan, I have frequently to cut down their exorbitant charges. Besides this, the talookdars of the village are always putting the ryots against the planter.

2788. Mr. Fergusson.] What has been your experience in this year in bringing complaints before the magistrates and assistant magistrates of Kishnaghur?—My experience has been as much as most years since these disturbances took place; because my factory has been one of the worst in this district. I have had a good deal to do with Mr. Maclean, and I have also two or three cases before Mr. Herschel; and the result of all this is, that I have not been able to obtain a particle of justice from either one man or the other.

2789. In what way have you failed in obtaining justice?—I pointed out to Mr. Maclean himself the cattle destroying my indigo; he gave me peons to catch them and bring them. Those that we caught were released almost immediately, with a reprimand to the owners, which encouraged the ryots to repeat the trespass, so that a very large quantity of my indigo was the very next day destroyed.

2790. President.] Have you any complaints to make of the conduct of the police?—I have to complain against the Kishnaghur police in every way. I have no complaints to make against the Jessore police in the present matter. It is perfectly impossible to get a particle of justice without bribing for every thing. In the truest cases, true reports will never be given, unless you bribe some of the amlas who are sent to investigate it; even if a defendant is summoned by the magistrate, we are obliged to bribe the man to arrest the defendant. If we don't do so, he takes money from the defendant, and swears he has not seen him. I do not know a single case I have had in court in which I have not invariably been obliged to bribe, since I have been a planter, to obtain justice; and very often, after I have bribed to have a true report filed, the opposite party has bribed a second time, and given more than I have given to get an opposite statement made, and I have lost my true case.

2791. Mr.

2791. Mr. Fergusson.] What effect do you consider the removal of Mr. Maclean has had upon the temper of the ryots?—It has made things worse than ever, because the ryots know and say that Mr. Maclean has been turned away from Damurhuda, because he gave us a few paltry damages under the new Act; and that from what we have seen of Mr. Bell, it is quite evident to me and other planters, from the way in which he has dismissed our cases, that he is so prejudiced against us that there is no way of obtaining justice. The same kind of evidence which had satisfied Mr. Maclean and Mr. Molony is at once rejected by him. The natives also believe that from the very fact of the Government having taken away Mr. Maclean from Damurhuda, he being a civilian, and immediately after sending us two Sudder Ameens, the Government thinks our cause so lost that a civilian is too good for us.

2792. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Were you more successful in your breach of contract cases before Messrs. Maclean and Molony than before the other magistrates?—Yes; I never lost a single case either before Mr. Maclean or Mr. Molony.

2793. Will you be pleased to state what number of cases you instituted under the Sowing Act before Messrs. Molony and Maclean?—No; I have no recollection, on account of the various ways in which the complaints were directed to be brought.

2794. What proofs were you required to produce before Messrs. Molony and Maclean, and what proofs are required by Mr. Bell?—The rokar of the factory, pattunjat, ryots' hisab, besides as much evidence as could be got.

2795. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you observed any difference in the condition of the ryots in parts of the country cultivated with indigo, with parts that are not cultivated?—I have not personally, because I have not been where indigo is not grown. But the principal agent for the contractors of the Eastern Bengal Railway, Mr. Carr, who had formerly been engaged on the East Indian line, where there were no indigo factories, told me that the people of Kishnaghur were much more independent, and required much higher wages, if they would work at all, than in the other districts, and the women work, whereas here, none of them would work.

Mr.
E. Chardon.
5 July 1860.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE INDIGO COMMISSION AT KISHNAGUR.

Monday, 9th July 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., c. s., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., c. s., W. F. Fergusson, Esq., Reverend J. Sale, Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

W. J. HERSCHEL, Esq., Magistrate of Kishnagur, called in; and Examined on oath.

W. J.
Herschel,
Esq.

9 July 1860.

2799. President.] WILL you state to the Commission, whether you have had experience as regards the system of indigo planting in other districts besides Nuddea?—Very little, indeed. Nothing at all to what I have had during the last four months; but I was in charge of the subdivision of Aurungabad for about three years, when there were a good many disputes between planters and natives, zemindars or ryots. Also in the district of Shahabad, where I was for about a year, and where in a few instances I had to decide such disputes.

2800. In what years were you in Aurungabad, and what was the character of the disputes in which your interference as magistrate was sought?—I went to Aurungabad in August 1855, and left it in December 1858. The disputes generally at that time were between planters and zemindars, or between rival planters. There were a few cases between planters and ryots. The disputes between planters and zemindars were generally attempts on the part of the planters to extend their zemindary rights.

2801. Did you generally find the zemindars averse to granting leases, or to the extension of indigo cultivation?—The principal dispute arose between the Aurungabad concern and a Mahomedan zemindar, in which the planter claimed his rights under a decree of the Civil Court. I do not think that he was attempting to obtain an extension of rights by a bargain. There were other disputes between the Kudumsar concern and the Rajah of Moheshpore, in which ijaras were in dispute, but I have not sufficient recollection to state whether they were claimed as a right, or asked for as a bargain, and in neither of these two cases was the aversion of the ryots to indigo planting made any ground of objection before me. So far as it appeared before me, it was a simple contest between the two parties wishing to obtain the zemindary right. But there was another dispute generally going on, in which the Turtipore concern, in extending its cultivation, appeared to have come into collision with the ryots directly; whether they were supported or instigated by the shareholding landlords I cannot say. The case which came before me was between the planter and the ryots, and the latter expressed a decided aversion to cultivate indigo, or, rather, made the oppression attending the cultivation of it the ground of their objection.

2802. In the first case noticed by you, if the planter relied on a decision of the Civil Court, how was the zemindar able to offer any further opposition?—The decree gave Mr. McLeod 10 annas in certain villages, and the remaining six annas remained in the hands of the Mahomedan zemindar. The latter opposed the factory, as far as I recollect, through an agency of his own, and not by his ryots. The ryots sided with the zemindar when the question of the Mahomedan mosque was brought forward.

2803. Mr. Sale.] Did you form any opinion as to the feeling which existed in the minds of the zemindars towards planters and indigo cultivation, while at Aurungabad, and if so, what was that opinion?—In the two cases I first mentioned, as I said before, indigo was not mentioned in the matter; and it would be unfair to say that the zemindars entertained any hostile feeling towards the planters from the few cases that were before me, as there were many more who were on a friendly footing. As to the third instance, which included the greater part of the Khamra Thanna, I did then first entertain an idea that the evils of the indigo system were made use of by the opposing zemindars as an objection to allowing an extension of the planter's influence; but, during those three years, I never had my attention very much attracted to the indigo system itself as an agricultural pursuit.

2804. Mr. Temple.] Can you recollect the names of any considerable zemindar or zemindars who were friendly to the planters?—The zemindars were were very small zemindars indeed, and I don't think I can recollect the names of any of them.

2805. Mr. Fergusson.] During the time that you were at Aurungabad, did you hear or see anything which would induce you to have expected such an outbreak against indigo planting as that which has taken place this year?—Making allowances for the fact that I hold different opinions as to the management of different planters there, I was very much surprised to hear of the outbreak in the Kalapanee Aurungabad Factory, which, at the time it occurred, was in the hands of Mr. Rice, a gentleman who, I should have thought, was certain of the affections of the natives; and Mr. Henry Masyck, his predecessor, appeared to me to have managed well, though his dewan was certainly complained against rather bitterly sometimes. Still, under Mr. McLeod's management of the whole concern, I was certainly surprised that an outbreak should have taken place in it. I was less surprised at the attack on Baniagram, as the concern of which that forms a part, both on the Moorshedabad and Malda side of the river, has for many years past been the scene of the gravest outbreaks on the part of the ryots that I have seen in any district. I should observe, that the Buckrabad Factory, on the Malda side of the river, though at the time of the outbreak there it was under Mr. McLeod's management, had till lately been under the Shahsanee, a part of the Baniagram concern, and had been the scene of a most violent riot.

2806. During the time that you were there, were the disturbances to which you refer consequent on the ryots rising against the planters, or what were they?—Most of the disturbances which I refer to took place when I was at Malda, except the heavy one of Buckrabad, which took place a little before I joined Malda. The latter one was owing to a dispute between rival indigo concerns. Those which took place during my employment in Malda were between the shareholders of the concern itself.

2807. Mr. Salé.] Besides the case at Turtipore, have you met with any other instances of the ryots having expressed their dislike to the cultivation of indigo in that district?—Latterly, my attention was generally drawn to the subject, and in the year 1855 a planter told me that it was absurd to think that the ryots made any profit out of indigo.

2808. Mr. Fergusson.] When in that district, were you ever called upon by the ryots to give them protection against indigo planters?—I was called upon by the friends of two ryots, to release them after having been carried from Moorshedabad to the district of Malda, and I think I was called upon to prevent their cattle being carried off.

2809. President.] Will you state the result of the abduction of the two ryots?—I released the men from the Malda district. They had been imprisoned in a factory. The evidence in the case implicated Mr. Hedger personally, and I issued a warrant for his arrest. Owing to an irregularity in the process, the case was brought before the judge, who pronounced it illegal, and the magistrate of the district at the time at once struck the case off, or acquitted the defendant, I forget which. This would not have been the case if an appeal from my proceeding had not been made to the Government by Mr. Hedger direct, as the case would then have continued in mine own hands, and I could have completed the evidence.

2810. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] In whose factory were they confined in the district of Malda?—They were carried first to the Turtipore Factory, and I traced them to two or three factories belonging to the same concern before I released them.

2811. During the time you were in Aurungabad, will you state the number of kidnapping cases that were brought before you?—Excepting small cases of detention for a day by zemindars, I think I had only one other serious kidnapping case. It was by a man named Ahlad Singh, who wanted an ijara from a petty landholder, and he seized him as he was going along the road in open day, and sent him up from one end of the district to the other, then down the Ganges some 40 or 50 miles, then up into the Malda district, beyond Ingrezi bazaar. After about three weeks he turned up at the Khamra Thanna. The case was made over to a deputy magistrate, who sentenced the man to three months' imprisonment and a fine, which sentence the judge pronounced inadequate. I ought to state that Ahlahd Singh is not a landed proprietor of any extent, and, in this case, might have been acting benamee for some one else.

2812. President.] Can you state in what kind of indigo cases your interference or advice was asked for during the year of your incumbency in Shahabad?—I saw very few indigo cases in Shahabad. The only one of any importance that I remember was one in which a planter wanted to compel some ryots to sow indigo. He went over to the field in person, with a few burkundazes and some ploughs of his own. The ryots refused to allow him to plough, and he struck one of them with a riding whip, and one was slightly wounded with a sword in the head. One was seized and carried off to the factory, whence he was afterwards sent on to me by the planter, with a petition to the effect, that, in self-defence, he had seized this man to prevent an attack on himself by the villagers, which he saw impending. The place was nine miles from the station. I was on the spot myself five hours after the occurrence, and was met by the planter there. I found the plea of an impending affray utterly unfounded. I convicted the planter, and sentenced him to 200 rupees fine. The case was appealed, and the judge, admitting the facts to be proved, thought the act did not deserve punishment, as the man was acting in self defence.

2813. Can you state if the ryots in that case were ryots of a village held by the concern or not?—I think they were ilaka ryots.

2814. Mr. Temple.] Did you ever receive complaints in Shahabad from ryots to the effect that the cultivation of indigo was unprofitable?—No; the complaint always was that the planter was oppressive; it did not then assume the definite shape it has now.

2815. Were complaints regarding oppressions on the part of the planters frequent or rare?—In the case of the one planter, to whom I have alluded in the previous answer, they were decidedly frequent. The object, I believe, was to create a feeling against the honorary magistrate's powers that he held; at least, that was always thrown in my face when complaints were lodged. As regards other planters, I scarcely remember a complaint against them; they were remarkably quiet. There were, indeed, elaborate complaints

W. J.
Herschel,
Esq.

9 July 1860.

W. W.
Herschel,
Esq.

9 July 1860.

against Mr. Bingham, in Chynepore, but those complaints were clearly directed against the honorary magistracy he held, and proved to be utterly unfounded.

2816. As regards the complaints being directed against the honorary magistracy held by Mr. Bingham, and also by the other gentleman you mentioned, have you any knowledge as to who instigated those complaints, or how those complaints originated?—I have no idea that there was any instigation in Mr. Bingham's case, still less in the case of the other gentleman, Mr. Barton. In Mr. Barton's case the ryots thought he had abused his powers of honorary magistrate. In Mr. Bingham's case there was nothing to suggest such an idea.

2817. Then, if in Mr. Bingham's case there was no reason to suppose that he had abused the powers he held, how do you account for such complaints arising?—The powers given were unusual, and nothing was more natural than that occasion should be taken by any party, whose interests were opposed to the honorary magistrate, to throw suspicion on his probity.

2818. Was any zemindar, who had interests opposed to Mr. Bingham, concerned in those complaints?—Yes, they were preferred by such zemindars.

2819. President. You took charge of the district of Nuddea, both as magistrate and collector, on the 20th of last February; will you describe as fully as possible the state of the ryots, as regards indigo and indigo planting, as it was then and has since been brought to your notice?—With the exception of the sub-division of Santipore, and two thannas on the Bhagirutti, the whole of the rest of the district was very strongly excited on the subject of indigo planting. There appeared among the ryots a general sense of approaching freedom. They behaved as if about to be released from something very oppressive, and as if impatient of the slowness of the process. One general idea seemed to prevail, that the cultivation of indigo was stopped by the orders of the Government, and a good deal of irritation seemed to prevail, because they thought that this order, according to their ideas, was not carried out. Since then the idea has been entirely abandoned, and a very enlarged view of their rights has been acquired by the ryots; and, generally speaking, they seem to have stood upon those rights with moderation and firmness. A large quantity, I believe I might say about three-fourths, of the ordinary amount of indigo has been sown, and but for the special law that has been passed, and the general obedience on the part of the ryots, I doubt whether a tenth part of the ordinary sowings would have been got into the ground. Nothing but that law eradicated the idea that Government did not intend to put a stop to the cultivation of indigo. The passing of the law caused very great irritation among the ryots; and to that irritation, to a certain extent, is owing the deficiency in the present crop. As regards the sentiments of the ryots now about indigo, I think the feeling that existed formerly, though not aggravated, is ten times more determined, and that it will require very great management on the part of planters to continue their cultivation next year. At the same time, I see nothing in the present temper of the ryots to cause hopelessness to any planter who would meet a ryot entirely afresh on fair ground.

2820. Did you find this feeling of an expected deliverance to prevail both among ryots of villages held by factories and among ryots of villages not so held?—The manifestation was plainest in be-ilaka villages, but the planters appeared to stand upon very tender ground in their own zemindarys.

2821. Was it ever brought to your notice in any distinct or specific form, that emissaries from powerful individuals or associations were instigating the ryots to refuse to sow?—There have been a great number of charges brought against individuals for instigating the ryots not to sow. Where these persons were not servants, or as they may be called emissaries of zemindars, who had an interest in the village, they were those zemindars themselves, sometimes resident zemindars and sometimes zemindars who visited their villages occasionally; with this exception, in only one instance has a man been named to me as an emissary of Ram Ruttun Roy. This man's name was Mohesh Chatterjee, a well-known resident of the Damurhuda Subdivision, and therefore, perhaps not, strictly speaking, an emissary in the sense of the question; beyond this single case I have never had either an instance brought to my notice, still less a man named, as having come from beyond the limits of the district, to instigate the ryots; but it is, I believe, the case that mooktyars have been sent up on a salary by the British Indian Association to give legal advice to the ryots in cases pending in court; whether this is the case or not I cannot say positively, but an improved class of mooktyars have come from Calcutta for this purpose. I am aware also that ryots coming into Kishnaghur, without any idea of going down to Calcutta have been referred by agents (as I must suppose them to be) to Hurris Chunder Baboo, the editor of the "Hindu Patriot," and that those ryots have gone to him, and have had petitions prepared by him.

2822. Then on the whole it is not your opinion that emissaries have been sent either from Calcutta or from other districts to cause political agitation on the subject of indigo?—Certainly; agents have not been sent from village to village to stir up agitation by word of mouth, but there has been a very large correspondence, not only by letters but by means of a very large number of ryots, who have gone to Calcutta and have brought back verbal advice.

2823. Are you in a position to state who, in Calcutta or elsewhere, have furnished the ryots with advice?—Not except by common report. The ryots themselves have frequently quoted orders from the Government of Bengal, in the same way they quoted any other order that suited them, but from common report I have heard that they used to go to the editor of the "Hindu Patriot," and the ryots in the case which I referred to before admitted the fact. But I have no reason to suppose that the advice was improper.

2824. Mr. Temple. Can you inform the Commission, or could you ascertain readily the names of the mooktyars of an improved class who have come to this district from Calcutta, from the British Indian Association?—I cannot name them at this moment, but I can ascertain them.

2825. Have you yourself seen any of these men or heard them plead?—There is a mooktyar in my court who constantly pleads for the ryots. I am informed now that he is a regular practitioner of the court. He appeared on behalf of the ryots just when the others were reported to have

W. J.
Herschel,
Esq.

9 July 1866.

have been sent up, and as his face was new to me I thought he was one of them.

2826. Do you know whether any or all of these gentlemen speak English?—The one in my court certainly knows English, and so does the one at Damurhuda. I don't know about the one at Bongong.

2827. How did you become acquainted with the circumstance that these gentlemen were salaried by the British Indian Association?—By common report; so far particularised, that their salaries were stated to be 100 rupees a month. They are new men in this district, and are always employed in those cases on the ryots' behalf.

2828. Have you any reason to suppose that these men have merely pleaded as mooktyars, or have acted as emissaries?—They cannot have acted otherwise than as emissaries from their position, for they are in daily communication with Calcutta. They have certainly not abused their position; on the contrary, I think they have done good by controlling their clients; and on the whole, I was glad to have them, as without them I should have been in a very disagreeable position on the bench.

2829. Have you any reason to suppose that any mooktyar was sent to the courts by Mohesh Chatterjee?—No, not the slightest.

2830. You mentioned that there was a large correspondence at the time between the district and Calcutta; has that fact been verified by inquiry at the post office, as to the bulk of correspondence dispatched to Calcutta?—No; I made no such inquiries. The police reports constantly stated that the ryots quoted the contents of certain letters received by them. There is one fact which I would like to mention, which is, that before my arrival a letter was found in one village and was said to have been circulated among other villages, desiring the ryots never to cease petitioning until the Commission should come. This was an anonymous letter, and had every appearance of being genuine; I saw that letter myself, and could produce it. It was addressed to mandals of villages, and was sent in by Mr. Forlong to Mr. Drummond, my predecessor.

2831. On the whole, from what you know of the character of ryots in general, and Kishnaghur ryots in particular, do you think that these people could have made the manifestation they have unless they had received counsel from others more educated and experienced?—No popular movement of this kind ever takes place without leaders of some sort. I cannot attribute the existence of leaders in this case to any thing peculiar to the character of the ryots.

2832. Do you know any head ryots who have sufficient resolution and knowledge to stir up their own ryots, and also to communicate with other ryots in other parts of the district, and thus create a combination among themselves?—I could point out hundreds such. But the village leaders in this case, with few exceptions, had a strong interest in the question themselves. Leaders have sprung up in one village, who have in an incredibly short space of time gained an enormous influence in numbers of adjacent villages, and have lost it almost as quickly.

2833. On the whole, do you consider that the principal zemindars of the district have favoured the movement, or remained neutral?—On the whole their weight has been thrown into the scale against the planters, but to nothing like the extent to which it might have been, had they been so disposed.

2834. Do you know any zemindar who has exerted himself to suppress the movement?—Yes; Mr. Larmour, of the Mulnath concern, owes a great deal to the ultimate assent of the two principal zemindars, Sham Chunder Pal Chowdry and Habib-ul-Hossain.

2835. President.] Do you know of any zemindars; manufacturers of Indigo, whose interests have suffered by the recent dislike on the part of the ryots to sow indigo?—I know one instance: Moti Baboo; his ryots have refused to sow. He prosecuted a faquir and an opponent zemindar for instigation, both of which cases he lost. Encouraged by this, his opponents attempted downright intimidation, and were punished for it. He has suffered in his sowings. I know of no other case of positive loss; but native Indigo planters have felt a difficulty this year.

2836. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Is it not a fact that ryots of several villages had put in petitions, stating their unwillingness to cultivate indigo, even before you took charge of this district, and that on such occasions 400 or 500 ryots daily besieged the magistrate's scutcher?—I can only answer that, by stating what I found to be the habit of the ryots on my arrival, which was that they generally laid from 10 to 20 petitions of the kind daily, and there would generally be some 30 or 40 ryots in the Court House, who came up to present these petitions. Mr. Drummond told me I should expect these petitions, as he had received them himself.

2837. And did you, on that account, discourage the presenting of such petitions?—I put a stop to them.

2838. Are you aware that a disposition to resist the cultivation of indigo has existed in this district for upwards of two years?—I am no more aware of the fact than anyone else is, who reads the newspapers.

2839. Can you state how long it is since the village of Hanskali Govindpore has been quarrelling with its planter; and whether indigo cultivation has been totally stopped for the last two years in that village?—I have no particular knowledge of dates, but I know there is a village in Mr. White's concern, Batua, I think it is called, which refused to sow indigo about the time stated in the question, and that it has steadily refused to sow ever since.

2840. Mr. Sale.] Will you be good enough to state what was the nature of the petitions, the presenting of which you discouraged, and the reason for your discouraging their presentation?—They were all of a vague and general kind, mostly referring to matters too long gone by to be taken up; and in justice to those who had specific charges to bring, I was obliged to put a stop to such petitions.

2841. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you consider that any undue influence was at work, with reference to the parwana that was sent to Damurhuda, and which was altered from what you intended it to be?—I did think so at first, but the result of the inquiry since held, makes me unwilling to entertain that opinion any longer.

2842. Will you explain why more than one copy of the parwana was necessary, inasmuch as it only referred to the parwana which was issued by Mr. Maclean, within the Damurhuda Sub-division?—A reference to the parwana

W. J.
Herschel,
Esq.

9 July 1860.

itself will show that it made no reference to Mr. Maclean's orders.

2843. But was it not issued in consequence of Mr. Maclean's parwanna?—Partly. If it had not been for Mr. Maclean's parwanna, mine would not have been so decided in its tone; I should, nevertheless, have issued a circular on the same subject.

2844. How many copies were issued, and was the one that was sent to Damurhuda the only one that was erroneous?—There were 11 copies issued, and this was the only one wrong.

2845. Was it not a strange coincidence that the only one that was wrong should have been sent to Damurhuda, when it must have done the most mischief to the planters?—The chances were 10 to one against it, but in taking up the idea that it was purposely done, I was under the impression that the Hookum-namah which the darogah issued, and on which so much stress has been laid, was issued in consequence of my parwanna. It appears now that the Hookum-namah was issued by the darogah, before he was aware of my having issued such a parwanna. One day, if not two, before I issued it, I pointed out to Mr. Maclean demi-officially the mistake he had committed, and left it to him to correct it. On receipt of my letter, he called the darogah, and in his presence prepared a parwanna of his own, cancelling his former order. Neither Mr. Maclean nor the darogah had then seen my circular. On leaving Mr. Maclean, the darogah issued this Hookum-namah. As I believed it to have been issued on view of my parwanna, and it being evident that the darogah could not have issued it, had the parwanna been correctly copied, I naturally believed that the error was purposely committed.

2846. President.] Have you had reason to be satisfied with the conduct of the police in matters relating to indigo, as favouring neither planters nor ryots?—On the whole, I have no reason, taking the district all round, to be dissatisfied; but I have had reasons, in single instances, to believe that one party or another has been favoured. One darogah has been suspended for favouring the planter, and another for favouring the ryots. The two cases occurred in different sub-divisions, under different officers, and at different ends of the district, and had no connexion one with the other.

2847. Do you think that in the case of the Goldar cultivation, the police behaved impartially?—The charge brought against the police in Goldar rests on the assertion of Mr. Chardon, that the police were seen at the head of a crowd. In this, it appeared on the evidence of Mr. Ducas, that the police referred to were village chowkidars, who in this district wear red turbans and carry spears. A village will often contain half-a-dozen of such chowkidars, and as these men have invariably sided with the ryots, and have generally assumed a leading position, the regular police sometimes come in for the blame due to the chowkidars, and sometimes the villagers are charged with having assembled with spears.

2848. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you not consider the village chowkidars as part of the police?—They are rural police, under the nominal control of the magistrate, but practically they are beyond my control.

2849. Mr. Temple.] But are not these watchmen generally men of the village, and, in one shape or another, paid by the village, and if so, is this the cause of their siding with the ryots?—They draw their pay from the village, and no magistrate expects any material assistance from them. In this case, it was perfectly natural for them to side with the ryots.

2850. In this case were any of them indigo ryots?—There is, I believe, a general order in the district, issued in favour of the chowkidars, exempting them from the liability of sowing indigo, or prohibiting them from doing so; nevertheless, many of them do sow indigo. I have had complaints from chowkidars applying for exemption under this order; but I have never seen the original order myself.

2851. Have you ever had occasion to punish any of them for siding with the ryots?—Yes, I have. In one village, the chowkidars would not carry out my orders for preventing cattle trespass among the indigo. I dismissed them all, and realised their arrears of pay from the ryots to be given to new men at an increased rate. That was the only complaint in my own division of the district. In the sub-divisions, several cases have occurred, in which chowkidars have had specific charges made against them connected with indigo, such as intimidation of ryots, assaults, &c., for which they had to stand their trial.

2852. President.] During your incumbency, have you observed whether the missionaries have at all attempted to influence the ryots either one way or another?—I have never had the slightest intimation of the kind, either one way or the other, during my incumbency.

2853. Are you in a position to suggest any measures whereby the cultivation of indigo, as between planter and ryot, may go on more smoothly in future?—I can suggest nothing but justice between the two parties.

2854. Are there any points as to the arrangement between the two parties which would strike you prominently as capable of emendation?—The only point I could suggest is, that it should be a cash transaction, that is, that the ryot should receive cash for his leaf, in the same way he receives cash for anything else he sells. In cases of debt, the money should be realised before any further transactions be carried out between the two parties.

2855. Mr. Temple.] Then, virtually, by that procedure, the ryot would practically be free from the loss of previous years, and thus the risk of the season and produce would be with the planter, instead of the ryot, as at present?—I do not see the consequence. The transaction, now a nominal one, would be converted into a real one. The reality would be, that the planter would sometimes fail to realise a debt, but that, on the other hand, he would not have a single ryot on his books who was not a willing worker; and with the influence a planter possesses, as the debt would never be a very large one, he ought not often to find any difficulty in realising it by simple demand upon the ryot.

2856. Mr. Fergusson.] If such a plan were followed now, would it not virtually discharge all the balances due by the ryots?—I think most ryots would gladly pay up their balances now to be quit of their accounts, if they were reasonably small, and after the experience they have now had, provided they knew that their debts would not be allowed to accumulate against them, they would would gladly clear their books every year, if it was worth their while to take fresh advances.

2857. Do you see any objection to a summary procedure against a ryot for non-fulfilment of a contract fairly entered into, as in the present law?—No, not as a general law, i. e., embracing all contracts of the kind.

2858. Do you think that it would be practicable to register such contracts, and how do you suggest it should be done?—Yes, I consider it perfectly practicable. The only objection to registration is, that it does not secure absolute proof of the identity of the person charged with breach of contract, with the person who signed the document. If personification at the time of signature, or false pleas of personification afterwards, were rendered impossible by any peculiar mode of signature, nine-tenths of the difficulty of forming a decision would disappear, and with it nine-tenths of the process necessary to bring the trial to an issue. I can suggest a signature of exceeding simplicity which it is all but impossible to deny or to forge. The impression of a man's finger on paper cannot be denied by him afterwards.

2859. Mr. Temple.] With reference to your answer that the ryot ought to receive cash for his leaf, supposing that a ryot actually received four rupees in advance, and his leaf turned out to be four rupees, and no more; would he, in that case, receive anything more?—No, certainly not. What I propose is, that debts of one year, not realised or claimed in court before advances are given for the next year, should not be realisable in a court of law.

2860. Mr. Fergusson.] Why should not a similar rule be applied to rent, so that if a man owes any arrears, he should be turned out of his land?—I am speaking from my experience of the indigo system.

2861. Mr. Temple.] Do you think the ryots would be satisfied if the cash payments were secured in the manner you have mentioned, without augmenting the rate of payment itself?—I have not sufficient knowledge of the profits obtainable by a ryot to answer that question.

2862. By your previous answer regarding justice between the two parties, did you mean that all that is needed is, that the existing law should be justly and strictly administered between the parties?—Yes.

2863. Do you think that the police are sufficiently well organised and trustworthy as to prevent on the one hand outrages being committed by planters upon the ryots, and on the other hand to prevent the rights of planters being unlawfully interfered with by ryots or zemindars?—The organisation of the police is, I think, as good as it can be, the force of burkundazes only being a little too weak. I do not think any other increase would be of much use. Their trustworthiness depends entirely on the supervision bestowed upon them, and without a very large increase of that, I do not think the objects mentioned in the question can be secured.

2864. Do you apprehend, then, that oppression and interference, as above described, might happen without your being able to prevent it with the existing staff at your disposal?—Yes, to a great extent.

2865. Do you apprehend that, despite all you can do, such things do occur?—I think force is used in the Mofussil by every one capable of exercising it, to an extent that the magistrate cannot control. In the case of a ryot being kidnapped or imprisoned, it is obviously out of my power to prevent his seizure on the sly, and the chances are great that I could not release him.

2866. Mr. Fergusson.] Can you state the estimated area and population of this district?—You will find it on the survey papers and on the map.

2867. Previous to this year, what number of deputy and assistant magistrates were in this district besides the magistrate?—There was one subdivision in Kurreempore, and another at Santipore; and, in the latter part of 1859, one was established in Damuhuda; and since then, another at Bongong.

2868. Did the ryots tell you how they derived the impression that Government were opposed to indigo; and did you take any steps to disabuse their minds of it?—They said plainly that the order of Government was not to sow indigo; and as the peace of the district depended on my being able to undeceive them upon that point, I naturally bestowed all the pains I could on it.

2869. When you went out to Katgarra, did the ryots tell you that they had broken up the indigo that had been sown, because Government wanted to put a stop to indigo cultivation?—Yes.

2870. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Did not one Gunesh Ganguli, in behalf of Mr. Forlong, manager of Mr. James Hill's concern, bring a case of breach of contract, under the summary law, against some half a dozen ryots, and was not the same dismissed by you as a got-up and false one?—It was dismissed by me on the ground that the documents produced were forged. It was from the Beerpore Factory of the Hurra concern, under the superintendence of Mr. Saubolle.

2871. Did you try this case in one day or in two?—It was a long case, and took me two or three days.

2872. Was it not on the first day that Gunesh Ganguli stated that he appeared on behalf of Mr. Forlong; and on the second day's trial did he not say that he was acting on behalf of Mr. Saubolle, of Beerpore Factory?—I cannot recollect. Mr. Saubolle gave his evidence on the first day. He is an assistant to Mr. Forlong.

2873. Mr. Fergusson.] Has not Mr. Saubolle the management of the Hurra concern, which is under the general superintendence of Mr. Forlong; and do you believe that Mr. Forlong had any knowledge that any such case was pending?—Mr. Saubolle is an assistant, as described; and I would not have thought that Mr. Forlong knew anything of the case, had I not been informed that Mr. Saubolle refused to prosecute, and Mr. Forlong insisted on his doing so. However that may be, I never saw a clearer instance of the amla of an out factory having the entire game in their own hands.

2874. Will you state by whom you were informed?—I object to answer this question, as I was only questioned about my belief; but I will answer it, if it be thought necessary. I would wish to add, as a proof of the extent of which the Beerpore amla act upon their own authority, that these very same men, Gunesh Ganguli and others, are now on their trial for perjury, for having falsely charged the ryots of a neighbouring village with burning the factory down. The charge is clearly a false one, and

W. J.
Herschel,
Esq.

9 July 1860.

W. J.
Herschel,
Esq.
9 July 1860.

has been dismissed. Mr. Saubolle could not have known of the falsity of the charge until the cross-examination took place.

2875. With reference to the first question regarding this case, if your Sheristadar was accused of taking a bribe, do you think it would be right to insinuate that you were a party to it because you were his superior officer?—No.

KARIM BISWAS, Inhabitant of Ramkistopore, Thannah Mihirpore, Factory Batpara, Concern Katuli; Examined on oath.

Karim
Biswas.

2877. President.] HAVE you sown this year; and if not, why not?—No, I have not sown. Last Aswin the planter called upon me to pay 120 rupees on account of indigo. They were taking my cows in order to realise the money, when I gave security, and I made arrangements to pay it by instalments of 40 rupees a year. I paid down 26 rupees, and four rupees to the amla, which left 14 rupees to be paid in Posh. But when Posh came I would not pay, as the instalment had been extorted. We then presented a petition to the planter about indigo. We then presented a petition to the magistrate, who passed an order that the cultivation of indigo was optional. So we did not sow.

2878. Has there been a suit against you this year, and how was it that you sowed last year?—There has been no suit against me. I sowed last year by compulsion a khada of land, i. e., 16 beegahs. I have six khadas of land altogether. This year I have been enabled to sow four khadas with rice, because I have not had to sow indigo. I have not been able to sow the other two, as I have been obliged to keep out of the way for fear of lattials.

2879. Mr. Temple.] Did you actually see lattials this year?—No, I have not seen them; but on hearing that they were about to come, I kept out of their way.

2880. Who is your landlord?—Formerly Kasheshur Mustofi, but now it is the planter, Mr. Smith; he has got the putni of those villages.

2876. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Could you not try Gunesh Ganguli, and the other parties interested in this case, for forgery and perjury?—Gunesh Ganguli is on his trial for uttering, and the writer of the document for forgery. I could not put any other parties interested in the case on trial.

2881. Are any lattials kept in the village?—No; they are kept in the factory and in the golabarri, or barn. I can't say how many are kept there, as I don't go to the factory.

2882. President.] How much plant did you deliver to the factory last year?—About 30 or 40 bundles. I gave it to a carter, who delivered it at the factory. I went to the factory, but I got neither excess payments nor advances.

2883. Mr. Temple.] With what specific object did you come before this Commission, inasmuch as you have not been sued for breach of contract, and as you have not this year sown indigo?—On account of the oppression committed when my cattle were sold last year; and by degrees and in various times during the last 11 years, I have been fined 300 rupees. I have to pay one rupee every year on account for bets and lotteries. Also, if a ryot absconds from the village we are made responsible for his balances. This way, I have had to take up the balances of two ryots.

2884. What are your intentions in future with regard to sowing indigo?—My intentions for the future are that I won't sow indigo. In the first place, all my cattle have been sold; and even if my cattle were restored to me, I won't sow indigo. Besides, there are taxes for roads, which are good for nobody, and lead only to the factory.

SELIM MUNDAL, Inhabitant of Ramkistopore, Thannah Mihirpore, Zillah Nuddea, Factory Batpara, Katoollee Concern; Examined on oath.

Selim
Mundal.

2885. President.] WHAT have you come here to complain about?—This year in Aswin a suit was instituted against me for three years' rent. I filed an answer in the case, and after that the Sahib did not continue the complaint. All I was told was, that I had won my suit. My complaint has nothing to do with indigo.

SRI BHOBOTARUN JOARDAR, Inhabitant of Tarai, Thannah Hardi, Zillah Nuddea, Bamundi Concern; Examined on oath.

Sri Bhobotarun
Joardar.

2886. President.] HAVE you sown any indigo this year?—This year, in the month of Aswin and Kartik, the factory people made me sow indigo, i. e., they sent for my servants, five in number, and two pairs of bullocks, and made them sow seven beegahs and a half. I had nobody to complain to. Mr. Tripp is judge, magistrate, collector, and everything.

2887. Did you never receive any advances from the factory?—No, I never did. I can't say what they have written in the books, because the pen and ink and paper all belong to them. Last year I delivered 10 or 11 bundles of plant to the factory. My grandfather sowed for the factory. My grandfather used to sow willingly. In those days they used to get cash, but since the factory has had ijaras and putnis we get nothing.

2888. Mr. Temple.] Did your father sow indigo willingly?—I never saw my father sow at all. I have myself sown for 10 or 12 years.

2889. In the first year of those 10 did you get no advances?—I was laid hold of and taken to the factory, and told, as I was a well-to-do man, I must sow. The factory had then got the putni. It had the lease previously. It was in the Bengali year 1258. I did not get any cash advances. They simply told me to sow.

2890. Then the first year, when you took your plant to the factory, did you get nothing?—Not a thing.

2891. President.] Have you anything else to relate?—Yes, there is a talook of 61 rupees entered in the name of my eldest brother. The collections from this are about 150 rupees. The Sahib wanted a putni from me of this talook, which I refused to give. He then wished me to give him an ijara, and on my refusing in the month of Posh or Magh in 1264, I was taken to the godown of the factory, and kept there till I gave the leases of the talook. I was only kept a day in the godown. The factory amla then took me to their lodgings. I was altogether three days there. Also I had an uncle named Kisto Mohun, who was imprisoned at Salgurmudia, and seeing that I was of the same family, they took me and several others. I was kept 22 days in the godown. They took from me 150 rupees. I had this money, and I paid it without borrowing. This took place in 1266, or last year. It was no use complaining about it. Now, being in extremity, I have come to complain.

Sahib.]

2892. Mr. Sale.] In the godown of what factory were you confined?—Salgurmudia Factory. Not in the cake godown, but in Mr. Kenny's guard-room. Also on my ancestral holding I have some bamboos and mangoe trees, and these have been cut down for the Bamundi Factory, and I never got a price for it. Also, with regard to indigo land, when a good shower falls in Chaitro, they make me sow my indigo land first; and if there is any more indigo land remaining unploughed, they take my ploughs to cultivate it, and then they take them to cultivate the factory nij. After that, if we go to cultivate our rice lands, they call upon us to put the bida through the indigo land; and after that we are required to weed. After that there comes the cutting. I have no cart, and therefore I have no trouble about the carting, but on the whole we are called upon to think of nothing else but indigo. Also I have been accused of instigating ryots not to sow indigo, and I was once summoned on that account.

[Commission adjourned at 6 P. M.]

Sir
Bhototarun.
Joardar.

9 July 1860.

Tuesday, 10th July 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, C. S., President.

Members: R. Temple, Esq., C. S., W. F. Fergusson, Esq., Reverend J. Sale, Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

JAMES FORLONG, Esq., of Nischindipore Factory; Examined on oath.

2893. President.] WILL you state to the Commission the districts and concerns in which you have had experience as an indigo planter?—I have been in Kishnagur since February 1830, and have had charge of the largest indigo properties in the district, such, for instance, as Mulnath, Katgarra, Khalbolia, and Nischindipore, &c.

2894. Do you wish to file your reply to the Circular of the Commission as part of your evidence?—Yes. (Answer filed.)

2895. Mr. Fergusson.] How many factories have you under you?—Thirty-two factories in five concerns, viz., Nischindipore, Katchikatta, Hurra, Sunada, and Nundunpore. In the above five concerns there are 67,000 beegahs, of which 55,000 are ryotti and 12,000 nij-abad. The only portion of the above under my own immediate management is the Nischindipore Factory, the cultivation of which is 3,400 beegahs of ryotti, and about 1,000 of nij-abad. In the ilaka villages there are about 53,000 beegahs of indigo cultivation, and in the be-ilaka 14,000. The whole of the above 55,000 beegahs of ryotti cultivation is represented by current balances, amounting to 1,19,000 rupees. The closed balances, not brought forward against ryots, amount to 3,24,000 rupees; altogether 4,43,000 rupees. The annual rental of the whole ilaka villages amount to 2,43,000 rupees.

2896. Have you separate managers for the different concerns, such as Katchikatta, Hurra, and so forth, and do you leave to them the management under your general superintendence, or how?—Yes, there are separate managers for each property, who conduct the duties entirely according to their own judgment, and the responsibility rests with them for doing so. General reports are sent to me; but with the managing details of so large a property it is quite impossible that I or any man could interfere.

2897. With reference to the questions that were asked yesterday, regarding suits brought by the Beerpore Factory for breach of contract, did you give any instructions for these suits being instituted, or were you aware of this having been done?—Since the new Act XL of 1860 was passed, I have given general orders to the managers under me, to carry on cases of breach of contract, wherever it might be necessary, but in no case to do so harshly, or where in any way it could be avoided. Messrs. Hills, Newcomen, Smith, Taylor, and Saubolle have carried on such cases, to the extent, I should suppose, of between one and two thousand. In no case have I interfered or given any instructions whatever as to their prosecution, all those gentlemen being left entirely to themselves, to conduct their cases as they thought proper.

2898. Then it is not true that Mr. Saubolle objected to institute these suits, and you ordered him to do so?—I heard with astonishment yesterday the statement of the magistrate of this district, to the effect that he had been informed by a third party that I had ordered Mr. Saubolle to prosecute a case which he had refused to do. In reply to such a statement I can only say, that a more idle falsehood was never created by a malicious mind, or given utterance to by a gossiping tongue, and I am utterly at a loss to know why Mr. Herschel should have adopted such a statement to my prejudice so hastily.

J. Forlong,
Esq.

10 July 1860.

J. Forlong,
Esq.

10 July 1860.

2899. President.] Do you prefer what is commonly called ilaka to be-ilaka cultivation, as giving you more security for your cultivation?—Unquestionably so; for the reasons generally stated before this Commission, as less liable to interruption. As matters have existed during the largest portion of the years that I have been in Kishnagur, the authority of the zemindar seemed to me to be the only authority possessing any practical character whatever, as to rights over the people.

2900. Can you state if the Nischindipore concern had great difficulty in procuring the putni of 87 villages, and the lease of the 37 held by it?—The largest portion of the putni belonging to the Nischindipore concern was formerly the property of Raja Kissennath Rai of Moorsheadabad. I think in 1836 the magistrate of this district, then Mr. G. L. Martin, from some unguarded observations he had made to the ryots, as to their not cultivating indigo, unless they chose to do so, produced in this district, at that time, on a smaller scale, much the same state of things as exists now. Raja Kissennath Rai, presuming on this, stopped Messrs. Hills, White, & Co.'s cultivation in the whole of his large zemindary, which made it necessary for Messrs. Hills, White, & Co. to come forward and buy the property at any price. They did so, when all obstruction to the cultivation of indigo in that property ceased; and Mr. Martin suddenly altering his policy, the district was in a short space of time restored to its usual tranquil state. I don't think the price was exorbitant, but I can't say precisely what it was, because, in addition to the price, a very considerable sum was paid to the people of the raja to facilitate the business.

2901. Mr. Temple.] Could you state exactly how Mr. Martin's policy changed?—I think the Government expressed its strong disapprobation to Mr. Martin for having produced such a state of things in this usually quiet district; and after this, instead of encouraging the ryots to come to him with petitions, he discouraged them, and in one day summarily dismissed three or four hundred of them, telling them to go and attend to their business as usual, as he would no longer attend to their frivolous complaints.

2902. President.] Can you state whether any difficulties were experienced in procuring the other putnis and leases?—None whatever, except the usual difficulty as to meeting the terms the zemindars thought themselves warranted in exacting. While I have been in this district, I have never yet found a zemindar hesitate in handing over his ryots to the planter as soon as his terms were complied with.

2903. Can you state whether the rent demanded was, in any case, more than would have been fairly realised by the factory from the ryots?—In some cases very considerably so. The jumma on the last ijara which I was obliged to take, of any consequence, was 12,000 rupees, and the loss upon it 1,500 rupees a year, independent of between seven and eight thousand rupees given in salami. This was in the Nischindipore concern.

2904. Was no attempt made to enhance the rent of the ryots, so as to cover the deficiency?—There has been no enhancement of the ryots' rents. We have still the yearly loss of 1,500 rupees. My reason for taking this ijara was, that the villages belonged to four or five brothers, to one of whom a small share belonged, which I purchased, and when I endeavoured to take possession of it, the other brothers brought forward a deed, making over the share to them, antedating it to the sale of it to me; and as the ryots sided with the brothers opposed to the factory, great difficulties arose in taking possession of the share I had purchased. As the case went on, however, and as the deed produced by the brothers was not a registered one, and mine was, they, fearing a charge which I had threatened to bring against them for forgery, proposed to make the whole property over to me in farm or lease for 12 years, on the condition that I should give up the share I had bought to them; a proposal which I accepted, with the consent of the shareholder who sold his share to me.

2905. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Knowing, as you did, that the property was a joint, undivided estate, what made you purchase a share?—I had nothing whatever to do with their family quarrels. The brothers had come forward and unscrupulously put a stop to the factory cultivation in their villages, when one member of the family came forward and offered me the share of the property to which he was entitled, which I unhesitatingly accepted, to enable me to carry on the factory business as usual.

2906. Did you not know that you could not have taken possession of such a share unless a legal partition were made, which would have taken years to accomplish?—I certainly did not, and this plea was not brought forward. In fact, the deed to which I have above referred settles this question, for if the brother had no right to sell it to me, he had no right to sell it to others.

2907. Will you state the circumstances, in full or in particular, of your taking putni of a zemindary for 80,000 rupees for the Katgarra concern?—Yes, I remember the circumstance well. The putni I bought from Baboo Joy Chunder Pal Chowdari for 80,000 rupees. There was a loss upon the jumma at the time of between four and five thousand rupees, but in some mitigation of the excess of price paid for the putni, Baboo Joy Chunder Pal Chowdari bought a four-annas share in the Katgarra concern at the same time, for which he paid the proprietors at a rate equally costly.

2908. If there were no loss on the jumma, do you not think 80,000 rupees price for that property would be a moderate one?—Unquestionably. I don't think the price paid was beyond three years' rental. Now, the same property could be sold for certainly twice that sum. Putnis have risen latterly in many places in Kishnagur nearly 200 per cent.

2909. Mr. Temple.] Have you not at this time a heavy case pending regarding the tenure of a large estate; and if so, will you particularise it?—Yes; the property referred to formerly belonged to Baboo Ram Ruttun Roy of Jessore. A certain party, not on good terms with the Baboo, employed an agent secretly to make a purchase of the property for him, which he did, and endeavoured to take possession of the same. The baboo disclaimed the transaction, and sold the property to Mr. Hills. Mr. Hills held possession of it, and after many years' litigation in one form or another, Mr. Hills' title was confirmed by Mr. Littledale, the Civil and Sessions Judge of Kishnagur, I think about the end of last December. The case is now appealed to the Sudder.

2910. Have you found that these extensive acquisitions of tenures have inclined the zemindary class to oppose you; and can you mention any any particular zemindar or zemindars from whom, at this moment, you apprehend opposition, either by their instigating ryots, or by other means?—I cannot say that the acquisitions referred to have produced any hostility on the part of the zemindars around me; in my neighbourhood there is only one influential zemindar, Pran Kisto Pal, who has been in the habit of acting not in a friendly way to the factory. There are numberless small talookdars, who have, in common with Pran Kisto Pal, very strong mahajani interest to promote, opposed to the interest of the factory; and such men, relying upon the tales which have been industriously circulated, as to the desire of the Government to put a stop to indigo planting, have done all in their power to induce the ryots not to sow indigo, and to sow a large breadth of rice cultivation.

2911. President.] Within your general experience has the difficulty with the zemindars been a specific dislike on their part to indigo as a cultivation, or an unwillingness to surrender their authority and influence over the ryots, or a mere haggling about the price or the terms most suitable to themselves?—My experience tells me that the zemindars never take into a moment's consideration whether the ryots have to cultivate indigo or any other crop; the only difficulty I have ever met with is, to think whether I could possibly afford the terms demanded by the zemindars, to enable me to carry on my cultivation.

2912. Mr. Temple.] Have you found that the zemindars, as a class, highly value a predominance in the proprietorship of the land, and desire to restrain any other class, who, by largely acquiring tenures, may interfere with that predominance?—Native gentlemen of wealth greatly value zemindari, as they add much to their rank and authority in society. I am not aware that they show any particular hostility to any one hitherto unconnected with the landed interest buying such property in Bengal; but in Kishnagur, as such a very large portion of the landed property in the district has got into the hands of European landlords, I do think that a great degree of jealousy has arisen towards those parties.

2913. Do you find that this jealousy induces the zemindars, as a class, to indirectly oppose you, or to instigate the ryots against you?—I certainly think that it has very much tended to promote this feeling.

2914. Do you find that in estates, of which you acquired the proprietorship, either for a time or for ever, the former zemindars or their families still continue to possess or exert any influence over the ryots?—As a rule, I have not observed this influence till recently, for, till lately, I have never had I may say difficulties of any consequence with ryots, as I have always seen them cheerful and contented, especially in the ilaka villages, it being the interest of the factory to allow the ryot to sit, as regards his land, at as easy a rate as possible. In the Nischindipore concern, in most of the putnis, the ryots have the very best land in Bengal at the rate of three beegahs for the rupee; the same land in Hooghly or Burdwan would let at Rs. 1. 4 and Rs. 1. 8 a beegah; recently, when the difficulties arose, I found that the proprietors of the villages held in ijara had influence which I thought they could not have possessed. In the villages of which I have the permanent proprietorship I have seen nothing of the kind.

2915. Do you think that the ryots on your estate have a feeling for the old proprietors, such as that which was openly manifested in some districts of the North West during the disturbances of 1857?—Not in any great degree; most of the families connected with Kishnagur are not very old families, and have no particular hold over the feelings of the ryots.

2916. In reference to those zemindars who have recently opposed you on ijara estates, what do you suppose induced them to do so?—A restless, vague feeling had got abroad among the ryots that the Government was opposed to indigo planting; and the ryots fell back either upon the zemindars or any one else who chose to keep this tale in countenance. Their doing so restored, in a certain degree, their previous influence, by which it was their object to make me pay a consideration for settling matters with the ryots.

2917. Do you suppose that the zemindars ever grant or receive a lease not so much for the sake of the profit, but for the sake of avoiding disputes or affrays with the factory?—I have never seen a zemindar give a property to a planter, either in putni or ijara, without exacting the largest possible rental and the largest possible price. I think the sole reason for the zemindar parting with his property is generally with a view to profit.

2918. With reference to the opposition of Pran Kisto Pal, is there not a dispute of old standing between him and your concern, which might, independent of the reason you assign in your previous answer, incline him to oppose you?—There was a quarrel many years ago between Pran Kisto Pal and Mr. Hills. I don't think any bad feeling exists now, arising from that cause, on the part of the Baboo. He and I are very good friends; and the great cause for his being in any way unfriendly to the factory is, that he has large mahajani interests, which are opposed to those of the factory.

2919. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you ever received any assistance from any of the Government officials in obtaining putnis and ijaras?—No, I have never done so, though I received in every instance both friendly advice and any aid from a magistrate that his official position warranted him in giving.

2920. Mr. Temple.] To what cause do you attribute the existing difficulties in the Katchikatta concern?—What caused the difficulties in that concern was exactly the same as created the difficulties connected with indigo planting throughout the Kishnagur district.

2921. Have no difficulties arisen in consequence of the individual influence of the man named Mohesh Chatterjee; and if so, what is the cause of that individual's hostility to the concern?—Very serious difficulties have arisen in the Katchikatta concern through the influence of Mohesh Chatterjee, but they only began in the beginning of last March, when the whole district was rapidly getting into a disturbed state. At any other time, Mohesh Chatterjee's hostility would have been of no consequence. Mohesh Chatterjee had formerly been a servant of the factory, and had been discharged for misconduct, and entertained a bitter feeling of hostility to the naib, who had replaced him in the management of Katchikatta. His influence has proceeded from certain landed property he has in the neighbourhood, and also from his having long been a naib of Baboo Ram Rutton Roy, the great Jessor zemindar, which gave him much influence.

J. Forlong,
Esq.

10 July 1860.

J. Forlong,
Esq.

10 July 1860.

2922. Do you apprehend any special opposition from zemindars or other individuals in the Nundunpore, Hurra, and Sunada concerns?—No; none more than I have had since the beginning of these difficulties.

2923. Is the cultivation of those chiefly on your own property, or on the estates of others?—In Nundunpore and Sunada, chiefly on my own estates; in Hurra, chiefly be-ilaka, and in that concern, there is most serious trouble.

2924. In the Hurra concern are there any opposing zemindars, and can you name them?—Yes, there are two talookdars, one named Baboo Ram Nidhi Chatterjee, the other Nobo Kisto Pal, who have shown great hostility to the factory. Since the season began they have been giving the ryots bad advice.

2925. Can you state very briefly the causes of their hostility?—In the case of the former, it is entirely owing to the factory interests interfering with the mahajumi interests. In the case of the latter, he was the individual with whom the factory had been in litigation for the large putni property alluded to in a former answer. In neither case do I suppose these parties to have any sympathy with the ryots, beyond what directly refers to their own interests.

2926. Will it be necessary in these two cases to conciliate their opposition, to induce the ryots to sow?—Unquestionably, if indigo is again to be sown on their properties.

2927. Mr. Sale.] You mentioned, as a principal reason for preferring ilaka cultivation, that the zemindary authority was the only one possessing any practical character; do you suppose that the zemindars appreciate this practical authority, or is there any reason why this authority is of great value to a planter, when it is not so to a zemindar?—I do think the zemindars appreciate this authority, and they know full well its value, for they never cede it to others without receiving a very large consideration for doing so.

2928. Mr. Fergusson.] Do I understand that it has been felt that there was little power to enforce rights by appeal to Courts, and that therefore it was necessary to have this feudal power?—Yes; you understand me quite correctly on this point. There was no law to protect the planter in case of breaches of contract on the part of the ryot; and in be-ilaka villages there was constant and capricious interference between the planters and the ryots, to whom he had given large advances, which made it necessary for the planter to secure some zemindary influence, to enable him to exercise a proper control over the ryots.

2929. President.] But if you could be sure that your cultivation, in villages not held by the concern, were not liable to interference either from the zemindars, the middle men, or the police, would you be as satisfied with this cultivation as with that in villages of your own?—Of course I would; it would save a large sacrifice of money, and I should be able to spend a larger sum on the ryots. It is only the constant sense of insecurity that forces a planter to purchase zemindary rights. I have often told ryots in disputes with their zemindars to remain neutral, for, the moment the zemindar's terms were agreed to by me, he would to a certainty hand them over to me as their landlord; and I have told them that, after having made large payments to their zemindars for doing so, it would not be in my power to be so liberal with them as I otherwise would have been. To which they replied, they could not go against the zemindar.

2930. Then are we to understand that the practice of buying putnis and taking leases is comparatively of late introduction?—It has always existed; but the necessity has increased of late, because many important interests have sprung up, competing with the planters, which did not exist formerly.

2931. Mr. Sale.] Do you acknowledge the correctness of the term "feudal," as applied to the rights of the Bengal zemindar?—I think the term not inappropriate.

2932. President.] Will you favour the Commission, as fully as you can, with your opinion as to the cause and origin of the dislike evinced by ryots to indigo during the past season?—What first unhinged the relations between the planters and the ryots was, unquestionably, Act X. of 1859, which came into operation about a twelve-month ago, as the Act struck directly at the root of all authority possessed by the planters as landholders. The effect of the Act was industriously propagated among the ryots by mboktyars and others; then followed the Baraset parwanna, which in its turn was followed by some correspondence given to the public by the Bengal Government, and which was thought to show a strong feeling in favour of the ryot, and hostile to the planter. Presuming upon this, a system of agitation against the planters was immediately organised, countenanced openly by many influential men in Calcutta, and also by the missionaries in the Kishnagur district. Emissaries swarmed through the district, giving bad advice to the ryots; and unfortunately when the system of agitation began, Mr. Cockerell, a most efficient and able officer, who had had charge of the district, was removed to another appointment, and the district was left for one or two months in charge of Mr. Tottenham, whose youth and inexperience quite unfitted him for so important a situation. Mr. Drummond followed Mr. Tottenham, an officer in every way qualified for the post; but he had scarcely got acquainted with his work when he was suddenly removed, and Mr. Herschel appointed as magistrate—an act which was thought on the part of the Government to indicate still further hostility towards the planters' interests, and which gave great additional force to the mischievous schemes then in operation to the planters' prejudice. An experienced magistrate might have saved all we have of late been suffering from, but three magistrates, when the district was passing through so dangerous a crisis, only heaped confusion upon confusion. Jessore was only saved from a fate worse than Kishnagur from the fact of its having an able and experienced judge and two magistrates, one of whom especially had been long in the district, and who had the reputation of being one of the best magistrates in Bengal. Kishnagur, on the contrary, had neither a judge nor even for a time a collector. The planting system is less liberal in Jessore than in Kishnagur, and it is well known that the materials for serious troubles exist in a far greater degree in the former district than in the latter.

2933. Then it is your decided opinion, that the effect of Act X., and especially of Section XI., which withdraws from the zemindars the power of summoning their tenants for the adjustment of their rents, has already begun practically to operate, and to make the ryots feel that they are are now in a different position?—In districts remote from Calcutta the effect of this section probably has not yet been felt; but in Kishnagur and other districts nearer Calcutta the effect has been very serious; and should it remain permanently a portion of the Act, I can only see certain ruin to all the smaller class of talookdars throughout Bengal. This class of talookdars never had the means of seriously abusing the power of the law, as it formerly stood, though I believe the power was very harshly used, in many instances, by the larger class of talookdars, and, I believe, will still continue to be so.

2934. Have you, as a zemindar, been deterred from sending your men into any villages, for the purpose of calling upon the ryots to pay your rents, or have you found that the ryots sheltered themselves under its provisions, so as to withhold your just dues from you?—I have not been deterred from sending people into the villages as usual; but I have found far greater difficulty in collecting rents this year in a property which has a rental equal to a lakh of rupees, whereas last year there were 8,000 rupees of outstanding debts, and this year there were 15,000 rupees at the close of the season. I attribute this mainly to that clause.

2935. Mr. Fergusson.] Has the general tenor of the law only yet become known, or do you think the ryots are acquainted with the particular provisions of it?—I think the general tenor of the law in districts near Calcutta has become very widely known, and the ryots fully understand the provisions of it in every respect in making them independent of the zemindar.

2936. Mr. Sale.] Do you think that the ryots have a correct knowledge of the provisions of the Act; or have they a general impression that an Act has been passed as favouring them against the zemindars?—I think there is a general impression, on the part of the ryots, that the Government had passed this law with a view especially to favour them, from a belief that the authority of zemindars had been exercised towards them in an oppressive manner.

2937. Mr. Fergusson.] Will not the provisions of this law entitle a law for the recovery of rent, ultimately, and actually change all the rights of property in Bengal?—I think if the law stands for any length of time, such as it now does, it will seriously interfere with landed property in Bengal. If the spirit of the law is carried through, as the law now stands, it would make a zemindar in a few years hence a little more than an annuitant on his own property.

2938. Then do you think that the effect of the law will be to transfer the land in Bengal to peasant proprietors?—Unquestionably.

2939. President.] Are you aware that several officers, of great revenue experience, hold the opinion that the law, putting aside Section XI., does not originate any fundamental changes in property, but merely gives strength, solidity, and permanence to the rights of tenant proprietors, which, previous to that law, were constantly liable to be obliterated or overborne by violence; do you agree with that opinion?—I am aware that such opinions have been expressed by one or two officers of great experience in these matters, but such opinions are quite opposed to any practical experience that I have had, and also to that of any native gentlemen whom I have consulted on the subject.

72—I.

2940. Mr. Fergusson.] Are not these opinions contrary to the permanent settlement of 1793, and to nearly all subsequent legislation in Bengal Proper since?—Unquestionably they are so, and I don't think that in any country in the world but Bengal such an unwarrantable liberty would have been taken by the Government in interfering with the relations which have so long existed, under the fullest sanction of the Government, between the landlord and the tenant. If the law formerly had been found to be ineffective in the way of affording protection to the ryot, it was the duty of the Government to have made it more effective, and not to upset by one summary Act rights that had been so long respected.

2941. President.] As planter or zemindar, had you never occasion to purchase jotes or jummas from the ryots?—I have very rarely done so.

2942. If the factory found it necessary to purchase a jumma in only one instance, would not this one fact imply that there was such a thing as tenant proprietorship in Lower Bengal capable of sale or transfer, and needing only a proper degree of energy and spirit on the part of the tenant to preserve it?—Yes, there are various tenures in every zemindary, such as jotes, gantis, koljanas, which belong to the parties who hold them under the zemindar, and which have a market value.

2943. Mr. Temple.] If the power of summoning the ryots was abused by the larger zemindars, how could that abuse be prevented otherwise than by Section XI. of Act XI.?—I can see no good reason why all should be wronged for the faults of the few who abused the power; and it was the business of the Government to have found some more energetic way of administering the law, so as to prevent the abuse in question.

2944. Has not the zemindar, after the passing of this section, the same powers of enforcing payment of rent as other parties have of enforcing contracts, and might not these suffice?—He has; but such powers, exercised over a needy tenantry, and for the receipt of very small sums, are of little value. The process of distraint to collect sums, probably among hundreds of ryots, for two or three rupees from each, would almost be as expensive as the amount of the money to be recovered.

2945. Mr. Fergusson.] Is not the zemindar's property sold if the Government rent is not paid on a fixed day; and was not the extensive penalty to which the zemindar was exposed the reason for giving these powers?—Yes, the zemindar is certain to have his property sold by Government unless the rent is paid up at the very hour in which it is legally due, and without some summary means of collecting his rents from his tenants, it is quite impossible, unless he is a man of considerable wealth, to meet the revenue which falls due to the State.

2946. Mr. Sale.] Then you do not think that the increased facilities for selling the property of the ryot on every failure to pay rent, or in default of paying one instalment, is sufficient assistance to the zemindar in collecting his rents?—No, I certainly do not; and more especially hitherto in this district, where the duties of collector have doubled. In fact, we have scarcely had a collector at all. The duties of the collectorate in such a district as this would occupy the time of one of the ablest men from morning to night; whereas the present collector, who is also our

Z 4

J. Forlong,
Esq.

10 July 1860.

J. Forlong,
Esq.

our magistrate, can only spare a very small portion of his time to the duties of the collector's office.

10 July 1860.

2947. Besides Section XI. of Act X., what other portion of Act X. do you refer to as respecting long-acknowledged rights?—The section giving rights to ryots, after certain periods of occupancy, to continue the same permanently without reference to the zemindar.

2948. Do you not think that Section XVII., in which three distinct grounds on which the rent of the ryot may be raised are given, sufficiently guards the interest of the zemindar?—I don't think the clause sufficiently protective to the zemindar.

2949. President.] Do you think that the parwanna you alluded to, as issuing from the district of Baraset, could have created such a strong dislike to indigo in the minds of the ryots, had not that cultivation been otherwise unpopular, unprofitable, or irksome?—A slight expression of opinion on the part of any one in authority sways the opinion of the masses in a great degree. About 26 years ago a similar expression of opinion by a magistrate of the Kishnagur district produced nearly a similar result. As to indigo cultivation being unpopular, there has, no doubt, been a general belief as to the fact by the public; but for myself, as far as regards seeing ryots generally contented, orderly, and cheerful, and on more than one occasion sowing indigo for me, even in opposition to the will of the zemindar, I have had no reason to conclude that it is a crop unpopular with them. I think that a ryot, who gives his attention to an indigo crop, will make such a crop more profitable than a rice crop was before the great and sudden rise took place in the price of that article, three or four years ago. Since then the indigo crop does not bear a fair relative value to a rice crop, and a change in the system must be made to make the ryot understand that growing an indigo crop is as profitable to him as growing a rice crop.

2950. Mr. Temple.] If the price of rice had not risen, and if the ryots had been as contented with indigo as before that rise, would the Baraset parwanna have had that effect, as it did have?—No, I certainly do not think it would have had a like effect.

2951. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Was it not long before the Baraset parwanna was issued that the ryots of Hanskali and Govindpore quarrelled with the planter and stopped the cultivation of indigo?—I believe those ryots did quarrel with the planter, but I imagine that, under any circumstances, they would have done so, for I believe they were acting under the orders of an agency altogether opposed to the factory.

2952. Are you not aware that a disposition to resist the cultivation of indigo has been existing in this district for upwards of two years?—No, I am not aware that such a feeling was in any way shown till last September. Three years ago, during the height of the mutiny, and when the country seemed agitated throughout, I never saw the ryots more respectful. In Calcutta, people seemed to live in daily fear of some serious mischief occurring to them, whereas in Kishnagur the planters lived without a thought of danger; and I know at Nischindipore I never had a loaded gun in the house, nor even an additional chowkidar.

2953. Mr. Fergusson.] Was it not the case that Mr. White, the proprietor of the concern, lost the lease of Hanskali Govindpore; and that the ryots, availing themselves of the circumstance, refused to sow, and thus left Mr. White to the delay of the Civil Court to recover the balances due to him; and is not this a frequent practice of ryots under similar circumstances?—Yes, I believe Mr. White was placed in the circumstances which you describe, and the practice to which you refer is very common among ryots.

2954. President.] Will you state in what particular way, or by what distinct acts, you consider the missionaries to have increased the dislike of the ryots to indigo cultivation?—As regards my two immediate neighbours, Mr. Schurr and Mr. Lincke, I cannot point out any distinct acts of their having tampered with the ryots; but though I am unable to do this, from the general belief expressed by the people in the neighbourhood, as to their having done so, I cannot help concluding that such has been the case. Mr. Bomwetsch, of Santipore, on the contrary, has openly preached a crusade against indigo planting and planters, and fomented a bad feeling on the part of the ryots towards the planters in every way in his power. I am aware that Mr. Bomwetsch has denied having done so, but that gentleman's memory must be rather treacherous. His letters in The Indian Field are quite sufficient to prove such to have been the case. In one letter particularly, he informs the ryots that they had got quit of a Governor of Bengal who was corrupt, and favoured the planters from corrupt motives, whereas now they had got a Governor who was, he said, the incarnation of justice, and would give them anything they asked for, if that was, as he led them to believe, at the expense of the planter. I could bring men also to prove that they had been at Santipore, and that Mr. Bomwetsch was in the constant habit of tampering with the ryots, and sending them to complain to the Lieutenant Governor. The ryots also going constantly to Calcutta, and making petitions to the Lieutenant Governor, without following the usual course, through the local authorities, greatly upset the respect due to them, and prevented their exercising their influence as beneficially as they otherwise would have done.

2955. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you not verbally and in writing requested the missionaries, your neighbours, to bring to your notice any acts of oppression that they might hear of, and to point out to you anything, they thought might be remedied; have they ever done so?—Prior to 1856, my missionary neighbours and myself were on most intimate terms, when a discussion arose on the subject of indigo planting, which for a time put a stop to our friendly relations. When Mr. Halliday, however, visited the district on the 3d January 1858, I wrote to Mr. Schurr, begging him to come and meet the Lieutenant Governor, and let any unfriendly feeling be forgotten. He did so, and in a day or so I wrote him asking him to bring instantly to my notice any act of misconduct or oppression that might come under his observation, on the part of any of the factory servants. From that time to the present neither he nor Mr. Lincke have brought one single such act to my notice.

2956. Mr. Temple.] With reference to your former answer regarding Mr. Bomwetsch's statement respecting the late Lieutenant Governor, the passage in question runs as follows: "When the people wanted to know whether the new Governor was like the old one, i. e., whether he had had shared in indigo, and whether he was a friend to the planter, I positively answered in the negative." Does it not appear herefrom that Mr. Bomwetsch was not reporting his own opinion, but an opinion he had heard expressed by certain people?—The meaning which I attached to Mr. Bomwetsch's language undoubtedly is, that he did impute corrupt motives to Mr. Halliday.

2957. Mr. Fergusson.] and does not Mr. Bomwetsch in the concluding paragraph of that letter signed by himself, express a hope that the present Governor "would depart this country with the blessings of millions of alleviated sufferers following him, and not both the curses of the oppressed as well as the abuses of the oppressors alike, as in the case of the late Governor"?—Yes, that is the exact language of Mr. Bomwetsch's letter to which you refer.

2958. Mr. Salé.] But with reference to Mr. Schurr and Mr. Lincke, do you consider the general belief of the ryots sufficient to discredit their statements on oath, that they have not attempted to excite bad feelings in the minds of the ryots towards the planters?—I should be very sorry to think that either Mr. Schurr or Mr. Lincke could state anything which they believed to be untrue; but at the same time I think many conversations took place between these gentlemen and the ryots, to which the ryots attached a very different meaning to what these missionaries did.

2959. President.] Can you state the name of any emissaries who have come from Calcutta or any other district to stir up the ryots?—No, I am not acquainted with any of their names.

2960. Mr. Temple.] Is there any new practitioner in Damurhuda who practises on behalf of the ryots, and do you know who deputed that person?—Yes; there is one Narain Mookerjee, who was recently sent from Calcutta, I have heard, by the British Indian Association, but I don't know for certain; I know the man, and believe him to possess considerable talent; but he had by no means a high character previously, and now has the reputation of doing his utmost to keep up and foment mischief between the planters and the ryots.

2961. When in a previous answer, you remarked that emissaries swarmed over the country, to whom in particular or in general did you allude, and is your knowledge of that derived from ascertained facts or from common report?—My knowledge is derived from a general belief which existed around me, that there were emissaries in the villages in large numbers, and letters were dropt in the villages, appealing to the ryots to rise against the planters; one such letter I found, and forwarded it to the magistrate of Kishnagur.

2962. Did you never endeavour to trace out any of these people, and if so, were you successful; and did the ryots ever allege to you as an excuse that they had been misled by instigators?—Yes, I made frequent attempts but without success, and the police had the reputation of largely aiding such parties in what they were doing. Ryots have said to me that they were misled; and not many days ago, near the tent of Mr. Mackenzie, the deputy magistrate, I saw an old Mussulman ryot to whom I had been kind, and knew well; I asked him why he did not come to me, he replied, he had been ashamed to do so, because he and others had been led to act in the wrong way that they had done. I then asked him, why he could not come now, he replied, he could not do so, because there was a league formed against the factory; and that he and his fellows had kissed the Koran, and that one village could not settle without the other.

2963. When you said that the police instigated the ryots, did you mean the village watchmen or the regular police?—Both; though the former more actively and openly than the latter. I believe the Darogah of the Hardi Thanna did so to a great extent.

2964. Have you any reason to think that the police sympathise with the ryots, and if so, what led to such sympathy?—I have great reason for thinking so, and their reason for doing so is very obvious; and from all that I have seen of the Bengal police, their object has invariably been to create disputes and trouble in place of preventing the same.

2965. But the planters being strong and the ryots weak, why would the police, if corrupt, side with the weak?—If trouble did not take place between the planters and ryots, the police could have no portion of the planters' money.

2966. President.] The following changes in the system of indigo planting have been variously suggested to the Commission; will you favour us with your opinion as to the possibility of introducing them, as follows:

1st. That the planter should make the ryot a bid for his land; say, he would give from eight to ten rupees for a first-rate crop, four to six rupees for a middling crop, and not less than two rupees for any crop?—I do not conceive this scheme practicable; I cannot see how such a scheme would work successfully.

2d. That the planter should take fewer bundles for the rupee?—I think four bundles for the rupee, which is the present rate at Nischindipore, would satisfy the ryot; provided the bundles were fairly and liberally measured, or taken by weight, as the ryot may think proper.

3d. That the ryots be charged nothing for seed?—I think, under the present circumstances, that giving up the charge for seed is nothing but fair.

4th. That the factory should bear the expense of carting the plant?—I also think this alteration would be just.

5th. That when seed is given for the stumps, the ryot should sell it at the market price, the factory having the right of pre-emption?—I also think this a just right on the part of the ryot.

6th. That the bundles of indigo should be weighed instead of being measured?—I think 60 bundles for 1,000 cubic feet would be a fair rate both for the planter and for the ryot. I have no objection whatever to weighing if it be practicable.

7th. That the indigo beegah should be assimilated either to the Government or the local zemindary beegah?—I do not see the object of changing the indigo beegah, as it is of long standing, and the ryots very well know at what standard the land will be measured when they take their advances.

8th. That contracts shall only be for one year; that the regular squaring of accounts shall take place annually, and that ryots should not be allowed to fall heavily into balances?—I think that this is quite right; but my own intention is in future to make the contract of as simple a character as possible; to give each man a cash advance of two rupees a beegah, which his having for

Mr:
J. Forlong.
10 July 1860.

Mr.
J. Forlong.
10 July 1860.

for 12 months without interest, would at the lowest rate be equivalent to three rupees a beegah; that the above two rupees should be given to the ryot on condition of his cultivating, irrespective of all risk to him connected with the crop. That whether there is a crop or no crop at all, no portion of this money should be charged to him in any future account, thereby securing, under any circumstances, to the ryot a reasonable remuneration for his labour and for the rent of his land. Eight bundles per beegah would pay off the first advance; a ryot with ordinary luck and industry might very easily secure a crop of double this amount, and besides that, he would, in very many instances, realise a large return from indigo seed and cold weather crops. I may say, that in Nischindipore, the year before last, 541 ryots received about three rupees eight annas each for seed, out of 864 ryots. The above system would give the ryot a return of about four rupees or five rupees a beegah, exclusive of indigo seed.

I would also propose that with regard to the old balances whatever money might be due to the ryot on this account beyond the first advance of two rupees, only 25 per cent. should be deducted on account of any previous debt, and the balance given to the ryot in cash. I would also abolish the charge for stamp, the charge for seed, and the charge for carriage, throwing, really, the risk of a crop upon the factory, and leaving the chance of a very liberal return to the cultivator. My principal, Mr. Hills, has written to me from England fully supporting this scheme. Mr. Hills also was the first planter in this district who at once, more than 20 years ago, reduced the rate of bundles taken from the ryot, from 10 bundles to 4; and in many instances Mr. Hills has spent large sums of money in different times to support the ryots and enable them to get seed for their cold-weather crops. I remember one year Messrs. Hills, White & Co., when there was a high inundation, by which the ryots lost their rice crop, advanced about a lakh and 50,000 rupees to purchase paddy for the ryots, and grain to sow their cold-weather crops.

9th. That all contracts should be registered before qualified officials?—I should be very glad, in common, I believe, with many planters, to see the ryots' contracts registered, provided I saw any practical way of doing so. The ryot would take no trouble in such a matter, and he would think it a very irksome duty. If the difficulty could, however, be overcome, I would be very happy to see it so.

2967. Mr. Temple. In order to allow the remuneration to the ryots which you have just mentioned, would you consider a law to punish criminally a wilful neglect on the part of the ryot to cultivate after receiving two rupees a beegah, necessary?—Yes, absolutely necessary. I think that unless the present summary law, or some such law, be rendered permanent, it will be impossible to embark further capital on indigo advances, and some of the capital now embarked must be withdrawn.

2968. Would you agree to abandon outstanding balances of every ryot who would engage to continue cultivation on the terms you have mentioned?—I am not prepared to advocate so great a concession in all cases, more especially as the ryots' contracts in future are only to exist for one year. I would not object to give up the old balance to a ryot, provided he entered into a contract for five years, and I was protected in the same contract by such a law as is now in force.

[Commission adjourned at 6 P.M.]

Wednesday, 11th July 1860.

PRESENT.

W. S. SETON-KARE, Esq., C. S., President.

Members:—W. F. Fergusson, Esq., Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

Mr. JAMES TISSENDIE, native of France, Manager of the Shikarpore Concern, Nuddea District, extending also to the Districts of Rajshahye Pubna, called in; and Examined on oath.

Mr.
J. Tissendie.
11 July
1860.

2969. President.] WILL you state to the Commission the other concerns in which you have had experience as an indigo planter?—In Meergunge, in Jessore, and Paikidunga also, in the same district. In Furreedpore, Soorbundea concern, and Nasibshahye, also in Pubna in Nasibshahye; in Kishnagur in Katuli. And for the last 10 years I have been manager of Katchikatta. My experience extends over a period of 25 years, in both ryotti and nij cultivation.

2970. Do you wish your reply to the Commission's circular to be considered as evidence?—Yes.

2971. In your experience, have you found the zemindars hostile or favourable to indigo cultivation?—As a general rule they were not favourable to it; but I have found some very fair indeed.

2972. Have you had much difficulty in obtaining *putni*s and leases from zemindars; and if so, of what kind?—Some years ago there was very little difficulty in getting a putni or a lease, but of late it has become much more so, and the price demanded is greatly enhanced. For instance, the Shikarpore concern, for the sake of peace and quietness, had, to take a putni from Baboo Ram

Ram Ruttun Roy, the sudder jumma of which was 7,500 rupees, where we never collected more than 5,000 rupees, and we had to pay 19,000 rupees as the price of it; besides which we had to pay up 10,000 rupees bukya, or arrears of rent, of which we shall receive little or nothing. This occurred a few months ago. The concern had had indigo cultivated in these villages before, besides jummas, some of which were of very long standing, or about 30 years old. It was within the last two years that the cultivation of indigo by the ryots has been interrupted, owing to the influence of the zemindars; for several years previously to that there had been disputes, but not with the ryots. I cannot recollect at this moment the precise facts with regard to any other case; but sometimes I have tried to obtain ijarras and putnis, and have not been successful.

2973. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you remember the disputes regarding the Gurgurria village, and did they occur in your time, or before you took charge?—They commenced before my time; when I took charge of Katchikatta, a settlement had been made with that concern, but not with Sinduri. Three people were killed in affrays, and afterwards the disputes continued with Sinduri up to the present time. Mr. Hills settled with Latafat Hossein by paying him 2,000 rupees cash, to secure his good will towards the cultivation of indigo.

2974. Is that village within the jurisdiction of the Jessore magistrate, and what distance is it from the station?—Most of the villages, where the disputes occurred, were in the Jessore district, though some were in that of Kishnagur. The Jessore station is distant about 50 miles.

2975. President.] Within your experience, have the difficulties with the zemindars been, that they disliked indigo cultivation, as injurious to the ryots, or that they objected to surrender their authority over their ryots, or that they merely looked upon the wish of the planter to get putnis or ijarras, as the means of making money?—The zemindars never had an objection to indigo as a cultivation, but they do not like the planters to support their ryots, because that interferes with their power, and in many instances they make the planters pay very dearly before they part with their property and rights.

2976. Then, in fact, the real point has been, whether the planter could afford to pay as much as the zemindar required?—Yes, that has been the main difficulty.

2977. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] But did you not generally find the zemindars averse to giving leases and putnis to the planters?—No. The fact is, the zemindar does not care much about the ryots, but he looks out for good terms in money.

2978. If a zemindar refuses to grant leases or putnis to a planter, are not affrays and breaches of the peace the general results?—Not if the ryots are on the side of the zemindar, but if they side with the planter, such are very likely to occur.

2979. Were there not affrays between Ram Ruttun Roy and the Shikarpore concern, on account of his refusing to grant leases?—No, that was not the cause; the origin of the quarrel was an attempt on his part to dispossess us of our jummas.

2980. Did he or did he not refuse to grant leases when first applied for?—I can't say, as it was before my time.

2981. Mr. Fergusson.] Can you state whether the zemindars of the Nuddea district are generally residents or non-residents on their estates?

72—I.

—Large zemindars, generally speaking, are not; most of the small ones are.

2982. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] During your experience, have you or have you not found that when the zemindars refuse to grant leases to the planters, the magistrate induces them to do so?—Such has never occurred during my experience.

2983. President.] In your ilaka villages have you experienced any difficulty this year in sowing and cultivating through your ryots?—No, I have had no difficulty whatever either in ilaka or belilaka villages.

2984. Have you had occasion to institute suits for breaches of contract this year under the new Act, or any other suits, such as for damaging indigo and so forth?—No, I have not; the only two suits I instituted this year were against two policemen, one of the Hardi Thanna and one of the Kurreempore Thanna, who were trying to instigate my ryots not to sow indigo; these cases were dismissed. But some ryots from the Bamundi concern, who came over to one of my villages, and tried to make the ryots combine, were convicted and punished with six months' imprisonment, and 50 rupees fine. I now hear that these men have been released, by orders of the Government.

2985. Then are we to understand that you have had no difficulty this year with your ryots; that the factory has sown its usual amount of indigo; and that, with the exceptions above-mentioned, you have experienced no obstruction from the police?—The concern has sown its usual amount of sowings, with the exception of 3,000 beegahs only, and this was for want of rain, and these are scattered over 12 factories; there was no dispute about them. With the exceptions above mentioned, I have had no obstructions from the police. After my sowings were over, a parwanna issued by the Lieutenant Governor, when no discontent had previously existed, created considerable excitement, and convinced the ryots that Government wished to discourage the cultivation of indigo.

2986. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you had, or do you anticipate, any difficulty in obtaining coolies and carriage to complete the manufacture?—I had no difficulty whatever in making advances; but in one of my factories, the first day I wanted to work, some of the coolies under advance refused unless they were paid one, and, in some cases, two rupees, above their contract, because they heard that the Bamundi concern was paying dearer than what they had contracted with me for. Since then, there has been a great deal of excitement, but hitherto the work has gone on well.

2987. Have you this season increased the wages of your coolies and workpeople, and were the advances made at these increased rates?—Yes, from 20 to 25 per cent., and it was fully explained to the people that they were to receive wages at the enhanced rate.

2988. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] When these people refused to work without an enhanced rate, what did you do?—I told them that I would settle their accounts in the same proportion as the three factories around me paid.

2989. President.] From whom did you receive the parwanna, a copy of which you filed?—It was brought into my cutcherry at Guria by a Government police peon, with an official seal.

2990. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you anticipate any difficulty in your next October's sowings?—I do, because the ryots appear to be in an excited state, and under the impression that Government does

Mr.
J. Tissendie.

11 July
1860.

Mr.
J. Tissendie.

11 July
1860.

not wish them to sow indigo. If left to themselves, I believe they would sow as usual.

2991. President.] In the concerns you have had experience in, for what term of years has the contract generally been?—In almost all the concerns I have been, five years have been the usual term of contract. In some, though the contract was for five years, still it was renewed every year. In Shikarpore it is not renewed till the expiration of the five years, and the ryot is not charged with stamped paper, till when renewed.

2992. What is the object of renewing the contract yearly in those other concerns?—I suppose the custom originated with a desire to keep the contract always at five years.

2993. Can you say if contracts were so renewed with ryots in the ilaka as in the be-ilaka villages?—I believe they were in both.

2994. Were the contracts filled up at the time, or did the ryot merely affix his name to a blank stamped paper, or touch the pen while another man wrote his name?—Whenever I have taken kabulyats, they were either in a printed form, or the word "kabulyat" was on the top, on a blank-stamped paper. In Shikarpore, a printed form is generally used; when such was not used, it was impracticable to fill it up at the time.

2995. Was the amount of stamp two annas, or was it sufficient to cover the amount of balances which might be standing against the ryot?—Generally two annas, and sometimes two men's names were entered into one kabulyat, and they paid one anna each.

2996. Mr. Fergusson.] Are the kabulyats generally witnessed at the time?—Yes, they are.

2997. Are you able to get your gomashita and respectable factory people to witness these kabulyats?—No. No respectable native will witness them, in case he should be obliged to go before the courts.

2998. Then are you obliged to be satisfied with hangers-on about the factory, or any one you can get to witness these documents?—We generally use the factory chowkidars, takidgirs, and amins, or any one else of a low caste that may be available.

2999. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Would a respectable unmedwar or candidate for the office of mohurrir or other similar situation, put his name as a witness to these kabulyats?—He might in some instances, but not in general.

3000. President.] Can you state how many ryots in the Shikarpore or Katchikatta concerns cleared their advances, and got fazil or excess money?—I only took charge of Shikarpore from this season, so am not prepared to answer that part of the question; as regards Katchikatta, in the Paikpara and Durgapore sub-divisions, almost all the ryots cleared their advances, and many received excess. In the Katchikatta division, the crop was not so good, and, consequently, a less number cleared their advances there.

3001. In the Katchikatta concern, had the majority of the cultivators been sowing for a long period of years?—I suppose the majority has sown since the factory has been established.

3002. Was it your practice to give fresh advances, supposing the old balances were not cleared?—There were scarcely any old balances in the concern, as almost yearly I used to write off the heavy balances which stood against the ryots, and generally gave them half the value of the plant they brought in in cash, whatever might be the value against them.

3003. Did you ever attempt to realize balances by civil suits?—Never.

3004. Considering the late dislike evinced to indigo in many parts of this district, do you wish to suggest any changes or improvements in the system, as between planters and ryots?—As I have already said, I think it necessary to increase the wages of all the servants and workmen of the factory, and also that the ryot should receive a higher rate of remuneration for the plant he delivers.

3005. Do you not think it advisable that the accounts should be yearly, and the accounts squared every year?—I think the contracts should be yearly ones. The accounts at present are settled yearly.

3006. Do you think the concern should bear any portion of the rent of the land, or charge nothing for seed, or buy seed from the ryot at the market price, when grown from the stumps?—In the event of a bad season, and when the ryot could not clear his advances, I would give him the whole of the rent; and as for the seed, I think it very immaterial, and it should be given free to the ryots. Regarding the buying of the seed, I am decidedly of opinion, that the ryots should get the market price for it from the factory.

3007. Mr. Fergusson.] Can you tell us what is the present price of seed for the October sowings?—At Mirzapore, 10 days ago, it was from 1 rupee 8 annas to 1 rupee 10 annas a maund, which would cost here two rupees.

3008. Have you, for the last three years, had to pay any high prices for indigo seed; I mean for spring sowings?—In 1857 and 1858, prices were very high, for both up-country and desi seed; I paid as much as 30 rupees a maund for up-country, and 40 rupees for desi.

3009. Have not these high prices for seed greatly increased the outlay of factories, and thus for the time diminished the power of the planter to increase his disbursements in other ways?—Undoubtedly. It has been one of the principal causes.

3010. Is it your opinion that the parwannas issued by Mr. Eden and the magistrate of this district, have had much effect in exciting the ryots and making them not sow indigo?—I believe they have been the foundation of all the mischief; until Mr. Eden's parwanna appeared, there was no refusal to sow.

3011. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Do you not know that long before the parwannas were issued, the ryots of Hanskali Govindpore had quarrelled with the planter, and stopped the cultivation of indigo?—I never heard anything about it.

3012. President.] Do you think that it would have been possible for the purwannas of Government to have caused such a dislike to indigo, had not that cultivation previously been disliked and unpopular?—I believe it quite possible in itself, as I am not aware that indigo cultivation is unpopular, though of late the crops have failed, owing to bad seasons, which has discouraged the ryots. Notwithstanding which I am satisfied that but for those parwannas, things would have gone on as usual.

3013. Mr. Fergusson.] You have been a long time in Jessore, are the terms in that district more favourable than in Kishnagur to the ryots, or is the treatment of the planters different?—With regard to the treatment, I think they are very much alike, and so are the terms. In Jessore a larger larger proportion of the land is taken for indigo than in Kishnagur, it being better adapted for the purpose.

3014. Are the ryots of Jessore, generally, more or less peaceable than in Kishnagur?—Up to this year, I always considered the Jessore ryots much worse than those of Kishnagur.

3015. Are you of opinion that the difference of the executive management of the two districts is the cause of the different results as to indigo?—Decidedly. If Mr. Molony had been here, I am of opinion that everything would have been quiet, and if Mr. Herschel had been in Jessore, things would have been in much the same way there, as they are now in Kishnagur.

3016. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Is it not a fact that ryots of several villages had put in petitions, stating their unwillingness to cultivate indigo, before Mr. Herschel came to this district and took charge of the magistracy, and that on such occasions 400 or 500 ryots daily besieged the magistrate's cutcherry; and since Mr. Herschel took charge, has he not discouraged the presenting of these petitions?—I heard that petitions had been presented more or less since October; but as to whether Mr. Herschel encouraged or discouraged their presentation, I can't say.

3017. President.] What means do you employ to check extortion on the part of your amla, and to give ready access to the ryots, when making their complaints?—Every rupee that is disbursed by the concern, is paid in my presence or that of my assistant; and that is the custom throughout Messrs. Watson & Co.'s concerns; I adopted the same system when I was at Katchikatta. With regard to petitions, I sit from 10 to 12 every morning, and from four to five every evening, (Sundays excepted) and every ryot has free access to me. I charge no institution fee; though we used to take one anna on every petition in the Meerungunge concern, in order to check frivolous complaints.

3018. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Does every planter adopt the same plan in making payments to the ryots, and hearing their petitions?—Generally so; but there may be exceptions.

3019. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you think it possible that the servants of Katchikatta could take such sums from the ryots, as have been stated in evidence?—Decidedly not; they must be exaggerated. They may have taken the usual dusturi, which the ryot will give whether you wish him or not; but there never could have been such extortions as those stated in evidence.

3020. President.] Do you wish to make any statement regarding the evidence of a ryot named Manniruddin, who deposed to sundry acts of oppression, said to have been practised upon him by the servants of the Katchikatta concern?—I certainly affirm that no such oppression, as was stated before the Commission, could have happened without my knowledge. It is impossible for him to have been confined in a godown of the factory without my knowledge.

3021. Was there no truth about his quarrel with the devan, naib, and mohurrir, about a case of abortion and abduction?—Not that I am aware. I have a distant recollection of complaints being made by a man, about the seduction of his wife, but don't think this man was connected with that case.

3022. In Shikarpore or Katchikatta, is the indigo beegah identical with the Government or local zemindary beegah?—The zemindary beegah varies very much. Our indigo beegah at Shikarpore is 80 haths of 20 inches. I can't recollect what it was at Katchikatta.

3023. Do you think in most instances, the indigo beegah is greater than the zemindary beegah?—Yes.

3024. Mr. Fergusson.] During the time you were in charge of Katchikatta, was there much land cleared of jungle and brought into cultivation?—Not less than 40 or 50,000 beegahs were cleared and brought into cultivation during the 10 years I was at Katchikatta, through my giving assistance to the ryots, and also through my cultivating it first for nij, and then giving it to the ryots; several flourishing villages are now established on the lands. One of them named after Mr. Saubolle, is called "Saubollepore," another after Mr. Hills, is called "Hillnuggur," and so on with others.

3025. Out of that large extent of land cleared, what addition did you get to your indigo cultivation?—Scarcely any; when I joined the concern there were 17,500 beegahs of ryotti and nij, and when I left there were 18,300 beegahs.

3026. Then, has the value of the property and the number of the people greatly increased during that time?—It has increased so much in value, that instead of there being an annual loss of from 3,000 to 4,000 rupees, there is from 10,000 to 12,000 rupees profit, and the people are very numerous, where there used to be scarcely any.

3027. President.] Was the land cleared merely patit or waste and open land, or was it land covered with benna, cossia, null, or other jungle, or was it land all under water?—It was all jungle land, covered with benna, cossia, and null. It was the favourite hunting ground of the Nawab of Moorshedabad; I have seen 100 elephants in line, so late as 1851.

3028. Were you ever charged with a case of abduction in the courts of either Furreedpore or Dacca?—I was, about 12 years ago; and was fined 500 rupees by Mr. Swetenham, the Session Judge of Decca, as accessory after the fact, under the following circumstances:—Mr. E. Latour was then magistrate of the Furreedpore district, and in the first year that I took charge of the concern, Mr. Latour came prejudiced against the proprietors of the concern, Messrs. Hunter & Co., and declared that he would put down the oppression of that firm. Some months before he was appointed magistrate, I was put in charge of the concern, none of the former managers remaining. On his arrival, Mr. Latour received complaints against Mr. John Driver, one of my assistants, for making roads and cutting down trees through a village; he tried the case, but could make nothing of it, as Mr. Driver held a parwanna from the former magistrate to make the road. This did not at all sweeten Mr. Latour's temper, and he did not disguise it; so on the most trivial complaint that went to him against the concern, all the nahibs, tahsildars, gomashdars, mohurrirs, &c., were summoned, and I was obliged to keep up a double establishment. The indigo in the concern was sown, all but 35 beegahs, in a village called Gungarampore; these the ryots objected to sow, when they found out that the magistrate was against the concern, and had told them they might make any complaints they had to make, on plain paper. The assistant I had then went with ploughs, without my authority, to sow the land, when an affray took place. This assistant had private powers from Mr. Austin, one of

Mr.
J. Tissenlie.

11 July
1860.

Mr.
J. Tissendie.

11 July
1860.

the partners, who had just gone home, through whom I got the management of the concern, but I was not aware that he had given private powers to my assistant. In that affray three men were alleged to have been wounded, and I, as the manager, was tried, because Mr. Latour said, that it was not possible for such an affray to have taken place without my knowledge. The men who were wounded disappeared for a time, but were present when the case was tried. It was generally reported that they had been murdered, and I was accused of having hidden them, though I never saw them but on the day they were in court. None of the men said to have been abducted, even deposed to having ever seen me.

3029. You have stated that Mr. Latour came prejudiced against the concern; from where did he come, and what was the cause of his prejudice?—I believe he came from Malda, and he expressed his sentiments, that he would put Hunter & Co. down, and certainly, his acts as soon as ever he came into the district, showed that he was prejudiced. The best proof of this is, that whilst half the concern was in Pubna, and half in Furreedpore, not one case was brought against me in the Pubna district, while the Furreedpore portion was all up in arms.

3030. Since your residence in Kishnagur for the last 10 or 11 years, has any case been brought against you personally?—No, with one slight exception; about four or five years ago a complaint was made against me by a man (I don't recollect the name), to the effect that some lattials of the factory had stolen fowls from his boat by my orders. I do not remember exactly what became of the case, the man having complained solely because a tahsildar of mine would not allow him to take fowls out of a village, where he had made advances. The tahsildar and man made it up, and I never heard any more about the case.

3031. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Are you aware that the ryots of some concerns are charged in their accounts for table expenses, lotteries, and bets, and for road making?—I know, as a zemindar myself, that if I travel through my estates, say for 20 miles, the ryots would, if I expressed the least wish, supply me with as many fowls and eggs as I wanted; I believe it is the custom throughout India, for the zemindar to get this rusud. I have to add, that I have never taken it. I have never heard of ryots having to pay for lotteries, bets, or races, but I have heard of their paying for road making. I know that in Loknathpore, Goldar, Sinduri, and Caragoda, ryots had to pay two pice in the rupee, which was paid willingly, and very good roads were made. The concerns paid very large sums of money towards the making of these roads.

3032. I do not mean eatables supplied by the ryots; I mean a charge on the jumma to pay for these items?—I never heard of that; but it is likely that when a zemindar has been in the habit of receiving these things from the ryots, and he gives his property in putni or ijara, that he consolidates these items on his jumma, and that is called khurcha, which is made up in the same way as the khurcha of the planters.

3033. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you believe that any planter, in any case, took anything from his ryots for provisions or personal expenses?—It has never come to my knowledge ever since I have been an indigo planter.

3034. It is within your knowledge, that besides table expenses, native zemindars exact many other sums from ryots, in addition to their rent?—That is a well known fact; that they all have their extra cesses for festivals, marriages, &c., and even while I was holding an ijara, the zemindars have asked my permission to go round the villages, and ask for these benevolences.

3035. Has Act X. of 1859 in any way affected your position as a zemindar and planter towards the ryots?—As a planter it has not, but as a zemindar, I consider it the foundation of the ruin of every zemindar and talookdar in Bengal; and my reason for doing so is, that as soon as the law is thoroughly understood by the ryots, not one of them will pay his rents willingly, and it is impossible for a zemindar to bring a case against each ryot separately, and get a decree within three months, while he must pay his rents to the Government every three months.

3036. President.] Have you ascertained particularly that such a thing as a decree given within three months under Act X. is well nigh impossible?—Some five or six months ago, Mr. James Cockburn had three cases under this Act; one was dismissed, and he got decrees on the other two, which have not been realised to this day. Supposing I have to complain against the 20,000 ryots on my zemindary, how is it possible for any collector to get through the work and give decisions? Whilst at the same time, if I do not pay my rent to the Government every three months, and the rent of my putni every six months, my property will be sold.

3037. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you consider that Section XI. of Act X. deprives the zemindar of a power both necessary and reasonable in this country?—I consider the power is both a necessary and reasonable one to give to the zemindar, and that it used to be rarely abused, as it is the zemindar's interest to keep the ryots on his lands.

3038. President.] Are your factory books made up from day to day, or from week to week, or is there any delay?—They are made up daily, and if I am away from the factory for two or three days, the cash-book is brought to me the first thing on my return.

3039. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you open a new book for each season; say commencing on the 1st October?—We do; if any expenditure for next season is incurred before the 1st of October, a separate memorandum is kept of it, and on that date all the items are copied into the new account, forming the first entries made in the book.

3040. Would the expenditure for next season appear in your regular cash-book of this year, or would it be kept separate?—It would appear in the general cash-book as a disbursement for next season; but it would not appear in a factory book. There would be a separate account kept for that.

3041. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Do you not also sign that separate book, in which the disbursements that are made for next season are entered?—It is signed by me daily; in fact, my rough book is my own, and is my book of reference. My pucka book may not be written up or signed by me for two or three months.

3042. Mr. Fergusson.] After the regular books are written up and signed, do you destroy them, or do you still preserve them?—After the pucka books are signed, the rough books are of very little use, and when the white ants don't eat them they remain in a corner.

MANDARI BISWAS, Inhabitant of Baghberia, Thannah Hanskali, Zillah Nuddea, Tangia Factory, Khalbolia Concern; examined on oath.

M. Biswas.

11 July
1860.

3043. WITNESS deposed as follows:—I used to be in the habit of sowing indigo four or five years ago. I have been told to sow this year ever since the month of Agrān. I didn't sow this year, because I knew that it would take 10 rupees to sow two begahs of indigo, and that for one beegah they would take two. Somewhere in Magh or Phalgun a parwanna issued from the Hanskali thanna to the purport that the sowing of indigo was optional. Also I presented a petition, with 20 or 30 others, to the effect that the factory people were going to take away my cattle. Then out of 200 people in the village, they pitched upon me and two others. They produced in court a khatta, or book, in which they said my name was. They produced no stamp paper bearing my name. The dewan and the planter explained that the stamp was a mere form, and also witnesses came forward, and said, that I had agreed to sow. And I produced witnesses on my side to depose to the fact of my having signed no agreement. I don't know the name of the officials who tried my case, but I was cast in a sum of 171 rupees, and I have heard that two of my houses and four head of cattle were sold, but I understand that this only amounted to 42 or 43 rupees, and I had nobody to raise the remainder of the decree for me, as who would lend to a man who had no property remaining?

3044. President.] Would it not have been better for you to have sown this year than to go to prison?—No, it would not.

3045. Did you think that you would come off victorious in your case?—Yes, I thought I would. I thought I had a good case, as I had no contract to break.

3046. Mr. Fergusson.] Did not the planter say that you had signed the khatta book produced?—He did say so, but my signature on my mookhtyarnama, which I signed before the magistrate, was not like my signature on the khatta.

3047. President.] How did you manage to escape from sowing indigo five or six years ago?—There was a dispute between me and the factory, in which one man was wounded, and so after that no one of our village sowed any indigo.

3048. Mr. Fergusson.] Can you swear that you took no advances or sowed indigo last year?—I can.

BUDDUN MUNDAL, Inhabitant of Kutia Chandpore, Thannah Damurhuda, District of Nuddea, Chandpore Factory, Golar Division, Sindura; Examined on oath.

3049. Witness deposed as follows:—I did sow last year, but as I had taken no new advances I did not sow in Kartik last. We have no October sowings; we generally sow in April. I didn't go the factory last year to make up my accounts.

3050. President.] Then if you didn't go to the factory to make up your accounts, how can you tell that you stood clear in your accounts?—Nobody else went, and I did not go. I never took any advances, and nobody brought them to me. I was cast in 120 rupees damages for six begahs of land. The factory produced the amin and takidgir to prove the case. They were new men and were not long appointed, and had not been there when the alleged advances were made. My suit was decided against me at Damurhuda.

3051. Could you not manage to realise the amount of the decree?—No, I have nothing but some old cows, and the price of rice is very dear. My witnesses' evidence was taken, but they were not believed.

3052. Wouldn't it have been better for you to have sown this year as you did last year, instead of going to prison?—No; as I had taken no advances, I thought I should have been sure to win. I thought there would have been a squaring of accounts for three or four years, and that I should have been on the right side.

3053. Would you willingly sow next year, after your release?—No, don't speak of it.

B. Mundal.

[Commission adjourned at 50. 30, P. M.]

Thursday, 12th July 1860.

Present.

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C. S., President.

Members:—W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Rev. J. Sale; Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

ALEXANDER THOMAS MACLEAN, Esq., at present Assistant to the Magistrate and Collector of Nuddea, lately of Damurhuda, called in; and Examined on oath.

A. T.
Maclean,
Esq.
—
12 July
1860.

3054. President.] WILL you state to the Commission the length of time you have had experience in Nuddea, and in what parts of the district?—I joined my appointment here as assistant to the magistrate in January 1858, and held it till 1859, at the Sudder Station. I took charge of the sub-division of Damurhuda in July 1859, and remained there till September, when I was deputed to the charge of the sub-division of Santipore, where I remained till December. I rejoined Damurhuda in February 1860, and remained there till the 7th of this month.

3055. During that period, had you not fair opportunities of observing the general working of the system of indigo cultivation?—Yes; for, during the months of July, August, and September of last year, I was residing in an indigo factory, there being no residence for a magistrate in those parts; and being the height of the rains, it was impossible for me to reside in a tent. This was at the village of Damurhuda.

3056. During that period, did you become aware of the feelings with which the ryots regarded indigo cultivation; and if so, in what manner were those feelings expressed?—I have no recollection of any complaints being brought to me, or any expression of feeling for or against being made during those three months. There was one instance in which some ryots close to the factory requested me to interfere with Mr. Taylor, the managing assistant, who, at that time, was about to open a khal near this factory, to enable the boats to come near the vats. Their complaint was, that the opening of the khal would swamp their rice before it was ready to cut. Mr. Taylor at once deferred the opening of the khal for, I think, three weeks, owing to which the indigo suffered considerably, having to be twice shipped and unshipped. Mr. Taylor did this on my mere verbal representation, and there was no further dispute. This was the only case connected with indigo that came before my court during those months, as far as I can recollect.

3057. About what time subsequently did you first become aware of the dislike on the part of the ryots to sow indigo, and how, and in what shape was that dislike manifested?—On rejoining the sub-division of Damurhuda, after leave of absence in the latter part of February last, I found the managers of Loknathpore and the Joyrampore villages at issue. Mr. Tweedie and his head servants on one side, and the Mullicks and other chief villagers were bound over to keep the peace respectively by the magistrate, on my recommendation. I understand the origin of the dispute was, that the manager of the factory wished to increase the cultivation of indigo in that village by 200 beegahs; that point, however, being yielded, there was no ostensible cause for dispute when the matter came before me.

3058. After February, was there no dislike towards indigo manifested in other quarters, besides Loknathpore and Joyrampore?—When I arrived at Joyrampore, in the beginning of March, I then learnt that there was some uneasiness in the Kanainuggur and Durgapore quarters, which spread by degrees over my thannas of Hardi and Damurhuda. In the Dowlutgunge thanna, which comprises a large part of the Khalbolia and Khalispore concerns, nothing was heard of any excitement for some time; but they, too, finally joined the rest, though always to a less extent.

3059. Can you say what particular form of expression their dislike took?—It seemed to be the impression in Durgapore, and in the northern part of the Hardi thanna, that the Government had prohibited the cultivation of indigo. I endeavoured to disabuse their minds of this idea, but with no success.

3060. Did they quote any parwannas, or state that it was the order of the Government that they should not sow?—I never heard them quote any parwannas, distinctly. They said it was the order of the Burra sahib that they were not to sow indigo any more. Latterly, I heard it said that people had come up from Calcutta, and exhibited written orders to the effect that there were penalties for sowing; but though I endeavoured to get hold of these orders, I never succeeded in even getting a sight of them. I heard this report from mine own police, and some of the planters.

3061. Did you never hear, during the last two or three months, the Baraset or Kullaroa parwana quoted?—Never. It was not known to the officials of my court, until it appeared in "The Englishman" newspaper.

3062. When the ryots quoted the orders of the Government, did they, at the same time, allege the oppression attending the cultivation of indigo as the cause of their dislike?—That was their universal cry. During the six days I staid at Durgapore, it is almost impossible to say what the number of petitions presented to me was. There being no stamped paper in that part of the country, the petitioners paid in cash the value of the stamp, which should have been attached.

3063. Did the ryots allege that, owing to any particular causes, there had been more oppression of late connected with indigo than in former years?—No; they seemed to see a way to their release from an oppression of long standing; but

I don't

I don't recollect their alleging any new feature in the system.

3064. Mr. Fergusson.] Did you make inquiries regarding any of the petitions that were presented at Durgapore, and with what general result?—The specific charges were at once inquired into in the usual manner; but, as by far the greater number of the petitions were vague, and contained requests for the protection of the police, no particular steps could be taken with reference to these.

3065. Were many of the complaints found to be well-grounded?—These specific charges were few in number, and, as far as I recollect, were not well-grounded.

3066. President.] Was it not the custom for 20, 30, and even 40 ryots to join in one petition, stating generally that indigo cultivation was intolerable?—Yes; they constantly did so.

3067. In such cases, what sort of order could you pass?—An order to this effect, that any individual who had been specifically injured, should bring forward a distinct charge to that effect, supported by proof.

3068. Mr. Fergusson.] What was the effect on the minds of the ryots, of the parwannas that were issued in this district; and however unexceptionably worded, was not their meaning and intent perverted by the ryots?—I think the ryots generally managed to take them in the meaning that suited themselves; for instance, when it was said, that entering into contracts was optional (icha anusarè), they interpreted this to mean that they could do what they liked in the matter of sowing.

3069. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Since when did you observe any unwillingness on the part of the ryots to sow indigo; was it not long before the issuing of these parwannas, and before Mr. Herschel took charge of this district?—I have already stated that I was absent from the indigo, part of the district until the end of February, and when I returned, Mr. Herschel had taken charge.

3070. Are you aware that the ryots of the Hanskali concern quarrelled with the planters and stopped the cultivation of indigo, some 18 months or two years ago?—I recollect hearing of some difficulty that Mr. White had with his villages of Hanskali and Govindpore. This I heard in August and September; previous to that, I have no recollection of hearing of anything of the kind.

3071. President.] Was it ever brought to your notice distinctly that emissaries were going about the district, instigating the ryots not to sow?—No; not of emissaries coming from other parts of the country. Mohesh Chunder Chatterjee, naib to Ram Ruttun Roy, residing at Gosain Durgapore, was prosecuted before me by Mr. George Smith, at the request of Mr. Hills. He was charged with holding nightly meetings at his house, exhibiting parwannas hostile to the cultivation of indigo, and otherwise dissuading the ryots from sowing, and encouraging them to refuse to allow the factory servants to enter the villages. Nothing was proved to my satisfaction, nor did I ever see any of the alleged parwannas. Mohesh Chunder Chatterjee required to go away to another part of the country on his employer's business, so I took a recognizance of 200 rupees from him to appear when required. Nothing ever came of the case.

3072. Mr. Fergusson.] Were you aware of villagers going from village to village inciting each other to join in a league to refuse to sow?—I believe that was a practice.

3073. President.] Were you satisfied generally with the conduct and impartiality of your police? Not on the whole. I cannot say that they acted consistently in favour of either side throughout. I am confirmed in this opinion, from the fact of numerous complaints having been made against them from both sides.

3074. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you consider this as a proof of their impartiality, that they were complained of by both parties; or did they find some advantage from a prolonged state of disturbances?—I did not consider it as a proof of their impartiality; but I can't speak as to the other point, from my own knowledge.

3075. Mr. Sale.] Were many of the complaints made against them established; and can you state on which side, according to the established complaints, their influence preponderated?—I have no recollection of any complaints being established. On the side of the factory the complaints were generally verbal; on the side of the ryots there were two or three written complaints, which were not established; the reason why I was not satisfied was, that I think the higher officers might have used their influence better. In some instances my impression was that they had rather fomented ill-feeling than attempted to quiet it.

3076. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Were there many cases of breach of contract under the new law instituted before you?—Yes, a large number; more than a thousand at Damurhuda; chiefly from the Nischindipore, Loknathpore, Khalbolia, and Golder concerns. The Katchikatta, Ramnuggur, and Bamundi cases were instituted before the officer sitting at Hautbolia.

3077. Did you find that the names of some ryots, who had been long dead, were inserted in the depositions of the prosecutors, as having received cash advances for the present season?—There were some such instances, but they were rare.

3078. Will you be pleased to state how many, and who were the parties in the cases?—The only case I can state from recollection was brought by Mr. Clarke or Mr. Harvey, of the Khalbolia concern, against two ryots of the village, I think of Harryharnuggur; I may be wrong in the name of the village. After repeated inquiries through the police it was discovered that these men were dead. One, I believe had been deceased as long as 13 years.

3079. Did you take the deposition of the prosecutor and the evidence of the witnesses in the case?—Yes.

3080. What was your decision in the case?—The case was dismissed as against those ryots.

3081. In the case of those dead men had they left any heirs to their jummas, or other property?—I cannot recollect. But the prosecutor's mooktyar persists in believing that the dead men are still alive and are keeping out of the way. It was at his request the police made a search for them.

3082. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] As a magistrate, was it not your duty to try those parties for conspiracy and perjury?—I should have done so if I had thought the case was one of that description.

3083. Parties bring a complaint before a magistrate and give their deposition on oath; if it were proved on investigation by evidence that their

A. T.
Maclean,
Esq.

12 July
1860.

A. T.
Maclean,
Esq.
—
12 July
1860.

deposition was false, was it not the duty of a magistrate to try those parties for a false charge?—The death of the men was not proved, but by the darogah's report, which stated that they were dead.

3084. Could you not easily ascertain the death of two men in a village by the evidence of his heirs, the head villagers, and others?—It could have been ascertained in the way mentioned. I can't say whether the heirs came forward or not.

3085. Mr. Fergusson.] Do not all breach of contract cases go to the Commissioner of the district, and has he not in many instances ordered proceedings upon them?—All breach of contract cases, when decided, were submitted to the Commissioner, who recorded his opinion on the decision, but in no case has he interfered with the orders when passed.

3086. Mr. Sale.] Can you state what proportion of the breach of contract cases instituted before you were successful?—Almost all.

3087. Could you state, generally, what evidence you required to establish a breach of contract?—The deposition on oath of the planter in whose presence the cash advance was made, and of his factory servants. These depositions must be supported by the factory account books, to the correctness of which the prosecutor and witnesses were required to swear; stating the manner and time of the preparation of their account. Any independent evidence that could be brought forward would likewise be admitted.

3088. President.] In most cases was the line of defence adopted, that the parties sued never had any connexion at all with the factory, or that they had sown up to the preceding year, but had not received any fresh advances in the autumn?—The latter was the line of defence generally taken.

3089. Do you think the ryots generally understood that the law was a temporary law?—I think so; because the ryots constantly said, when I advised them to sow, that if I would give them a writing to the effect that they need not sow next year, they would sow this year.

3090. Mr. Sale.] Did you in any considerable number of cases require or receive any acknowledgment on the part of the ryot, that he had actually entered into a contract with the factory to sow?—Where any written agreements existed they were required to be produced; throughout the Nischindipore concern written agreements were produced, but from no other concern that I recollect.

3091. Did the ryots invariably deny the existence of the contracts even in the cases where the written agreements were produced?—Invariably.

3092. Did you in any case see any reason to doubt the genuineness of the written agreements?—No, I can't say that I did. Many of the habul-yats from the Peerpore concern were 19 years old, and the agreement was for 20 years.

3093. President.] Do you think any of the ryots, who held out in suits brought against them, were under the impression that there would be a regular squaring of accounts between themselves and the factory, embracing those of several years, and that thus they would be found on the right side of the balance?—In a few instances I was applied to by the ryots to get what was owing to them for seed from the factory.

3094. Mr. Fergusson.] Can you state what generally was the class of witnesses who attested the agreements; were they of the upper class of factory servants or casual hangers on?—I should say, according to my recollection, that they generally were other ryots.

3095. Mr. Sale.] Could you state whether the generality of the ryots could read or write?—By far the greater number could not.

3096. Mr. Fergusson.] Will you state from your experience what was the conduct of the planters during this crisis towards the ryots; did they seem willing to make concessions and conciliate, or did they defy and force them to sow?—Mr. Forlong was usually endeavouring to come to some amicable settlement, making large concessions as to the quantity of land to be sown, and on that account, I believe, comparatively few of the Nischindipore ryots went to jail. Mr. Meares, on the contrary, seemed to hold, that any concession made would be impolitic; Mr. Clarke, too, I think, was averse to yielding anything of what he considered his just rights. The other planters were subordinates of the concerns managed by these gentlemen.

3097. President.] As regards the amount of indigo sown, which policy appears to you to have had the best effect?—As regards the amount of land sown, Mr. Forlong's. But in Khalbolia the amount of land not sown is very small.

3098. Mr. Fergusson.] Was there not a danger that in making concession to threats, attempts at farther exactions might follow when the manufacturing began?—Yes, and not in the manufacturing only. I gather these to be the views of those gentlemen who were averse to concessions in the line they took.

3099. Mr. Sale.] Were the damages paid in many cases, or did they generally go to jail?—In very few cases were damages paid in court at the time of passing the order; but in several instances, in which men had asked for a few days' time to pay, the amount was forthcoming.

3100. President.] Supposing the summary law to terminate, and no more parwannas on any account to be issued, what is your opinion as to the probability of ryots sowing indigo next year?—If not next year, I should say that in the course of a year or two, things would settle down, and a large amount of indigo be sown.

3101. Do you think, then, that when the present excitement has passed away, indigo cultivation will be either sufficiently attractive or sufficiently profitable to the ryot as to induce him to sow, without any change being made in the system?—Not without considerable changes in the system; especially the oppression and interference of the lower orders of factory servants.

3102. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Were there not many complaints made before you against the planters for destroying the ryot's rice plants, and sowing indigo on the same lands?—Not very many.

3103. But in those that were made, what was the general result?—In the first instance, I tried the case under Act IV, and gave the ryot possession of the land with the indigo on it; the factory had claimed the land as its nij-abad. The other cases I let stand over till the first, which had been appealed, was tried by the sessions judge.

3104. Mr. Fergusson.] Were you aware of any instances of violence and oppression having been committed by the planters, and do you think it possible that trees and bamboos could have been cut down, and thatching grass appropriated, without any complaints being brought to you?—I have have had cases since February of personal violence being perpetrated by factory servants, but none that I recollect, of cutting down trees, or appropriating thatching grass. I have no doubt they would have been brought to my notice if they had occurred.

A. T.
Maclean,
Esq.

12 July
1860.

ARCHIBALD HILLS, Esq., Manager of the Katchikatta Concern, near Hardi Thanna, Subdivision Kurreempore, called in, and Examined on oath.

3105. President.] Will you state to the Commission the period you have had experience in indigo planting, and in what concerns?—I was five years at Durgapore, as assistant to Mr. Tissendie, who was then manager of the Katchikatta concern; and I took the management in November last, when Mr. Tissendie left for Shikarpore.

3106. Mr. Fergusson.] Will you state what the cultivation was last year, in the spring and October sowings?—The total cultivation was 19,000 beegahs, of which about 9,000 were sown in October.

3107. Do you wish to put in the answers to the Commission's circular as part of your evidence?—Yes; I do. (Filed accordingly.)

3108. What extent of October sowings did you effect this season?—Eleven thousand five hundred beegahs.

3109. Did you experience any difficulty in doing so, or were any objections made by the ryots?—Not a single objection was raised, and the land was sown like a garden; not a single clod was left on the ground.

3110. During the time you were in charge of the Durgapore division of the concern were the seasons favourable, and did the ryots receive considerable fazil, and were they apparently contented with the cultivation?—The seasons were favourable, and the out-turns larger than they had been previously. The ryots very generally received fazil or excess payments, and were quite contented up to the middle of last February; as a proof of this, when Mr. Reid, the Commissioner of the Nuddea division, passed through about the 17th of December, on official duty on the railway line, not a single petition was presented to him, either against the Katchikatta concern, or the native servants, although numbers of ryots consulted with him about the land they were losing by the railway. He passed through the concern, marching for about 12 miles.

3111. President.] About what time did you first become aware of a marked dislike on the part of the ryots to cultivate indigo?—Up to the middle of February there were no signs of any discontent or dislike; the first intimation I had, was a letter sent to me to Jessore, where I was then staying. I returned immediately, and found that five or six ryots from three or four villages, had come into the station, and lodged a general complaint, intimation of which was given to us by our Kishnagar mooktyar; just about that time, Mohesh Chunder Chatterjee came up to his house at Gosain Durgapore; he was many years ago a kerani, or English writer at Katchikatta, and I understand his father was a gomashtha of the factory, and was dismissed from his situation. He called upon my ryots, and they used to come and meet at his house. I was told by my servants that the darogah assisted him in summoning these ryots through the police. I complained verbally of this to Mr. Maclean to get him removed; he was subsequently removed to another thanna, I cannot say for what cause. The dislike spread chiefly through the intimidation of the villagers of Dukhi, instigated by Mohesh Chatterjee; he has two or three small villages in mourusi from Ram Ruttun Roy of Narraill, Jessore.

3112. Mr. Fergusson.] What extent of spring sowings have you been able to accomplish this season?—One thousand eight hundred beegahs, instead of 8,500, for which we had arranged in the usual way; and of those 1,800 beegahs, 700 lay in the Pubna zillah; the villages of which zillah finished their sowings as usual.

3113. Were all the sowings for which you had agreed in Pubna completed?—Yes.

3114. Then your whole deficiency lay in the district of Nuddea?—Yes, with the exception of two small villages in Jessore, in which Mohesh Chatterjee has an interest.

3115. President.] Can you state what causes were generally alleged by the ryots as their reasons for not sowing?—There were several causes; the prevailing idea that indigo planting had been stopped by the Government was the chief cause. Some of the good ryots were led astray by one or two men of each village, who kept up the agitation, and who were constantly passing backwards and forwards from Calcutta. In their petitions to the authorities, they made general complaints of oppression, also the villagers of Poamarri made complaints to me of the oppression of my head servants; I went to meet them for the purpose of inquiry, and after sitting with them for the first day, we arranged that they should bring their proofs the following day, but they never came, having been, I believe, induced by the Dukhi villagers not to come. The villagers have told my head people that they cannot settle with me, as they have taken an oath to Mohesh Chatterjee not to do so without his consent.

3116. Was it ever brought to your notice that emissaries from Calcutta or other districts had instigated the ryots not to sow?—No; no such instances were brought to my knowledge. A chowkidar was punished by Mr. Taylor for giving out on a haut day that they were not to sow indigo under penalty of 14 years' imprisonment. This was in the Kananuggur division of the Nischindipore concern.

3117. Do you think that on the whole the police acted impartially, and gave a fair amount of support to planters?—Most partially; especially while a darogah, named Buddinath was at the Hardi thanna. This was the man I complained of; through his influence the amins and takidgirs never came near the factory for six weeks.

3118. Had you the same difficulty to induce the villages to sow in ilaka as in the be-ilaka villages?—In several of the be-ilaka villages they behaved better than in one of our talook villages. In one instance, Hurrnath Roy, of Narraill, on my writing to him, sent orders on his Bukshipore naib, to make these three villages sow, and they did sow. A large village belonging to Poolin Behari Sen, of Berhampore, Moorshedabad, refused to sow, even on the orders of the Baboo; and he wrote back to me in an English letter,

A. Hills,
Esq.

A. Hills,
Esq.
12 July
1860.

that he had no power over his ryots since the passing of Act X, of 1859. In his other villages, in the Nischindipore concern, the ryots did sow on his requisition through his naib.

3119. Then on the whole, your difficulties this year have not been increased by any opposition on the part of the zemindars?—No; on the contrary, I received assistance from them when I applied for it. We have always been on friendly terms with the zemindars.

3120. How many suits for breach of contract have you been obliged to institute this year?—I have sued almost every village in the concern in the Kishnagur district. First we began by suing the whole villages; then instructions came out from Mr. Herschel, that we were not to sue more than five in one plaint. On my representing the matter to Mr. Lushington at a personal interview, he allowed a larger number to be sued at once, but warned us, that a failure of proof against any one, might involve the dismissal of the whole suit. We must have instituted suits against a hundred villages, and in each, perhaps, on an average, 30 men were included.

3121. Were pains taken by the authorities to explain to the ryots the temporary character of the law, and the consequences of their not sowing, should the contract be proved against them?—The greatest possible pains were taken to explain to the ryots the real state of the case, and it was particularly explained that it would be optional for them not to sow next year; but they were in such a state of excitement, that they would not believe what was told them; some ryots said to Mr. Graham Tayler, in my presence, "one magistrate told us, we might sow or not, as we liked, and you put us in prison for three months for not sowing." Even when the first decrees were passed against some ryots, the others would not believe that anything would come of it, and said that they would be sent back in three days.

3122. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] What was Kedarnath Mookerjee before, and what were his former circumstances?—I believe he came to the factory as an English writer, when he was quite a young man, and eventually became naib, 12 or 14 years ago. He has been in the receipt of 50 rupees a month ever since I have known him.

3123. Have you any idea what he is worth now?—No, I can't say; but I know he has a pukka house on the Matabanga.

3124. Are you aware that he made a collection twice, and collected some thousands of rupees on the occasion of his son's marriage, and thereby created a strong bad feeling in the minds of the ryots against the factory?—I recollect that about two years ago he asked Mr. Tissendie's permission to collect bhikha from the ilaka ryots, and I believe Mr. Tissendie's answer was, that so long as the ryots did not complain to him about it, he might do so. Since the disturbance has broken out, I have been told by people, that he has collected large sums of money, but not a single complaint was made against him until the disturbance had broke out. The ryots since allege that they were afraid to complain, but I ride out unattended almost every day in the year, and until the last four or five months, whenever I passed a village, have always been attended by 20 or 30 ryots over the indigo land, and freely communicated with them about their private affairs.

3125. Mr. Sale.] Do you think that in a case like that which you have referred to, the naib of a concern would have sufficient influence to prevent the ryots complaining to you, even though they might have access to you?—There is no doubt that the natives are very much afraid of a naib, but I can hardly think that, out of so many ryots, not one man should have mentioned it to me.

3126. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you think that the parwanna issued in this district, and the removal of the assistant magistrate from Hautbolia had a prejudicial effect on the minds of the ryots and tended to keep up the excitement against indigo planting?—Most undoubtedly; but for the parwanna of the 19th of April, and Mr. Tayler's unaccountable removal at the end of 15 days, taking place at the very time when the parwanna was issued, the whole of the concerns in that part of the country would have sown. The next parwanna, to the effect that it was optional with them to sow their lands with indigo or rice, settled the question; on the evening of the 19th, everybody was giving in razinamas, agreeing to sow indigo; on the 20th they took the seed from the Durgapore Factory; and on the 21st, after hearing of those occurrences, they sowed all their indigo lands with rice.

3127. Then do you attribute the fact of your not being able to sow this season to the executive management of the district?—Entirely to the parwanna of the 19th and Mr. Tayler's removal.

3128. President.] For what term of years are the contracts for the Katchikatta concern generally entered into?—Ever since I joined the concern, we have never had any difficulty in the sowings, nor in the people taking advances; therefore we never considered it necessary to take any written agreements from the ryots.

3129. Then do you not charge the ryots for stamped paper?—Yes, we charge two annas every year to each ryot, whether ilaka or be-ilaka.

3130. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you anything to say in answer to the complaints made before the Commission by some ryots of the Katchikatta concern?—With reference to a man, who called himself Dudh Mullick, of Bundobil, there is in the factory books a man named Dukhi Mullick, but whose brother's name, Shujam, is also written with his, the jumma being in Shujam's name. I put in certain extracts, which have been made under my own eye from the factory books. Among other statements, he says, "I sowed indigo in Kartik, how then could I have taken advances in Agran." I reply, that the advances were made on the 7th December, which would be about the end of Agran, by myself; it being the custom of the factory not to make advances till that period. The same man also stated that he gave 50 bundles. I had sown three other beegahs in Kartik, making 11 beegahs in all. I reply, that in 1858-59 he sowed in October 7 beegahs 14 cottas, and 3 beegahs 6 cottas in spring; with the October sowing he had cold-weather crops; he also reaped a cold-weather crop from spring sowings. He was credited with 114½ bundles, which cleared off the former year's account, and he got excess 3 rupees and 14 annas, for his 11 beegahs of khatta lands 22 rupees, making a total of 25 rupees 14 annas; six rupees were credited him for his rents; the receipt for which he got from the gomashtha in my presence, the remaining 19 rupees 6 annas were paid to him with mine own hands.

3131. President.] Do you feel convinced that Dudh Mullick, whose evidence was taken on the 26th of June, is identical with Dukhi Mullick, of whom whom you now speak?—The village is the same; one of the jummas agrees with what he states; and he has also a brother. “He states that last year the Sahib cut down several bamboos, which he required for his vats, the payment for which he did not get.” I reply, that 67 bamboos were taken from the village; 3 rupees, 2 annas, and 3 pie were paid for them to Ramsunder Mundal, of that village.

3132. Mr. Sale.] Does this man’s brother share in the jumma and also in the indigo khatta?—Yes, he shares in both.

3133. Ramchuran Biswas, of Baradee, was examined on oath, and said, “I sow indigo every year, and get nothing for it. Last year they sowed 24 beegahs with indigo, they call it 12. The amin told me that I delivered 29 bundles, but by my reckoning it should have been 50. I got no excess paid last year, nor did I take any advances?” My answer is, that last year the Baradee ryots were permitted to fill a vat to themselves, and they divided the indigo amongst them; so that if there was any unfair play, it was amongst themselves. In each of the years 1858, 1859, and 1860, he received four rupees advance, but that was carried to his rent account, for which he got a receipt before me. With regard to his statement as to carts, the gomashtha tells me from the books that he got 5 rupees advances for carts, but that he only worked for nine full days, which at 6 rupees 8 annas a month, was 1 rupee, 14 annas, and 3 pie, so that on this account he still owes the factory 3 rupees, 1 anna, and 9 pie. I was not at Katchikatta last year in the manufacturing time; I was at Durgapore, but I have done what I can to ascertain the facts from the head servants of the factory and the factory books. Chaitun Mundal, of Par Durgapore, says: “the factory people cut down some of my trees, from which there would have been about 150 maunds, worth 10 rupees per 100 maunds. They cut down those trees to make charcoal, and only gave me 6 annas for them.” To this I reply, I found 8 babul trees had been cut, weighing 5 maunds, on the 14th of July, and he was paid at the rate of 8 rupees per 100 maunds, on the 26th of September. These items are gathered from the factory books, and happened in Mr. Tissendie’s time. He further said, “Formerly I used to receive something in advance, say from three to four rupees; this was in Mr. Macdonald’s time.” To this I reply, that in 1860, he received 20 rupees 10 annas; in 1859, 4 rupees; in 1858, 20 rupees 8 annas. The last payment of 20 rupees 8 annas was transferred to his rent, for which he got a receipt in my presence. The other payments were before my time. I could not say whether they were paid by transfer or by cash.

3134. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you desire to make any statement about the case of the abduction mentioned by Mathur Biswas?—I can distinctly state that as the case was printed in the “Hindoo Patriot,” it is utterly false. I was at Jessore till past the middle of the day, on Saturday, the 11th of February, and arrived at Katchikatti late at night. The distance was 50 miles. I did not leave the house next morning, being very tired, and having no horse; the one I rode into the factory being a gomashtha’s piebald pony, belonging to Goldar, and which was returned before I got up. I could not, therefore, have been out on horseback that day, as stated in the “Hindoo Patriot.”

3135. Can you undertake to say, that you never saw the woman Hurro Mani that day, or on the next three days?—I believe I had a glimpse of the woman in the factory, and then and there ordered her to be returned to her relations, she having been brought there without my knowledge or consent. In fact, for the week previous, I had been absent from the factory in Jessore. The man, Mathur Biswas, came several times subsequently to the factory, and was in conversation with me, and never said a word about it, or made any allusion to it whatever.

3136. President.] Do you think any changes in the system of indigo planting are requisite in order to induce the ryots to sow as heretofore?—I think I can speak pretty correctly about the feeling of the ryots in the Katchikatta concern; and changes will be necessary, such as, reducing the measuring rope of the land to a lower standard, some of the ryots wishing it to be brought to the Nischindipore, and others to the zemindary standard. I think, also, we shall have to take more of the risk of the cultivation on ourselves, by making advances every year in cash, whether the previous ones are worked off or not.

3137. Do you think you can afford to give the ryots the seed for nothing, and not to charge for stamped paper?—I think these charges should fall on the ryot; but being such a trifling matter, should it come to a matter of sowing or not sowing, we should be obliged to give them up.

3138. Do you think the factory ought to pay the price of carting or boating?—We already do so at Katchikatta.

3139. Mr. Sale.] Do you think any more satisfactory way of estimating the quantity of plant given by the ryots could be adopted?—This year, in the Pubna villages, where the ryots have sown and there is a good crop, on a recent visit, I arranged that two or three head ryots of each village should, with the amin and takidgir, make an estimate of what each man had in each bundle. These papers will be handed over to the European assistant in charge; then, when the indigo is brought into the factory, it will be measured as usual, and, at the close of the manufacturing, the two accounts will be checked. This was very favourably received by the ryots. They also like the system of giving a vat to be filled by a village, the head man arranging about the distribution of the shares among them.

3140. Mr. Fergusson.] Are you experiencing any difficulty now in getting carriage and coolies to work off your plant?—Very great difficulty; almost all my advances for manufacturing have been made out of the concern. I am also experiencing great loss from these men not keeping their engagements. For instance, about a week ago, 114 coolies came to Katchikatta, having received advances of four rupees each, and under an engagement to receive six rupees a month, which is nearly double what they receive in other years. I gave them khuraki, or something to eat for the day, and sent them to Paikpara; only 46 arrived there, or have been heard of since.

3141. Mr. Sale.] Have you any reason to believe that the ryots on your estate interfered to prevent these people from keeping their engagement?—I do not think so in this instance, because, if 46 could go, why could not the remainder? But I know of an instance in which one of my own villages threatened to beat the boat people, with whom I had arranged for conveying the indigo.

3142. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you met with any

A. Hills,
Esq.

12 July
1860.

A. Hills,
Esq.
12 July
1860.

instance in which ryots have demanded cash for the plant, before they permitted it to be removed from the field?—One Mussulman ryot at Paikpara village proposed to make an average of 20 bundles for each beegah, and to receive one-half of the total amount before they would cart it; but he was hooted at by the other villagers, and that village has since been cutting its crop.

3143. Since the departure of Mr. Maclean from Damurhuda, what distance is the nearest magistrate from you?—The magistrate of the Kurreempore sub-division is the nearest, which is about 26 or 28 miles distant. The Sudder station is 38 miles from the factory.

[Commission adjourned at 6 P.M.]

Friday, 13th July 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C.S., President.

Members:—W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Rev. J. Sale; Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

JAMES FORLONG, Esq., Examination continued.

J. Forlong,
Esq.
13 July
1860.

3144. President.] ON what terms are your contracts generally with your ryots?—Generally, for five years; but renewed every year. There has been no good cause for the renewal; but it has been customary for the last 50 years.

3145. In renewing the contracts, do you charge each ryot with two annas; or do you charge him with a stamp sufficient to cover his debt, should it ever be necessary to sue him in the civil court?—I never heard of a ryot being charged for a stamp for more than his contract for the season, nor of a stamp being taken from a ryot to cover any previous debt, according to the stamp law.

3146. Mr. Sale.] In your opinion, are the contracts, as they at present exist, mutually entered into between ryot and planter, or do they rather resemble an obligation imposed upon the ryot by the factory?—As a rule, I have generally seen ryots enter into engagements with the factory cheerfully.

3147. Mr. Fergusson.] Must there not be two parties to every contract, and does not the form in use in your concern provide for payments to the ryots?—Unquestionably; as may be seen on reference to the copy I have forwarded to the President of this Commission.

3148. President.] Within your experience, has it been the custom to consider the amount of debt due by a ryot, as representing in some measure the amount of land which he is expected to sow with indigo, i.e., if a ryot is down in the books for 20 rupees, is he required to sow 10 beegahs, which is one half?—As a rule, every ryot generally receives some money during the season, whatever his debt may be. I think, however, with reference to the small gain to the ryot, that the old balances have objectionably been brought forward to his detriment. I have known, for instance, ryots sowing, say 10 beegahs of indigo, having five beegahs placed under the head of a former debt and five under that of a fresh advance.

3149. Then, do you take an engagement from each ryot for an extent of land representing the amount of the old balances and the fresh advances, calculating at the rate of one beegah of land for each sum of 2 rupees?—In the Nischindipore concern, the old balances carried to the debit of the ryots, amount to about 60,000 rupees. The cultivation is about 24,000 beegahs and the sum yearly fresh advanced to the ryots, amounts to about from 30,000 to 35,000 rupees; this with the old amount refunded, being 90,000 rupees for a cultivation of 24,000 beegahs.

3150. Then, within your knowledge, has your ryotti cultivation increased in the concerns you have charge of, owing to the increasing debts of the ryots?—The indigo cultivation generally, in the Kishnagur district, has very greatly decreased; I could mention four or five properties on which the indigo cultivation has decreased by 80,000 or 90,000 beegahs. The concerns I refer to are Mulnath, Khalbolia, Katgarra, Suk-Saugor, and a property formerly carried on under the name of Hills, White & Co., and another formerly styled the “Big Union.”

3151. Then practically, the amount of cultivation, beegahs for rupees, would be one-fourth of the debt?—Yes.

3152. You have given us the above from the statistics of the Nischindipore concern, can you state whether the same practice prevailed in other concerns when under your management, say at Mulnath?—Very much in the same degree at Mulnath, only the practice there being to take six bundles instead of four, the ryots were probably heavier in arrears than at Nischindipore. In Mr. Hill's properties it has been customary to take one-third less from the ryots than in the Khalbolia, Loknathpore, and other adjoining properties.

3153. Can you state from what causes the cultivation has decreased in the instances you before mentioned?—When I first came to the Kishnagur district, about one-third of it seemed to be in jungle, and a very large portion that was not, was lying fallow, and capable of producing, when cultivated, the finest crops of indigo. Of late years, the jungle has not only disappeared, but the

the land has been so cropped, that any fallow land is now rarely seen; and both indigo and rice crops are produced with much more difficulty than before, and a smaller breadth of land is really fit for indigo purposes. The ryots and mahajans complain much of the rice crops, which though frequently looking as well in the field as formerly, yield about one-third less than when the soil was less cultivated, and consequently richer; and unless in this district, on the high lands, where in spring rice is sown, the rice crop is sown in rotation with an indigo one, the lands in a year or two would be altogether unfit for rice cultivation.

3154. Mr. Fergusson.] Then has the breadth of land cultivated for indigo diminished on account of its being unprofitable to cultivate such lands?—It has diminished from experience telling the planter that a certain class of land formerly cultivated for indigo, could not be continued with any hope of profit either to the cultivator or the planter.

3155. President.] Can you give us from your books a statement of the number of ryots who cleared their advances, and got excess for the last three years?—I have an account with me showing the position of the ryots of the Nischindipore factory in 1857-58 and 1858-59: In the former season, out of 867 ryots sowing 3,357 beegahs, 283 ryots cleared off their old accounts, and entered into fresh ones. In that year also, 541 ryots out of 867 received each an average of about 3 rupees 5 annas for their indigo seed. At the same factory in 1858-59, out of 864 ryots sowing 3,300 beegahs of land, only 110 received fazil, and entered into fresh accounts. This arose from the gale about the end of last July, which nearly destroyed the indigo crop. I have an account also with me showing that in the Katchikatta concern, at the Gosain Durgapore factory, out of 817 ryots, 420 received fazil, and entered into fresh accounts this season; and at another small factory adjoining Gosain Durgapore, out of 366 ryots, 123 received fazil. Very many of these ryots received at from 8 to 10 rupees a beegah for their land. (Paper filed). I put in these statements guaranteed by the books of the concern, which I submit. I put in also a statement of eight villages belonging to the Gosain Durgapore concern, showing that 264 ryots received 3,143 rupees, 6 annas and 6 pie; also the accounts of the Nischindipore ryots.

3156. Do you think that this statement of the ryots of the Nischindipore concern, represents the state of the factories of Hurra, Sunada and Nundunpore?—No; the state of the Nischindipore ryots is more favourable. At one of the largest factories of the Nischindipore concern, named Peerpore, the condition of the ryots is more favourable than at Nischindipore; but on the whole, the accounts rendered would be too favourable to assume as a general average.

Note.—The original books of the Nischindipore factory for 1857-58 and 1858-59, exhibiting all the items charged against the ryots, as well as the amount of the plant which they had delivered, were here submitted to the members of the Commission, who proceeded one after another to inspect them; in several cases adding up carefully the items on either side, and comparing the same. The books were found to be kept with great perspicuity.

3157. Mr. Fergusson.] Are you prepared to submit to the Commission all the books of any other factory which the Commission may fix upon?—Of course I am.

3158. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] What are the items debited to the ryots besides the advance?—Stamp, a small portion of the carriage, and four annas for indigo seed. In the Katchikatta concern, no charge whatever is made for the carriage of the plant; besides that there is the debt of last year, if any is remaining, and the cash advance for the present year.

3159. President.] Is it not the custom to add together the old balance and the new advance, and to give cash for the amount of land to be cultivated, less the old balance, e. g., if a ryot is to cultivate 10 beegahs of land, for which he would be entitled to 20 rupees cash advance; if he is in debt 4 rupees for last year, he would get only 16 rupees?—Unquestionably so, and this is the general practice.

3160. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you anything to say against the statements of Gunni Duffadar of Bhocharpara, Ruttunpore; Abadi Mundal of Bhocharpara, Hurra; of Suntosh Mundal of Patturghatta, Ruttunpore; and Seraj Biswas of Perizpore, Nischindipore; and Dinu Mundal of Moozumpore, same concern, who, you may have observed, have complained of oppressions, and the first two, of having been confined in godowns, &c. &c.?—I have seen so many mis-statements made by the ryots, that I did not value much the charges that were brought forward by them in the various cases mentioned. However, on referring to the managers, I have found their replies satisfactory, and warned them, that should they be called for, to be ready to lay their books before the Commission to prove such to be the case. With reference to Abadi, I think his complaint was made when I was on my way from England in February 1857, as far as I can recollect just now. I saw the man once, and only once; he came to me at the Hurra factory, most certainly of his own free will, and went away of his own accord. He stated then, that he had certain grievances to complain of, but at the same time said, that what had been advanced by others in his name, had been great exaggerations. Thinking that probably the man had received some wrong, I at the time gave him 10 rupees, and shortly after I heard that the same man had told his tale to the Reverend Mr. Bomwetsch, the very reverse of what he had stated to me. Upon this, I officially addressed Mr. Elliot, the then magistrate of the district, requesting him to sift the charges that had been brought against the factory, connected with this man; which I believe he did, and nothing prejudicial resulted.

3161. President.] Did Abadi show you any marks on his head or person?—I remember that he did show me a mark on his head, but which certainly never could have arisen from any serious injury. With regard to Suntosh Mundal, there is no such man on the factory books, nor, to the best of my belief, have I ever seen such a man; and from every inquiry I have made on the subject, the tale about his being fined 100 rupees, does not bear a shadow of truth. Joychand Sircar, the man whom he states fined him, and who, he says, has absconded, certainly has not done so; and is quite willing to come forward and reply to any charge made against him.

3162. Has Suntosh Mundal a relation named Chand Mundal, who cultivates indigo for the

J. Forlong,
Esq.

13 July
1860.

J. Forlong,
Esq.

13 July
1860.

factory?—So Mr. George Smith mentioned to me; I never saw him myself.

3163. The witness Dinu Mundal stated that he had to pay two annas ijara fees at the Dulal-nuggur factory, and two pice for measuring; can you state if it is customary to exact ijara fees there?—I have not heard of the fee for measuring; and in some cases, where there is a loss on the ijara, rather than the ryot's land should be measured, they themselves often come forward and propose to pay the rent that I pay the zemindar in the event of my not measuring the land. In this way I may get 150 rupees, whereas by measuring I might get 300.

3164. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Is there any such item in the account books as ijaradari, i.e., so much per rupee collected from the ryots?—Yes, there is such an item. The rule fluctuates in different villages; two annas per rupee is the extreme.

3165. Is it a fact that the ryots of the Nischindipore concern were charged for table expenses formerly, and that you and Mr. Hills have put a stop to that extortion?—Years ago the ryots from many of the talook villages, in the course of a twelvemonth, presented a certain quantity of fowls and fish at the Sudder factory, as a sort of a feudal right connected with the property. This, however, has been entirely done away with.

3166. President.] Do you consider that the new code, Act VIII. of 1859, has already obviated some of the delays in law suits, and is likely to secure to planters and others in the Mofussil, the enjoyment of their rights?—I have had so very few civil suits, that the effect of the law has not come particularly under my observation. I believe, however, it has tended greatly to expedite the decision of cases in the civil courts.

3167. Do you consider that there is any want of security in the mofussil to planters, in respect of their personal property and the factory buildings?—No; certainly not, as regards factory buildings and personal property.

3168. It is often alleged that there is an insecurity in the Mofussil as regards landed property, which deters capitalists from investing their money; do you share in that opinion, and, if so, what is the particular insecurity of which you would complain?—Yes, there is great insecurity; and the mere fact alone of the land being as it were mortgaged to the Government, and rents claimed quarterly in the manner they are, and of property, probably from the carelessness of an agent, being liable to be put up for immediate sale, would alone prevent an English capitalist from purchasing land in this country. If this also was the case before, I think the effect of the new law, Act X., will make it much more serious. Under-tenures are also liable to be sacrificed, should a zemindar prove a defaulter in paying his rent to the Government.

3169. Then, are we to understand that this feeling of insecurity does not arise from any lawlessness among the people, or from any hostility on their part to the Europeans, but mainly from particular laws which affect landed interests?—Yes, this is decidedly my opinion.

3170. Mr. Fergusson.] If you were deprived of your arms, would your property be secure, and looking to the readiness with which people believe reports, might not the power of disarming by a magistrate place you in jeopardy, by a report being spread that such a power had been exercised upon you?—For myself, I have such a complete sense of security, that even during the mutiny I never had arms belonging to me; but I have no doubt that were the order given to disarm Europeans throughout the country, the same might be attended with mischievous consequences.

3171. President.] Is the concern which you superintend cleared from debt, or is it working with borrowed capital?—No, the property is working with borrowed capital, for which we are paying considerable interest.

3172. Mr. Fergusson.] What is the general character of the mooktyars who plead in the courts?—I may give you a specimen of their character from what one of the leading mooktyars of the place said to me two or three years ago. I met the man accidentally and inquired how he was getting on, he replied “very well, but that he was getting too old to carry on the business of certain wealthy zemindars any longer.” I said to him, that I thought they were by far his best clients; he confessed they were, but he was too near the “Ganges” or death, to go on with the business. He then acknowledged that it was the rule of the country and the custom for a mooktyar to tell a witness all he had to say, but added, “I am obliged also to get all the witnesses, and, worst of all, forge all the documents, and this I cannot go on doing.” This was stated to me without the slightest concealment or sense of shame, and as calmly as if the man were talking about the state of the weather. I consider this to be not only a true illustration of the morals of mooktyars practising in the courts, but also a sure indication of what is daily and hourly going on in every court in Bengal.

3173. Do not natives of respectability strongly object to appear as witnesses or plaintiffs in the courts, and more so in one than the other?—They do not object so much in the civil courts; but any native gentleman of respectability shrinks from appearing personally in the magistrates' courts, as they have the very worst possible reputation.

3174. Have the magistrates' courts improved or deteriorated in public opinion of late?—I think of late years, the whole tone and character of the magistrates' courts have greatly fallen in public estimation, arising, I think, from the youth and inexperience of the men who have been entrusted with the duties of chief magistrates of the large districts of Bengal. I believe it was the wish of the late Lieutenant Governor, that this fault should be remedied by combining the duties of magistrate with those of collector; thereby giving every district, as he thought, the certainty of an experienced man at the head of affairs. The two offices have been joined, but as far as regards the results to the public, youth and inexperience have been quite as bad, if not worse, than before; and now a district has only a fraction of a magistrate's time in place of the whole of it.

3175. In stating your opinion of the courts, are you aware of there ever having been any question as to the purity of the English functionaries?—No, I am glad to say that, surrounded as they are with corruption, their character for probity has ever been unsullied. I have indeed heard them charged with carelessness, but never a whisper of venality.

3176. Can you state from experience any difficulties in collecting rents which have occurred lately?—

lately?—Yes, there has been the greatest difficulty in collecting rents. For example, in the Katchikatta concern, when the first instalment for this year was to be paid as usual, only about 3,500 rupees were received in place of between 14,000 or 15,000 which had been received for years past on the same occasion. I attribute this in some degree to the disturbed state of the district, as also very considerably to Act X., under the shelter of which every disaffected ryot thinks he has a right to contest payment with the zemindar. In Nischindipore also I found the greatest difficulty in collecting rents.

3177. What is your opinion of the working of the summary Indigo Law of this year?—I think it has been worked in a manner most discreditable to the Government, and more particularly to the chief magistrate of this district. In place of adopting a general standard for the assessment of damages, known in an indigo district to be 10 rupees per beegah, in the event of a breach of contract on the part of the ryot, a sliding scale was adopted by the magistrate, which made victims of the good ryots, and let off the others without injury. No two courts gave the same damages, and Mr. Herschel only made matters worse seemed by issuing various tabular statements, which to be remarkable only for an absence of either sense or justice.

3178. Do you mean that by taking the returns for three or five years, the magistrate's rule caused a ryot who had cultivated well, to pay high damages, whilst the ryot who cultivated badly, and produced very little, paid very small damages?—Yes, I do mean that; but the magistrate might have seen from all habulyats presented in court, that no planter ever thought of protecting himself for a breach of contract on the part of any ryot, beyond 10 rupees per beegah; and why, under such circumstances, a magistrate should give 23 and 24 rupees a beegah, I cannot understand.

3179. President.] In cases where no penalty was stipulated in the contract, was not the calculation made on the amount of manufactured indigo that would have been produced had the ryot fulfilled his contract?—I believe it was, but most erroneously so. Had Mr. Herschel called for the evidence of any experienced planter, he would have found that 10 rupees per beegah, in the event of a breach of contract on the part of the ryot, was the established custom of the district. Mr. Betts in the first instance, and his were the first cases tried under the new Act, gave me 10 rupees per beegah; and I never thought of complaining until I found that Mr. Herschel was giving 23 rupees, and other courts 20 rupees.

3180. Mr. Fergusson.] Is not the revision of the decrees under that law by the Commissioner and Government, virtually an appeal contrary to the terms of it, and with the disadvantage to the planter, that he has no opportunity of being heard on that appeal?—From what I have lately seen, I believe that even the Commissioner of this district has neither power nor authority, as it is evident that the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal has taken all questions relating to the planters and ryots in this district, entirely into his own hands. In doing this, he has most undoubtedly placed himself in the dilemma of having either chosen the worst men as public officers to carry through the provision of a new law requiring great delicacy and good sense on the part of the officers administering it, or of having inter-ferred with them and their independence as public officers, in a manner without example.

3181. President. But there is no instance where either the Commissioner or the Government have reversed an actual decision casting a ryot in damages?—I believe there has been no instance of this nature, but in other portions of the law, there has been great interference, and magistrates have been censured, removed, and treated altogether in such a way, as to make it nearly impossible for them to exercise an independent judgment in the cases which appeared before them.

3182. Are you proceeding with the breach of contract cases before the principal Sudder Ameens who have been appointed to try them, chiefly within the subdivision of Damurhuda?—No, in common with Messrs. Mears, Tweedie, Tripp, and various others, I have given orders to withdraw the cases, as the law as it is now administered is really a mockery. For, in place of the cases being carried through and adjudged according to the summary character of Act XI., they are now neither more nor less than regular civil suits.

3183. Do you not think that the principal Sudder Ameens, who have had long judicial experience in cases of contract involving the inspection of accounts, were not ill-qualified to try cases under the summary law?—I do not question either their talent or judicial experience, but certainly the spirit of the summary law was, that if a magistrate were thoroughly convinced of the leading features of a case, and of the fact of a ryot having received his money and executed his contract, the whole should not have been thrown over through some slight informality, or a trifling mistake on the part of an illiterate witness under cross-examination. I have not such decisions with me, but shall be able to forward them to the Commission if required.

3184. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you consider that the appointment of yourself and other planters as honorary magistrates was the cause of considerable jealousy on the part of the zemindars, and induced the British Indian Association to take up the case of the ryots?—I think the fact of making planters honorary magistrates created a very great degree of irritation and jealousy throughout the native community. I acknowledge at the same, that this feeling was not unnatural, for as the native gentlemen of Lower Bengal had not at that time shown any evidence of disloyalty, I think as many of them should have received those appointments as Europeans. I believe the result of the jealousy to which I have above alluded, has been to induce the British Indian Association to interfere much more actively in the present difficulties between the planters and ryots in this district than they otherwise would have done.

3185. Do you think that native gentlemen would have fulfilled the duties of honorary magistrates satisfactorily?—I think that the sooner native gentlemen residing in the mofussil, are taught that property has its duties as well as its rights, the better it would be both for them and the public. I think a native gentleman values what is called his izzut, or honour, beyond everything else, and would appreciate such a compliment being offered him by the Government. At any rate he would take care that nothing occurred in his neighbourhood of such a character as to deprive him of his office.

3186. President.] But do you think the exercise of a zemindar's power and influence is compatible

Mr.
J. Forlong.

13-July
1860.

Mr.
J. Forlong.
13 July
1860.

patible with the exercise of magisterial powers, as far as the interests of the ryots are concerned?—The great mistake made in bestowing the former honorary offices, was in placing the police under the orders of the honorary magistrate. I think as matters stand now, and with the numerous subdivisions through Bengal, that no European or native gentleman appointed to any such honorary office, would dare to turn it to his own advantage, as the forfeiture of his appointment for so doing would be certain and immediate.

3187. Are you aware that the exercise of these powers of honorary magistrates has been complained of by ryots in evidence before this Commission?—I have heard so, and no doubt any man holding such an appointment would have to discharge a very invidious duty, and lay himself open to complaints, in which there may be no justice whatever.

3188. Granting that the honorary magistrate might be impartial, could he be certain that that distinction would not be perverted to improper ends by his various servants, engaged in either his zemindary or his indigo business?—This might possibly be the case, but it is no good reason for not making the experiment. If you wish evidence of either loyalty or public spirit on the part of the native gentlemen of Bengal, Government must certainly trust them in the discharge of some honorary public duty.

3189. Mr. Fergusson.] At what do you estimate the annual cash outlay for indigo in this district?—I believe it is about 18 lakhs of rupees. The outlay of the concerns under my management is about 3,50,000 rupees. In some years it may be considerably more; seed, several thousand maunds of which are required, varying in price from four to 30 rupees; with the exception of the price of the up-country seed, which I use only in the event of not getting desi, the whole of the expenditure is confined to the limits of the concern, or to this and the Jessore districts.

3190. Since the mutiny, have you had to pay much higher prices for seed than before; and can you state to what extent it has increased your outlay in any one year?—Yes, I have had to pay very greatly enhanced prices for seed; certainly five or six times the price I should have had to pay under ordinary circumstances. For instance, last year what would have been a very fair outlay for seed in Hurra, Sunada, and Nundunpore, would have been 8,000 or 10,000 rupees; the outlay was 43,000 rupees, and as in the Nischindispore concern desi seed was entirely used, the proportion was considerably larger. It has been the great additional cost for seed and a succession of bad seasons, which has prevented the planter's meeting the altered times by a more liberal system towards the ryots; for the factory was frequently paying two rupees eight annas and three rupees a beegah for seed, which was supplied to the ryots at four annas. There is much excuse for the planters not having made a change in the indigo system after the unfortunate seasons: they have had to contend against succession of losses.

3191. What has been the effect of the parwannas issued in this district upon your cultivation, and what interpretation has been put upon them by the ryots?—The effect has been in every way injurious. The ryots were bewildered by their frequently altered character, and just chose the portions which suited their own interests.

The parwanna of the 19th April, however, was the most ruinous of all, as it was addressed to the darogah of Damurhuda. For this parwanna there was also no possible excuse; Mr. Maclean, the joint magistrate of that subdivision, was with Mr. Herschel upon the day in question, and had then laid his dak to return to Damurhuda. The effect of this parwanna upon the Loknathpore, Katchikatta and Nischindipore properties, and upon Khalbolia, was certainly equal to a loss of fully three lakhs of rupees, or 30,000 l. sterling; this season it has entirely stopped the sowings, and imbued the ryots with the worst spirit. I have no doubt that the above parwanna was the effect of some corrupt practice in the magistrate's court.

3192. Mr. Sale.] What do you think has been the effect of the example shown by the planters on the moral condition of the people generally?—I think, as a rule, that the planters have shown a good example to the people around them, and have by various acts of kindness, such as liberally distributing medicines, &c., tried in every way to conciliate and cultivate the good will of the people. While, however, the Government has really done nothing but surrendered the millions of its subjects to the oppressive practices of zemindars, and the still worse practices of the most corrupt police and courts, destroying everything like public virtue, the example of a few English settlers could have but little effect upon the morals of the people. As far as my experience goes, up till very recently, the only thing Government seemed to care for, was to get its revenue from Bengal, and that at the least possible cost.

3193. President.] Is it not rather the case that these courts are merely a vent to the bad passions and low morality of the natives?—Yes, undoubtedly this was much the case; but if the Government had employed European agency more extensively, more particularly in the management of the police, much of the sad results everywhere apparent among the people might have been prevented.

3194. Has the late raising of salaries of the police tended to raise their character, and have you been satisfied that the conduct of the police has been impartial during the late indigo crisis?—The raising of the salaries of the police was certainly a very judicious measure; though sufficient time has not elapsed to introduce any great change into the character of that body. I believe that, however, ere long it may, and men will come forward for employment in the police from a respectable class of natives, who have hitherto held aloof from such employment. The conduct of the police in every district generally represents the animus of the magistrate, and I am very sorry to say that in this district particularly, the police have done its utmost to foment, instead of quieting mischief between the planter and the ryot.

3195. Did you represent to the magistrate any case in which you thought the police had so acted as not to have allowed you fair play?—No, because the conduct of the police is so notorious, that I thought it would be idle to do so. All along the boundaries between the Jessore, Pubna and Kishnagar districts, the ryots in the two former districts sowed their indigo as usual, while the ryots of the Kishnagar villages just adjoining, and under the same manager, refused to do so. This unquestionably was brought about solely by the conduct of the police.

NUSSI JOARDAR, Inhabitant of Soli Taka, Thanna Hardi, Zillah Nuddea, Concern Battundi, very lately a Prisoner in the Kishnagur Gaol, called in; and Examined on oath.

3196. WITNESS deposed as follows:—I heard this year that he who was willing might sow indigo, and that such was the order of Government. This season in Kartik I had prepared land for cold weather crops, and the amin and takidgir threw indigo seed on it. This year in Baisakh I was put in prison for not sowing. I cannot say how much plant I delivered last year, for I did not go to the factory. Last year I was told that I was down for 3½ beegahs, but on that pretence they sowed six or seven beegahs; my own estimate is that the produce was about 10 carts a beegah.

3197. President.] Would not it have been better for you to sow indigo once more this year than to have gone to prison?—I am quite unable to sow indigo any more; I am quite tired of it. The former manager used to give us something, but since the factory has got the permanent lease, Mr. Tripp has not given us a pice.

3198. Mr. Sale] If you never made an agreement, how is it that you lost your case, and was sent to prison?—The ameen and takidgir gave evidence against me; I cannot say whether the dewan did. This case was tried in Baghberria factory, near the Hardi Thanna.

3199. Mr. Fergusson.] Would you prefer sowing indigo next year, or going to prison?—No, I would not. I prefer begging. I have a jumma of Rs. 20. 8., at three beegahs per rupee of rent. I have not been able to cultivate it, as I have been in prison, and my sons are not grown up, and I have no relations, and I could not make any arrangements as I was in gaol.

3200. President.] How have you got out of gaol, has your time expired, or how?—My father-in-law sold two milch cows, two bullocks, goats and fowls, and scraped together 36 rupees, of which here is the receipt.

3201. Mr. Sale.] Now you are going home, what is your intention to do?—I shall have to work as a day labourer; I have no other means.

JALAL MULICK, Son of Ameer Mullick, Inhabitant formerly of Khanpore Village, at present of Jangypore, Thanna Kot Chandpore, Zillah Jessore, called in; and Examined on oath.

3202. President.] WHAT statement do you want to make?—I had a quarrel with Mr. Larmour, because he was always sending people to tell me to sow indigo. I presented a petition to the magistrate of Kishnagur, who referred it to Mr. Larmour, and nothing came of it. The Sahib measured our lands and demanded increased rents; we refused. I came to Kishnagur and saw Mr. Larmour himself, who handed me over to the magistrate, and on inquiry into my means of livelihood, they found I was of good character, so I got off. After that Mr. Larmour complained against me for assaulting people, and preventing his people from going into the village. This proved unfounded by the Darogah's report. After this Mr. Larmour sent for me to Hilsamari factory and kept me some time, and in the meantime my house was knocked to pieces. I never complained of this. What I have to say is, that whereas I have been represented as a harbourer of thieves, and as having run away at the end of 1856, I have been always to be found since then. And a petition was presented against me on or about August or September 1857, showing that I was at home then.

CHUNDER GHOSE (caste Goala), Inhabitant of Chagurri, Thanna Damurhuda, at present a Resident of the Gaol of Nuddea, called in; and Examined on oath.

3203. WITNESS deposed as follows:—Formerly there used to be some justice in indigo, and men used to be well paid. I have heard so from my father and mother. Now there is no justice. I heard in Phalgun last that there was an order that those who had pleasure in indigo might sow it, but as I had no pleasure in indigo I didn't sow. We have no October sowings in our part of the country. I presented a petition to the magistrate saying I did not wish to sow. About a month afterwards the peon took me to the court, and I was asked why I broke my contract. The amin and takidgir gave evidence against me; my witnesses to the contrary were not believed. I was cast in damages in the sum of 32 rupees. I used to sow two beegahs and five cottas with indigo. My brother's shareholders have run away; my son is very young and can't work. I was the elder brother, and I used to manage matters, and my brother would not allow me to plough. I can read and write a little. My father-in-law is dead, and there is no one to take me out of prison. It is better I should remain in prison. I shall have something to eat. I was taken away like Seeta, the wife of Rama, by the magistrate. I have 14 days left of my sentence, and I have only two old cows, not worth three rupees. I have nothing to pay my debts, and I owe 200 rupees to my mahajan. My zemindar is Pran Kisto Pal, who made over our village to the planter on lease.

BUDDUN MUNDAL (caste Kyburto), Inhabitant of Toongi Gopalpore, Thanna Damurhuda, Zillah Nuddea, Concern Ruttunpore, very lately a Prisoner in the Kishnagur Gaol, called in; and Examined on oath.

3204. WITNESS deposed as follows:—We made a petition, several of us, to the magistrate in Phalgun, whereupon we were told that it was optional to sow indigo. In Baisakh, I was sued by the factory Sahib for breach of contract. The dewan, amin and takidgir gave evidence against me. My evidence to the contrary was, that I had not been to the factory and not received any advances, but it was not believed. I managed to get Rs. 55. 13. 8. on the 27th June, and
72—I.

C C 2 yesterday

Nussi Joardar.
13 July
1860.

Jalal Mullick.

Chunder Ghose.

Buddun
Mundal.

Buddun Mundal.

13 July
1860.

yesterday I got 36 rupees more, which makes up my account. I have been in prison for six weeks, and had six weeks more.

3205. Mr. Fergusson.] Did anybody advise you not to sow?—No, nobody did. I saw others presenting petitions, and I did so also.

3206. President.] Did you think that you would come out on the right side of the accounts when squared?—Yes, I thought when the accounts of three years were looked into, that I should have come out on the right side. My son managed to get the money to release me from gaol, partly by selling my cows, and partly by borrowing from the mahajan. I have a jumma of 25 rupees, at 2½ beegahs per rupee.

[Commission adjourned at 6 p. m.]

Saturday, 14th July 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C. S., President.

Members:—W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Reverend J. Sale;
Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

DUDH MULLICK, Inhabitant of Taltolla, Thanna Damurhuda, Zillah Nuddea, Factory Taltolla, Sinduri Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

Dudh Mullick.

14 July
1860.

3207. President.] HAVE you sown indigo this year, and if so, what has happened?—My story is as follows: My father was a servant of the factory; after his death they sent for me and gave me a place of takidgir. My father was sirdar of the nij-abad; I served as takidgir for 22 years. I was told to give evidence in a case about Gargurria, but I refused to do so. In Phalgun, they sent for me and fined me 100 rupees, which I realized by the sale of cattle. I presented a petition to the magistrate on the 4th of Phalgun, saying I would give up my situation. Then I was sued for breach of contract in Chaitro, but the factory did not prosecute the case. I have been beaten at the factory and the marks are still on me. Also they have cut down all my bamboos. The factory broke up seven beegahs of my rice lands and sowed it with indigo. I got a decree, and got possession about 19 days ago.

ZIRABDI KARIGUR, Inhabitant of Choto Andula, Thanna Bagda, Zillah Nuddea, Factory Katgarra, Concern Katgarra, called in; and Examined on oath.

Zirabdi Karigur.

3208. President.] HAS there been a suit brought against you this year?—I have not sown, and there has been a suit against me. At the close of Baisakh, I was told either to sow, or answer to a suit of breach of contract. The amin and takidgir gave evidence against me, and my witnesses who gave evidence to the effect that I had never made a contract, were not heard; I was cast in the sum of Rs. 44. 13. for 3½ beegahs of land. I sold off my cattle, brass utensils and other property, and raised the money; i. e. I went into prison, and my brother raised the money for me. I was 26 days in prison.

3209. Was any offer made to you to return the money, if you would sow indigo for this year?—No, not to me, and I never heard of this offer being made to others.

3210. Mr. Sale.] You have sown for so many years; what is the reason for this sudden dislike to it this year?—There was a parwanna hung up in the market-place of Jadubpore. I could not read it myself, but others read it out; as it ran, that it was optional to sow, and as I thought that, as it was the Company's order, we could get the better in any case or suit, I didn't sow. Every body said that it was a Government parwanna, with the Government signature upon it.

3211. You heard of that parwanna and refused to sow, when that case for breach of contract was brought against you; now what do you think of it?—We understood that the parwanna left it optional to our free will to sow, and as we had no good will for it, we didn't sow.

3212. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Will you sow next season?—No, I won't sow. They cut down my date trees, make us break the clods, and weed, and don't let me sow our crop of long pepper, and it is so oppressive that I will not sow. Pepper produces three to four maunds per beegah, and the average price is 25 rupees.

PANJU MULLA, Inhabitant of Arpara, Thanna Hardi, Zillah Nuddea, Factory Jalsuka, Nischindipore Concern, at present a Resident in the Kishnagar Gaol, called in; and Examined on oath.

*Panju
Mulla.*

3213. WITNESS deposed as follows:—I could not sow on account of the injustice. I had sown in the previous Baisakh. I understood that there was an order of Government that those who had not entered into an agreement need not sow, and as I had always sown by compulsion, I would not sow any more.

3214. President.] Would not it have been better for you to sow this year, instead of going to prison?—No, I would rather be killed with bullets and have my throat cut, than sow indigo.

3215. Did you never complain to the planter at Jalsuka if you had anything to complain of?—The planter Sahib is Mr. Newcomen, but the servants of the factory won't let us go near him.

3216. Were your father and grandfather in the the habit of sowing?—Yes, they were. They had a jumma of 13 rupees with one shareholder, my brother. He has been able to cultivate rice this year. We were, 17 of us, sued in the same suit. We were all cast. Thirteen of us managed to give the money; I and three others were not able to do so. I have only two milch cows, and one plough with them.

3217. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Will you sow indigo next year on fair terms, supposing there is no oppression, that the amla have no opportunity to extort money, that the Sahib treats you kindly, and that only the land you agree shall be sown with indigo, and that you shall get a fair profit?—If the system is made very good, and all the country take to sowing again, I may think about it.

Panju
Mulla.

14 July
1860.

ANDAI KULHU, Inhabitant of Ramkistopore, Thanna Bagda, Concern Katgarra, at present a Resident of the Kishnagur Gaol, called in; and Examined on oath.

3218. WITNESS deposed as follows:—For the last 10 or 20 years, I have been sowing indigo. I have been sowing three beegahs, but which the factory people call one and a half. I did not consider that I was under any agreement 3219. Mr. Sale.] Didn't you go to the factory and take money?—Ten years ago I went to the factory, and took an advance at 2 rupees per beegah. Since then I received nothing; I was imprisoned for breach of contract, and my son was imprisoned for an affray. I am a Kulhu, and make oil; but I also have a plough, and cultivate.

3220. President.] Would it not have been better this year to sow indigo than have to go to prison?—No; we only get 10 chattaks a day, which is not sufficient; i. e. four in the morning and six in the evening. Still, for all that, I would rather be in prison than sow indigo.

3221. How much indigo did you deliver to the factory the last time you sowed?—I am a mere rustic, and I can't say; but I never got any money for it.

3222. What amount were you cast for?—I was cast in 30 rupees, which my son might have got together if it had not been for this affray. I have been put in for six months for an affray, which, with the three months for breach of contract, make nine months in all.

Andai Kulhu.

BUDDUN CHOWDARI, Inhabitant of Tirbela, Thanna Damurhuda, Factory Ail-hans, Sinduri Concern, at present a Resident in the Kishnagur Gaol, called in; and Examined on oath.

3223. WITNESS deposed as follows:—My forefathers were under agreement to sow indigo; I was not. I was made to sow by compulsion, and since last year I parted with my cattle. I was cast in damages of 120 rupees for six beegahs of land. I had not a farthing.

3224. Mr. Sale.] Couldn't you borrow from the mahajan to pay it up?—I am already in debt to the mahajan about 200 rupees, and he won't lend me either money or rice.

3225. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] What jumma and what land have you?—I have a jumma of 53 rupees, i. e. at three beegahs of land per rupee.

3226. If you were allowed to cultivate all your lands with rice and other crops, and no indigo, would you then be able to pay up your mahajan?—I would be able to clear the account with my mahajan in two or three years. I should give out my land barga, or I should establish koljana ryots to cultivate it. I am an old man, and not able to work. I have some sons, one of whom is grown up.

3227. Mr. Fergusson.] How much plant did you deliver at the factory last year?—I do not recollect how many bundles I gave last year. I could remember it if I received anything. If the Sahib gives anything the amla intercept it. It costs six pice to present a petition to the planter, i. e. one anna for the petition and two pice for the writer.

Buddun
Chowdari.

ASTUL MANDUL, Inhabitant of Kanainuggur, Thanna Hardi, Factory Kanainuggur, Concern Nischindipore, at present a Resident of the Kishnagur Gaol, called in; and Examined on oath.

3228. WITNESS deposed as follows:—I and five others were sued for breach of contract. We were all cast, but the others managed to get the money together, and thereby got off. I was cast in a sum of 110 rupees for five beegahs and a half. I understood that there was an order that it was optional with us to sow or not to sow, and, as I considered that I was not under agreement, I did not sow. My cattle and property have been sold, and realized only 32 rupees, and I lie in prison for the balance. I heard that my property had been sold from some villagers who came here; I was sent off to prison as soon as the decree was passed against me.

3229. Mr. Fergusson.] Did not Mr. Forlong, with the commissioner of the division, go to the gaol and offer to forego his claim if you would sow?—Yes, some time ago we were called into the cutcherry and told to sow a little indigo, and so get our release, but we said we would rather be killed with bullets than sow again. We thought that some Sahibs would come up from Calcutta and release us.

3230. President.] Will you sow indigo on your release?—No; for what with having to give to amins and takidgirs, and what with breaking clods, I am become a fakir, and beg.

Astul
Mandul.

KHUDA BAKSH, at present a Resident in the Kishnagur Gaol, Loknathpore Village, Thanna Damurhuda, Loknathpore Factory, Concern Loknathpore, called in; and Examined on oath.

3231. WITNESS deposed as follows:—I was in prison about three months for intimidating the ryots. Two syces and two spearmen of the factory gave evidence against me to that effect. No suit of breach of contract has been instituted against me. They have sown my lands forcibly

Khuda
Baksh.

Khuda Baksh.

14 July
1863.

with indigo; I had a quarrel with the factory, and in Phalgun last I gave evidence against some factory spearmen, who had seized two ryots and imprisoned and beat them in the factory. In that case four servants of the factory were punished. Another person who gave evidence with me has been imprisoned on the same charge of intimidation. I pleaded in my defence that I had given evidence against them, but it was not believed by the deputy magistrate. I was imprisoned about the same time with Titu Chuckerbutty, but he got off by appealing to Calcutta; I appealed to the Judge, but nothing came of it.

3232. Mr. Sale.] Why did you not appeal to the commissioner?—I and my brother were both put in prison on the same charge. I appealed to the Judge, and nothing came of it. I was advised to appeal to the Judge by a mooktyar named Biressur Singh.

3233. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] How much did you give to this mooktyar as expenses for appealing?—Three of us gave him 25 rupees. The other parties I refer to are Musdin Mandul and Bukshu Mandul. I have four days more to stay out my sentence.

MIR RAMZAN ALI, Inhabitant of Bari Khalli, Thanna Jenaida, Zilla Jessore, Factory and Concern Porahatti; Examined on oath.

Mir Ramzan Ali.

3234. President.] WHAT have you come to state to the Commission?—My complaint is, that they make me sow indigo forcibly. I am a gantidar, with a jumma of 70 rupees. I have 20 to 25 koljana or dependent ryots. I succeeded to my father-in-law's property. Mr. Charles Tweedie is at this factory. There is no use complaining to him.

3235. Have you never complained of anything at the Thanna of Jenaida, which is two miles off, or at the subdivision of Magoora?—No, I have not, from fear. My complaint is, I tell my bargadars to cultivate rice, and the Sahib forces them to cultivate indigo, and this goes on from Magh to Baisakh.

3236. Has the manager of the factory tried to enhance your rents?—With the exception of a small jumma, on which he has enhanced a rupee rent, I have no quarrel.

3237. Mr. Sale.] Have you any particular quarrel about your ganti?—No, I have not. My only complaint is about indigo. The factory sow 24 beegahs, but I call them 30 beegahs. I hold gantis to the amount of 80 beegahs, I think. My father-in-law has been dead 14 years, and whether he received anything from the factory or not I can't say, but I know that I have never received anything. Last year, however, I was sent for to the factory, and told that I was in debt to it about three rupees, or three rupees eight annas. I can't say exactly.

3238. Mr. Fergusson.] If you are afraid to complain to the courts and the thannas, how is it you are not afraid to come here?—I have come here secretly, hearing that five Hakims are sitting to inquire into indigo complaints. I have also to complain that the factory people have cut a khal, that injures my early rice.

BUDAI MULLA, Inhabitant of Ponami, Thanna Jenaida, Zillah Jessore, Narainpore Factory, Hazarapore Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

Budai Mulla.

3239. President.] WHAT have you come here to state?—My father took advances, and I have sown all my life. This year the factory people sowed by force, saying that the talook was theirs. Last year they took two beegahs, this year they took two more. I was unable to complain at the subdivision of Magoora, or the thanna of Janaida. I came secretly here. Last year I delivered plant to the factory, and they told me that I was indebted to it three rupees.

3240. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you received any advances?—My father received advances; I did not.

3241. President.] Have you any dispute with the factory about rents?—Yes, I have. The Sahib asked me for four or five rupees more rent, and this year he took possession of my lands, which I complained of at the Magoora subdivision, and got a decree, and got my possession.

3242. Mr. Fergusson.] Did you never receive any advances, or any excess from the factory?—No, never. Formerly I cultivated three beegahs, but, since the Sahib got the talook, I was made to sow what the factory call six, but which I say is nine beegahs. I hold a jumma of 40 beegahs, and have no shareholder.

3243. If you complained against the Sahib at Magoora, under Act IV., how is it you never complained there about these oppressions, and of never getting payments for indigo?—I have been thinking about it all along. Before, I was afraid. Now that I have come here, I cannot say what will happen.

GOPAL CHUNDER DE BISWAS (caste Kayast), aged 17 years; can read and write; Inhabitant of Hurriskurpore, Thanna Jenaida, Zillah Jessore, Narainpore Factory, Hazarapore Concern; Examined on oath.

G. C.
De Biswas.

3244. President.] WHAT statement of oppression do you wish to make before this Commission?—I have two ploughs worked by two servants, who cost us seven rupees a month. In former years they used to sow 14 beegahs. This year they sowed 16 beegahs by my servants. My grandfather took two rupees a beegah, but I can't say for how many beegahs. Also in Bai- sakh they cut six or seven bamboos to fence the indigo, to prevent its being destroyed by cattle; I was not paid for this. They also forced me to weed, as two of my servants are not enough. Last year they took my father to the factory and made him sign a blank stamp paper, and sent him away, saying he owed three rupees to the factory.

BADUL MUNDAL, Inhabitant of Roarkandi, Thanna Hardi, Zillah Nuddea, Factory Kishnagur, Concern Bamundi, called in; and Examined on oath.

3245. President.] WHAT do you wish to state about your not sowing indigo?—The people of Joyrampore made a petition, and they were told that it was optional with them to sow or not to sow indigo. On hearing this we were pleased, and we made a petition in a body to the magistrate of Damurhuda. The Mooktyar of Mr. Tripp was present at the time, and wrote to the factory about it. Afterwards, in the month of Chaitro, the amin and takidgir deposed against me, that there was a contract on my part. I could only get witnesses from my village, but Madub Baboo, the Nazir, and Darap Moonshi, one of the amla of the court, told to me there was no use my bringing any witnesses from my village, as they would not be believed. So the decree was given against me for 70 rupees. Just at that time there was a case of Act IV. between myself and the factory. I asked for some time to pay the money, so that I might be able to attend to the Act IV. case. No time was given, but I managed to get money brought to me from the mahajan through some of the men of my village, and paid the amount of the decree. Then in the Act IV. case the order passed was, that the land should be in the possession of the party in whose possession it was. No name was given. Thereupon each of us said that we were the party in possession. Mr. Tripp managed to get possession through the Darogah. I appealed to the Judge, who said that the land should be in no one's possession until the appeal was decided, and the case is still pending.

3246. Have you been to Calcutta lately?—Yes; I went in Chaitro last to appeal to the Commissioner and to Government, and was told that the Company had no profit in indigo. Formerly we were under the impression that the Company had an interest in it, and we could not dare to complain against the Company. Moreover, the devan, amin, and takidgir told us it was the Company's.

3247. Mr. Fergusson.] Did you receive no advances from the factory last year?—No, I didn't. Formerly, I thought it best to sow, and said nothing.

3248. Did you ever hear that the Company derived profit from opium and the excise?—Yes, I have; but I have not seen much of it.

MAIBULLA, Inhabitant of Lakhandi, Thanna Jenaida, Zillah Jessore, Factory Bizuli, Concern Sinduri, called in; and Examined on oath.

3249. President.] HAVE you sown indigo this year?—Yes, I have sown it in Kartik, not in Baisakh. There are no sowings in Baisakh. Since that, my children have been constantly told to weed and pick the ground, so that they have no time to cultivate our rice lands. Besides, we were all under the impression that the lease of the factory had expired in Baisakh last, but the factory has paid a large sum of money, I hear, 32,000 rupees, and has got the ijara changed into a putni, and has taken possession by fixing bamboos. Since then we are called upon to pay one rupee four annas per beegah, instead of eight annas.

3250. Did the planter promise you that if you would sow indigo for him he would not exact more rent?—No.

3251. If he were to make such an offer would you accept it?—Yes. If we were treated kindly we might think about it, such an offer being made.

3252. Has the Sahib ever beaten you, or ever treated you unkindly?—Yes; last year I was beaten with a piece of leather by the Sahib himself. I had complained about the devan, because I was obliged to sell the clothes of my daughter to satisfy him; I then complained to the Sahib, and then to Mr. Meares, of Sinduri. He took up the case, did justice, and dismissed the devan. Mr. Oman, in anger, beat me for this, and I thought it no use to complain to Mr. Meares again. I was also fined at the same time 25 rupees.

3253. What jumma have you?—I have a jumma of 30 rupees.

3254. Mr. Sale.] Have you any thing else to state?—The Sahib insists on our working in the vats; we are Mussulmans; and if we do this we cannot get our daughters married.

3255. Mr. Fergusson.] Are you willing to cut the plant for this year?—We are willing to cut, but not to carry the plant on our heads.

KAMUL BISWAS (caste Chundal). Inhabitant of Foolia, Thanna Jenida, Zilla Jessore, Factory Foolia, Concern Porahati, called in; and Examined on oath.

3256. President.] FOR what purpose have you come here?—I have been as far as Calcutta, and am come here. In the month of Asharh, I was sent for to the factory to furnish carts and coolies. I had never been asked for this before, and therefore refused; I was then confined, and altogether kept for seven days in Foolia and Porahati. I gave a rupee to the up-country burkundaze, and got away. I could not complain at either Magoora or Jessore.

3257. Have you sown indigo this year, and how much?—I have sown about eight beegahs for myself, and they have sown eight more by force, for which they won't pay me the rent. Last year I filled a vat myself; I did it in one day, getting all my neighbours and friends to assist me; I got nothing for it last year; by my account I should have been paid 57 bundles at 4 bundles per rupee; they told me I had nothing to get, on account of my father's and grandfather's debts. This year we have a splendid crop of indigo, I shall be able to fill two vats.

3258. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you state positively that you received no advance or excess after delivering that plant last year?—I state so, most positively; I have not done so for the last 20 years; I can read and write; you may see in the factory books my handwriting.

3259. Is your name written in your jumma or in that of some of your relatives?—The jumma is written in the name of my elder brother, Aradhun Mundal.

Badul
Mundal.

14 July
1 60.

Maibulla.

Kamul
Biswas.

SRINATH BOSE, Inhabitant of Dudkumra, Thanna Koostia, Zillah Pubna, Sudder Factory Salgurmudia, Concern Salgurmudia, called in; and Examined on oath.

Srinath
Bose.

14 July
1860.

3260. President.] HAVE you sown indigo this year?—Yes, I have, under compulsion, as I have done for the last 10 years. I can read and write, and I have never given any thing in writing. The factory people make my bargadars sow, or else if they cannot get the bargadar at hand, they make their own ryots sow. Last year out of nine beegahs of indigo, I had about 50 to 60 bundles of indigo; it filled a vat, but it is no use my going to the factories, as I never get anything.

3261. Mr. Sale.] You are a be-ilaka ryot; how is it you do not get anything; why don't you complain to your zemindar?—They sow by force. I complained to Ram Rutton Roy, and he said that these things were with the magistrate; he also said that in another case in Dihimari there had been a case of similar dispute, when his naib got imprisoned for one year and a half, therefore he could not meddle in these matters.

3262. President.] Did you ever complain to Mr.

Kenny in former days?—I did complain to Mr. Kenny about my getting nothing from the indigo, and he referred me to the deewan. The deewan told me I had nothing to receive. I have delivered capital plant to the factory. I had some good rice-land through which the Sahib cut a nulla, by which means the Sahib got some splendid crops of indigo.

3263. Mr. Sale.] How much land do you sow with indigo?—Before this year they used to sow nine beegahs, this year they took a khada, which is 16 beegahs.

3264. President.] Have you anything else to complain of?—Yes, a peon is set over us to watch the weeding, and we have to pay his khuraki, meals, and also have to pay for putting our plough through the indigo, when it has reached a certain height.

3265. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you intend to cut the indigo this year?—I have been cutting it.

SUBID PARAMANIK, Inhabitant of Mullatagur, Thanna Koostia, Zillah Pubnah, Factory Chanchua, Concern Salgurmudia, called in; and Examined on oath.

Su i Paramanik.

3266. President.] WHAT have you come here to represent?—Last year, for the first time, I was made to sow six beegahs; I had never sown before. This year I was laid hold of and taken into Salgurmudia factory and kept there for ten days; on my agreeing to sow indigo and to sign the khata books, I was allowed to come away; this year I complained to Huronath Baboo at Calcutta; he referred me to the magistrate of Pubna; I complained to the magistrate; nothing was done on my petition, but on a counter petition of the factory, four balagushtees were sent, who assisted the factory people to sow my lands.

3267. Mr. Fergusson.] Did you ever get any advances or excess?—No, not at all.

3268. Mr. Sale.] As you are a be-ilaka ryot, how is that they are able to force you to sow?—We were near the Sahib's property, and without the Sahib's permission we cannot drink water.

NUFFI MUNDAL, Inhabitant of Mookturpore, Thanna Dowlutgunge, Factory Nischindipore, Concern Nischindipore, called in; and Examined on oath.

Nuffi
Mundal.

3269. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] WHAT is your jumma, and what do you sow with indigo?—I have a jumma of 60 rupees, comprising 180 beegahs of land; I sow 10 beegahs according to factory measurement; by mine it would be about 15. I have been sowing indigo for a long time. I am paid for my indigo at the rate of four bundles per rupee; this is sufficient to give a profit. Last year, I gave 40 bundles of indigo; I meant 100 bundles; by mistake I said 40.

3270. Can you tell what is the expense of cultivating a beegah of indigo?—

	Rs.	a.	p.
10 Ploughs, at 3 annas each -	1	14	-
Weeding - - - -	1	-	-
Cutting - - - -	-	6	-
Seed - - - -	-	4	-
Rent - - - -	-	5	4
	Rs. 3	13	4

Thus Rs. 38. 5. 4. rupees for 10 beegahs.

3271. President.] On your indigo lands are you allowed to sow cold weather crops, and what is their value?—I sow linseed and sometimes mustard; sometimes I get two, three or four rupees, at others nothing.

3272. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] You have stated that indigo is profitable for you; by your own showing you have got 25 rupees for your plant, when your expenses were 38-5-4; how is it that you say you get a profit for it?—I don't know; if the crop is good we make something; if not, we are losers.

3273. Mr. Sale.] Did you get anything for seed last year!—Yes, I got five rupees.

3274. President.] Are you satisfied to sow indigo?—The talook is the Sahib's; where shall I go if I do not sow?

3275. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Supposing the Sahib were not your zemindar, would you sow?—If he were not my zemindar I would not, but if it were profitable I would sow anything.

3276. Are you employed as a servant in the factory?—No, I am a cultivator.

3277. President.] You sow 10 beegahs, what do you do with the rest of your lands?—I sow two khadas or 32 beegahs with rice, and the rest I sow with wheat, mustard and linseed.

3278. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] How many ploughs and head of cattle have you?—I have 12 head of cattle; that is, three full ploughs, 10 milch cows and two calves. I have two houses and a cow-house.

3279. Mr. Sale.] Then we are to understand that you are content to sow indigo?—Yes, I am content to keep on. I don't say that there are not oppressions, such as seizing my ploughs and carts sometimes, but the Sahib is good, and I am content to keep on.

SIKUNDAR MUNDAL, Inhabitant of Baniapookur, Hardi Thanna, Zillah Nuddea, Concern Bamundi; Examined on oath.

3280. President.] WHAT do you wish to represent before this Commission?—Last Kartik they broke up my wheat and cold weather crops and sowed their indigo. I complained to the hakim who came up in Chaitro, who told us that it was optional to sow indigo or not. Therefore I did not sow, on which I was sued for breach of contract. But the cases of one village being dismissed, those against the other three were withdrawn; among which my case was, since then I have heard no more of it.

3281. Then if your case was withdrawn, what have you to fear?—They cut my babul trees, and don't pay me for it; they don't allow me also to cut my stubble, but take it to the factory to feed the cattle.

3282. Mr. Sale.] Are you content to sow indigo again?—No, I cannot sow any more.

3283. How much land have you?—I have one jumma of 32, and another at 24 rupees, and the nirik of which is five or six annas per beegah. I have a very old potta.

3284. Who is your zemindar?—Surbeshwar Mustofi.

[Commission adjourned at 6.15 P.M.]

Sikundar Mundal.

14 July
1860.

Monday, 16th July 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C.S., President.

Members:—W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Reverend J. Sale; Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

Mr. HUGH SIBBALD, Manager of the Nundunpore and Sunada Concerns, called in; and Examined on oath.

3285. Mr. Fergusson.] How long have you been an indigo planter, and in what districts have you had experience?—I have been a planter for 15 years; the whole of which time I have been in the Nuddea district. I learnt the business at Nischindipore, and for ten years have been manager of the Nundunpore and Sunada concerns.

3286. President.] Have you experienced any difficulty in inducing your ryots to sow this year?—I have not had much difficulty. I have been obliged to persuade them in some instances, but ultimately have gained my end. My estimate of cultivation last October was for 11,000 beegahs, and I have sown 10,500. I should state that out of that in the above concerns, there are 64 villages, of which 16 are be-ilaka, and the cultivation of these is a fair average.

3287. In the case of the 500 beegahs not sown, did you voluntarily relinquish that extent of cultivation, and if so, is it in one or two villages, or in detached pieces all over the concern?—It is in detached pieces all over the concern. With the exception of about 100 beegahs, I voluntarily gave up the rest, owing to the inability of the ryots to sow. In the case of the hundred beegahs, the ryots in several villages did not wish to sow.

3288. Have you had occasion to resort to the new Act for breach of contract, and have you gained any suit under that Act?—No, not in a single instance. We did commence a suit against a man named Makoo Mir, but he sowed, and the case was of course relinquished.

3289. Mr. Sale.] You are aware that some planters in the Kishnagur district have met with considerable difficulty in getting ryots to sow; can you account for their difficulties and your comparative freedom from such?—I am not aware that my system differs from that of any one else. Now and then I have had difficulties with the ryots, but I have always managed to settle with them. I have had very little difficulty with the zemindar, even this year.

3290. President.] Do you not speak Bengali fluently, and are you not in the habit of giving ready access to your ryots on all occasion?—Yes; thirteen years ago, I was examined by the late Major Marshall in reading, writing and speaking Bengali in Fort William, and have had occasion to speak it ever since, and I am in the habit of giving free access to the ryots at all times.

3291. Have any cases been brought against you or your servants in the criminal courts; or on the other hand, have you had to institute cases yourself, in the criminal, revenue or civil courts?—I have been 15 years in the country, and have never personally appeared either as plaintiff or defendant in either civil or criminal court. I have never had any revenue cases in former years.

3292. Mr. Sale.] Are you in the habit of leaving much power in the hands of your native subordinates, and what means do you take to prevent extortion or oppression on the part of your amlas?—Yes; a good deal of power is left in the hands of my subordinates, because the property is more than 20 miles in length. And the only means I have of preventing extortion is by allowing access to every one, high or low, at all times in cases connected with indigo. I have constant complaints made to me by the ryots. Formerly I used to redress grievances to a great extent; but of late I have not ventured to do so, fearing the responsibility which attends doing so, from the practice being disapproved by Government.

3293. Mr. Fergusson.] On your return from England, three years ago, did the ryots make any manifestation when you came back to the factories?—I was met about seven miles from Nundunpore by the darogah of the Mihirpore Thanna, several zemindars,

Mr. H. Sibbald.

16 July
1860.

Mr.
H. Sibbald.
16 July
1860.

zemindars, and hundreds of ryots of all classes; many of whom accompanied me all the way to Nundunpore.

3294. President. Was any mention made within the limits of your concern, of any parwanna or of orders of the Government as to indigo?—Since September last these rumours have been very prevalent throughout my villages. The first mention was, that the Government would not sanction indigo any more, and these were distorted in a hundred ways as only the lower order of people are capable of doing. As an instance of unfounded rumours and of the nonsense which is circulated, I have been asked by respectable natives who wore stockings, if a tax had not been laid upon that article.

3295. Have the common people even in conversation with you ever quoted the orders or influence of missionaries concerning indigo?—Since September last, the name of Mr. Bomwetsch has been openly mentioned by the ryots, and he was regularly believed to be their mookhtyar in the indigo question. I judge from their conversation that many ryots have been to Mr. Bomwetsch to consult with him. I have heard no other clergyman's name mentioned.

3296. Do you think the ryots in your part of the country were formerly impressed with the idea that Government had any share in the profits of indigo?—No, I never heard such an idea expressed, either by any ryot or other person, not even this year.

3297. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Could you or the factory people ever have talked to the ryots in such a manner as to lead them to believe that such was the case that the Company had a profit?—I think not, as being in constant communication with the people I should have heard it.

3298. Mr. Sale.] On the whole and making allowance for the habits of exaggeration common amongst the natives, what do you think has been the nature of the influence exercised by Mr. Bomwetsch among the ryots?—I think it probable that the ryots have gone to Mr. Bomwetsch with their grievances exaggerated or otherwise, and that he has given them advice or encouragement.

3299. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you found difficulty in obtaining coolies and carriage for your manufacturing, and have you had to pay higher wages this year than usual?—No, I have had no difficulty in obtaining carriage or coolies for my manufacturing this year, but I have had to pay higher than usual.

3300. President. Have you ever had to complain about the conduct of the police, as not affording you fair support?—No.

3301. Mr. Fergusson.] Are you aware that the Bengali pamphlet headed "Oppressions of the Planters," and printed at the Hindoo Patriot Press has been circulated gratuitously through the district?—Yes, within the past two years the pamphlet has been very generally circulated throughout the district.

3302. President. Are your factory books kept on the same principle as those of the Nischindipore concern?—I know that they are kept on the same principle as those of the Nischindipore concern; but I am not in the habit of looking at them.

3303. Can you state the amount of the following charges in your concern, viz.: stamp, seed, carting and landing charges?—Stamp two annas, seed four annas, no cartage, no landing charge.

3304. Can you state what is your general practice as to making advances to ryots who may be on the wrong side of your books?—I do not give such ryots cash advances as a rule, but I do very frequently give them money. Besides that, if a man's balance is heavy, in very many instances I strike off a large portion of the amount. Also I give money varying from one to fifteen rupees or even more. Ryots whose houses have been burnt, or who have otherwise fallen into misfortune, or are helped to clear off their mahajan's debt. These sums are generally pure gifts, especially in cases of accidents and misfortunes.

3305. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you open a fresh set of books on the 1st of October every year, and is it your practice to enter on the 1st of October any sums which may have been previously disbursed on account of the season, commencing on that date?—Certainly, when the new book is open, the first entries will be the sums which have been disbursed previous to that date, on account of the new season.

3306. Will you describe what the book called the Purtanjat is?—In the Purtanjat you have entered the number of cattle the ryot has, the amount of land he has engaged to sow, the amount of advances, and the amount of his debt.

3307. After these particulars are entered, there would be no further writing in that book, and it would not be in use, unless you wished to refer to it?—No, I certainly think there would be nothing more written in it, nor would it be in use, except occasionally as a reference to a ryot's account.

3308. Have you this year taken a greater number of formal kabulyats than usual?—I have seldom taken kabulyats from ryots at all, but I have done so this year in Sunada, though not in the Nundunpore concern. I did so on account of rumours of difficulties.

3309. Do you remember where you got the stamp for these kabulyats?—No.

3310. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] When stamp papers are required for the factory, do they take stamps wherever they can find them?—From not having been generally in the habit of taking stamps, I am not qualified to answer this question.

3311. Mr. Fergusson.] Is not the collector's cutcherry shut for the sale of stamps at that time of the year?—During the Durga festival and Lucki Pooja holidays, the cutcherry is shut for some time. The stamp vendors under the collectors go by the Civil Courts and take a much longer holiday.

3312. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Are there not stamp vendors in the interior of the district of Nuddea in large villages, such as Ranaghat, Ulla, and other large villages?—I believe there are.

3313. Mr. Fergusson.] Did you remember finding any difficulty this season in procuring stamps on account of these holidays?—Yes, I remember at the time of giving advances either in the end of September or in the beginning of October at Sunada, owing to the Doorga holidays my people were unable to get the stamps from the regular source, and were obliged to purchase them from mahajans and others.

3314. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Within your experience do you know of any oppression committed by planters, such as forcibly taking away the cattle of the ryots, committing affrays, arson and kidnapping people?—I have heard of such things, but personally I have no knowledge of them.

3315. President. Were you in the habit of taking kabulyats for indigo from ryots not resident dent in villages belonging to the concern?—I have not been in the habit of doing so. I cannot recollect any distinct case of ever having done so. I believe it is the custom in other concerns to take kabulyats.

3316. Notwithstanding this, was it still the custom to charge the ryots two annas for stamps?—It has always been the custom for years.

3317. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Do you not generally find ryots act honestly with you and abide by such contracts as you have stated?—Yes, unless excited or instigated by evil disposed persons to do otherwise.

3318. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you made any large extent of roads, and have you ever charged your ryots anything towards the road fund?—I have lined out 32 miles of road, and planted the greater portion of it with trees on each side. I have never made the ryots pay a pice towards its expense; and only on one occasion, after application, I received 500 rupees from the ferry fund. I always paid the ryots for their labour upon them.

3319. President.] What is your amount of collection of rents, and have you had any difficulty this year in the collection of them?—The amount of my annual collections, amounts to something beyond 60,000 rupees. In other years, up to this period, I have generally been enabled to collect four annas of the rent, whereas this season, owing to the troubled state of the district, I have only been able to realise one anna.

3320. Do you ascribe any part of this difficulty to the operation of any section of Act X. of 1859, as for instance, section XI.?—Almost entirely so; as if I had that power which has been abrogated by section XI., I should have collected the whole amount.

3321. Mr. Sale.] Have you any reason to believe that your ryots are acquainted with section XI., and have they availed themselves of it?—I think that almost every man within my line, is acquainted with section XI. of Act X.; or rather has an exaggerated idea of benefits that are to be conferred upon him in excess of what is comprehended in section XI.

3322. President.] Then, you are not of opinion that sections CXII. to CXV., regarding distraint of crops, &c., will enable zemindars and talookdars to realise the rents?—No, I fancy that without the power that has been abrogated by section XI., the powers conferred by this last named section will not be sufficient.

3323. Do you object to the other portions of the Act which tend to give independence to the ryots, and to consolidate and secure their rights?—No, I can't in justice object to the other portions of the Act.

3324. Have you any jotes or jummas?—We don't hold jotes or jummas from ryots. We have some waste and unoccupied lands from the zemindars, which we cultivate for nij-abad, and obtain leases from them as well as leases of churs from zemindars.

3325. Mr. Fergusson.] If obliged to apply to the courts under this Act, what do you think would be the effect on the part of landholders, native and European, who have not other large means?—I think the property would be put up for sale at the Government auction.

3326. Will not a liability to this seriously increase the present difficulty to indigo planters?—It will very seriously complicate them, for whereas we had to wrestle with one difficulty, we shall now have to wrestle with two.

3327. Mr. Sale.] But, practically, have you found section XI. to influence your indigo operations unfavourably?—Not practically, but there is an uneasy feeling shown, which I attribute partly to the new position in which the ryot has been placed.

3328. President.] And have you been deterred by the wording of that section from sending your servants to call your ryots as heretofore?—Most certainly I have been deterred.

3329. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you think there is any machinery for obtaining and enforcing the decrees which it may be necessary to sue for under that Act to enable you to realise your rents?—No, I think that the present machinery we have, will prove utterly inadequate, and I believe that the same unwillingness on the part of the ryots to pay rents has been felt by all European landholders throughout the district, and is extending to the native zemindars also. Under these circumstances I think a change should be made in the present mode of conducting business. I think that 15 collectors would not be sufficient for the work.

3330. President.] Then you do not think that it would suffice to vest every moonsiff within these districts with powers under Act X.?—If there is no other agency available, I certainly would recommend that the moonsiff be vested with those powers, for the present at least, as the rice crop will be ripe within a month. And if the ryots manage to get that rice cut without some relief being given to the landlord by the Government, I think that many properties will be sold off, especially the smaller ones.

3331. Are you in part proprietor of Nundunpore and Sunada concerns?—Yes, I am a three annas shareholder in these two concerns.

3332. Do you think it will be necessary to make any changes in the system of indigo planting on account of the late feeling among the ryots?—Of course, when such a feeling has been prominently put forward, it will be necessary to take measures to render the ryots as willing to cultivate indigo as before. I am not prepared to state exactly what changes must be made, but in reference to the items mentioned before the Commission, I think that the charge for seed for sowing, and carriage may be given up. And that liberty may be given to the ryot to dispose of the seed grown from the stumps, in any market he chooses.

3333. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Do you consider your accounts mutual and annual, and do you square your accounts every year with your ryots; are you of opinion that this practice should be universal?—I do so, and think that the practice should be universal.

GEORGE RICHARD JAMES MEARES, Manager of the Loknathpore Concern, including Sinduri, Goldar, Loknathpore, Kalispore, and Bizuli, called in; and Examined on oath.

3334. President.] Do you wish to file your answer to the Commission's circular, as part of your evidence?—Yes, I wish to file it as part of my evidence, with a supplement correcting a statement—
72—I.

ment regarding the cultivation of a beegah of nij-abad, which, owing to the rise of prices, was more than I estimated. In the supplement there is a statement of the cost to a ryot of the cultivation.

Mr.
H. Sibbald.
16 July
1866.

Mr. G. R. J.
Meares.

Mr. G. R. J.
Meares.

16 July
1860.

of rice and indigo. This is taken from the statement of the gomashtha and some ryots, which was taken for the purpose.

3335. Will you state to the Commission the difficulties which you have had this year in inducing ryots to cultivate, and to what cause or causes do you attribute those difficulties?—This year, out of 40,248 beegahs we have sown 28,000 beegahs, and that after a considerable difficulty owing to the ryots firmly believing that it was the wish of Government that indigo should be discontinued, which the darogahs and burkundazes under them did their best to impress upon the ryots' minds, and on the arrival of Mr. Herschel in the district, his bias against indigo planting being so clear, that both the police and the ryots made the most of it. The landholders who have given me most trouble are the putnidars of the Joyrampore village close to the Loknathpore factory. Other talookdars have not opposed us openly, but I have no doubt that they have done so privately through the ryots. I am led to suppose this from the opposition experienced from the ryots, which the talookdars could have prevented if they liked. I believe the first cause of the difficulty was the Baraset perwannas. I refer to the Kallaroa perwanna, and I refer to Mr. Eden's proceedings altogether.

3336. Did you ever apply to any of the talookdars this year for any assistance to induce the ryots to sow?—Yes, I did to several. They all expressed their willingness to give me assistance, but at the same time said that they had little or no power. I heard they wrote letters to their naibs.

3337. Were these men the talookdars of villages not held by the concern, or were they the talookdars from whom you obtained putnis and ijaras?—They were the talookdars from whom we obtain ijaras.

3338. In which villages did you experience most difficulty; in villages held by the concern, or in villages not so held?—I think we had equal difficulty, but I think the ryots of the putni villages are now showing a disposition to come round more so than the be-ilaka ones.

3339. In villages not held by the concern had you any open opposition from the talookdars?—We had neither opposition, nor assistance.

3340. Have you any personal or distinct knowledge of any emissaries going about the district and instigating ryots?—I have no personal knowledge, but I have heard so from many natives. I understand that the mooktyars that have come up to Damurhuda have done so. I also heard yesterday at Khalbolia, that they are instigating the ryots not to pay their rents.

3341. Mr. Fergusson.] What portion of the cultivation which you did sow was in Jessore and Nuddea respectively?—I sowed 11,000 beegahs in Kishnagur and the remainder, i. e. 17,000, in Jessore.

3342. Were the 17,000 beegahs sown in Jessore, nearly the whole of your arrangements in that district?—They were the whole; we had no difficulty ultimately in Jessore. We ought to have sown 23,000 beegahs in Nuddea, but only 11,000 were sown.

3343. Do you attribute your not being able to sow in Kishnagur to the parwannas issued in that district, and to which of them particularly?—Certainly, and particularly to that one of the 19th April, at which time all our ryots of Loknathpore, Goldar and Khalispore, showed a willingness to sow, but on the arrival of that parwanna they at once sowed all our indigo lands down with rice.

3344. Did the ryots interpret the wording of those parwannas as giving them an option to sow or not, as they liked?—Entirely. They only looked to that part of the parwanna which suited themselves, and interpreted it as giving them full permission to do as they liked.

3345. Have you experienced any difficulties in obtaining coolies and carriage for your manufacturing this year?—Yes, and although we are paying double for coolies, carts, and boats, and although the men have taken their advances, they do not now wish to fulfil their contract, and have in many instances taken their money to the thanna to return it.

3346. Have you previous to these seasons found the ryots take their advances of indigo willingly, and have you ever forced advances upon ryots?—I have always found ryots willing to take advances, and have never forced them. I have in some instances reduced the extent of their cultivation.

3347. Have you ever found opposition from ryots in previous years?—Yes, I have often found opposition from ryots, but not on account of indigo advances. They have been instigated to oppose the factory for the purpose of making us take the property in ijara or putni. When I first went to Sinduri, the lease of 11 villages belonging to the late Baboo Ram Ruttun Roy had just expired. I asked him to renew it, which he said he would do after measuring and reassessing them. The ryots opposed his measurement, and I then offered him 2,000 rupees in excess of the former jumma paid by Mr. Savi, on which Mr. Savi had an annual loss of 1,000 rupees. He would not consent. The ryots then begged me to protect them, which I did as far as I had it in my power, by preventing his sending in lattials into the village. After some five years he then gave us a putni of those 11 villages at the rate of 6,700 rupees annually and three years' purchase.

3348. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Did you also send lattials on those occasions?—I sent burkundazes and piadas belonging to the factory, and the ryots receiving that support from the factory were quite able to protect themselves. This was before I got the putni from the Baboo.

3349. President.] Did not affrays take place on those occasions between your servants and the servants of Baboo Ram Ruttun Roy?—No serious ones.

3350. Was there not any serious case arising out of that dispute?—After getting the putni from Ram Ruttun Roy, I then proceeded to measure and re-assess, when the ryots went over to Ram Ruttun and asked him for assistance, as they were willing to pay any rents. Ram Ruttun then sent a number of men, who attacked all my cutcherries and looted them. And in the evening the same men attacked my house in Sinduri, but we were lucky enough to beat them off. The case came before the magistrate, who sentenced the Baboo's head man to three months' imprisonment, but he got off after 26 days, on appeal.

3351. Had you any trouble yourself on enhancing the rents of the ryots, so as to meet the demand made by the zemindar?—I had no trouble in measuring the lands. They allowed my servants to go into the village and complete the measurement; but after the dispute related above, the ryots of four villages ran away, and some of them never returned. It took me two or three years to replace them. Now I have got my jumma in that putni full.

3352. Baboo

3352. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Was it not before Mr. Herschel took charge of the district that the ryots presented petitions stating their unwillingness to cultivate indigo, and that four to five hundred ryots besieged the magistrate's court daily; and did not Mr. Herschel discourage the presenting of such petitions?—We had no trouble with our ryots till Mr. Drummond came into the district with Mr. Reid, the officiating commissioner, when some Joyrampore ryots made a general petition to Mr. Drummond against the factory. This was about the middle of December last. I am not aware that Mr. Herschel discouraged the ryots presenting petitions.

3353. Was it not long before the issuing of these parwannas that the ryots of Hanskali and Govindpore quarrelled with the factory and put a stop to the cultivation of indigo some two years ago?—I am not aware when the ryots of Hanskali first quarrelled with the factory.

3354. You have stated that the ryots willingly took advances. Is the cultivation of indigo profitable or otherwise to the ryots?—If you calculate the ryot's labour at the market price, and considering the high price of rice now, I do not think that indigo pays the ryots, but that is entirely his own fault, as if he gave the same attention to the growth of indigo as he does to rice, I feel certain that it would do so. At the same time, I think indigo pays the ryot fully as well as early rice.

3355. You have put in a statement in which you state the cost of cultivation of a beegah of indigo at three rupees one anna; what would be the produce of that beegah in bundles?—A ryot who pays any attention to the cultivation would realize 12 to 16 bundles, but if he paid as much attention to indigo as he does to his dhan crop, he would easily realise 20 bundles per beegah.

3356. Do you consider one rupee fifteen annas per beegah a sufficient advancement for a ryot to cultivate indigo, knowing as he does that it is a very precarious crop?—Yes, I think it amply sufficient, as by being an indigo ryot he enjoys incidental and collateral advantages which he would not otherwise do.

3357. President.] Will you state the precise nature of those advantages?—We always protect our ryots from the oppressions of the mahajan, also from that of the police to the best of our power. We also lend money to ryots without interest; they also get medicines from the factory when required; and we keep schools, where they can send their children without paying for it. I spend a large sum yearly in medicines; besides, we seldom assess ryots to the full extent of the pergunna nirih.

3358. In this case must there not have been other causes at work besides the mere misapprehension of the orders of Government to make the ryots exhibit so decided a dislike to indigo as they have done?—I don't think that among my ryots this was the case, but I have no doubt with regard to other places it was the case.

3359. Mr. Fergusson.] Was not the late and sudden rise in the price of rice a strong inducement to the ryot to prefer it to indigo?—No doubt rice, being an edible crop, it was preferred by ryots to indigo, and they could always obtain advances from the mahajan by sowing it.

3360. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Do you not think that if the ryot is allowed to cultivate all his lands with rice and other crops of his own liking, such as oilseeds, chillies, long pepper, sugarcane, &c. he would be able to pay up his mahajan's debts in a short time?—No, I do not think so. They are such an improvident set.
72—I.

3361. Mr. Fergusson.] If they refuse to sow indigo, will you allow them to sit at the same low rate as they have hitherto done, and what is the rate of rent generally within your zemindary?—No, certainly not. The Mahomed Shahi nirih is one rupee four annas for rice lands per beegah, but we seldom take more than 12 annas to a rupee. In the Sahoujial Pergunna, the rate is six annas two pie per beegah, and our ryots pay us from four to five annas.

3362. Do you know if the ryots in Jessore are this year sowing as they usually do for indigo seed?—No, they have sown little or no seed this year, and are under impression, as they themselves have told me, that they will be punished with 14 years' imprisonment if they do so. I sent for several ryots of the Sinduri concern, and told them to sow their indigo for seed as usual, which they consented to do in my presence. Ten days afterwards, my gomashta told me that those ryots had come to him, and said that it was impossible for them to sow for seed, as a peon from the thanna had gone through their villages forbidding them to sow, and telling them that if they did so they would be punished. Other ryots consented before my gomashta to sow, if I gave them a letter holding them harmless, which I of course agreed to, on which they said that they could not sow without a letter from Government.

3363. Can you state what quantity of land is usually sown for seed within your limits, and state any instance of sums that a man has made by seed per beegah?—I should say about 2,000 beegahs are sown purely for seed. I have paid as high as 52 rupees myself to a man for the produce of one beegah, and on the other hand I have paid as low as three annas a maund for seed.

3364. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Instead of cultivating indigo for you at two rupees advance, would it not be more profitable for ryots to sow for seed instead of indigo?—It would be useless, as the consumption of seed is limited, and it is determined by the quantity of indigo plant to be sown.

3365. Mr. Sale.] The estimate you have given for the cost of nij-abad cultivation is for high lands, and in it two diggings are charged for, are the ryots never required to dig for ryotti cultivation?—No, they rarely dig.

3366. In the estimate for cultivating a beegah of indigo under the ryotti system one rupee is charged for ploughing, and in the estimate for a beegah of aous rice, one rupee eight annas is charged for ploughing, does the aous rice require more ploughing than indigo?—The ryots generally plough their rice lands better than they do for indigo.

3367. Again, four annas are charged for weeding indigo, and one rupee eight annas is charged for weeding rice?—Unless rice lands are thrice well weeded they will yield nothing, whereas if indigo is only weeded once it will still yield a crop.

3368. President.] How many cases of breach of contract have you thought it necessary to institute this year, and with what result?—In the Sinduri Division I myself have instituted a very few cases, certainly under a hundred, with a very unsatisfactory result, having only gained 19 decrees, and that was from Mr. Maclean. Since the Principal Sudder Ameens have come, I have withdrawn all cases throughout the whole of the factories, as it was perfectly useless carrying them on. The proofs which we are enabled to bring forward

Mr. G. R. J.
Meares.

16 July
1860.

Mr. G. R. J. forward are not approved of by those gentlemen, although they were considered sufficient by Mr. Molony and Mr. Maclean.

16 July 1860. 3369. Will you explain the sort of proofs which you brought forward, and on which you gained decrees?—I gained decrees from Mr. Maclean on production of the factory books, which all agree, and which were supported by the evidence of the factory servants, and in many cases of my assistants.

3370. Did you produce contracts on stamp paper in any cases?—No, only in a few, as we don't usually fill up contracts. They are only filled up in cases when we apprehend trouble from ryots.

3371. Did the Principal Sudder Ameens at all indicate any kind of additional evidence which might have satisfied them?—They dismissed cases for the most trivial reasons. In some cases the plaintiff was not present when the case was called for. With regard to my own cases, I was not present, and can't say about any additional evidence.

3372. Have you any of those decisions dismissing cases by you?—No, I personally applied to Mr. Bell for copies, when he told me that they were all sent in original to the Commissioner. My mookhtyar applied the very day the cases were decreed, and I applied personally a day or two before.

3373. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you believe that the interference of the Commissioner and of the Government in sending circulars and removing the persons appointed to decide these cases affected the judicial independence of these officers?—Certainly, I think it has done so with regard to the Sudder Ameens, but not with regard to the magistrates. At the same time they were very much puzzled how to act, as new tabular forms and instructions were sent to them continually.

3374. Mr. Sale.] Were you always required to prove a cash advance, or was it sufficient to prove a transfer to the rent account, or a debt against the ryot?—With regard to my cases, they were on account of cash advances. I was anxious to bring up a number of cases where a transfer to the rent account had been made, but Mr. Ritchie, the Advocate General, gave it as his opinion that such cases were inadmissible under the Act.

3375. President.] Was any attempt made by the magistrates to point out distinctly to the ryots the inevitable consequences of a refusal to sow, followed by a decree for breach of contract?—I know that such was the case in the case of Mr. Molony and Mr. Maclean, but whether Mr. Herschel did so or not, I can't say.

3376. Mr. Sale.] Did you demand any definite amount as damages from the ryots, or was the amount settled independently of you?—The rate of damages rested entirely with the magistrate, and that rate was changed so often that we did not know what standard to take in making our claim.

3377. Mr. Forlong has stated in his evidence that when there are contracts, ten rupees a beegah are the penalty of the non-fulfilment. Is it according to your experience?—I do not remember if there is a fixed penalty in the habulyat, but it will be seen from the copy sent me.

3378. Mr. Fergusson.] Then, do you consider that the Act as at present worked is a nullity, and affords no redress to your wrongs?—I consider it perfectly as a dead letter.

3379. President.] Have you realised the amount of damages decreed to you, or have the ryots preferred to go to gaol?—All the ryots that I got decrees against went to gaol at first, but several of them paid off within a few days and got out again. I can't say how many there were, although I have applied frequently I have not been able to ascertain. In the cases brought up by Mr. Chardon several of the ryots paid off on the spot.

3380. You stated in a previous answer that the police increased the difficulty between yourself and your ryots; did you represent this to the magistrate?—Yes, I did represent it to the magistrate himself verbally, but he said he did not believe it to be the case.

3381. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Did you present any specific charge against any particular police affair to the magistrate?—Mr. Chardon did so against Kailas Chundur Roy, darogah of Damarhuda, who came into the Chandpore factory with several police burkundazes and some 80 village lattials from the Joyrampore villages. He came there nominally to look for lattials of ours. He found none. Two ryots of Chandpore, who were close to the factory, were both wounded by either the police or the villagers, and a case immediately trumped up against my factory servants by the darogah. The case eventually was dismissed, and as, beyond a doubt, these men were wounded, the only people who could have done so were either the police or the village lattials. Mr. Chardon's complaint was, that the darogah came to him, at the Chandpore factory, in a drunken state; but the man was not punished, as the magistrate did not consider him an habitual drunkard.

3382. Mr. Fergusson.] With regard to the police generally, have you found them to be trustworthy or otherwise?—No, I have always found them corrupt. In whatever way they may be employed, they will never obey orders, unless they are paid.

3383. President.] But in disputes between the factory and the ryots, or the factory and the talookdar, had you any practical difficulty in carrying out the orders of the magistrate, or in getting them to give you what you considered fair play?—In the Kishnagur district, I consider they never gave us fair play this year. In other years it was a mere question of payment. In Jessore, I think, the police are just as corrupt as they are in Kishnagur, but they had not the same reason this year for opposing the planter as in Kishnagur.

3384. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Have you been more successful in other years in your transaction with the police?—I have not met with the same opposition from the police as I have this year in the Kishnagur district, but that I attribute entirely to the strong bias shown by Mr. Herschel against the planter from the date of his arrival in this district.

3385. Were not similar inducements offered to the police this year, as in former years?—Yes, I desired Mr. Tweedie at the commencement of the disturbances to pay Kailas Chunder Roy 200 rupees merely as an inducement for him not to act against the factory, and I believe it was paid.

3386. Did you yourself make any such payments to any police officer?—No, I didn't actually pay myself.

3387. On what occasions did you order such payments to be made?—They have been numerous, but I cannot remember the occasions they were made.

3388. Are monies paid to darogahs and other police officers, paid without the sanction of the head head or manager of the division, and will you state under what head they would be entered in the factory books, and could they not be seen in the ledger of the factory?—They are always sanctioned by the manager of the division. They would appear under the head of “Law Suits,” but items or names would not always appear in the ledger.

3389. President.] Do you think it will be imperative with planters to make some changes in the system henceforth, if so, what changes would you recommend?—Yes, I think we should have to make changes on account of the high prices; and take more of the risk of the crop on ourselves, and I would propose giving the ryot two rupees a beegah as advances, not to be debited against him, unless in the case of wilful default.

3390. Do you recommend that contracts should be annual?—I think it would be preferable if it were every three years, as it would save an immense deal of trouble.

2d. That the factory, not the ryots, should bear the charge of stamp?—Yes, I think the factory should bear the charge for stamp.

3d. That the factory should give the seed?—No, I think four annas a beegah is not an unfair charge for the ryot.

4th. That the factory should bear the carting or boating?—In Loknathpore and Khalispore divisions they pay these charges at the rate of one rupee in three rupees. In Goldar, Bizuli and Sinduri, the factory pays the whole, and I am willing to assimilate the whole to these latter concerns.

5th. That seed grown from the stumps should be purchased from the ryots at the market price; I think it fair that they should get the market price for seed.

6th. That the plant should be weighed, or that a vat should be filled with plant instead of measuring it with a chain?—I think weighing or measuring by chain infinitely better than filling a vat, as in this latter instance the plant may be heavily or highly packed; and I think it should be optional with the planter to press it lightly or heavily, as there is a difference of opinion which mode of packing produces the most produce of indigo. I prefer heavy packing, because the plant ferments quicker, and you get over the work quicker, which is a paramount object. I think that the question of weighing or measuring should be settled by a body of planters.

7th. That the indigo beegah should be assimilated either to the Government beegah or to the local zemindary beegah?—In the Mahomed Shahi Pergunna, an indigo beegah is exactly the same as the zemindary beegah, i. e., 80 haths of 22 inches each. In Sahoujial Pergunna, the indigo hath is 22 inches, and the zemindary 18 inches, which makes a difference of four cottas in the beegah. I shall be willing to assimilate the standard if the planters adopt it as a rule. Of the above suggestions, all except the last, I was prepared to propose to the Commission myself. I think four bundles per rupee is as low as it can be, considering the price of labour, and the price we shall henceforth have to pay for zemindary rights.

3391. Mr. Sale.] Can you explain how it is you take six bundles in Kishnagur, and four bundles in Jessore?—I can give no reply to this, save that it was the custom of the factory before they were joined into one concern.

3392. President.] Have you felt any inconvenience from the operation of Act X. of 1859?—As yet I have experienced very little, as we have had very few cases springing up from it, but I believe eventually that both native talookdars and planters' zemindaries must suffer severely from it, I mean from section XI.

3393. Have you continued to send your peons to the villages to call ryots to adjust their rents?—I do in villages where there is no opposition to the factory, but in the case of Joyrampore, it is quite impossible to do so. When Mr. Maclean was at Damurhuda, he frequently desired me to supply food for the troops; I told him it was perfectly out of my power, as I could not summon my ryots by sending people into the villages.

3394. Mr. Sale.] But was the difficulty in sending people into Joyrampore, a legal or a physical one?—I think it was both legal and physical, i. e., I had not the legal right to send people into the villages, and if I did send, the chances are that they might have got their heads broken.

3395. President.] Are you of opinion that if ryots come round of themselves and agree to sow, a summary law for breach of contract will still be necessary?—Yes, decidedly so, because as I propose to give ryots two rupees per beegah advances, not charging them for it, they will find out that they may get two rupees for doing nothing, and consequently a law will be necessary, with penal consequences, to keep them to their agreements. I think the ryots will eventually come round if no undue influence is exerted upon them.

MUNSHAD MUNDAL, Inhabitant of Kumerpore, Thanna Dowlutgungé, Nischindipore Factory, called in; and Examined on oath.

3396. President.] Did you sow indigo last year, and did you get excess payments?—Yes, I sowed 10 beegahs for which I got 20 rupees advances, as I had no debt against me. I gave 150 bundles of plant to the factory, getting payment at four bundles per rupee. I got seven rupees for plant, and nine for two maunds of seed. The dewan after making certain deductions for carting, &c., gave me seven rupees. I got the money for the plant in Posh when I went to the factory to get advances for this year. I again got 20 rupees for 10 beegahs. I got the money for the seed in Phalgun, I also got in Jyeshtha last, five rupees for weeding. This money was paid me by the assistant.

72—I.

3397. Then you find indigo profitable to you?—Yes, I do when I have a crop of seed.

3398. Can you state the expense of cultivating a beegah of indigo?—Yes.

	a.	p.
Rent	5	4
Four ploughs, at 6 per rupee	10	—
Seed	4	—
Mui , about two hours' work, weeding depends upon the jungle.
Bida , I can do about eight or 10 beegahs a day.
Cutting, three men, at 1½ anna each	4	6
D D 4	3399.	Baboo

Mr. G. R. J. Meares.

16 July 1860.

Munshad Mundal.

Munshad
Mundal.
—
16 July
1860.

3399. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Do you know Nuffar Mundal of Mooktyarpore?—I do know Nuffar Mundal. He is also a ryot of Nischindipore concern.

3400. President.] Nuffar Mundal says, that it costs 10 ploughs for a beegah, and that it takes one rupee for weeding?—I have got good ploughs and bullocks, and I can do it with four. I don't know how Nuffar Mundal manages, but it ought not to cost a rupee to weed a beegah.

3401. Then, are you content to go on sowing indigo?—Yes, if I get money, I shall continue sowing.

3402. Have you ever been a servant of the factory?—No.

3403. Have you ever appeared as a witness or plaintiff on behalf of Mr. Forlong?—No.

[Commission adjourned at 6 p. m.]

Tuesday, 17th July 1860.

PRESENT :

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C.S., President.

Members:—W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Reverend J. Sale; Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

MAURICE TWEEDIE, Esq., Loknathpore Factory, called in; and Examined on oath.

M. Tweedie,
Esq.
—
17 July
1860.

3404. President.] WILL you state in what districts or factories you have had experience in indigo planting?—For three and a half years in the Jessore district, Hazarapore concern; for four years in the Kishnaghur district, under the Bengal Indigo Company, and since October last, in Loknathpore, of which division I am now manager.

3405. Do you wish to file your answer to the circular of the Indigo Commission as part of your evidence?—Yes.

3406. When you went to Loknathpore in October, did you become aware of any dislike on the part of the ryots to indigo? Did that dislike increase as the sowing season drew near, and what difficulties have you experienced in effecting your sowings?—In the first two months after I joined there was not the slightest appearance of any dissatisfaction; the feeling after that gradually increased, and since the sowing season began I have experienced great difficulties in inducing the ryots to sow. Out of 10,000 beegahs nij and ryotti, I have sown only 3,800, and in quantity there is about 1,800 beegahs of nij-abad, which nij-abad I should have had great difficulty in completing had I not a large establishment belonging to the factory. Out of my ryotti cultivation of 8,000 beegahs, only 2,000 have been sown. In some cases entire villages have refused to sow; other villages have only partly sown. This has been to some extent brought about by concessions on my part; but I find when such concessions have been made, the sowings have been little more than nominal, as there has been little attention paid to the indigo since the sowings.

3407. To what do you attribute the refusal of the ryots to sow, and your difficulties?—I attribute it, originally, to the feeling said to have been shown by Government in the Baraset district, through Mr. Eden; added to this, I think the effect of the leading clauses of Act X., which was then just coming into play, are beginning to be known among the ryots, which ryots have been also incited by zemindars and mahajans to throw off their tie to the factory; I mean, incited by the former on account of his natural jealousy to Europeans and his desire to get a larger bonus from the planter, and by the mahajans on account of the opposition shown to him by the planter when he endeavours to screw too high a rate of interest out of the ryot. The ryots would be more easily prejudiced, as in the present state of the market I believe indigo does not pay the ryots unless great attention is paid to its cultivation, and owing to the universal desire to keep down the estimates, planters have been backward in increasing the rates of payment to suit the times; the effects, however, would never have been so general had the ryots not been led to believe that the putting down of indigo was an order of the Government, a belief which has been encouraged and strengthened, whether intentionally or not, I cannot say, by every action of Government, from the sanctioning of muddut peons to protect the ryots by Mr. Tottenham, to the removal of Mr. Drummond and the advent of Mr. Herschel; also by the issue of the parwana regarding the sowing of rice, dated the 19th April, which belief was fully confirmed by the arrival of Messrs. Bell and Davis, who have dismissed numbers of cases for breach of contract.

3408. Can you mention the names of any zemindar or mahajans who have especially instigated the ryots?—No, I am not aware of any one of them having done so openly; but the most apparent instance is in the case of the Joyrampore small talookdars, who are residents in the village close to Loknathpore.

3409. Do you not think, considering the unprofitableness of indigo to the ryots and the late rise in prices of products and of labour, that the same open dislike might have been manifested in any year from any accidental circumstance?—A dislike might have been manifested by them in any other year; but it would not have been carried to such an extent had not the ryots been under the belief that it was the wish of Government that indigo cultivation should be discontinued.

3410. Have you experienced any practical difficulty in the collection of rents?—Very much so; I have been perfectly unable to summon any ryots, and in those villages in which they have refused their rents I have been unable to collect my dues. The general zemindary management is under the management of Mr. Meares, and the statistics are included in Mr. Meares' statement. To collect these dues I have already had recourse to the courts; but owing to the immense amount of work which has been in the collector's hands as magistrate, until the last week or two, I have been unable to get decrees. I have brought suits both against ryots who have simply refused rent, not being cultivators of indigo, and against indigo ryots; I have now reason to believe that the work will proceed more speedily.

3411. Had you reason to believe that just before the parwanna of 19th April was issued, your ryots would come in and sow, as usual?—Owing to the most judicious order of Mr. Maclean, a few days previous to the issuing of the parwanna of the 19th, I had every reason to believe that the ryots at that time would be most willing to sow; this order would not have been issued by Mr. Maclean unless he was morally convinced of the propriety of it, and I believe that such was also the opinion of the Darogah who was there in charge of the thanna, and who was a man of well-known experience.

3412. How many suits for breach of contracts have you instituted this year, and with what result?—I have not the exact statistics; but I must have instituted about 200 of them, and I have a good many still yet to be instituted. The result was, that in the first cases I instituted before Mr. Maclean, I was given decrees against the parties named in the plaint; since then, Mr. Maclean, although he finished all the evidence and wrote his notes on them, did not pass any orders; this seemed owing to his fear of not acting according to the law, caused, no doubt, by the orders he had received; he knew the merits of the cases well, and, I am sure, was convinced of the liability of the ryots; he would neither, therefore, dismiss the cases nor pass an order in my favour, but kept them hanging on for weeks and weeks. At last Messrs. Bell and Davidson came; these cases fell into their hands, and with the exception of one solitary case, where the defendant had acknowledged his liability previously to Mr. Maclean, all the other cases were dismissed. Seeing this, I withdrew from court any cases that were still pending; other planters have done, and are doing the same. I may yet, however, institute other suits if I see any change in the working of the law.

3413. Will you state the kind of proof that you generally adduced?—I produced the factory rewa, or ryot's account, showing all the items charged against him last year, and the balance against his name; I also produced the purtunjat of this year, showing the cash advances and the amount of land to be cultivated, and besides these, the rohar, or factory cash books, showing the disbursement of the cash; I swore to these books themselves. As far as I could discover, the fault brought against these books was, that they were somewhat negligently kept, and that there were scratches in some of the pages. I produced no contracts on stamp paper, as there were none; but as the cash payments were made before me, I thought it better to go on the facts of the case. In one instance the objection was made to a suit brought against Panchu Jungli; the objection was, that the man Panchu had been dead for, they say, eight years, but he is represented by a man named Jungli; the name of the deceased Panchu was retained, to distinguish this Jungli from any other Jungli in the village. I have reason to believe that there is another Jungli, named Jitu, or some such name, in the village; I endeavoured to explain these circumstances at the time, but with no success. There was another case of a man named Raghunath Rai, against whom we brought a suit; I giving evidence, my gomashtha deposed generally that on account of so many beegahs Raghunath Rai had received so many rupees; Raghunath Rai next appeared, not having been present before, and denied having received the money. My gomashtha was re-examined, and said at once that he would not swear that Raghunath Rai had himself received the money, but that it was paid to Ardi Rai, a near relation, on his account. There was a great noise and confusion in the court at the time, but both myself and gomashtha wished to have the question put to the defendant on oath, whether he had received the money through Ardi Rai; but this was not done. These cases were dismissed, and some 17 or 18 others at the same time, for reasons I was unable to discover. I have not got copies of the decrees.

3414. In cases in which you were successful, had you any difficulty in realizing your decrees?—I cannot say I had much difficulty in the few cases in which I was successful.

3415. Mr. Sale.] When you stated that you swore to the books, did you mean that you swore to them as to their being the books of the factory, or to the correctness of the several items contained in them?—I swore that they were the factory books, and that to the best of my knowledge the items were correct. The cash payments I swore to having been correct, as having been all made in my presence.

3416. Then are we to understand that it has always been your practice at Loknathpore or elsewhere to see cash payments made in your presence?—I may say, as regards indigo advances, invariably so; and as regards other payments, such as for carts, boats, ploughs, &c., to the greatest extent that lay in my power.

3417. What means do you take to assure yourself that the sums you see paid to the ryots are correctly entered in the books?—A list of the names and the amounts of the cash payment is before me at the time the ryot receives his money. The cash book is written out according to the list, and compared by me, so that I have every reason to believe that they are correct.

3418. Have you any reason to believe that Mr. Maclean's hesitation regarding your cases arose from any difficulty he felt about the amount of damages to be given?—I believe Mr. Maclean to have felt great difficulty on this point, as before our papers could be made out according to one system of calculating damages, another order appeared, to have those damages calculated upon another principle. I have had equal difficulty during Mr. Davidson's time. When Messrs. Bell and Davidson first arrived, Mr. Forlong and myself went to them, and they impressed us most strongly that the amount of damages should be assessed according to one fixed principle. After a little discussion, this was arranged to the satisfaction of all parties; and in the first and only instance in which I gained a decree from Mr. Davidson, he seeing the party upon whom it fell, would have suffered severely, having given a large amount

M. Tweedie,
Esq.

17 July
1860.

M. Tweedie,
Esq.
—
17 July
1860.

amount of indigo in previous years; instead of awarding me according to my claim of 21 rupees per beegah, by the summary decision that amount was reduced to ten.

3419. You have stated that you had claimed 21 rupees, on what principle did you calculate your damages?—I beg to file some statements to show on what principles these damages were assessed. [Statements filed.]

3420. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Is not the value of stamp paper for shattas debited in the rokar or cash account?—It is so; and to this I attribute a good deal of the feeling of the stamps being charged to the ryots, as although debited in the rokar, the full amount is not always expended in the purchase of stamps.

3421. Did you pay 200 rupees to a Darogah by the desire of Mr. Meares; if so, please to state the object you had in view in so doing?—Such an expense was sanctioned. The object was to secure the Darogah's not behaving unjustly in any case where the factory might be concerned. Such a course, in some instances, is necessary; but in these days, the standard of Darogahs being improved, it is not so necessary.

3422. If a poor ryot has to contend for his just right with the factory, and if he is not to pay as the planters can, has he any chance of success in the Mofussil?—Probably not; but I should consider it the duty of the planter, in whose factory he is a ryot, to give him every kind of justice.

3423. President.] Do you wish to offer any statements regarding the depositions of two ryots of the Loknathpore Concern, Jamir Mundal and Dukhi Sheikh, especially with regard to answers: 1175 and 1194, and following?—With regard to 1175, the cutting of the bamboos is said to have taken place last season; I was not there at the time. For some time last year, owing to the illness and death of Mr. F. MacLagan, there was no European there; the greater part of the work devolved upon the head gomashta, who was a Joyrampore man. As to Jamir Mundal not going to the factory to settle his accounts, all I can say is that I have got a decree against him from Mr. Davidson; as regards Dukhi Sheikh, most of his complaints refers to last year, when I was not in Loknathpore. I deny keeping lattials, and the burning of the village was accidental, as proved by the investigation.

3424. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you any plan to suggest regarding the verification of contracts with the ryots?—As to the registration, I think the thing impossible; but to secure the two annas which is written for stamping in the ryot's name, being expended for that purpose, that hath-chittis on stamp paper should be issued by Government in a duplicate printed form. That these hath-chittis should be signed by two European witnesses at the time of the advances being made to the ryot. One half of the hath-chittis to remain with him, and the other with the factory. I will put in a detailed form regarding it, with particulars mentioned.

GEORGE RICHARD CLARKE, Esq., Manager of the Khalbolia Concern, District Nuddea, called in; and Examined on oath.

G. R.
Clarke, Esq.
—

3425. President.] WILL you state in what other districts and concerns you have had experience?—In Jessore, in the Ramnuggur concern; in Shahbad, in the Maharajgunge concern; in Kishnagur, in the Mulnath, Katgarra, and Khalbolia concerns.

3426. Do you wish to file your answers to the Commission's Circular, as part of your evidence?—I do.

3427. You have 14,000 beegahs of ryotti cultivation divided amongst 4,971 ryots; what proportion of this have you sown this year?—Ten thousand.

3428. Will you state the cause of this inability to complete the sowings, and the general feeling of the ryots this year?—The ryots of the Khalbolia concern were perfectly quiet and showed no disposition to quarrel with the factory, up to the middle of March; but about this time the Joyrampore ryots began spreading themselves over the district, inciting other ryots to break their contracts, and in fact to follow in the same wake as themselves. This system of evil advice was very largely backed and encouraged by a man named Brindabun Chunder Sircar, an old opponent of the Khalbolia concern.

3429. Did you apply either to the police or the magistracy in this difficulty, and with what success?—My first interview with Mr. Herschel was at Damurhuda, where I talked the matter over with him. He remarked at the time, "as your ryots have remained so quiet up to this date, I see no reason why they should break out now. I therefore will give you every assistance within my power." On the following day he accompanied me to a village called Mudra, and there spoke to the ryots, advising them to sow their indigo as usual. They accepted his advice, and did so. But other villages, nearly the whole of the Bogla factory, steadfastly refused to sow indigo as usual. I tried every mild means to induce them to do so, but failed.

3430. Then, on the whole, have you received a fair share of support from the magistrate and from his police?—I have. I have nothing to complain of with regard to the police.

3431. Can you mention the names of any of the Joyrampore ryots, and did you endeavour to oppose their proceedings?—I cannot mention their names, but I used every lawful means to arrest every one. I heard that was within my line, but as they took up their residence in disaffected villages, it was too difficult a task to accomplish.

3432. Then, do you ascribe your inability to complete your sowings chiefly to the instigating of the Joyrampore ryots, to the influence of Brindabun Sircar, or to any other cause?—I do. Brindabun Sircar kept an open cutcherry at Shibnibas, and any recusant ryot who chose to quarrel with the concern upon any plea whatsoever, could always obtain support, both in money and advice from him. Shibnibas is about four miles from Khalbolia.

3433. From whence do you derive your knowledge as to the above course taken by Brindabun Sircar?—From my servants, my ryots, and also from his own ryots, who have on more than one occasion called upon me and told me that they had been ordered to go into the station and put in a petition upon such and such a plea.

3434. Mr. Fergusson.] In your opinion, have the parwannas issued in this district had any, and what, effect upon the ryots, in inducing the ryots not to sow?—They decidedly have had an evil effect; issued as they were, almost contradicting each other. They kept the minds of the ryots in an excited, unsettled state. I would particularly instance the parwana of the 19th April, because in the early part of that month, Mr. Maclean told me that the Joyrampore ryots evinced a decided disposition to settle with the factory, but after the issue of that parwana they turned right round, and were, if anything, more opposed to the factory than ever.

not

3435. President.] Had you any cases for breach of contract this year, and if so, what was their result?—I have complained against about 250 ryots; in some instances several ryots were included in one plaint. I obtained decrees in almost every instance. The few cases I lost were owing to an informality in the entries in the books. Indigo planters have hitherto worked so completely with the good will of the ryots, that a certain laxity of system had crept into the form of keeping the accounts, which would not bear the severe test of a civil suit, but for all ordinary purposes of record, were amply sufficient for the satisfaction of both parties. I did not produce kabulyats, but relied on the factory books, and the cash advances made in the presence of an European.

3436. Were your cases decided by the principal sudder ameen, or by the magistrate?—By the magistrate. I have cases now pending before the sudder ameen; they are not decided. I appeared in each instance to swear to the cash advances in the Khalbolia division, and my assistant, Mr. Harvey, swore for the other division.

3437. Are different proofs required by the sudder ameen to that which was required by the magistrate?—They are in excess of the proofs required by the magistrate; the principal *sudder ameen*s start numerous small objections, which would never be thought of by the magistrate. As for instance, in 12 cases of mine in one village, after the cases had been fully proved, such as would have sufficed for the magistrates, the principal *sudder ameen*s allowed the defendant to select a nominee of their own to identify them, refusing my witness, which I had provided for the purpose. This nominee had been an old servant of the factory, and had left, refusing to work any more, and lived in an adjoining village.

3438. Are you aware of the changes in the system of indigo planting suggested to the Commission, and referred to by Mr. Larmour, Mr. Forlong, and others, when giving their evidence, for their opinion, and do you concur generally in the advisability of such changes?—I perfectly agree in the minor changes proposed, such as the abolition of stamp charges, carriage of indigo, and other little things of the same kind, such as the ryots being allowed to sell any seed produced upon their own lands at the market price whenever they please; but in the main change, as proposed by Mr. Forlong, namely, of the payment of two rupees per beegah as advances to the ryot under any circumstances, no balance to accrue upon this advance, but any excess of product over and above the value of the two rupees, to be paid in cash to the ryot: in the propriety of this I do not agree, as two rupees represents 12 bundles of indigo, and this is rather above an average in the whole concern, therefore the ryot being paid in full, has no inducement to pay that proper attention to the cultivation and care of that crop which he would have under the present system.

3439. Do you think it would not answer if the advances were made when the ryot had actually ploughed the land and sown the indigo, i.e. in the month of March or April?—In theory it would suit admirably, but not in practice; because a planter has no hold on the ryots until after the advance has been made, as was palpably shown by Act XI. of the present year, that the sole claim a planter possessed against land or ryot was the cash advance.

3440. Mr. Fergusson.] Do not the Government make an advance for the opium cultivation upon making the agreement, and before any cultivation commences?—They do, long before any cultivation, to enable the ryot to prepare his land for the reception of poppy seed.

3441. President.] But would it not be practicable to get the ryot to sign his agreement in December, and not to give him his cash until he had got the land ready and sown it in March or April?—I think not, because the ryot would strongly object to come into the factory merely to make up his account, the state of which the majority of them know to four annas already. Besides, a rupee is of more value to a ryot in December than a rupee eight annas in March, because the former is the time of the heavy rent collections, when there is scarcely any money circulating in the Mofussil. The latter is a time of the year when all the cold weather crops are being paid for, and money is being very extensively circulated in the Mofussil.

3442. Mr. Fergusson.] From your experience, do you consider that the ryots in Shahabad derive more advantage from indigo than the ryots in Kishnagur, and have the former ever shown any dislike to the cultivation of indigo more than the latter?—In the Maharajgunge concern there was very little ryotti sown, and that wholly upon poppy lands, which being capable of irrigation, secures a crop to the Shahabad ryots, which a Bengal ryot has no means of securing. But in the neighbouring concerns, ryotti was cultivated more extensively, and during my five years' experience, I never heard a grumble against indigo from any ryot in the district; and nothing that I saw during all those years would lead me to suppose that it was more profitable to the Shahabad than to the Bengal ryot. This system is pretty much the same, except that indigo is occasionally sold by weight, a bundle being calculated to two maunds.

3443. With reference to the difference, in the growth of plant from the country seed sown in Kishnagur, and the up-country seed sown in Shahabad, do you think that it would be practicable to introduce the practice of weighing plant in Kishnagur?—I do not, because the woody portion of the desi plant, from which no produce is obtained, exceeds in weight the leafy portion from which the dye is obtained; whereas the up-country has a large quantity of leaf on a very delicate stalk; besides the cultivation in Bengal factories is more extensive than in Shahabad, and the delay in weighing the plant, would, I think, materially interfere with the manufacturing process.

3444. President.] Could you not take a fair average of weight of a number of bundles?—Of course it could be done, but the weight varies considerably according to the state of the atmosphere, and Bengal being so much damper a climate than the Upper Provinces, the latent moisture of the plant would, I think, far exceed what it does there; and besides, after 10 years' experience

G. R.
Clarke, Esq.

17 July
1860.

G. R.
Clarke, Esq.
—
17 July
1860.

perience in Bengal, I have never heard very much objection from the ryots on the whole against the measurement of the Bengal Company's concerns.

3445. Mr. Sale.] You spoke of some concerns in Shahabad in which ryotti cultivation is carried on; do not the ryots avail themselves of irrigation?—Only on poppy land, because there the machinery for irrigation already exists, whereas in others it would have to be created for the occasion at a very large expense, and it can only be located on certain spots. A well must be considerably higher than the ground it is intended to irrigate.

3446. Then is it your opinion that the ryots generally, if left to themselves, will willingly continue to cultivate a crop so precarious as indigo, and requiring so much care in its cultivation, when the average value of crop is rather less than two rupees a beegah?—I feel quite certain that an ilaka ryot untampered with will always sow a small quantity of indigo in proportion to his holding to please his zemindar, although he may not gain much profit by it. Such is the feudal feeling of a ryot towards his zemindar, that I am sure if left to themselves the ryots will return to the old good understanding which has existed between them and the factory for near a century. A zemindar stands towards a ryot in place of law and government; he, in fact, is the only visible and tangible power with which the ryot in his ordinary daily business daily comes in contact; it is therefore well worth his while to sow a few beegahs of any crop to please his zemindar, although it may not be immediately profitable to him.

3447. President.] Have you found any practical inconvenience from any part of Act X. of 1859?—I don't think Act X. has properly come into play in the district; I myself have never had occasion to use it up to date, but I think that the broad principles of the Act are opposed to the institutions of the country; it is an European law introduced into an Asiatic country, especially section II., which abrogates Regulation XXXV., of 1795, which was passed to enable the zemindar to collect his rents with the like promptitude that the Government binds him to pay them. The ryots of Bengal, as a mass, are poor, and not 50 per cent. of them can pay these from their resources; it is therefore indispensably necessary that a zemindar should possess a certain power to coerce a ryot, in order to oblige him to procure that rent from any place he may think proper from his mahajan or otherwise. Without this power of external pressure a poor ryot can hardly be expected to pay up with that promptitude which is necessary, seeing that a delay of a few hours in the payment of the sudder rents of the estates will endanger the possession of the property.

3448. Are you aware that the power abrogated by section XI. used to be occasionally much abused; how would you propose to prevent that abuse?—I believe the power spoken of has been often abused by unscrupulous zemindars and others, like any other power. I see no possibility of passing laws which, as a whole, would suit individual characters.

3449. Mr. Fergusson.] Are you now experiencing difficulty in procuring coolies and carriage for your manufacturing, and do you anticipate difficulties in the arrangements for the cultivation for the ensuing year, and do you think that a summary law to compel fulfilment of future voluntary contracts by penalties will be necessary?—I have experienced slight difficulty in procuring coolies, to whom I have had to pay higher salaries than we used to pay before. I am now paying them four rupees a month. In one or two instances I experienced annoyance from petty talookdars, owners of single villages, who set the coolies up not to work for the factory. I do not anticipate much difficulty in making my indigo contracts in my ilaka villages next year, provided there are no more parwannas issued, and that the ryots are really and truly left to themselves without any extraneous evil influence being brought to bear upon them; but at the same time I consider a summary criminal law for breach of contract indispensably necessary, and an equal boon to both planter and ryot, as it would at once put it out of the ryot's head that he had any chance of evading a just contract with impunity.

3450. President.] Would it not tend to make the ryot more willing to sow if the indigo beegah were not larger than the Government beegah, or at least not larger than the local zemindary beegah?—I don't think any great objection can be raised to the size of the indigo beegah. There are few things in Bengal that vary so much as weights and measures. Were we to take the pergunnah beegah it would be exceedingly inconvenient to us, as the area of the beegah varies in each pergunnah, whereas an indigo factory has often lands in three or four pergunnahs, which would necessitate as many standards as there are pergunnahs. Twenty-one thousand five hundred and eleven square feet is the current indigo beegah of the Nuddea district. It has been recommended to adopt the Government standard of 14,400 square feet, but I think it would end in a year or two by the ryot sowing as many more Government beegahs as would be required to raise the general cultivation to the indigo beegah. Any difference in produce from the smaller area of the land would certainly fall upon the ryot.

3451. Mr. Sale.] But is not the ryot's complaint in part this, that he pays rent at one standard, and cultivates indigo at another?—Of course it is, and if he buys rice in one bazar he will buy it at one standard; if he has to sell it in another bazar he might have to sell it at a different standard.

3452. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you find that the objection to appearing in courts, and having to take oaths, interferes with your employment of a class of more respectable natives?—In the middle class of servants it decidedly does. Our higher servants are seldom, if ever, called upon to give their oaths, but the class below them have often been known to give up their situation and sit idle in their houses, rather than remain in an employment with the chance of being obliged to appear in court and take an oath. The same individual, if allowed to give his evidence upon a simple affirmation, which would be equally as binding upon him, would state the truth to the best of his knowledge without the slightest hesitation.

GRISH CHUNDER BOSE, First-Class Darogah of the Kotwalli Thannah of Zilla Nuddea, called in; and Examined on oath.

3453. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] WHAT opportunities have you had of seeing the working of the indigo system, and where have you been appointed during the last year?—I have been a police darogah since September 1855 in this district, and have done service in almost all indigo thannahs; I have had daily intercourse with indigo ryots, and intimacy and acquaintance with the amla of almost all the factories, and most of the European planters in the district. My superiors, the magistrates of Nuddea, have entrusted me with the Mofussil investigations, since the last six years, of all intricate and heavy police cases, whether connected with zemindars or planters in this district. During a portion of last year I was in Thannah Hanskali, then at Kotwali, and then, during the indigo crisis, in Damurhuda and Hardi. I have returned to the Kotwali only 15 days ago.

3454. To what cause do you attribute the present dislike of the ryots to indigo, and since when has there been a disposition to resist the planters existing in the district, or in any other part of the country?—In my knowledge this dislike has been existing among the ryots for a long time, i. e. more than five years. The cause is, that indigo is not profitable to the ryots, and they are not noted as free agents in the transactions with planters.

3455. Mr. Sale.] In what particular parts of the district have you seen the dislike openly manifested during the last five years?—Openly in Thanna Hanskali during the last two years, but generally all over the district, with the exception of factories on the banks of the Bhagirutti, such as Mr. Savi's and Mr. Dombal's, because their cultivation is chiefly nij-abad, and on chur lands.

3456. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] As a police officer, what number of cases of affrays, arson, plunder of villages, and kidnapping have you had to investigate during the last three years?—I cannot really tell the number of them, but I can enumerate some of them. There was an affray between the people of Mr. Gow Smith, of the Ruttonpore factory, belonging to Mr. Hills, and the talookdars of Shostia, for the village of Hardipore. In this case the planters were the aggressors, according to my report, but the magistrate punished both sides; also the village of Hanskali Govindpore was plundered by Mr. White's men; in this case Mr. White was fined, I think, 300 rupees, and his men were imprisoned, I think, for six months. As also Mr. Tripp's well known cases, who was tried and punished; as also the plunder of houses in Pora Gatchia; an assault on the Naib Darogah of Thanna Hurra, by Mr. White's men, in a village close to the Bansberria Factory. In this case one of Mr. White's men was imprisoned, but was released on appeal. Then there is another case of assault on the police by the Khalbolia factory servants, when they went to arrest some men who had unlawfully assembled. This was near Kissengunge. There was also the abduction of some cattle in Nowada Kumarpore, by the people of the Bajinghat Factory. In another instance, there was a case of abduction of cattle, with homicide, by the gomashta of the Chittrosal Factory. In this last case, the principal defendant was imprisoned for five years. I also investigated the cattle abduction case alluded to by the Rev. Mr. Schurr in his evidence.

3457. Judging from the number of cases you had to investigate between planter and ryots or zemindars, to what party do you attach the most criminality?—Certainly to the factory.

3458. As a police officer, did you ever meet with any opposition from the factory in investigating cases on the spot, or did you receive any assistance from them?—Both. In cases in which planters were defendants, they always took care to obstruct enquiry into the truth. In one case particularly, one of suspicious death, in which neither the factory servants nor the planter himself was concerned, I met with great opposition from the Khalbolia and Dowlutgunge factory servants, because, as I afterwards understood, the defendants in this case had bribed the factory servants to screen them. The superintendent of the factory, Mr. Roberts, tried his best to co-operate with me in finding out the particulars of the case, but his amla neutralized his efforts. Mr. Tripp, in the abduction case before alluded to, said he would use twelve loaded barrels before he would allow a police officer to come into his house. He allowed me, however, to go into one of his rooms and speak to him, but did not allow any search to be made.

3459. Mr. Fergusson.] How far is Bansberria from the Sudder station, and from its nearness, must not every offence committed by Mr. White and his servants become readily known?—Bansberria is about six miles from this place, but it is under the Hanskali Thanna, which is also six miles from Bansberria. Every occurrence that takes place at Bansberria comes to the notice of the magistrate through the darogah of Hanskali.

3460. Did not Mr. White lose the ijara of Govindpore Hanskali, about the time you mention, and were not the ryots consequently enabled to evade their engagements to sow indigo, and had Mr. White any other remedy than a civil suit?—I am not aware whether Mr. White has lost the ijara, but about the time mentioned, I understood that he had some sort of interest in the village, for when Mr. Tottenham went to satisfy himself with his own eyes, as to the truth of the Govindpore plunder case, I remember to have heard Mr. William White ask Mr. Tottenham to permit him to have some muddud burhundazes, on the plea that Mr. White's men could not realise rents from the ryots. Mr. Tottenham did not grant this request then.

3461. President.] During the recent crisis, what has been the conduct of the police in general; some of the planters have charged them with partiality and corruption; have you anything to state on that point?—The village chowkidars certainly sided with the ryots, but the regular police did not, beyond giving due and legal protection to both parties.

3462. Were not every legitimate means taken by the authorities to induce the ryots to sow, pointing out to them the consequences of refusal?—Yes, not only the magistrates, but all the police, as far as my observation went, followed strictly the example of the magistrate in advising the ryots to sow indigo. So much so, that I believe it was the conviction of the ryots at the

G. C. Bose.

17 July
1860.

G. C. Bose.

17 July
1860.

time that the sympathy of the police was all on behalf of the planters. I myself brought round by conciliation a number of villages for Mr. Forlong, and tried my best with the Alukdia ryots of the Peerpore concern.

3463. Mr. Fergusson.] Was not the erroneous copy of Mr. Herschel's parwanna of 19th April, addressed to you; and, notwithstanding its manifest discrepancy, did you not hurry out to make it public, in the sense unfavourable to the planters?—Yes, the parwanna was directed to me as darogah of Damurhuda, but the parwanna itself had nothing to do with the circumstance of my issuing a countermand of Mr. Maclean's order of the 17th. On the 17th, Mr. Maclean issued his parwanna prohibiting rice being sown on such lands as were pointed out by the factory as indigo lands. In order to execute that parwanna properly, I went the round of nearly all Mr. Meares's factories in Thanna Damurhuda. The factory gomashta claimed all the village early rice lands belonging to their respective factories, and not being empowered with discretionary powers, I was obliged to prohibit the cultivation of early rice at once. When I returned to Mr. Maclean, I believe on the morning of the 20th, he told me that he had been ordered by Mr. Herschel to withdraw his order of the 17th. He told me to send for the sheristadar to write out a parwanna to that effect, and in consequence of that order from Mr. Maclean, I issued that hookum-nama.

3464. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] It is stated by some of the planters that Mr. Maclean's parwanna of the 17th April would have conciliated the ryots, but for Mr. Herschel's parwanna of the 19th?—It was the general belief of course at the time, but I saw no signs of the ryots coming round. No ryot ever asked me during the two days that I published that parwanna, to use my influence in bringing about an amicable settlement with the planters.

3465. Do you know of any police officer being dismissed, suspended, or transferred for not siding with the planters or ryots within the last five years?—During the last crisis, Kailas Chunder, darogah of Thanna Damurhuda, was transferred to Thanna Hardi. I understood it was on account of his not having exerted himself in some cases connected with Mr. Meares's concern.

SRI HARI RAI, residence Chundipore, Thanna Damurhuda, not far from the Factories of Nischindipore, Loknathpore, and Khalbolia, called in; and Examined on oath.

S. H. Rai.

3472. President.] You have some estates in this part of the country, have you ever given any putnis and ijaras to planters?—I have seven villages which pay revenue of 1,001 rupees. I have also putnis of not more than 2,500 rupees. I have given a lease of a dur-putni to the Nischindipore factory, and also given an ijara of a collectory talook in Kapasdunga to the same factory. The Khalbolia concern had a lease of Dihi-Mudna from the raja. This I got the putni of two years ago from the raja. Mr. Larmour in the station here tried to deter me from taking the putni, asking me if I had not heard how he had put down Pran Kisto Pal, of Latoodaha and the Goatolli village, in the Halda pergunna, Katgarra concern. I however was not deterred, and got the putni. I have not got actual possession, but I have received the rents from the ijaradar, Mr. Roberts. Mr. Clarke, the present manager, has also paid me some instalments. The lease has 3466. President.] Do you think that next year the ryots will come round?—No, I do not think so; I think that as soon as they have cut the plant, they will petition the magistrate that they will take no more advances. I know that the ryots have stated that the late Act was passed on the plea that they have taken advances. Next year they will, however, act in such a manner that neither the Government nor the planters will have any hold on them.

3467. Mr. Sale.] You stated that the ryots were not treated as free agents, will you be good enough to state what you mean by that?—The planters do just as they like with the ryots. The ryots have no voice in their transactions with the planters; and it is my belief that the universal cry which had been set up by the ryots against the factory is not without foundation.

3468. Mr. Fergusson.] Had they not always had as much voice before as they have now, or in what is the difference?—I cannot speak of former years; my experience extends so far as I have been Darogah of this district.

3469. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] A ryot has stated in his evidence that some of the planters have a kind of leather with which they beat the ryots, have you ever seen such instruments?—Yes; I beg to produce one which I procured at the Joyrampore factory lately. I saw similar instruments at Katchikatta and Loknathpore, hanging up before the naib's cutcherry, but I could not capture them.

3470. What is the general character of the dewans, gomashtas, and amins, and other officials of the factory?—With the exception of Mr. Savi's gomashta, Tinkaori Haldar, and Mr. Forlong's naib, Hurris Mookerjee, I have not a high opinion of the class, nor is a high opinion generally entertained about them.

3471. Will you state the general character of the police of this district, including all grades: darogahs, naib darogahs, mohurrirs, jemadars, and burkundazes?—The burkundazes are all corrupt, so are the jemadars. I know of some naib darogahs who are very honest; and out of 16 darogahs in this district, there are only six who do not take bribes, and would not take it under any circumstances.

still three years to run. Also I had purchased at a decree in execution of a civil court, an eight-anna share of Dihi-Shunkurchunder, and got possession. On sending people to collect rents, they were told to give the lease to the factory, because they had ryots who grew indigo thereon. I wrote to Mr. Meares about this; he insisted on having an ijara. No formal documents were exchanged. I got a habulyat from his naib, and now Mr. Meares has been dispossessed by the former proprietor, but I have sued him under Act X., and got my rights.

3473. Have you any substantial objections to giving leases or putnis to factories?—I am a zemindar of moderate substance. I like to keep a few ryots and my property in my own hands. I have no objections myself, but I don't like indigo, as it is bad for my ryots on account of the general oppression.

3474. With exceptions to the instances mentioned tioned, have you had any disputes with planters?—Ten years ago I had a dispute with the Loknathpore concern, who wanted a lease of it. Some cattle and men were carried off. I persisted, and did not give the lease, and influence was used over Noukaori Sandial, the dewan of the factory, in my favour.

3475. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you live on your zemindary, and are you on friendly terms with Mr. Forlong?—Yes; and I am on friendly terms with Mr. Forlong. But there is a coolness between myself and the manager of Khalbolia, and I don't think the manager of Loknathpore likes me, because he has had to sue my ryots for breach of contract.

3476. President.] Were you ever applied to on the part of the factory, to use your influence with your ryots to induce them to sow?—Yes, I was applied to by Kali Sandial, naib of Loknathpore, to persuade the ryots of Basto to sow, and I went to the village and used all my influence, pointing out the heavy penalties; they said they would sow if the arrangement was assimilated to that of Dauli and Chundipore, under the management of Mr. Forlong; that is, three-fourths of land under advances should be cultivated, and one-fourth given up; and that the standard of measurement should be the zemindary beegah, which is less than that of indigo. But as the factory people never came to the village, the matter was dropt, and the suit against that village has been withdrawn.

3477. Mr. Fergusson.] Are you not a mahajan, and lend money and rice, and has Mr. Forlong ever interfered with such operations?—Mr. Forlong has not, but his amla have; but on making it known to him, I have always got redress. But Mr. Roberts, of Khalbolia, has interfered. I got a decree against one Selim Biswas for nearly 300 rupees on a bond, and had attached his property and arrested him. Mr. Roberts was very angry, because I took hold of one of his indigo ryots, and laid hold of the gomashia who looks after my mercantile business, and put him into the godown. I did not complain, but I got a letter of recommendation from Mr. Forlong, and got him released. He was confined two days.

3478. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] What do you think will be the course taken by the ryots in the ensuing season in the matter of indigo?—Judging from the present feeling of the ryots around me, seven-eighths of the ryots will not take advances for next year.

3479. If a new arrangement should be entered into, by which the ryot will not have to pay for stamp, seed, or carting, and if he shall get a liberal price without deduction from the amla, or oppression, do you think they will consent to sow?—Some of the ryots have told me that even if this were done, things would get round to the old custom in time.

3480. Mr. Fergusson.] Do not you lose money every year by the ryots not paying up their debts?—Yes, some of the ryots don't pay up, and some abandon their houses and run away; sometimes they take away part of their crops.

3481. What rate of interest do you charge on loans, money, and in kind?—On rice, 25 to 50 per cent.; and those who take rice and also money, pay two pice on the rupee a month; and those who come only for money, have to give two rupees on the hundred per month, or 24 per cent. per year.

3482. President.] Is it not the case that when the ryot borrows from you in kind, the bazar rates are very high, and when he pays you they are lower, owing to the influx of fresh grain?—Yes. There may be a difference of four annas in the rupee owing to this cause.

3483. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] If a ryot is allowed to cultivate all his lands with rice and other crops of his own liking, such as oil seeds, chillies, long pepper, sugar-cane, &c. &c., would he not be able to pay off his mahajan's debt in a year or two?—I think he might.

[Commission adjourned at 6.30 P.M.]

Wednesday, 18th July 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C. S., President.

Members:—W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Reverend J. Sale; Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

DANIEL JAMES MCNEILE, Esq., Joint Magistrate and Deputy Collector in charge of the Sub-division of Bongong, called in; and Examined on oath.

3484. President.] WILL you state at what time you took charge of the Subdivision of Bongong; and what was then, and has since been, the feeling of the ryots as regards the cultivation of indigo?—I took charge of the subdivision of Bongong in the last week of last March. Immediately after my arrival there, some disturbances took place in a few villages, the ryots of which cultivated for the Katgarra concern. The excitement, as far as I know, was confined to three sets of villages in the Katgarra concern. From the day that I took charge, I have had no complaint connected with indigo brought in my court against, or by any of the ryots cultivating for the Mulnath concern. The first disturbance took place in a set of villages close to the Hilsamari Factory, about six miles north of Katgarra. Narainpore and Barakhanpore were the two principal villages. All I know of the origin of that excitement is, that there was a report that the ryots had been instigated by some emissaries from the neighbouring thanna of Dowlutgunge; but I never heard the names of any of the emissaries, nor had 1860.

S. H. Rai.

17 July

D. J.
McNeile,
Esq.

18 July 1860.

D. J.
M'Neile,
Esq.

18 July
1860.

I any means of testing the truth of the report. The objection was to sow, but the excitement broke out in an attack upon the police of the Bagdah Thanna. That case has already been reported to the Government. I believe that all or nearly all the ryots of those villages, have since sown their indigo, and to the best of my recollection, no case of breach of contract has been brought against any of them in my court.

3485. Were suits for breach of contract instituted against many ryots of the Katgarra concern, and if so, with what result?—The whole number of ryots sued before me this season for breach of contract, did not, I think, exceed 200. I believe that every case was decreed to the planter on the evidence of the factory books, and especially on the verbal evidence of Mr. Cockshott, the manager of the Katgarra concern, that he had with his own hands paid the cash advances to the ryots whom he sued, i. e., the money was paid in his presence, and it was handed to each ryot; he marked off the particular entry in the Puttanjat. No written engagements were produced, the ryots being ilaka ryots. The particular point of the case was cash or no cash.

3486. Did not Mr. Herschel visit the subdivision of Bongong very shortly before you took charge of it, and what do you consider to have been the effect of that visit?—He visited Bongong about 10 days or a fortnight before I joined; and I ascribe the quietness of the Mulnath concern greatly to the fact of his having summarily punished some persons who assaulted Mr. Campbell, the assistant in charge of the Joypore Factory. I heard from himself that he punished those men.

3487. Do you know whether Mr. Herschel used his personal influence in Mulnath to quiet the excitement of the ryots?—I believe that he spoke at some length to the ryots, but I have never heard what he said to them.

3488. Will you state the nature of the disturbances which took place in the other two sets of villages?—About a week after the disturbance in Narainpore, two or three cases of tumultuous assault upon the servants of the Katgarra factory and upon ryots who had taken seed from that factory, took place in the villages of Jadubpore, Barabarri, Doharria, and other villages in the immediate neighbourhood of the Katgarra factory. The excitement in that part continued for upwards of a month. On at least two occasions, Mr. Larmour was obliged to ride away from a village where he had been forcibly resisted. Within a few days after the first of these cases, a set of seven villages, about nine miles from Katgarra, suddenly ploughed up the greater portion of the indigo which they had sown a week or a fortnight before; and I was myself forcibly resisted in making an arrest in these villages.

3489. Mr. Fergusson.] Did you hear that it was the general belief among the ryots that the Government wished to discontinue the cultivation of indigo?—The ryots have told me themselves two or three times, that they had heard that it was the Government order that they should sow no more indigo.

3490. Mr. Sale.] Whilst you were engaged in investigating the cases which occurred near the Hilsamari factory, did you hear anything which induced you to believe that the disputes which have been going on for the last four years between the agents of the Bengal Indigo Company and the gantidars and lakhrajidars of that neighbourhood, had anything to do with the excitement which you mention?—No. I have heard no such report.

3491. President.] Is it not within your knowledge that during the present season Mr. Herschel has devoted all his time and energy to his double office, beginning early in the morning and leaving off late after dusk?—During the last two months, to my knowledge, he has been indefatigable in the discharge of his duties, often going to office before breakfast, and frequently returning after dark.

3492. Has he not always been accessible to every planter who has come into the station on business?—Yes, many planters have called and have been received by him on business at any hour.

ADAM HUME SMITH, Esq., Mohutpore Division of the Bansberria Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

A. H.
Smith, Esq.

3493. President.] WHAT factory are you in charge of?—I am now in charge of the Mohutpore division of the Bansberria concern.

3494. Have you any information to give as to the interference of zemindars of your cultivation?—Yes. In October last, when arranging for the sowings as usual, I experienced considerable difficulty, and Mr. Maling, a deputy magistrate of this district, having come out, inquired into the matter. The ryots told him that their zemindar, Baboo Pran Kisto Pal, had forbidden them to sow under penalty of being fined 25 rupees each. He took depositions to that effect in my presence on the spot from the ryots. On reporting this to Mr. Tottenham, the magistrate, he ordered recognizances to be taken from Pran Kisto Pal and his son, Madhu Pal. I proceed now to give a certified copy of Mr. Tottenham's order filed on the subject. This, however, was reversed on appeal to the judge. The ryots since then have not sown. Besides Pran Kisto Pal and Madhu Pal, Madhusudun Roy, and Kisto Chunder Bose, and Surindurnath Roy, of Sonadanga, have interfered in the same way.

3495. Are you experiencing any difficulties in obtaining labour, &c., for your manufacturing?—Yes, the coolies after taking advances, after having worked two days, refused to continue to work, being, I am informed and having reason to believe, forbidden to do so by Pran Kisto Pal. I am now proceeding against the coolies in court, but in meantime I am working my factory by coolies obtained from the villages.

3496. Mr. Fergusson.] What reason is there for Pran Kisto Pal opposing the factory?—I beg to refer you to the Blue Book, pages 289 and 290, where the causes of the quarrel are detailed.

ALEXANDER TAYLOR, Esq., Manager of the Peerpore Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

3497. Mr. Fergusson.] WHAT indigo factory are you now in charge of?—The Peerpore division of the Nischindipore concern, where I have been for nearly seven years.

3498. Have you had any occasion to institute cases of breach of contract, and with what result?—I have instituted upwards of 300 cases. In all that came before Messrs. Betts and Maclean, I think, with the exception of one where a cash advance had not been received, I was successful, and obtained decrees. Since Messrs. Bell and Davidson took charge the result has been precisely contrary, all fresh cases brought before them having been dismissed.

3499. Can you give any explanation of these different results?—In all cases I tendered a statement made at the time of the amount of cash paid as advance to each ryot, and then signed by myself. I was so particular that when another man was authorised to receive the advance I put his name down also. I also swore to the cash having been paid in my presence, and in almost every instance was able to identify the ryot. This was supported by the evidence of the gomashita, of the mohurrir, or the amin of the *dih*i, and by the tahidgirs. On cross-examination the tahidgirs in some instances varied in their statements from what I myself and my servants had said, and this Mr. Bell considered to be fatal. This examination was conducted after I had left the court, and on matters which they, the lowest class of servants, would not be likely to have knowledge; they were only called to identify the defendants. Mr. Bell advised me to withdraw all my cases, telling me that the proof he required in these, which he considered civil suits, was different from that in a "Foujdari" complaint; I have, therefore, taken steps to withdraw them all. I have brought the rewah (that is the ryot's accounts with the factory, from which the Puttanjat is afterwards made up) and produce them. I could not get the statements previously referred to from the court, although I applied for them. I should also mention that Mr. Bell objected to the kabulyats put in, the witnesses having in some instances varied in their statements as to the time of the execution.

3500. Where did you first perceive any symptoms of dissatisfaction among your ryots?—On the inroad of the Taltolla and Chuadanga ryots into the villages of the Peerpore factory, on the 29th of February last. My ryots joined them, and came in a tumultuous body within quarter of a mile of my factory, where they assumed a threatening aspect. Since then, though a few of them have promised to sow, they have been intimidated and prevented doing so by the other villagers, and few, indeed, have sown.

3501. During the time you have been at Peerpore had you ever any case of any kind before the magistrate's court, or any complaint made to the magistrate against you?—No, not a single instance.

3502. President.] Of what nature are the statements filed in these cases; were they books or were they sheets of paper?—They were sheets of paper tacked together. These statements were scored off at the time the advances were made.

3503. Did you at the time affix your signature to each sheet?—Not to each sheet in every case, but to the total, when the villager was paid up. As each man was paid off I made a dash with the pen opposite his name. (The books were produced and inspected.)

3504. Did the principal Sudder Ameens indicate to you the line of evidence they required to satisfy them?—They required cumulative proofs. I understood by this term that they wanted something more than my evidence alone. They did not think the testimony of my factory servants went far enough.

JAMES FORLONG, Esq., Nischindipore Concern; Examination resumed.

3505. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you wish to make any statement respecting the Beerpore cases, in which the servants of the factory are accused of perjury and uttering forged documents?—Beerpore is an out-factory of the Hurra concern, distant about three miles from Hurra, and was under the charge of a gomashita, who died last January. The Hurra concern consists of Hurra, Beerpore, and Chanderghat factories, which are under the management of Mr. A. Saubolle. The Beerpore cultivation is chiefly beilaka, and the ryots there were among the first to show dissatisfaction about the beginning of the October sowings, instigated to do so by their talookdar, Baboo Ram Nidhi Chatterjee. With reference to the remarks made by the magistrate on the cases for breach of contract brought before him, and the comments of the Commissioner, which I understand were circulated to all the officials in the district, I produce a certified extract from the Hurra cash-book, showing the sums realised at Beerpore in September last on account of rents, and the cash sent from Hurra to Beerpore. I also produce the rough cash-book kept at Beerpore, showing the receipt of these sums, and their disbursement in advances to ryots, and otherwise. These items form the first entries in the new cash-book, which in this and all other factories is opened on the 1st of October of each season, being previously kept in rough. The Puttanjat which the magistrate remarks upon as looking new, must be so, because it is never used except to enter in it a short statement of the cash paid to, and the cultivation agreed on by each ryot. It may not be necessary to refer to it more than once or twice during the season, and after the ryot's engagements are registered in it nothing more is written in it. With regard to the remarks made by the magistrate as to the stamps, only few kabulyats have hitherto been taken, and those chiefly from beilaka ryots. At that season the stamp vendor's offices were shut, owing to the holidays, and stamps were purchased wherever they could be, which is an every-day occurrence. With reference to the burning of the Beerpore factory bungalow, I have made every possible inquiry, and am quite satisfied that it was done by the Beerpore villagers, and not by the factory people. I cannot imagine it to be possible that such a thing could be done without Mr. Saubolle or I being

A. Taylor,
Esq.

18 July
1866.

J. Forlong,
Esq.

J. Forlong,
Esq.

18 July
1860.

able to gain some information about it. I am glad to understand that the magistrate has sent up these cases to the sessions judge. I also produce the Beerpore factory books for the preceding four years, showing the accounts of the ryots who were complained against, and who denied ever having sown indigo to the magistrate. These accounts are mixed up with the other ryots' accounts of this factory, upwards of seven hundred and sixty-one (761) in number.

3506. President.] Did you endeavour to make all this clear to the magistrate?—I did not know anything about the breach of contract cases until they were decided by the magistrate; and as to the case of house-burning, Mr. Saubolle reported the same to me instantly after it occurred, but as he was manager of the Hurra concern, I left him, as usual, to take the proper steps, in the way of bringing the matter fully to the notice of the magistrate.

3507. Mr. Fergusson.] When you were out with Mr. Herschel in March, did you offer to him to make any concessions to the ryots, that he thought fair and reasonable, and which he thought likely to restore harmony?—On the morning of the 15th of March, I called on Mr. Herschel at his tent in the Joyrampore village, and had much conversation with him about the state of the district. I said to him, that I placed myself entirely in his hands, and that I would carry through any measure of concession to the ryots which he thought proper, no matter to what extent, and without an instant's hesitation. He replied, that he could not make any suggestions to me, for from everything he had heard and known, my conduct had been so conciliatory and just to the people, that he could not suggest anything that I had not already done. On the 17th of March, I again went to see Mr. Herschel at his tent, then pitched in the village of Chuadanga, and on that day the ryots began, for the first time, to assume a very clamorous and excited attitude in the presence of both Mr. Herschel and Mr. Maclean, and the ryots of three different villages belonging to the Pepore factory, who upon that day went to present a razinamah, stating their desire to sow indigo as usual, were hustled out of the presence of the magistrate by the other ryots around the tent. On the 19th March, I rode with Mr. Herschel and Mr. Maclean to the village of Chetla, where they pitched their tent. During the ride, Mr. Herschel expressed himself much pleased with the comfort everywhere apparent in the villages. On the afternoon of that day, I went again to the tent, and when within 200 or 300 yards of it, I heard such a noise, that I was afraid that some serious outbreak had taken place. On coming up close to the tent, I found some 60 or 70 ryots greatly excited, and it turned out, they had been beaten by the other ryots near the tent, for having presented a petition, showing their goodwill to the factory. After much difficulty I got them to return with me to the tent, where I found Mr. Herschel had just begun to read the Lieutenant Governor's proclamation to the ryots. I stood in the crowd, when suddenly Mr. Herschel came to me and said that I must retire. I replied, that I had the best possible reason to be present, and thought there was no occasion to do so. He ordered me a second time to retire, and I still declined. He then said, "But you must and you shall retire, because the tumult around me is so great, that I won't be responsible for anything that may occur." Upon this, I stepped a little back, and stood amidst the crowd; I never received one disrespectful look or word from any of them. Mr. Herschel thought that there was going to be an outbreak among the ryots, but neither myself nor any of the gentlemen around me, thought that there was any indication of it. Mr. Herschel's timidity upon that occasion, when surrounded by a clamorous mob, as he himself acknowledged to me, had a very bad effect upon that neighbourhood, discouraging all those well affected to the factories, and additionally exciting those who were ill disposed.

3508. Mr. Sale.] During your long residence in this district, have you observed any improvement in the social condition of the people generally?—Yes, I have noticed a very great degree of improvement in the comforts of the people, and the houses of the ryots everywhere, which indicates a degree of comfort that was almost unknown when I first came to Kishnagur; besides this, there is really no poor class among the villagers now, all being more or less in comfortable circumstances.

3509. President.] Are we to understand from this, that you see better homesteads than you did 30 years ago; that there are more houses to each homestead, and that cattle are more abundant?—Yes, such I mean is the case. The population in the district has largely increased, and in every way the comfort of the people also. There are many more pukka houses than there used to be, and even in the huts of poor men, there are many brass cooking utensils, which were formerly unknown. I do perceive this throughout the district, where there is indigo, and where there is not.

3510. Mr. Sale.] Do you attribute this improvement entirely to indigo cultivation, or is it due to any extent to the increased general prosperity of the country, and to the influence of European energy and example?—I attribute it very largely to the example of European energy, and to the capital invested by Europeans in the district. Of course this is also due in some degree to the Government, when at any rate all crimes involving serious violence have been repressed, and capital and labour have been left to find their own value.

W. J. HERSCHEL, Esq., Magistrate of Kishnagur; Examination resumed.

W. J.
Herschel,
Esq.

3511. President.] Do you wish to make any statement regarding the mooktyars believed to have been sent from Calcutta?—I have received a letter from the British Indian Association, denying that they ever sent up any mooktyars at all. I beg to file a letter which I have received from that body on the subject.

3512. When you visited Bongong in March last, what was the nature of the explanation you gave to the ryots regarding indigo?—I dictated a Bengali speech, which was taken down in Bengali, and afterwards recited to the ryots. It had reference solely to the exhibition of violence, which had taken place there, and which I wished to repress. I told the ryots, on the one hand, that I had punished several of them for assaulting

ing European assistants, and that I would send military police into the next village that committed a similar offence. I told them at the same time, in the presence of Mr. Larmour and his assistants, that I would never permit a planter to cut the crops on the ryots' lands without their consent. As the speech was spoken on receipt of the Lieutenant Governor's reply to the Loknathpore petition (which addressed itself to the question of indigo sowing), I made one broad statement to the ryots, that they must fulfil their indigo contracts in the same way that they fulfilled any other contract; but as the occasion did not require it, I did not enter further into that matter. I file a copy of the speech alluded to. (Filed accordingly.)

3513. Mr. Fergusson.] In any of the kabulyats that were filed before you in the breach of contract cases, was there a penalty of 10 rupees for non-performance, and if so, what was the reason why you did not adopt that as the measure of the damage?—Every case in which a kabulyat was filed, did, I believe, provide a penalty of 10 rupees for the breach of contract, but not one of the kabulyats stood the test of enquiry. In all cases in which there were no kabulyats, as was in the case of Mr. Clarke, who demanded 23 rupees as damages, I gave them. It was therefore impossible to adopt any one rule for all cases, besides which, it would have been grossly unjust to have done so. For instance, the damages assessed are upon the produce of the ryot's fields for the last five years. Some ryots on this system have paid as low as two rupees or less per beegah, others have had to pay as high as from 17 to 21 rupees per beegah. To assess a ryot whose field could only yield plant, the damages on which were really two rupees, at 10 rupees, would have been obviously unfair.

W. J.
Herschel,
Esq.

18 July
1860.

MOHESH CHUNDER CHATTERJEE, of Gosain Durgapore, Thanna Hardi, Zillah Nuddea, at present Jai nishin or Local Agent of Baboo Ram Ruttan Roy at Jenaida, called in; and Examined on oath.

3514. President.] You are aware of a dislike on the part of the ryots to indigo; have any ryots come to you for advice on the subject?—Yes, some ryots have come to me, telling me about the oppressions committed by planters with regard to indigo, and saying that in other places, redress was given against oppression. They also asked me whether there was any use in applying to the magistrate, to which I replied, that if this statement was correct, it was good to present a petition to the magistrate.

3515. Did you ever recommend any ryots to sow, or not to sow?—No, I neither did the one nor the other; and from the 2d of Chaitro last, till the arrival of the Commission, I have been in Calcutta.

3516. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Why were you in Calcutta during that time?—About the last days of Phalgun, Mr. Maclean went to my village, and I was accused of instigating my ryots, but Mr. Maclean said that the case could not go on, and so dismissed it. Then a suit was brought by Mr. Hills against a village in Jessore, some men were imprisoned for three months, and the naib Ruttu Kanto Mookerjee was bound in recognizances for 1,000 rupees. This has just been upset by the Judge, and on this the magistrate has stopped the order for my summons, but as I never know what may happen in a case brought against me, I intend to return to Calcutta as soon as the Commission returns.

3517. Mr. Fergusson.] Did you never hear from the ryots that it was the order of the Government not to sow?—I did not hear it from my ryots, but since that I have seen it in the papers, and I have heard people talking about it while I was in Calcutta.

3518. President.] Did you ever hold a situation in any factory?—I am now 59 years of age. I served in the Durgapore concern, which is now called Katchikatta. I left it in 1839 or 1840. The reason was, that Mr. Hills wanted some property; I gave him this property, which was a talook, and left his service.

3519. Have any attempts been made by the Katchikatta concern to induce you to give them any other property?—Yes. Messrs. Tissendie and Archibald Hills sent Kedarnath Kirani and another man to me, both before and after the last Doorga Pooja, to get me to give the putni or the lease of certain talooks that are very near my residence, and which I don't wish to give up. One day Kedarnath showed me a letter from Mr. Tissendie, saying that I must give it up. Indigo used to be sown in those talooks, and I never interfered. The October sowings were completed, but the ryots did not sow in Baisakh last, not from any injunction of mine, because I was not at home. I received intelligence that the ryots had not sown.

3520. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Mr. Hills stated in his belief that his uncle made you a present of a village; what have you to say to that?—Mr. Hills never gave me any village, and Mr. Hills had no village to give. I was not removed from my situation, but left it myself. I present for the inspection of the Commission, a letter from Dr. T. Parker to me, dated 5th September 1841, saying, "You served us some years, and I would like to see you back again;" and another from the late Mr. John Savi, dated 29th September 1841, saying, "I have much pleasure in stating that during the short time you were with us, your conduct was always attentive and indefatigable;" also a third from Mr. James Hills, junior, dated 18th September 1841, saying, "I hope you will succeed" (in getting a situation) "as I consider you well qualified to fill one of responsibility." I also beg to file some certificates, showing the high estimation I was held in by Messrs. Wauchope, Louis Jackson, H. V. Bayley, Bromwood, G. P. Leycester, and J. P. Smith.

3521. Mr. Sale.] You are a zemindar, can you state what has induced the ryots to manifest this dislike to indigo?—Since I have known indigo business, no one except the servants of the factory like it. Last Phalgun I asked some fauqirs and bishtoms (mendicants), what they thought about the indigo disputes. The Hindoos said, "Iswur has saved us." The Mussulmans said, "There is an Allah." From the first taking of advances to the last despatch of the indigo cakes to Calcutta, there is compulsion. The thing is of long standing, and I never knew any one taking advances voluntarily. The weeding also, and cultivating are compulsory. I told Mr. Hills while I was in Katchikatta that

M. C.
Chatterjee.

*M. C.
Chatterjee.*

18 July
1860.

there was great oppression, and he admitted it. I have told many planters and magistrates the same thing in Jessore, Pubna, and Kishnagur, and I told the late Lieutenant Governor so, when he visited Magoora.

3522. Mr. Fergusson.] How have you been employed since September 1848, the date of your last certificate?—I have since then been employed as naib of Bahirbund Pergunna, belonging to the late Rajah Kissennath Rai of Berhampore. Then I was employed as peshkar in the Hooghly magistrate's court, and sheristadar of Serampore. I have also been employed in this district, and afterwards I was Ram Ruttun's representative in Mahomed Shahi pergunna.

3523. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Do the ryots derive benefit from the planter in the way of roads, schools, medicines, &c.?—Roads are made, but they generally lead from one factory to another, and the ryots are called on to defray part of the expenses of it. I got up a school last year, to which several planters gave subscriptions. One gentleman refused to give any subscription because the nana knew English. I don't know of any schools being kept up, except by Mr. Forlong.

3524. Mr. Fergusson.] Do the zemindars ever oppress the ryots?—Some do, and some don't.

3525. Do not nearly all zemindars exact presents and cesses from the ryots in addition to the rents, on the occasions of marriages, deaths, and festivals?—The zemindars that I know, i. e., the Rajah of Burdwan, Rajah Pertab Chund of Nuldi, and Baboo Ram Ruttun Roy do not. The same is the case in the Bahirbund pergunna. Their servants may take cesses and presents, but it is the case of servants everywhere.

3526. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Do the zemindars willingly give leases to the planters?—I can't speak for everybody, but zemindars in difficulties do give to get money. Ram Ruttun Roy was averse to giving. After a great deal of disputation, Ram Ruttun did give an ijara to Mr. Meares.

3527. Mr. Fergusson.] Do the ryots of zemindars cultivate indigo as unwillingly for them, as you say they do for planters?—They are equally unwilling to cultivate indigo for zemindars as they are for English planters.

3528. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] What do you know of the state of the police of this district, and their conduct during the late crisis?—I have had a good deal to do with the police of Kishnagur and Jessore. I have never seen any good men in Jessore and Pubna, but there are two or three good ones in Kishnagur.

3529. President.] What is your opinion about the chance of ryots sowing next year?—According to their present temper and feeling, I don't think they will.

Baboo SHAMBU NATH MOOKERJEE, Residence Birnugger, Thanna Hanskali, Zillah Nuddea, called in; and Examined on oath.

*Baboo S. N.
Mookerjee.*

[The Witness premising that he had never been a witness in any Court, nor had ever taken an oath, did, on the constitution of the Commission and its objects being fully explained to him, take the oath required of him by the Act.]

3530. President.] WHAT zemindary properties have you in this district?—I have two zemindaries, one is 820 sicca rupees, and one is about 1,100. I have other properties in Rungpore, Mymensing, and Dacca, Jallaeopore. These are large zemindaries.

3531. Have you also some indigo factories, and do the ryots sow indigo willingly for you?—I have a factory in Hurrinda near my residence; most of my cultivation is nij, on the banks of the Matabanga, but I have about 600 beegahs of ryotti cultivation spread over 11 villages. The total cultivation is about 2,500 or 3,000 beegahs, including the nij abad. I believe that my ryots sow willingly for me, or certainly there would be a complaint against me in some court or other, but they have never done so. My plan is, for a ryot with one plough, to sow 10 cottas or a beegah. A man with two ploughs may sow two beegahs. The rule is one beegah for one plough.

3532. How many bundles do you take for the rupee?—The factory passed through many hands before it came to me; I purchased it 17-years ago. The custom has always been six bundles for the rupee.

3533. Have your ryots made any objection to sowing this year?—In this year the ryots have made no objection whatever, nor have they pleaded any orders from any one not to sow. I am in the habit of seeing all my ryots paid myself, but for all this I do not think that six bundles per rupee can pay them well. I imagine that they sow to please me, as their zemindar.

3534. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Do you give advances to the ryots, charge for stamp paper, or take any contract?—I do not take contracts, nor do I charge for stamp paper. If any ryot is in want of money and comes to me for eight or ten rupees, I give it to him as a loan, but it does not represent the number of beegahs he is required to sow.

3535. How much do you charge for seed?—Six annas a beegah; and if the ryots give any seed, I take it at four rupees per maund. This has been the usual practice in these factories. I give three or four seers in ryotti cultivation per beegah, about five or six for nij.

3536. Taking all these expenses, such as rent, ploughing, seed, harrow weeding, and bida, taking all this, do you think indigo cultivation is profitable to the ryot?—His own labour and the cost of the plough are a loss to him.

3537. Mr. Fergusson.] Before the late rise in the price of rice and other things, was not there frequently a similar loss of the ryots' labour and ploughs?—Yes, there was a similar loss; but the ryots did not understand it, because they never had to pay it in cash. All that it cost them was their labour, and time, and that of their bullocks.

3538. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Have you ever willingly given a lease or a putni to any factory?—I have not large properties in this district, but what what I have, I have given a lease of four villages to the Bogla factory of the Khalbolia concern. If we do not give leases to the factories there is always a fear of some unpleasantness arising, or of suits; in fear of such consequences, I gave them the hjaras. It was for five years, and was renewed from term to term for 30 years. There has been no difference with the Sahibs about the rents; on the contrary, the money is sent before the instalment is due.

3539. On the expiration of any terms of the lease, did your ryots ever come to you and complain about the oppression of the planter, and ask you not to give the lease?—Yes, a year before its expiration, the ryots have come to me and asked me not to give the lease.

3540. Have the ryots ever offered to give you increased rents, provided you would not renew the lease?—Yes, they have offered to give me whatever I have got from the planter. But fearing that quarrels might arise, I have renewed the lease. My first cousin, Baboo Bamundass Mookerjee, did not in this way renew a lease at the expiration of a term, and one or two slight affrays took place on account of this. The magistrate's interference was called for, and it ended in the renewal of the lease.

3541. Have you had no such affairs yourself?—No, I am in good terms with all planters; and those four villages alluded to, are the only ones that I have given in lease. I have given no leases in my larger zemindaries in other districts.

3542. Mr. Fergusson.] On the last renewal, did you get any increased rent or salary from the factory?—I never got any increased rents. It has always been the same. I have got the same bonus as usual, about 500 rupees.

3543. President.] Do you ever pay visits to your zemindaries in other districts, to inquire into the condition of your ryots?—I have no brother or shareholder; and in this district I have my factory, my residence, and my mercantile pursuits, and in order to look after them, I am obliged to remain here. I never visited any other zemindaries, but I always get information verbally, and accounts of them constantly from my local agents.

3544. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Will you state your opinion as to the former and present state of the police?—There is an immense difference: formerly nothing could be done without money. There is an improvement in the darogahs. I can't speak about the rest of the police. From my knowledge, I know that three darogahs never take a pice, and there are others that do so.

3545. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you any objection to appear as a witness or plaintiff in any court, and what are they?—My reason for disliking to appear is, because it is written in our Shastras that if a Brahmin is called on as a witness, the king shall ask him, "What do you know." If a Khettri is called, the king shall say to him, "What do you know; speak the truth." If a Voisyo, he shall say, "What do you know; speak the truth; if you speak untruth you will fall into hell." If a Sudra, "to him shall be administered the judicial oath."

3546. President.] Are you aware of any inconvenience being experienced by zemindars since the passing of Act X.?—I object to the provision in section VI., by which a ryot acquires a right of occupancy after 12 years. After that period I can only fix his rent; I cannot eject him. I also greatly object to section XI., which takes away a very necessary power from the zemindar. I have already suffered inconvenience from the effect of this section, and expect more.

Baboo S. N.
Mookerjee.

18 July
1860.

Baboo SRI GOPAL PAL CHOWDARI, of Ranaghat, District Nuddea, called in; and Examined on oath.

3547. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] IN what districts have you landed property; also indigo factories?—Dacco, Furreedpore, 24-Pergunnahs, Jessore, Nuddea, and Baraset. I have indigo factories, called the Sisia concern, extending from the River Bhagurutti eastward. It is now called the Nanaghat concern. The name was changed because it was unlucky.

3548. President.] What amount of cultivation, nij and ryotti, have you?—About 17,000 to 18,000 nij, and about 2,500 ryotti in the five factories that are now working. This year I shall only work four. These 2,500 beegahs are cultivated by about 1,800 ryots. Some ryots cultivate 10 cottas, others a beegah. When Europeans had these factories, they cultivated about 8,000 beegahs ryotti.

3549. Do your ryots willingly cultivate indigo?—I say, yes, because nobody has ever complained against me, and I have heard nothing of orders or parwannahs from my indigo ryots. I believe Mr. Larmour, whose factory adjoins mine, had some trouble this year.

3550. Have you given leases or putnis of lands willingly to factories?—No, I have not given leases willingly, for I wish indigo to be grown. I can grow it on lands in my possession; besides indigo makes ryots abscond, as I have heard from them. Of course when I do give a lease I get salami, and do fix a jumma. As to putnis, it is a different thing: if I want money, of course I will sell my property, and putni is equivalent to a sale, except getting the rent; besides this, a putni conveys the zemindary right in perpetuity; and additional security has been given by Act XI. of last year, which saves the putni even in the event of sale for arrears of revenue.

3551. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] You are aware that the ryots do not like you to give a lease, and that they run away; why do you then grant such leases to planters?—My first reason is the inequality of the laws. The planters enjoy equal rights with us, but they are not amenable to the local courts. For similar offences zemindars would be imprisoned, when the European would be fined. Besides, the officials usually help the planters; therefore we are all anxious to avoid collision with planters, to prevent affrays and disgrace. Besides, I know for certain, if an European assistant planter who holds a lease from us, is summoned into court, he will get a chair near the magistrate, while we, the zemindars, who created the lease, will have to stand at a distance. So from all this it ends in our giving the lease; and I constantly advise my friends to give leases for the above reasons.

Baboo
S. G. P.
Chowduri.

Baboo
S. G. P.
Chowdari.

18 July
1860.

3552. President.] Would you have any objection to allow indigo to be cultivated by planters, through ryots living on your estates, without giving the planters leases or putnis, supposing it did not interfere with your own indigo cultivation?—If the ryots found that they derived advantage from indigo, I should make no objection; but the ryot has no profit in indigo, and what man is there in the world who would do what did not give him a profit? The cultivation of indigo even in my own factories, cannot pay the ryots, notwithstanding that I show every consideration to the ryots.

3553. Mr. Fergusson.] Why do you make your ryots do what is not profitable to them?—I bought this factory partly at the solicitation of my ryots, who did not want it to fall into the hands of others, and I only follow the system of others; but I go to the factory myself or send my brother, and summon my ryots, and ask them how much indigo they wish to sow. They make up a list of how much they are content to sow, and accordingly we give them advances. Besides, at the time, if they fall two or three hundred beegahs short, I don't take notice of it.

3554. President.] Are you in good terms with the planters generally?—Yes, I am on good terms.

3555. You are a zemindar; have you found any inconvenience or advantage from Act X. of 1859?—I have not found any practical inconvenience yet, but I can say that our legitimate rights as zemindars have been curtailed. Formerly we had the legal right of calling our ryots for the adjustment of rents; this has been taken away. Next, the ryots now acquire a right of occupancy after squatting. I have nothing else particular to complain of, but the law is a very long one, and I have not been able to acquaint myself with it.

3556. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you experienced any more difficulty since the passing of the Act, in collecting your rents than before?—I am on good terms with my ryots, and continue to summon them, and collect the rents as hitherto. I apprehended great inconvenience to small talookdars, who will have no remedy but a suit.

3557. President.] Are you aware that zemindars used to send to their ryots under the pretext of rent, and beat and oppress them?—If zemindars behave in that way, the criminal law should be made stronger, and severe punishment should be inflicted. In all these matters, everything depends on a good understanding between zemindar and ryot.

Baboo PRAN KISTO PAL, of Latoodaha, Damurhuda, Thanna Nuddea, Zillah Nuddea, called in; and Examined on oath.

Baboo
P. K. Pal.

3558. President.] WHAT landed properties have you in this district?—I have zemindaries, putnis, and dur-putnis; and I have purchased this year two factories, named Narainpore and Simultolla; the last named is close to the station.

3559. Have you willingly given leases or putnis to planters?—I have given five mouzas in dur-putni to the Nischindipore concern. I have also given the ijara of some land to the Loknathpore and Khalbolia concerns; but the lease expired in Chaitro, and I have not renewed it. The above were not given willingly, but on account of cases. I did not renew it this year, as the ryots came and told me that there was a new order that they were not to sow indigo.

3560. Mr. Sale.] Is it because the ryots were not willing to sow indigo that you did not renew your lease?—It is partly for that reason, and partly because the Sahibs could not press me this year, on account of troubles of their own. The Sahibs did apply for a renewal.

3561. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] For what term were the leases given, and when that term expires, do not the ryots come to you and ask you not to renew the lease?—The term is four years, and at the expiration of that period the ryots come and beg of me not to renew it, saying that many ryots have run away from the same. My ryots have never come and told me that they would make up the rents of the lease if I would not renew it, for they have nothing to give, because they are so poor.

3562. President.] You are a mahajan as well as a zemindar; does indigo cultivation interfere with your lending money?—It does interfere, because the ryots are not allowed to sow rice until the indigo is sown, and afterwards weeded, and it becomes too late to do anything for the rice crop, and consequently poor ryots are not able to pay off their rice as well as cash debts to me.

3563. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you ever forbidden your ryots to sow indigo?—No, never. On the contrary, I tell them to sow, that if they do, they will not be oppressed by the planter.

3564. Have you heard from the ryots that Government has prevented them sowing indigo?—Yes, I heard from them that a new rule has come out for them not to sow indigo, and they said, We have not taken advances, and won't sow.

3565. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] What are the oppressions you have suffered at the hands of the planters?—Formerly I have suffered at the hands of the planters, but now I have thought it best to submit, and have managed pretty well.

MAHANUNDO GHOSE (Caste Goala), Inhabitant of Alumpore, Thanna Mihirpore, Nuddea, Factory Amjhupi, Katuli Concern, called in; and Examined on oath.

M. Ghose.

3566. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] DID you sow indigo last year?—Yes, I did. I sowed nine beegahs by my own measurement, and five by the factory. I completed all my sowings in October, and I had nothing left in April. No suit has been instituted against me.

3567. President.] Then, what have you to complain of?—I have to complain of general oppressions regarding indigo, but I have a special complaint regarding my ghee. The assistant of Amjhupi gives me two rupees and takes 12 seers; the value would be more than three rupees; also the the planter at Katuli and all his people take ghee from me, i. e., give me one rupee and take three rupees worth of ghee from me. I never complained to anybody; to whom shall I complain? If a single cow strays into the indigo, the village is fined 50 rupees, and I have to pay five rupees. Also, there is a tax laid upon us for the marks of cattle hoofs on the plain. In this way, I, because I am a goala, and have many cattle, had to pay 14 rupees, and the other goalas in the village, which amounted to three houses, paid 16 rupees. Mr. J. Smith levied this fine himself. A peon was sent with me while I collected the money, and I had to pay one rupee for the peon.

3568. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] What other complaints have you to make?—I have to complain about this, that if I want to sow linseed in the rains, I am obliged to cut the jungle on the old homesteads and clear them, and I am not allowed to look after my own land. Also, I am not allowed to cultivate in October my cold weather crops or my early rice. Once, Jadu Biswas and Kanai Lal Biswas, gomashas who look after the rice golas, came to me for a man for whom there was no rice in the factory, and took about two bish on promising to pay me in a day or two. They paid me six rupees instead of 20 rupees. Also, last Bhadro, I, in company with several others, were sent for and told to purchase linseed to the extent of 50 maunds, at three rupees a maund. I declined, but got off by compounding to pay 25 rupees. Also, in Kartik before last, I sowed five beegahs which did not come up. They sent for me to the factory, and took from me six rupees four annas as the price of the seed.

M. Ghose.

18 July
1860.

[Commission adjourned at 6 P.M.]

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN BEFORE

THE INDIGO COMMISSION IN CALCUTTA.

Saturday, 21st July 1860.

PRESENT :

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., c.s., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., c.s.; W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Rev. J. Sale; Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

The Honourable ASHLEY EDEN, at present Magistrate, Collector, and Salt Agent, Cuttack.

Hon.
A. Eden.
21 July
1860.

3571. President.] WILL you state to the Commission the districts and appointments in which you have had experience?—I was first appointed assistant magistrate and collector of Rajshahye, and for a short time had charge of the sub-division of Nattore, in that district; I was then appointed to the sub-division of Aurungabad, in the district of Moorshedabad; I was then employed on special duty, and then made Deputy Commissioner of the Sonthal pergunnahs, and was next appointed to be magistrate and collector of Baraset; then I officiated as Junior Secretary to the Board of Revenue, and this year I joined my appointment as officiating magistrate, and collector, and salt agent of Cuttack.

3572. During the time you held these appointments, did you endeavour to mix familiarly with the people, and had you frequent opportunities of ascertaining the working of the indigo system?—Yes, I always endeavour to mix as much as I could with the people, to ascertain their views upon all subjects, and in the districts of Rajshahye, Moorshedabad, and Baraset, I had ample opportunities of ascertaining, both from the natives and the planters, the working of the system.

3573. Do you hold the opinion that that cultivation is the result of free agency on the part of the ryots, or that it is in a great measure compulsory?—My opinion is, that with the exception of factories which have a large extent of chur lands cultivated, it is in no instance the result of free agency, but that it is always compulsory.

3574. Will you state to the Commission, as fully as you can, the facts, proofs, or reasons which have induced you to hold this belief?—First, I believe it to be unprofitable, and therefore I cannot believe that any ryot would consent to take up that cultivation, involving, as it does, serious pecuniary loss to himself; secondly, it involves an amount of harassing interference to which no free agent would subject himself; thirdly, from a consideration of the acts of violence to which the planters have throughout been compelled to resort to keep up this cultivation, as proved by the criminal records of Bengal; fourthly, from the admissions of the planters themselves, that if the ryots were free agents they would not cultivate indigo; fifthly, the necessity under which the planters state themselves to be of spending large sums in the purchase of zemindaries and other descriptions of rights, giving them territorial influence and powers of compulsion, without which they would be unable to procure the cultivation of indigo; sixthly, the statements of the ryots and the people generally in the district in which I have been; seventhly, the fact, that as soon as the ryots became aware of the fact that they were by law and practically free agents they at once refused to continue the cultivation.

3575. Can you point to any particular records, printed or other, in support of your assertion regarding acts of violence?—I beg to hand in an abstract of 49 serious cases of murder, homicide, riot, arson, dacoity, plunder, and kidnapping which have occurred from the year 1830 to 1859, some of which I have taken from records which came before me during my incumbency, others from printed Nizamut reports, and all from authenticated papers. I also give a file of heinous cases connected with the cultivation of indigo, which occurred previous to the year 1810, with a view of showing that on the commencement of the system of private trade in the interior of the country these acts of violence were resorted to, and, in consequence of those acts, five Europeans were punished and deported from the country; and the Government, in a Circular Order of the 20th July 1810, considered it necessary to warn the magistrates to check the system of forcing the cultivation by means of advances on ryots. This last statement I have derived from a printed Parliamentary Report of 1820, on the occasion when the Directors of the Company were charged with impeding the settlement of Europeans. The great majority of the cases in the first list filed have occurred within the last 10 years.

3576. Could you state how many of the above cases came under your personal observation as magistrate?

magistrate?—Under my own actual observation I only remember two cases of those noted in the list. One was the case of kidnapping in Shampore factory, Bansbarria, in the Rajshahye district, in which one man was confined and died in the godown, and his body was thrown by the factory servants, and sunk, by means of bags of bricks, in a jheel. This I know from having been assistant to the magistrate who tried the case, and being acquainted with the parties concerned in it. The native servants of the factory were punished by the judge, but were released by the Nizamut, who ruled, that although there was no doubt that the man had met his death whilst confined in the godown, yet that there was no distinct proof of the precise means by which he met his death, and therefore they merely punished those who were engaged in concealing the body. Another case mentioned there, which I myself investigated, was a case in which the servants of the Hobra factory went with a large party of ploughmen and ploughs, and ploughed up about 125 beegahs of the ryots' cultivation, and sowed indigo on the land. I imprisoned the factory people, and was reprimanded for leniency, and for having shown a prejudice in favour of the planters. Another case which I want to mention, which, though within my own knowledge, is not contained in the list, was, that when I went to the Aurungabad sub-division I found that it was the custom to carry off the cattle of the ryots who would not sow indigo. It having been brought to my notice that a great deal of suffering was occasioned to the ryots by the sale of their cattle in the previous year, I instituted inquiries, and having ascertained one of the places in which the cattle were kept, I sent out a party of police, and released from one of the out-factories about 200 or 300 head of cattle, which, even when brought to my own house, the ryots, through fear of the planter, were afraid for several days to come forward and claim.

3577. What was the distance of the sub-division from the head quarters of the factory, and why was the sub-division established there?—The assistant magistrate's residence was between 50 and 100 yards from the factory, and the sub-division was established partly on account of the disputes between Messrs. Lyon and White on the one part, and Mr. David Andrew on the other; and partly on account of the number of complaints, which came from that quarter, of the oppression to which the people were subjected by the servants of the factories. On joining the sub-division, the head-quarter house was not being yet erected, and not knowing the causes which led to the selection of that site, I recommended its removal to the town of Junghypore, which was the principal entrepôt of trade in that part of the country. On going to Aurungabad great objections were raised by the planters, however, to the selection of a site so close to the factory, on the grounds that the magistrate's court would interfere with business of the factory. It is worthy of remark, that it was the factories of these two firms which were first attacked during these disturbances. In justice however to the manager, Mr. McLeod, I wish to state that I always found him personally willing, so far as was consistent with the interests of his employer, to pay attention to the complaints of the people, and to this may, in a great measure, be attributed the fact that the factory was not then a paying concern. Since then the cultivation has greatly been increased, and I am of opinion that it was owing to that that the late disturbances took place in that concern.

3578. Mr. Fergusson.] In the 49 cases which you ferreted out, as having occurred during the last 30 years, is it not the case that in more than half of them, Europeans have not been accused, or, if accused, have been acquitted?—There are scarcely any one of these cases in which the European or principal manager of the concern has ever been put upon his trial, although in many of them, the judges trying the cases have expressed strong opinions that such Europeans were themselves implicated in them; and it is to this impunity and freedom from responsibility that I attribute the constant recurrence of these violent outrages.

3579. In such instances as you have mentioned, was it not a gross dereliction of duty on the part of the Government not to prosecute the Europeans?—There certainly was a failure of justice which, in my opinion, may to a certain extent be attributed to the strong bias which the Government and many of the officers of Government have always displayed in favour of those engaged in this particular cultivation; this may also partly have arisen from the difficulty which exists under the present law of obtaining a conviction against Europeans, as, for instance, in the case in which a planter named Dick alias Richard Aimes, was murdered by a European planter named Yong, a French planter named Pierre Aller, and some native servants, in which the Frenchman and the natives being amenable to the Courts of the country, were imprisoned for life, whilst Yong, the European British subject, not being subject to the jurisdiction of the local Court, was tried in Her Majesty's Supreme Court in Calcutta, and was acquitted on precisely the same evidence as was brought against the foreigners and natives who were convicted in the district Court; the sentence being upheld by the Nizamut Adawlut.

3580. Then you consider that in that case justice was obtained in the Mofussil Courts and denied in the Supreme Court?—I consider that the judges of the Court of the Nizamut Adawlut are fully as competent to come to a decision on the evidence before them as a Calcutta petty jury. I therefore consider that in this instance a failure of justice occurred in the Supreme Court.

3581. If I tell you that I was in the Supreme Court during the whole of that trial, and with a strong feeling against the prisoner, and that I, and most other gentlemen in Calcutta, considered it impossible to find him guilty on the evidence, would it alter your opinion in any manner?—No, as with those facts before them, and commenting on those facts, the Sudder Court subsequently convicted the remainder of that party as accessories to the murder on that evidence; the previous acquittal in the Supreme Court, and the distrust thrown upon the evidence having been urged by the defendant's counsel, and over-ruled. Moreover, if the murder was not committed, where is Dick alias Richard Aimes, who has never appeared since?

3582. In the other cases contained in your list, in which no remarks are made by the judges, is it merely your opinion that the Europeans among them were guilty parties, and should have been punished?—Having had very little conversation with any other parties on the merits of these cases, I am not prepared to state whether

Hon.
A. Eden.

21 July
1860.

Hon.
A. Eden.

21 July
1860.

any other person has formed the same opinion, but in my own certainly the European who organizes an attack, who conceals the offence, and in one instance even allowed one of his servants, who had murdered a ryot, to be concealed, whilst a third party was sentenced capitally, should be held liable to the same punishment as a native of this country would have in all probability been subjected to, if he committed the same offence. I allude to the case of Mr. Patrick Smith, of Dulleemulla factory, in which a servant of his murdered a Chowkidar, who endeavoured to resist the carrying off of ryots who refused to take advances for the cultivation of indigo. The man admitted the murder to Mr. Smith the same day. The actual murderer in that case was not apprehended, but another servant, of the name of Ram Sing, was capitally sentenced for that crime. Some months subsequently a second murder was committed by the same man, and a rumour spread that this man was really the murderer in the former case. On the representation of Mr. Hills, Dr. Archer and others, Mr. Smith then appeared before the Sudder Court, and in consequence of the statement there made, the sentence of Ram Sing was commuted, and the real culprit was apprehended.

3583. Then in this instance, did not the sessions judge and the Sudder Nizamut convict and sentence to be hung the wrong man?—They convicted the accomplice, who was present at the time, but who had not actually struck the fatal blow, instead of the principal, who was concealed in the factory, where he was subsequently found by the magistrate. This arose from the fact that the two men were up-country lattials, not natives of Bengal, in consequence of which some confusion occurred in the identification of the principal and the accomplice by ignorant Bengali ryots. If the European planter had come forward, as disapproving of the crime as he was bound to do, before the magistrate or the sessions, this difficulty of identification would not have arisen. The conviction of the Courts was according to the evidence before them.

3584. President.] It is not a very unusual thing for additional or supplementary evidence to be either offered or received before the Sudder Nizamut, such Court deciding only from the records?—I never heard of a similar course of proceeding; I believe the evidence to have been received at the instance of the two Messrs. Trevor, one of whom was legal remembrancer at the time.

3585. Mr. Fergusson.] In the course of inquiries, have you not come across similar cases in the opium and salt departments?—No; I have not perused any records, nor have I any personal knowledge of such cases.

3586. Have you not heard of similar cases in one of the salt agencies in the Midnapore zillah?—I have heard that some heinous offences occurred in some way connected with the salt department at Hidgelee last year. In what way these cases arose, or in what way they were connected with the salt department, I have no knowledge whatever; I believe them to have arisen from disputes between the preventive and manufacturing branches of the salt department; but my knowledge is entirely derived from general rumours. In the opium department I have never heard of any cases whatever.

3587. Do not any cases similar to those in your list arise from disputes between rival native zemindars respecting lands, hauts, &c.?—Frequent affrays and kidnapping arise from such sources of dispute, but of late years they have nearly ceased in that part of the country of which I have special knowledge, and I believe generally throughout Bengal; they however more frequently take the form of disputes between two strong contending parties well able to cope with one another, and do not, as in the indigo cases, show the strong continually preying on the weak, and disputes arising out of a false system of trade.

3588. Have you any reason to believe that the system carried on in the silk trade was different as regards ryots from that of the indigo business?—I have no knowledge on the subject.

3589. Have the indigo cases now ceased in Bengal, together with the cessation of the same zemindary affrays; or do the former continue in any district while the latter have ceased?—I believe the establishment of the numerous subdivisions throughout Bengal has had the effect of decreasing violent open outrages of every description, such as affrays; but the seizing of ryots and the confinement within the factory walls has, in my opinion, increased as violent overt acts have decreased. The greatest decrease however is in cases unconnected with indigo on account of the fear which the zemindars have of these subdivisions, and the great facility which is afforded to the European planters of opposing the ryots in any way which does not involve any great publicity, such as would necessarily attract the attention of the higher authorities.

3590. Are kidnapping and imprisonment still carried on by zemindars as well as planters?—Yes, I believe they are in many instances, but since the passing of Act X. of 1859, I believe that they have greatly decreased.

3591. Then, has the increase of these offences to which you alluded solely occurred in indigo concerns?—Whether it is that there is an actual increase, or whether it is that the establishment of subdivisions have brought them to light, or whether it is that the punishment of several planters for this offence has given the ryots greater confidence to speak more openly of these things, I am not sure; but I have certainly heard more of such cases within the last few years than before, and I believe that it may be attributed to the increased reluctance of the ryots to sow without such compulsion, and also to the check which has been given to such outrages.

3592. In case 18 you remark that the Europeans, for whose benefit the crime was committed, was not punished. Do you ground that opinion from the observations of the judge or from what you read of the case?—To the best of my recollection the printed report of the case will show that the judge, Mr. G. C. Cheap, remarks that the case was one in which great blame attached to Mr. Tripp, and said it was cause of great regret to him to put on record the commission of such violent outrages by Europeans, but that he was glad to state that Mr. Kenny, the proprietor of the concern, was on his way to England, and was not therefore responsible.

3593. In case 29 you remark that Mr. French was in the jail in which these men were confined at the time. Do you mean by your remarks on that case that Mr. French ought to have been brought to trial?—Judging from the evidence, as it appears in the printed report of the Sudder Court, I should, if I had been the magistrate before whom that case came, have committed Mr. French to take his trial, as it appears that he compromised the case by giving compensation to the owner of the boat.

3594. In case 39 you observe the servants were imprisoned, but Mr. W. Collis, who was admitted by the judge to give the order, was not put on trial, by virtue of his descent from European stock; on what is that remark founded?—It is my strong opinion derived from a perusal of the case. For the judge stated that the order was given by Mr. W. Collis himself, and I can conceive no other possible reason why, if the judge considered Mr. Collis to have been guilty, he should not have taken steps to bring him to justice; and, judging from the practice of the courts, I feel convinced that had he been a native his trial would have been directed.

3595. On the whole, considering the number of districts and the number of indigo concerns and of planters engaged, also the period of time over which these cases extend; considering also the state of society in the Mofussil; do you consider that these serious cases are frequent, rare, or otherwise?—These cases do not in any way represent the total amount of such outrages that have been committed during the period embraced. The greater part of the selected cases of which an abstract has been given are only those of so serious a nature as necessitated a reference to the Sudder Court, either on account of the severity of the penalty involved or in appeal on points of law. My own opinion is that not one tithe of the offences actually committed ever came before any Court at all; of those which are actually brought up by the police, very many are disposed of by the magistrate himself; and others of a more serious nature are decided by the Sessions Court without reference to the Nizamut. I have not had the means at my disposal to enable me to lay before the Committee any memorandum of such cases. The improved administration of the police arising from the increase of sub-divisions has decreased the number of violent crimes of late years, but it has, as a consequence, checked the cultivation of indigo.

3596. Mr. Temple.] But on the whole do you consider that planters rarely resort to serious violence or frequently; and do you believe that these deeds of violence are committed by a few planters, or by the majority, or what?—I believe that deeds of the violence of those noted in the abstract filed are not frequent, but still they are such as to keep up and perpetuate a feeling of terrorism, without which, in my opinion, the cultivation of indigo could not be carried on for one day. Any act of great violence committed in any district, such, for instance, as the attack of the village of Haut-dayal, in the district of Rajshahye, in the concern of Messrs. J. and R. Watson & Co., in which three villages were gutted, three cultivators killed, and six wounded, would be enough to strike terror into the hearts of the ryots in that part of the country for many years to come, and it is only when the ryots have forgotten such acts as these that any fresh violence of this sort is necessary. I believe that there are many planters who do all in their power to avoid having recourse to such expedients, but it will be found that one or two outrages of the most serious description have occurred within the remembrance of men in every district and with every concern.

3597. Have you known many planters who would not under any circumstances themselves order or authorize such proceedings; and do you know whether such things could or could not be done by the servant without the authority of the master?—I know many planters who would neither authorize or order such proceedings, but the system is such, that they are frequently involved in such cases against their will, and the system which they pursue, and the class of servants that they employ, force them to this; the worst that can be said of such men is, that when they are so involved, they do not come forward as they should do, and publicly disown the acts of their servants, and render assistance in bringing them to justice.

3598. You have mentioned generally that European planters are practically never punished for acts of violence; is it that prosecutions are instituted by the Mofussil authorities, and fail in the Supreme Court, or is it that prosecution is not attempted; and if the latter be the cause, what is the reason?—Prosecutions are scarcely ever attempted. The reason of this is partly because Mofussil magistrates know the difficulty of procuring a conviction in the Supreme Court, partly from great unwillingness among prosecutors and witnesses to subject themselves to the liability to come to Calcutta to attend the Supreme Court, and to a great extent to the bias in favour of the planters, which has been too frequently displayed by men in all positions, from the highest officers of the Government down to the lowest.

3599. As an officer of Mofussil experience, what do you consider to be practically the difficulties of prosecuting the planters before the Supreme Court; or how do these difficulties arise?—It never fell to my lot to have to commit any planter, but judging from my experience as a justice of the peace, in obtaining convictions against Europeans, I consider that very great practical difficulties exist. For instance, I have committed Europeans to the Supreme Court; the bill has been thrown out by the grand jury, under circumstances which led the Government to direct a recommittal on the same evidence. The evidence was described by the Advocate General as being of the most clear and conclusive description. The parties were recommitted on precisely the same evidence, and were convicted and sentenced. In another case I committed an officer for trial for manslaughter. The officer admitted before me having committed the assault, which led to the man's death. The medical evidence showed that although the man was in bad health, yet his death had been hastened by the injuries he had received. The grand jury threw out the bill; and it is in cases like these that dishearten Mofussil magistrates from committing Europeans to the Supreme Court.

3600. But, as a magistrate and justice of the peace, would you not commit an offender, if you believed him guilty on the evidence, irrespectively as to your opinion as to what might be the view taken by a Calcutta petty jury or grand jury?—As a judicial officer, if the evidence was very clear in any case before me, I should commit; but, as an executive officer, I should hesitate to take up many cases against Europeans, which under other circumstances I should consider it incumbent on me to proceed with.

3601. Mr. Fergusson.] In this list I see eight names of persons whom I personally know to be foreigners, and parties liable to the Mofussil Court, can you account for their not being proceeded against, if there were any good grounds for doing so?—Of the evidence against the parties

Hon.
A. Eden.

21 July
1860.

Hon.
A. Eden.
—
21 July
1860.

ties particularly alluded to in the cases you have mentioned, I am not prepared to speak without a reference to the cases, but the exemption to which you allude was probably explained in my previous answer, in which I noticed the great bias which has always existed in favour of planters from the very beginning.

3602. Then do you consider that the Government officials have sacrificed justice to favour the planters?—I consider that it has frequently been the case, and I have stated so in official reports. I will go further and say, that as a young assistant, I confess I have favoured my own countrymen in several instances.

3603. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Do you believe that if the European planters in the Mofussil were subject to equal laws and same punishment with the natives of the country, they would be deterred from committing the oppressions you have alluded to?—I believe that with the knowledge that they were subject to the courts, and did not enjoy the perfect practical impunity which they now possess, the system of force which is known to all to have existed so long would not have been continued by the planters.

3604. Is it not the case that if a native gentleman and an European gentleman, a British subject, were found guilty of a similar offence before a Mofussil magistrate, the former might be sentenced to imprisonment, whereas the latter might get off by paying a fine to the extent of 500 rupees?—If an English gentleman and a native gentleman were placed side by side in the same case, I hardly think that any magistrate could punish them in a different manner; but in similar but separate cases, I think that it would frequently happen that a native gentleman would be imprisoned, whereas the European would only be fined, because the magistrate has not, except in particular cases, the power of imprisoning an European.

3605. During the time the indigo planters were vested with magisterial powers, did not some of them abuse their power, within your own knowledge, to serve their own interests?—There were no honorary magistrates in my district.

3606. Mr. Fergusson.] In the present state of the Mofussil Courts, and with the present judges who preside in them, would you like to see any European friend tried in them?—I think that if the courts are good enough for the natives, they are good enough for Europeans. If they are not good enough for natives, they are not fit to have any jurisdiction at all over any one. As far as I am myself concerned, I would sooner be tried, if innocent, in the local sessions courts, with an appeal to the Nizamut, than in the Supreme Court. If guilty, I would prefer the Supreme Court and a Calcutta jury.

3607. President.] Several witnesses have either stated or admitted, that indigo cultivation is unprofitable and unpopular with the ryots, and you yourself have declared your belief that the cultivation for years has been compulsory; how do you reconcile those admissions and your belief with the fact, that the system has gone on for years without any change?—For many reasons: first, that the people of Bengal are naturally patient in enduring oppressions. Years of tyranny and oppression have taught them to bear every wrong without resistance. Their feelings have taken the form of sullen morose hate, rather than active opposition. These pent-up feelings have now, for the first time, found a vent. Secondly, the police courts have, until the last four or five years, been out of their reach. The planter, having the rights of a zemindar, has reigned over them with the powers of a despot. They dared not leave their homes to go and complain at a distant station; if they did so, they ran the risk of returning to find their cattle carried off, or a relative illegally confined. Even in cases in which, on these complaints, the police were deputed to hold an investigation, sometimes through fear of the planter, and sometimes corrupted by his money, nearly always influenced by some means or other, they reported the case against the ryot. The ryot would then be worse off than before, and his only hope of peace lay in cultivating indigo without opposition, but not as a free agent. Thirdly, Bengalis have not usually that power of conjoint action which would enable them with any prospect of success to form a combination against the planters. Fourthly, ryots, from whatever causes it may have arisen, have certainly all along believed that Government, and Government officials, were interested in the cultivation of indigo; that they were so strongly prejudiced in favour of the planter, that it was useless to complain. The ryots were unable to understand how a man living in terms of the greatest intimacy, and in daily communication with the planter, was capable of deciding cases justly; cases in which the interests of that planter were concerned. Whatever may be the impartiality of the individual magistrate, it would be difficult to persuade an uneducated native that intimacy of this description would not bias a magistrate in his official acts. This intimacy has very often, it may be, without the knowledge of the planter, been made use of by the factory servants as a means to accomplish their wishes. Again, facilities of complaint have been afforded to the planters by the higher authorities, from which the ryots are altogether excluded; and I believe it to be the case that this privilege has been made use of, to influence such higher authority against such of the local authorities as may have shown a disposition to do justice between man and man. And there are cases in which the removal of officials has been attributed by the ryots to the influence brought to bear by those in the interests of the planters against such officials. Fifthly, I believe that the pressure of indigo cultivation has never been so severely felt as during the present time, as, although the ryots have always had to sacrifice a portion of their land and labour, the loss has never been so severe as at the present time, when the value of that land and labour has greatly increased: formerly these lands gave them enough to live upon, and pay their rents, but as there was no market for surplus produce, and but little stimulus to accumulate, it was not worth their while to grow any great amount of produce beyond what was necessary for their own consumption.

3608. Can you mention any cases within your knowledge, in which officials were either interfered with, or censured, or removed, for alleged bias against planters?—Moulvie Abdool Latief was removed from Kalaroa for giving an order protecting the ryots against the forcible entry of the planter. My predecessor at Baraset was complained of, for saying that it was optional for ryots to sow indigo or not, and was censured by the late Lieutenant Governor. Of this last case I have no knowledge, except what was derived from the planters themselves, and from the people who who still believe him to have been removed for protecting them. In my own case I was, on private representations made by planters, reprimanded and interfered with by the Commissioner. Representations were made to the Government for my removal, on the ground that I had told the ryots that the cultivation of indigo was optional. And three petitions were presented by parties of influence in Calcutta within a few months, demanding my removal on this account, and I had considerable difficulty in defending my own position and upholding my independence as a magistrate.

3609. Mr. Fergusson.] Are you aware that the cultivation of indigo in the district of Nuddea does not occupy more than five per cent. of its area, and if so, how can it be so severe a pressure on the ryots as you have stated it to be?—Admitting this calculation to be correct, you must first deduct from that area one-third of the whole as fallow, wood, waste, village, and unculturable lands. You must next deduct one-third of this for those portions of the district in which indigo cultivation is not carried on, and with which the planter has no connection. From the balance you must deduct a very large proportion of wet land suitable only for the cultivation of late rice, and then if you take the remainder, which is the most valuable land in the whole of the district, and the most productive, you will find that the planters have thrown out of profitable cultivation a proportion of the best land, which must press with very great severity on those engaged in the cultivation of profitable crops in the part of the district where factories are situated.

3610. But the said crops are cold weather crops, which can be grown equally with indigo and early rice; and do you think that while grain crops, such as rice, can be taken continually off the same land, it would not be better to vary such crops occasionally with indigo?—Provided that indigo were as profitable as any other crop, I can understand that an occasional crop of that plant might be beneficial to the soil, but so long as it is a dead loss to the ryot, out of pocket, even the inferior rice crop is more remunerative to him. But there are other crops, such as jute, sugar-cane, chillies, ginger, turmeric, tobacco, which afford the ryot a still greater profit than rice; but even supposing that this was not the case, the land is the land of the ryots, they are the best judges of their own interests, and so long as they object to the cultivation of indigo, for whatever reason, I can conceive no principle upon which it can be argued that it is justifiable for a third party to come in and insist upon a ryot sowing that to which he objects, although it may be in his opinion beneficial to the ryot.

3611. But if a ryot has made a contract, and has received money to sow indigo, upon what principle has he a right to decline to do so?—If a ryot, being a free agent, and acting without force, either actual or moral, voluntarily enters into a contract for the cultivation of any crop, he is of course bound to fulfil it; but the result of my experience and my inquiries on the subject convince me that in scarcely any instance does a ryot, being a free agent, enter into contracts or receive advances for the cultivation of indigo, which is admitted by many competent authorities to involve a pecuniary loss upon the ryot. One of the main elements of the contract, to make it legal, must be that it has voluntarily been entered into by both parties. My own opinion is, that in no instances, within the last six years at least, have ryots entered into legal contracts for the cultivation of this crop.

3612. President.] But will you state the precise nature of your experience as to how these contracts are first entered into?—From my own experience, derived from conversations with both ryots and planters, and from the examination of the factory books, and from the inspection of the contracts themselves, and from constant inquiries and investigations for the last four years into the matter, I still continue of opinion that the description of the mode as to how contracts are entered into, given in my letter, No. 500, dated 19th June 1858, page 220 of the Blue Book, is a correct description of the manner in which advances are given and received.

3613. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you know that the land in the district of Baraset, to which your experience and inquiries appear to have been limited, is unsuited for the cultivation of indigo, and that it does not produce one-half of the plant which the lands in Kishnaghur and Jessore do?—I have always understood that the lands at Baraset were amongst the finest lands in Bengal, and as the district borders both on Jessore and Kishnaghur, much of the land is precisely of the same description as that of those districts.

3614. Do you not think that the occasional intimacy between the planters and officials is balanced by a similar intimacy between the ryots and darogah and the native officials of the district?—My own experience leads me to believe that fear of the planters' influence and fear of the representations he may make to their official superiors, render the police very apt to side with the planters' people when the opposite party were poor natives. My great difficulty has always been to get the police to act boldly and straightforwardly in cases of this sort. I have frequently had to find fault with the police for displaying an unjustifiable bias in favour of the planter.

3615. President.] Have you reason to believe that any portion of that bias is due to illegal or improper influence, such as the payment of money, and if so, on what reasons do you ground that belief?—It has frequently been stated to me by planters, that unless they had recourse to these means, they would find it difficult to carry on their business. I generally believe that as a rule, the police have hitherto been so corrupt that there is reason to suspect that in very many cases they have been so influenced. Of late years, since constant inquiries have been made into the matter, and an educated and higher class of natives have been employed, and since the salary has been increased, there has been a most decided improvement in this respect.

3616. Then it is your decided opinion that so far from the magistrates having obstructed or impeded indigo cultivation, they have not afforded to the ryot the support and protection he might fairly expect?—I think that if the law had been strictly administered by the magistrates, and if they had at their disposal a staff of well qualified officers sufficient for them to carry out the law in all cases, the present system of cultivation could not have been continued as it has done. I believe that many magistrates have been deterred from doing their duty in this respect, from a sensitive desire to avoid the ignominious reproach which has always been raised against them of being jealous of the non-official classes; and in avoiding this reproach, they have allowed themselves

Hon.
A. Eden.

21 July
1860.

Hon.
A. Eden.

21 July
1860.

selves to display a bias in favour of the planters, which has in many cases led to a failure of justice.

3617. Mr. Sale.] You mention as one reason why the ryots, though unwilling, have been cultivating so long, that the police courts were out of their reach. Did you refer to the distance the ryots have to go to get justice, or to the difficulties arising out of the arrangements of the courts, or of the character of the amla, or to the difficulty arising out of the ryots' fear of the planter when he is also a zemindar?—I allude to the fact that in many districts ryots have to go some 30 or 40 miles to the nearest magistrate; and that through fear of the planter, who is a zemindar, they dare not leave their houses for this purpose. I also alluded to the fact, that in one district with which I was acquainted, the power of one firm is so great, that the ryots used to come across in my district to complain to me, because they dared not go through their own district to reach the station at which their own magistrate resided.

3618. Do you not think that a simple mode of administering justice, such as that adopted in the cutcherries of the planters, would be much more effective than the arrangements at present existing in most of the Mofussil courts?—I have no personal knowledge of the system pursued in the planters' cutcherry, but I am not prepared to recommend that the system pursued in those courts, as I understand them to be, should be introduced into the constituted courts of the country. I have no doubt that in many cases a planter may dispose of cases with great justice when his interests are not antagonistic to those of the people themselves, but everything in such a court must depend entirely upon the temper and ability of the individual presiding.

3619. Is not it often ruin to a ryot to leave his home, say at the sowing season, to make a complaint at any of the Mofussil courts?—Until late years it was doubtless impossible for ryots to leave their cultivation to go to a distant court; but of late years many district sub-divisional courts have been brought within a day's journey to every ryot in the district.

3620. You mentioned in a previous answer that planters have admitted to you that the ryots are not free agents; does this statement refer to any constraint put upon them, or does it refer to any relation which they supposed themselves to have as their zemindars?—The planters have undoubtedly a very mistaken notion of the right of interference with the ryot's crops and cultivation which they consider themselves to possess as zemindars. They doubtless referred to force and constraint, which, in their position as zemindars, they were able to exercise towards their ryots with practical impunity.

3621. Mr. Fergusson.] Have the native zemindars and mahajans equally mistaken notions of the rights of cultivation?—I never heard of a zemindar insisting upon a ryot sowing any particular crop, unless that zemindar was also an indigo planter; neither have I ever heard of a mahajan exercising any interference in the cultivation of the crop of a ryot indebted to him. I never heard from mahajans that they found it necessary to exercise any interference whatever with the ryots; and I know cases in which ryots who, having given jute under advances from mahajans living at the distance of 30 or 40 miles away, have scrupulously fulfilled their engagements with the mahajans who had no zemindarry rights in the district, and no power in any way of interfering with the cultivation. But I know so far of zemindars collecting a cess on particular descriptions of crops, which is of course illegal; but this interference on the part of the zemindar is not general, and does not extend to interference with the cultivation of crops.

3622. President.] Practically, do not gantidars, jotedars, and other tenant proprietors, select their own crops, vary them, fence their own gardens, and plant them, and reap the produce, without any dictation or any interference on the part of the zemindar?—Always within my knowledge.

3623. Is there not a great increase of date and sugar-cane cultivation in parts of Baraset; and if so, to whom do you attribute that cultivation?—In the eastern portion of the district there is an extensive cultivation of date, which is entirely grown by the more prosperous ryots who have large jotes. And I also know several instances in which zemindars themselves purchase the ryots' lands, and made use of their own waste lands, by turning them into date gardens.

3624. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Do you know that a kind of leather strap is kept in the factories for beating ryots?—I have heard from ryots that there is a stick with a leather attached to it, called "Sham Chand," or "Ram Kant;" but this I merely heard from the Kishnaghur ryots.

3625. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you never heard that this was originally invented and used in the Honourable Company's silk filatures?—I have never known if this was the case; but I can quite believe that such may have been the case in those days.

[Commission adjourned at 6 P. M.]

Monday, 23d July 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., c. s., President.

Members:—W. F. Fergusson, Esq., Reverend J. Sale, and Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

The Honourable ASHLEY EDEN's Examination, continued.

3626. President.] You had occasion to enter into correspondence with the Commissioner regarding the cultivation of indigo, and to issue certain instructions to the police in 1859, and you are well aware of the refusal to cultivate indigo on the part of the ryots during the present season; to what causes mainly do you attribute that refusal?—The refusal to cultivate indigo is in Baraset nothing new. So long ago as the year 1855, a former magistrate, Mr. Mangles, having expressed an opinion (in certain cases connected with the cultivation of indigo) that the ryots could not legally be compelled to take advances for the cultivation of that crop against their wishes, the result was, that the ryots, having discovered this, at once threw up the cultivation, and the out-turn of the concern for that year was only 65 maunds. Complaints were made to Government by gentlemen at Calcutta connected with the indigo trade, and it was stated by themselves, that Mr. Mangles was reprimanded for having told the ryots that the cultivation was optional. Whether this reprimand was actually administered or not I cannot say; but the result was, that on Mr. Mangles leaving the district immediately afterwards, the ryots understood him to have been removed for affording them protection; and they again were afraid to resist the endeavours made by the planters to force this cultivation upon them, and sowed indigo that year to a small extent. The subsequent year being the year of the mutiny, and there being strong reasons to believe that the natives of Baraset were impressed with a great dislike of planting, and as they had on a previous occasion (about 1832) actually attacked the factories under the leadership of Titoo Mir, the planters on this occasion were afraid of similar attacks, and applied for and obtained a special guard for the protection of their lives and property; the consequence of which was, that the ryots that year, being afraid of being charged with intimidating and opposing the planter, sowed a moderate quantity of indigo. In a subsequent year, however, a question having arisen as to the right of the planter, on an ex parte allegation that ryots were under advances to him, to enter himself upon the lands of such ryots and cultivate their indigo, I expressed a strong opinion that the land, being the property of the ryots and not of the planters, the planters had no right whatever, on any such plea, to take possession of the ryots' lands, and that the magistrates were bound, in case of such trespass, to protect the ryots in their possession. On that occasion my views were not upheld by the Commissioner, and I was directed to induce the ryots of Mr. Larmour to sow their indigo. I went to the spot, and the ryots sowed. Next year I was determined to bring the question to a practical issue, and a similar question having arisen, I again gave the same order to my subordinates to afford protection to the ryots, in the event of the planters' servants entering violently into their lands to sow there a crop which the ryots objected to. My orders were again upset by the Commissioner (Mr. Larmour's case of 1858-59), and I was reprimanded. I remonstrated, and the result was the correspondence in the Blue Book, in which my order was finally upheld. Early in 1859, Mr. Prestwich and Mr. Warner having complained to me that their ryots refused to take advances to settle the accounts for the past year, and having requested me to use my influence to make them take advances, I stated my inability to do so, and told them the only way of inducing their ryots to sow, or to enter into the cultivation, would be by offering them a remunerative price. Instead of doing this, they complained to the Lieutenant Governor, Mr. Halliday, and the result was an interview as described in the Lieutenant Governor's minute, page 151 of the Blue Book. After this I drew up a vernacular paper, or rubakari, which is given in page 156 of the Blue Book, and the ryots then learnt that it really was optional for them to enter into contracts, or to refuse to do so. The fact that it was optional spread generally throughout the district, and ryots came from Jessore and Kishnaghur, and took authenticated copies of my order. Knowing that the effect of the intimation would be to spread gradually throughout Bengal a knowledge of the fact, that it was optional with ryots to enter into the contracts or not, as they thought fit, I apprehended that the result of such knowledge would be to put a stop to the forced system then existing. I thought it necessary to obtain the sanction of the Commissioner previously to granting such copies. The rubakari was issued on the 20th February 1859. In the following season the question of the right of the planter was again discussed between myself and the Commissioner, and the final orders of the Government alluded to above were received, laying down a distinct principle on this point. This was subsequent to the issue of that rubakari. Copies of the Government Order were forwarded to the sub-divisions for the information and guidance of the deputy magistrates in charge of those sub-divisions, and by one of them a parwanna was issued, viz., by the deputy magistrate of Kalaroa, which is said by the planters and their advocates to have been the cause of the ryots' refusal to sow. That parwanna was not issued with my knowledge, as explained in my letter to Government. A natural consequence

Hon.
A. Eden.

23 July 1860.

Hon.
A. Eden.

23 July
1860.

of the ryots' finding that they were really free agents, and that for the first time for a long period of years there was an inclination displayed by the authorities to afford them that practical protection, which had all along been theirs by law and theory, was, that they refused to sow, and appealed to the authorities for protection from force. I do not believe that, as has been stated by the planters and others, the ryots ever believed that it was the wish of Government that they should not sow indigo, but I believe simply that they believed it to be optional. I may add, that I long foresaw that such a crisis was at hand; and in the late great rise in the price of all commodities, and the labour market, nothing short of military force could have for any period compelled the ryots to continue the cultivation of the crop, which, though always distasteful to them, had latterly involved a pecuniary loss which they were unable to bear.

3627. Then are we to understand that, in your opinion, the compulsory character of the cultivation is the primary and original cause of the dislike; the late rise in prices the additional cause; and the sudden knowledge that entering into contracts was purely optional with the ryots, was the approximate cause that set the whole thing in motion?—Yes, that is decidedly my opinion.

3628. Did you ever state to any planters that you foresaw the late crisis?—Yes, I did to Messrs. Forlong, Henry Deverell, Prestwich, and all with whom I had any conversation on the subject.

3629. Were there any peculiarities in the Baraset district which might make the ryots more keenly alive to their own rights, compared to the ryots of other districts, say, for instance, Pubna and Moosshedabad, or even Jessore and Kishnaghur?—Baraset is a suburban district. The ryots are the most intelligent set of ryots that I have ever met with in any district. They have constant communication with the merchants in Calcutta, and know all that is going on in the neighbourhood; being Sharawallas (or Ferazees), they have a complete organization, and frequently meet together to interchange ideas. On account of the great influx of troops into the large military stations of Dum-Dum and Barrackpore, as well as in Calcutta, the value of the produce of their lands has greatly increased; a considerable manufacturing population has even sprung up in the district, for the purpose of supplying the demand for gunny, and irrespective therefore of the increased demand for export crops, they have also had to supply a surplus for the population labouring for wages in the manufacture of gunny, and on the railroad which is being made in the district. It should be recollected that every two maunds of rice or seed exported from this country requires a gunny bag, and they have therefore had a ready sale for the jute employed in making these bags. The rise in the labour and produce market has of course made it still more distasteful to the ryots to have to give up a portion of their land to unprofitable crops. In addition to this, Baraset, which is a small district, has three sub-divisional magistrate's offices, in addition to the sudder magistrate's office; it has therefore been easy to control the police, and the people have had to go but a short distance to get a hearing for their complaints. I believe that the manufacture of indigo has never paid the planter in Baraset for the last eight or nine years.

3630. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you not perceive much difference between the language of your rubakari of February 1859, where you say the ryots are free to take advances, and your letter of the 17th August, in which you say that the ryots had liberty to sow any crop they liked, and do you not think it certain that the parwana of Baboo Hemchunder Ker, embodying terms of your letter, would be interpreted by the ryots as to its being optional for them to evade their contracts?—My letter and my rubakari were on two entirely different subjects, and merely entered into the questions specially before me in each case. The rubakari had reference to the compulsory attendance of ryots at the factory to receive advances, and to be made to enter into contracts. The letter however merely gave cover to Government order, laying down the principle upon which a magistrate should act in the event of a planter attempting to enter forcibly on the lands of the ryots, on the allegation that the ryot was under advances to sow. There could not therefore be any great similarity between two letters relating to two such different subjects. I deny that the parwana does embody the remarks contained in my letter; and I further am decidedly of opinion, from information derived from competent persons, official and non-official, that that parwana had nothing whatever to do with the present position of the ryots, except so far as it further confirmed them in the idea that they were at length about to receive protection from oppression; and I am satisfied that if that parwana had never been written, the same reluctance to sow would have shown itself.

3631. How do you account for the Baraset concern having sown a large portion of their cultivation this season, and subsequent to your leaving the district?—It is not for me to say how the ryots have been induced to do that which they all along objected to do, but I believe it to have arisen, partly from a rumour that was spread, that I had been under the displeasure of the Government for protecting the ryots, and had been transported out of Bengal into Orissa; and partly from the fact, that the new manager, Mr. Larmour, gained over many of the influential ryots, whom he had previously denounced as turbulent persons, by making them Devans, Naibs, and Gomastas of the factories. These men, although they do not cultivate themselves, have sufficient influence over their own Koorfa ryots to make them sow; and after all, the sowings only amount I believe to 5,641 beegahs and six cottahs, of which 819 beegahs and 11 cottahs belong to a new factory not in the district.

3632. But does not the fact of 5,000 beegahs having been sown, nullify your previous statements as to the determination of the ryots not to sow, as to their superior intelligence, and as to their advantage in proximity to Calcutta, and the possession of a greater proportion of sub-divisions?—I believe that nearly two-thirds of this amount has been sown nij-abad by the planter, who has hired these lands for this year at a high rate. I believe further, that the indigo cultivation enforcement law has created a panic throughout the country, and that the ryots have this year thought it better to prevent any collision with the factory, with this assurance that by next year they will receive full protection in their rights. I do not believe further, that the Koorfa (or dependent ryots) are free agents in this matter.

3633. Do you consider that the same reasons account account for Mr. Larmour's having been able to sow all his mulnath lands within the Baraset district?—I do not know that the Mulnath lands have been sown, and if so I do not know under what circumstances they have been sown.

3634. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Are you aware that some of the magistrates issued parwannas to the darogahs, enjoining them to allow the planter to sow any lands that they wished, and to prevent any ryots from objecting to the planters sowing their lands?—I have heard that since I have been in Calcutta, but have no personal knowledge of it.

3635. Mr. Salé.] Did you find that your notification in Baraset, to the effect that the ryots are at liberty to sow what crop they pleased on their lands, had any prejudicial effect, on any cultivation, save that of indigo, such as jute, sugar, tobacco, &c.?—Certainly not, it was complained of this having stopped the cultivation of indigo, but of no other crop, many of which were grown in advances in the Baraset district, such as rice, tobacco, and jute.

3636. Did you ever meet with any instances in which the ryots tried to evade obligations arising from advances taken for crops, other than indigo?—No, never, on the contrary I have known ryots refuse to sell their jute at a high price to the Baraset jail, because they were under advances to the Mahajans living on the banks of the Hooghly.

3637. Can you state from your knowledge whether the persons making those advances are in the habit of exercising a strict supervision over the ryots during the cultivation of the crops advanced for?—No, they exercise no supervision whatever, and have no means of exercising such supervision.

3638. Do you know whether the persons making those advances are in the habit of fixing the prices of the produce, when the advances are made?—Yes, the bargain is always made at the time of giving the advance, according to the condition of the market. The same people do not always make the same bargain every year. A dealer making an advance would get the produce at a lower rate than if he bought in the market at the time; this is the object for which this accommodation is given.

3639. Are many cases instituted in the courts by producers, or by those making the advances?—As regards the civil courts, I have no accurate knowledge, but as regards the criminal courts, I have never had a case arising out of this question. The only complaints that I ever heard made were in 1859: that year a large number of ryots came to me, and said that, owing to the fear of a famine, mahajuns would not give them advances of grain; and that as they had sold all their grain to those mahajuns at the cutting of the crop, they would suffer great distress if advances were withheld.

3640. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you know if written agreements are taken on the occasion of such advances as you have mentioned?—Written agreements are taken in the case of rice; but I never had cause to ascertain whether the same system is pursued with regard to all other crops, but from my knowledge of them, and the way they manage business, I believe it would be taken, and that on stamp paper.

3641. Do such agreements generally stipulate that the whole of the ryot's crop shall be made over to the mahajun at the price fixed, or only a portion?—I never read the stipulation; but the condition, as I understood it, was that the ryot, for one maund of rice, should pay back a maund and a quarter at the time of the cutting the rice. In the case of rice for seed, he would have to pay back a maund and half.

3642. President.] In the case of rice, over the cultivation of which the mahajun exercises little or no supervision, would it not be more correct to say that the question is not one of advances at all, but that the ryot borrows a maund of rice, to feed himself and his family, when the market is high, and pays it back at 25 or 50 per cent. interest, when he has gathered in his crop; and that the mahajun finds it profitable to accumulate stores of grain, and to lend them on the above terms?—That is perhaps a more correct description of the transaction, but, in practice, the interest is not nearly 25 or 50 per cent., because a maund of rice at the season of advances is very nearly equal in value to a maund and quarter of rice in the harvest time; and the real object of the mahajun is not so much to obtain a high rate of interest from his regular constituents as to ensure a large stock of rice to sell in distant markets by keeping up two connexions with a considerable body of ryots engaged in rice cultivation, and who would naturally deal with him.

3643. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] If a ryot were allowed to cultivate all his lands with rice, and other crops of his own liking, do you not think he would be able to pay off his mahajun's debts, and in one year or two become independent?—It is within my own knowledge, that within the last two years ryots have, owing to the high price of grain, been enabled to pay off their debts to the mahajuns. And one of the largest mahajuns in Orissa told me that this year he had been obliged to modify the terms on which he lent rice; and it stands to reason that the more land a man has, affording a profit, the sooner he would be in a position to accumulate, and be independent of his mahajuns, provided he received sufficient protection.

3644. Mr. Fergusson.] Will not the landholder, as in all other countries, obtain a large portion of this rise in price of the produce of the land, or what portion of the land in Baraset do you estimate as held by ryots whose rents cannot be enhanced?—I believe that nearly all the ryots of Baraset are permanent hereditary occupiers, whose rent cannot be enhanced, many of them having pottas from the old Kishnaghur Rajahs. I allude to the jotedars, and not to the koorfa ryots, who of course cultivate a great portion of the district under these jotedars.

3645. Is not the system of advances, both for produce and work, almost universal in that district, and in Bengal?—I believe the system is very general, but I think, in the present time, that important works can be carried out without any advances; in support of which I beg to hand a letter which I have received from Captain Harris, the superintending engineer, Cuttack Circle, showing that on the spur which is being erected at the mouth of the Kedjuri river, as many as 1,500 coolies per diem were at work, none of whom had received a pice of advances. These men came from all parts of the country.

3646. President.] Have you any means of informing the Commission of the comparative cost of cultivating indigo, rice, and other crops, and of the respective produce of the same?—I beg to hand a statement, showing that the cost of growing indigo on tobacco land is Rs. 13. 6. a beegah; and

Hon.
A. Eden.

23 July 1860.

Hon.
A. Eden.

23 July
1860.

and the produce of 20 bundles per beegah would only be four rupees, entailing thereby a loss of Rs. 9. 6., and showing also that a crop of tobacco, according to the details of cultivation given in Major Smyth's statistical report, would amount to 24 rupees, and would produce a crop, according to my calculation, of seven maunds, at five rupees, but according to Major Smyth's report, 13 maunds, giving the ryot a clear profit, according to my calculation, of 11 rupees. I may add that, in 1857, tobacco was selling in Baraset at 18 rupees a maund. I also hand in a comparative statement of a crop of indigo and rice grown on the same land, by which it will appear that by indigo the ryot loses R. 1. 14., and by the rice he gets Rs. 10. 7. (filed accordingly). This information I have derived from inquiries made from ryots at various periods during the last three years, and partly from the statistical reports of the Revenue Surveyor. My reason for giving the rent at three rupees is, that the land is required for the whole 12 months, and therefore I have given a full average rent. The rent of the rice land which I have given as one rupee, being of an unfair description, I have calculated the produce of the indigo on the rice land as one-half of the out-turn of indigo on tobacco land.

3647. Do you consider it indispensable to the cultivation of indigo, that there should be a system of advances?—No, I do not think it indispensable that the planters should make any advances. The planters say that the ryots are so dishonest that they invariably take advances with intent to defraud. The ryots say, "We don't want advances;" and the real struggle always is, as proved by numerous cases, to get them to take advances to get them in the factory books; this being so, both parties should, according to their own statements, be satisfied by an abolition of the advance system. The planter would not run the risk of fraud, and the ryot would be allowed to please himself as to the parties from whom he would take accommodation; if even therefore it was admitted that the ryots had not even yet advanced to that state of prosperity at which they would be able to cultivate a crop without any advances at all, it would surely be better to allow the ryot to procure the necessary advance from some other source to which he has not the same objection. I believe that if a more remunerative price were offered, any amount of plant would be forthcoming, without the planter's advances.

3648. Supposing the contract to be voluntary, and the cultivation to be remunerative to the ryot, you would not ever recommend such a thing as advances?—No.

3649. Mr. Fergusson.] Can you say what you consider would be a remunerative price for the ryot, say in bundles per rupee?—This is a question which is almost impossible to answer, for we have no means of ascertaining the market price of a crop which has hitherto been grown under a system of small monopolies; the cost of production or natural price would be covered in the case of tobacco lands by payments which would bring the price per beegah to Rs. 13. 6.; i.e., supposing the average to be 15 bundles to one rupee per bundle; this, however, would give the ryot no profit whatever: on rice land this calculation would bring the price per beegah up to Rs. 3. 14., which would be the actual price of production without a profit; but you must take into consideration, in fixing a fair price, the value of other crops which could be produced upon the same land. Why should ryots be made to sow for mere cost of production?

3650. Are you aware that in Rungpore lacs of bundles of indigo plant are produced and sold in the best market, not exceeding four bundles per rupee, and that the same takes place in Bancoorah and Beerbhoom?—I have no knowledge of this fact, neither have I any knowledge of the peculiarities of those districts, such as will enable me to account for this.

3651. President.] How do you reconcile the fact of advances being made by Government for the cultivation of the poppy and the manufacture of salt with your opinion, that even under a voluntary system of indigo cultivation, advances would not be necessary?—With reference to the salt, the explanation is as regards the Cuttack agency, of which alone I have experience, that the lands on which the salt is made are unfit for any other purpose, and that the only crop which grows anywhere in the neighbourhood of these lands is rice, that the means of communication in that part of the country is so difficult, as almost to exclude these men from the large markets, and their rice is consequently of no great value, therefore they depend almost entirely upon their salt advances to carry them through that part of the year when there is no rice cultivation going on. Indeed, by their own petitions, and by the report of the Commissioner, Mr. A. J. Mills, it appears that without these advances they would starve: to use the words of their petition, "our circumstances are so unfavourable, had we not have been supplied for the last two years with rice for our advances, we should all have starved to death, and not a Molunghee would have survived to manufacture." In an article of excise it is necessary that the supervising officers should have that entire control and power of selection as to the men employed for the manufacture, which could hardly be obtained except under a system of advances. As to opium, judging from the measures which it was necessary to adopt in 1848 and 1850, with a view of decreasing the amount of cultivation, I consider that then or any other time when the profits of opium are as much in advance of the profits of other crops, as they were then, such system of advances would be unnecessary. To check the cultivation, which was increasing too rapidly, it was necessary to issue positive restrictions; and it appears to me that if these advances had been withheld, there would have been no difficulty in getting opium without advances, since the cultivation was so popular. This is a question, however, the practical details of which I have had no opportunities of studying; and I know nothing of the condition of the people of the opium districts.

3652. Then we are to understand that you would gladly see advances discontinued whenever possible in any kind of cultivation?—I believe the system to be very injurious, and would gladly see it abolished from every description of cultivation and work.

3653. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you believe that the Molungees would manufacture salt, even at greatly enhanced rates to them, if advances were withheld, and if compulsion were not used by Government in the same way in which it is said to be done by indigo planters?—I never heard of any compulsion being used in the salt department, and I do not believe that in that part of the country which I have had an opportunity of making making inquiries, viz., Cuttack, any system of compulsory manufacture exists. In 1845-46 the cost of manufacture and transport at Cuttack had the effect of raising the price of Cuttack salt above the price of salt of other agencies; it was considered desirable to decrease the amount of salt manufactured in that district, but for political reasons, and on account of the great discontent which made itself known at the prospect of the cessation of the salt manufacture, the manufacture was continued on the earnest representation of the Commissioner, Mr. Mills. It is probable that enhanced rates would bring in to the manufacture a richer class of people, having sufficient capital to enable them to work without advances; but the people who now reside in that part of the country are, from local circumstances, so situated that their rice crop alone would not carry them through the year; and great portion of the year they live in a great measure on their advances. I put in a rough form of kabulyat for salt advances. No advances are made without proper security being given in the salt department.

3654. Do you know that the indigo planters at Nuddea, by supplying rice and making advances for indigo, have saved the people from starvation in 1838, or other years, in the same way as it appears to have been done in Cuttack?—I never heard that such was the case, but I can understand that planters who are also zemindars would, for the sake of keeping their own ryots, naturally expend large sums for this purpose. I can mention native zemindars who have done the same with the same object.

3655. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Is it not the fact that almost every Molunghee receives fazil after the manufacturing is closed?—The amount of the first advances in the Cuttack Agency in 1858-59 was 59,935, and the second advance 46,063, and the fazil was Rs. 7,350. 10. 6.: there were only outstanding balances at the end of the season, of Rs. 2,723. 15. 0., out of Rs. 1,13,349. 2. 6. These outstanding balances were refunded by the Molunghees themselves during the year.

3656. President.] Have you any knowledge of petitions being presented to the Board of Revenue by the poppy cultivators of Behar, complaining that the agent would not allow them to cultivate?—I have in my hand a petition presented by 18 cultivators, complaining to the Board that "they have been cruelly deprived of the privilege of opium cultivation, on which they and their families have solely depended." I have also another petition from other ryots to the same effect. These petitions are dated March and June 1851. It has always been one of the most severe modes of punishment in the opium department to deprive a ryot of his license to cultivate, for smuggling or other misconduct. This was of course only a punishment so long as opium was a much more profitable crop than it is now; the rise of prices of other crops has made opium now less remunerative, and Government has been compelled to raise the price from Rs. 3. 4. to 4 per seer.

3657. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Do you know that the planters assist the ryots with medicines when they are sick, and with loans when their houses are blown down, and that they establish schools for the education of the ryots' children; and do not the planters construct roads and offer other collateral advantages, which in some measure compensate for the want of direct profit to the ryots?—In the districts in which I have been, I have never seen schools or dispensaries, or other establishments, erected by planters; but I believe it is the habit of every planter, as well as of every Englishman, to have a family medicine chest, out of which he no doubt may give an occasional dose to a ryot; but from my knowledge of the ryot, I am of opinion that a dose of medicine is considered as anything but a collateral advantage, and I cannot think that any amount of medicine would be considered by them as an equivalent for loss of liberty and money, which the indigo cultivation involves. I have heard that in Mulnath, Nischindpore, and Salmoodia there are dispensaries kept up by planters; but even these would not compensate the ryots of Moorshedabad and Malda for the losses which they sustained by the cultivation of indigo. I have heard of occasional loans being given, without interest, on the loss of cattle and other accidents of that description, but they are always carried to the ryots' indigo account; and I knew of roads having been made by planters between their out-factories, and in such places as without such roads the plant could not have been brought into the factory, but I can call to my mind no single instance of a road being constructed for the public good. I have known planters who were useful members of the Ferry Fund Committee.

3658. President.] Do you not think the establishments of large concerns causes a considerable circulation of money in a district?—I do not consider that the establishment of such concerns has the effect of bringing into any district any amount of capital, which would not find its way there, without such concerns. For instance, if a lac of rupees is sent up to carry on an indigo concern, for one year, the amount which would find its way into the hands of the ryots, would be, at most, 50,000 rupees, supposing every ryot received a full payment of two rupees per beegah, while I believe he seldom ever receives that amount; this would represent a cultivation of 25,000 beegahs, and it would be a sum which would not remunerate for the cost of cultivation. If, on the other hand, these 25,000 beegahs had been left in the hands of the ryots to produce a crop giving a profit of 10 rupees a beegah, the amount brought into the district from the sale of that crop would be two lacs and 50,000 rupees, therefore, so far from the concern having done good, by distributing in the district half a lac, it keeps two lacs out of the district, which would have come in, had the ryots had the use of their own lands.

3659. Mr. Fergusson.] Are you aware that this particular blue dye is the largest dyeing materials used in the world, and one of the largest articles of sea-borne commerce in the world?—I believe it to be so.

3660. Are you aware that four-fifths of the whole of the indigo produced in the world come from the territories of your late honourable masters?—I am aware that in the year 1600 indigo was the main staple by which the East India Company made their profits, and that for many years they fostered the trade and made it what it is; but at one period it was found to grow better in the West Indies; and after carrying on the trade for a century the East India Company gave up indigo as an article of investment in favour of our West Indian Colonies; but in the West Indies, as now in this country it was

Hon.
A. Eden.

23 July 1860.

Hon.
A. Eden.

23 July
1860.

found to be less profitable than other crops, and was given up and again taken up by the East India Company, who, having lost 80,000 l. in the year 1779, by contract, magnanimously made it over to their servants and to private traders. The East India agents being unable to advance money to enable the settlers to carry on the trade, the East India Company, therefore, with a view of fostering and encouraging the cultivation of indigo in this country, advanced to the indigo planters, at various times, no less than a million of money, and in one year advanced no less than 137,000 l.; it is to their special protection that the present trade in indigo is to be attributed, and not to private capitalists. I derive this information from the East India Company's memorandum on private trade, dated 1806, published by order of Parliament.

3661. President.] Considering the great importance of the indigo trade, can you suggest any changes in the present system, so that it should work well between planter and ryot?—The only changes I can suggest are that the trade should be a fair, open, and voluntary trade; and I believe that indigo would then find its own value in the market as readily as any other article of trade; I believe that if it was left to competition the plant would soon find its own price, and one which would remunerate both parties; if it cannot do this then there is something special in the nature of the dye which makes it unsuitable to this country as an agricultural speculation. I certainly cannot recommend any modification of the present system, but that it should be entirely done away with, root and branch, and that real protection should be afforded to the ryots who would then doubtless give it at a remunerative rate, without any necessity of special laws, or illegal compulsion. I do not however think, that with the memory of the past, they will cultivate it on any terms for some years to come.

3662. Have you any objection to planters holding courts, provided that ryots attend voluntarily?—I believe it to be open to very great abuse, and I believe that a planter cannot help being prejudiced in favour of some ryot to the detriment of the others. But if any two ryots refer any question or dispute to the arbitration of the planter, I should think it would be very desirable that they should do so, but I strongly object to any planter being put in a position to give effect to a decision to which both parties do not agree.

3663. Do you think that the establishment of indigo factories has the effect of diminishing crimes and felonies, and does it not increase affrays, and agrarian outrages?—No, for I have observed that in some districts, where there are no factories whatever, there are comparatively few violent crimes. As regards dacoity, I believe that those who are principally engaged in dacoity are men who have been brought up as lattials, and who first learnt violence and plunder in agrarian outrages; and I believe that lattials are to be found in greater numbers in indigo districts than in non-indigo districts. Mr. Ricketts, the late Member of Council, officially expressed a strong opinion, that the establishment of indigo factories increased rather than decreased violent crimes. In the province of Orissa, in which there are no indigo concerns, burglary and theft are as constant occurrences as in any district in Bengal, but dacoity and affrays are entirely unknown.

3664. Mr. Fergusson.] Then you do not think that the residence of European gentlemen in the interior, has improved either the physical or moral condition of the people?—Although I have no doubt that there are many individuals who have done great good and rendered assistance to the authorities, yet as a general rule, I do not think the residence of indigo planters has improved, to any great extent, the physical or moral condition of the people. I believe there are to be found more bad characters settled around indigo factories, than in distant villages in which an European has never been seen. My remarks do not apply either to silk manufactories, or rum distillers, or Sunderbund settlers; of the latter of whom I had a great many in my district, but against whom I never had a single complaint. I allude only to the indigo planters who, as a rule, live in constant antagonism with the people around them; a state of things which cannot conduce to the peace of the country.

3665. President.] Have you ever known of cases in which a planter did not enhance rents in a putni, or ijara, on condition that the ryot should cultivate indigo?—I believe the ryots always paid the full rents which a planter is legally entitled to collect, even in ijaras, in which no special ijardarri fee is taken, but the general rule of planters, who hold ijaras, is to collect a special fee of one or two annas per rupee in excess of the legal rents, to repay the expense of the farm or the putni, as for instance, Mr. Larmour, in my district, took an ijardari fee of one and a half anna per rupee.

3666. Had you any missionaries in Baraset, or did the influence of other missionaries extend to Baraset?—With the exception of a native preacher in the town of Baraset, and with the exception of a gentleman once passing through the district, in a boat, I never saw or heard of a missionary the whole time I was in Baraset, and I am quite convinced that no influence, direct or indirect, has been exercised by any missionary over the ryots of Baraset.

3667. Do you know a substantial ryot, named Amir Biswas, of Baraset, who has tobacco lands, and sows indigo?—I know him very well, he is one of the most influential and respectable ryots in the district of Baraset, he is a jotedar with large property.

3668. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you think that if you had issued a parwana, embodying the words of section XI., of Act X., it would have the effect of inducing most ryots to withhold their rents, and what is your opinion as to the withdrawal of that power from the zemindar?—I do not think that if I had issued a parwana, embodying that section, that it would have had any such effect upon the ryot. For since the passing of that Act I have done all in my power to make the ryots acquainted with the provisions of that Act, and when they have complained I have speedily pointed out section XI., and it has not had the effect of inducing them to withhold their lawful rents. This refers to Cuttack. I was not in Baraset when the Act was brought into operation. I believe that section is one of the greatest boons that has ever been granted to the ryots during the present century. It rescinds a law which was the main cause of half the oppression, which they as ryots have suffered ever since the date of the permanent settlement.

3669. Have you no doubts as to the effects of the withdrawal of that power from zemindars, and does it not appear to you likely that the consequences consequences may be the forfeiture of many estates from ryots refusing or delaying to pay rents?—No, I apprehend no such results; it leaves in the hands of the zemindar full power to send over to demand the rent, and any other power beyond that with which it could be invested, would have the effect of again reducing the ryots to the practical serfdom in which they were before the passing of that Act. I have consulted several zemindars in Cuttack and elsewhere, who appear to apprehend no difficulty whatever of this description; and moreover, since the passing of this Act it would not appear that the landed property had been at all depreciated in value, for a few weeks ago, I sold an estate for arrears of revenue, the Sudder Jumma of which was 814 rupees, and the surplus collections 462 rupees, for no less than 24,000 rupees, and this too in a non-permanently settled district. Had there been any such apprehension as that alluded to, no man would have invested his money in this way.

3670. President.] Have you ever had any personal difference with any European planter?—Never, of any sort or description, except in connexion with the performance of my duties as magistrate.

3671. Can you state if a new purchaser of a factory pays in full for the outstanding balances in addition to the buildings for the factory?—The Baraset concern was purchased by Mr. Prestwich for 1,50,000 rupees. The outstanding balances were Rs. 1,14,474. 2. 10; after deducting the value of block, stock, ijaras, and dena pouna, the price given for the outstanding indigo balances must have been little more than nominal.

[Commission adjourned at 5 P.M.]

Tuesday, 24th July 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C.S., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., C.S.; W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Rev. J. Sale; Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

WILLIAM MORAN, Esq., of Calcutta.

3672. President.] WILL you state to the Commission in what districts you have either managed or held factories in which you had interest?—I was manager and proprietor of the Mooteharri concern for a period of 22 years in Tirhoot. I have had no personal experience except in Tirhoot, although I have been interested in other concerns in Bengal. It is now 11 years since I left Tirhoot.

3673. Would you state to the Commission the nature of the system followed in Tirhoot regarding the taking or procurement of lands, and the cultivation of the plant?—The cultivation of factories consists of two descriptions, one is by means of farms or putnis or zemindaries, and the other corresponds with the be-ilaka system in Bengal. In both descriptions the land is cultivated in assamiwar or ryotti, and ziraut or nij-abad. In some concerns the latter preponderates; generally speaking, throughout Tirhoot, there is a larger proportion of assamiwar than ziraut; with respect to the be-ilaka that forms a smaller proportion of the cultivation, certainly in the western parts of Tirhoot, but there are some concerns where the principal portions are held in land over which the planter has no leasehold or proprietary right.

3674. In the case of the cultivation by ziraut you found it necessary to obtain the actual occupancy of the land, and to cultivate either by your own ploughs or by borrowing ploughs?—Yes, in all cases of ziraut cultivation we either took the lease from the proprietor for that special purpose, or cultivated on our own farms. We either cultivated unoccupied lands or took lands from the assami.

72—I.

3675. In cases when you wished to obtain the lease of villages or estates, did you experience any difficulty at the hand of the zemindar beyond the mere difficulty of the terms of the lease?—There were, doubtless, cases in which we could by no means obtain leases, but generally it was a question of terms. In my own experience the terms were usually an increase on the jumma, or rent-roll, varying from 10 to 25 per cent.; in fewer cases some loans were given at generally lower rates of interest, payable out of the rents of the villages; in such cases the lease was generally given on the rent-roll of the villages. The leases extended from five to ten years. Towards the east of Tirhoot the practice was for the factory to make a loan, and the zemindar to give a lease; the money being repayable after a certain period, or being deducted by annual instalments out of the rents.

3676. Then on the whole you had nothing to complain of as against the zemindar, and the only question was, whether the factory and the zemindar could agree to terms?—With the exceptions before mentioned, this is the case. Perhaps if a favourite servant or some relative of the proprietor were living in the village, we would find considerable difficulty in coming to terms, and sometimes all endeavours would fail. At present, I understand that in Chumparun, matters are easily arranged with the zemindars.

3677. A large portion of Chumparun is in the hand of one zemindar?—Yes, the Maharajah or Bettia holds the larger portion of Chumparun. In the same way, in the east of Tirhoot, the Rajah of Durbunga has very large zemindaries.

3678. In cases when you had not obtained the lease

Hon.
A. Eden.

23 July 1860.

W. Moran,
Esq.

24 July
1860

W. Moran,
Esq.

24 July
1860.

lease of the village, did you ever find the zemindar impede or obstruct your cultivation?—Yes, this was frequently the case.

3679. Could you state the reasons which probably might have induced him to do so?—I should say it was principally a dislike to any independent party coming into his possessions without his permission or without offering him the usual salami.

3680. Did this dislike ever lead to affrays, previous to the giving of the ijara?—I cannot call to mind any instance, but I believe it has in some factories been the subject of affrays.

3681. After the lease was once obtained from the factory, did you ever find you were troubled by the zemindar or his servants?—No.

3682. Before you obtained the lease, were the ryots generally willing to contract with you, without asking the permission of the zemindar or waiting for his dictation?—In some instances they were, and in a great many I have been urged by the assamis of the village to take the lease, so that they might be attached to the factory. In very few cases would they oppose the wishes of the zemindar; generally they looked to him. If it was the case of large zemindars no assami would cultivate without their permission. In that of small zemindars we could enter into engagements with the ryots themselves.

3683. Was it the practice to give advances to the ryots and to require them to sign contracts?—Yes, in the first instance, on taking the lease of the villages, contracts are taken for the period of the lease, and advances are given at the rate of two rupees per beegah, which is equivalent to an acre, or three Bengal beegahs; a further advance of one rupee per beegah is given at the sowing time, and another rupee at the weeding. The advances for weeding when urgent are paid in cash to assist the ryot. My plan was somewhat similar to that described by Mr. Hollings, i. e., a Jeth or substantial ryot is appointed to act as agent for the ryots of the village as between them and the factory, and they entered into contracts and settled accounts for the ryots. In be-ilaka villages it is the custom, I believe, throughout Tirhoot to take assamiwar contracts, but of this I cannot speak confidentially; we did not hold the Jeth ryot responsible, except for his own individual engagement. He received a small commission for his trouble. In large villages we had sometimes more than one Jeth ryot, but their action was joint and they shared in the commission.

3684. Did the head ryot generally take the advances for all the assamis, or did they all come in and take their own?—In the farmed villages the Jeth ryot arranged with the tahsildar or native collector for credit in the rent account for the subsequent advances; I mean after the first advance above mentioned. In be-ilaka villages the advances were paid either to the ryot individually or to the Jeth ryots.

3685. After the advances had been given, was it necessary to look after the ryots, to see if they cultivated?—Undoubtedly, as it is in every case where a native has to perform work within a given time. Owing to the system of large factories in Tirhoot, there was an European manager or assistant at each place, who, with the assistance of native servants, superintended the cultivation. There are no such servants in Tirhoot as gomastahs in charge of a factory; the system is this: a thokdar has charge of, generally, 100 beegahs, a zillahdar superintends the charges of three or four thokdars, and over these is the sezawal, whose business is entirely confined to the cultivation, cutting, and dispatch of the indigo plant. These were supervised at all times, whenever there was work to be done.

3686. At what time of the year would the indigo seed be generally put into the ground, and were you dependent on spring showers for the same?—In March we were not dependent on spring showers, except for a fractional proportion of the cultivation. Supposing that the usual amount of rain fell during the monsoon, viz. from June to October, say 40 inches, sufficient moisture would be retained in the soil.

3687. Is there any system of irrigation in Tirhoot for indigo or other crops?—Not for indigo, but for opium, irrigation is in many places had recourse to.

3688. After the sowing is completed, was it necessary to urge the ryots to weed?—Certainly, without weeding, the plant would not come to anything. We usually find it necessary to weed twice.

3689. Was the cutting and carting performed by the ryot, and at his own expense?—The cutting was, but not the carting, which was quite a different item altogether, and was always paid by the factory.

3690. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you charge the ryot for the seed, or give it to him gratuitously?—We gave it to him without charge.

3691. The crop being ripe, how do you arrange for the payment of the plant?—It is the strict duty of the European manager or assistant to measure in the cold weather, every portion of the cultivation, and write the details down; the name of the village, the name of the ryot, the position of the field, the number of poles or luggis, and the area in beegahs. This is called the preparative measurement. In the end of May or beginning of June a second measurement takes place, which is called the mal or plant measurement, also under the personal supervision of the European in charge, and an assessment of the crop takes place. Thus, opposite each assami's name in the first measurement book, and under the proper heads, is stated the proportion of plant and "failed" in each field. For the quantity of plant the price of Rs. 6. 8. is allowed per beegah, and three rupees a beegah for "failed lands," or lands which have no plant at all. In both cases of measurement a copy in Hindi of the result of the measurement is taken at the time by the putwari of the village, and another by a native writer from the factory. This was the practice in my factories; but I believe in some concerns in Tirhoot there are three standards of payment, viz. two qualities of plant, and "failed."

3692. Then according to this plan no ryots ever received more than Rs. 6. 8. a beegah at the time you are speaking of?—For the Tirhoot beegah, that was the general plan when I was there.

3693. Were the advances deducted from the sum of Rs. 6. 8., and at what time and place was any balance paid and account squared?—Yes, the advances were deducted on the settlement of the account, which took place at the close of the season, in September or October, through the agency of the Jeth ryots, but in the be-ilaka villages we used to settle with the ryots themselves at the same time.

3694. In

3694. In cases of failure, did you generally prevent the ryot from cultivating the next year, or did you take into consideration the chances of climate as having spoilt the crop? In short, were cases of failure usually owing to idleness, or owing to accidents beyond the assami's control?—No, we did not prevent them in case of failure arising from idleness; we should have exercised a more strict supervision the next year; but I cannot call to my mind a single instance in which failure of a crop arose from positive neglect on the part of the ryots. I have reason to believe that this has occurred in other factories in belilaka villages; i. e., the striking the name of the ryots off the book. I remember hearing of this having occurred in the Dooria concern.

3695. Then on the whole, you think that inspection and measurement by the European, and the payment of some of the advances at sowing time, was sufficient to ensure a reasonable amount of attention on the part of the ryots; and did you introduce any more improved method of cultivation to save time and labour?—Undoubtedly it was sufficient; and besides, we have introduced a more general use of the drill plough, which has saved great time and labour in the sowings; so much so, that a concern can now finish its sowing in one-third of the time hitherto required. The soil of Tirhoot is of a light nature, and our bullocks are better than the ordinary run of plough bullocks in Bengal. I should also state that the soil requires to be well pulverised before the drill plough can be used to advantage; and this is done by the country plough. Our principal object in using the drill plough is to save moisture, as well as to economise time and labour; and with this view, when we have a strong westerly wind in the daytime, we often sow with the drill plough during the night. In my concern we had about 400 drill ploughs, which we distribute to the ryots who find their own bullocks; all other concerns in proportion do the same.

3696. Is there a cold weather crop taken off the land which you cultivate with indigo?—None; we keep the land for the whole year; it lies fallow when indigo is not growing on it. We sometimes have a second cutting in September from the same plant.

3697. What is about the rent per beegah of indigo lands in Tirhoot?—I should say it was about Rs. 2. 8. a beegah, but I believe there has been a rise since I left the district; some opium lands now pay as high as 10 rupees a beegah.

3698. Did you find it necessary to change the lands for your indigo cultivation?—We always change as large a portion as we can yearly, as it is most desirable and beneficial to do so.

3699. Did you ever find that the interests of planters in regard to indigo, and those of Government in regard to the poppy cultivation, ever came into contact?—Yes, their interests clashed in some places, for two reasons: one was because a field once taken for poppy could not be changed for indigo, the poppy cultivator not being allowed to take advances if he substituted any other crop except the permitted ones, of which indigo was not one; and secondly, the poppy paid the cultivator more than any other crop.

3700. Mr. Temple.] Are you sure that poppy pays the cultivator more than any other crop; for instance, sugar-cane, betel-leaf, tobacco, or the like?—I think it did at the time I speak of, i. e., 11 years ago. I would, however, make an exception with regard to betel-leaf as a garden cultivation.

3701. When recently the Government increased the rates of remuneration to the opium ryots, did your indigo ryots ask for any increase to their rates?—I have not heard that it has been demanded by them, but when I was at home last year my superintendent wrote for my permission to increase the prices of the indigo plant, and the rates of various branches of labour. I sanctioned the price being raised, for indigo plant, to one rupee per beegah for every hath of the luggi; the hath being a fixed measure, whilst the beegah varies in size. The increase is to come into operation this season.

3702. Mr. Temple.] What is the average number of haths per luggi or measuring pole?—About seven throughout the district of Tirhoot, I should say.

3703. Has the rate of remuneration for coolie labour in the factories been increased?—I think it has for coolies and all kinds of labour. The labour is generally cheaper in Tirhoot than in Bengal; for instance, we used to get 20 ploughmen for a rupee per day, to work our nij ploughs.

3704. Mr. Sale.] Are we clearly to understand that there is, in no case whatever, a balance against the assami, carried on to other seasons, on account of indigo?—This can't possibly be, if he has sown his land, because the advances, two rupees in October and one rupee for sowing, are what he would be entitled to for what we call "failed" lands.

3705. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you balances against cartmen and coolies, and for advances made them?—Invariably at the close of the season there are some balances.

3706. Mr. Temple.] Does it ever happen that a ryot having received advances for indigo, sows his lands with some other crop?—Yes, I have heard of some cases; it once happened to a very serious extent in one of my large villages in about 1832, and then I put Regulation V. of 1830 in force with success, and that was the only case under that regulation which I remember; this case was brought about by the interference of the amins of the resumption department; on the whole, however, I should say that such breaches of contract are rare.

3707. During the present season have such breaches occurred more than in other years?—I have not heard of a single instance.

3708. Has the disposition of your ryot been at all affected by the excitement existing in some parts of Lower Bengal?—I don't think they have heard anything of it.

3709. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Do your ryots generally fulfil their contracts?—I have no reason to complain, but supervision is necessary.

3710. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you not consider that the people of Tirhoot and Behar generally fulfil their engagements, and are more honest and trustworthy than the people of Bengal?—I have not sufficient experience of the people of Bengal to answer that question to my own satisfaction.

3711. Mr. Temple.] On the whole, can you say whether the jeth ryots in Tirhoot were contented with the system, and cultivated indigo willingly without the employment of compulsion, direct or indirect?—I think they were content with the system, but I think that if it was not for the protection against the exactions of zemin-dars,

W. Moran,
Esq.

24 July
1860.

W. Moran,
Esq.

24 July
1860.

dars, police, and others, which they conceive was afforded them by their connexion with the factory, they would not have been induced to have cultivated indigo for the mere profit thereof. In illustration of this, I may mention that the Lieutenant Governor, when visiting Tirhoot on his tour, was casually informed by a ryot that the indigo was not remunerative, still it was worth his while to grow it, for the sake of the protection he received from the exactions of the police and others. As to compulsion, taking the previous remark into consideration, the proprietary power and influence when the planter was a landlord was brought to bear: in the belilaka, or villages not held by the concern, it was entirely optional, and the main inducement was the cash advances, and protection as above alluded to: as to direct compulsion, I am not aware of any.

3712. Were any lattials kept or hired, or was there anything like kidnapping or confining in godowns or any gross violence; and did any serious affrays or attacks upon villages occur?—As regards my own concern, I can say no to the question in toto, and, generally speaking, throughout Tirhoot. As some proof of the rarity of any of these occurrences, I cannot at this moment call to mind any instance of the violence referred to in the question. There may have been cases, but I am not aware of any such.

3713. Have any of your servants ever been accused of in any court of anything of this kind?—Not to my knowledge.

3714. From your knowledge of the character of the villagers, do you think that they would permit, for instance, a body of lattials or other organised body from any factory to gut or burn any of their villages?—The assamis in Tirhoot are a quiet people, and generally I would not answer for their resisting any considerable force. I speak particularly of my own concern; but I believe there are villagers in Tirhoot that would offer decided resistance to any attack upon them.

3715. But are there not districts in the Behar province, such as the Bhojpore tracts, including Sarun, Arrah, and other places, in which districts indigo is cultivated, and in which the character of the people would not yield to oppression or violence?—Most undoubtedly those districts furnished a large number of sepoys, who are of a very independent character.

3716. Is the name lattial familiarly known in Tirhoot or Behar generally?—No, I am not aware that a class of professional club men are known, at least in Tirhoot. In agrarian disturbances, bodies of men armed with clubs are invariably mixed up with affrays; but I am not aware of hired gangs being obtainable when required.

3717. In Behar generally, with what crop do you think indigo comes into competition?—With rain crops, such as Indian corn, but not rice; for it does not grow there to any extent on lands fit for indigo; with cold weather crops such as wheat and barley.

3718. Is indigo more or less profitable than these crops?—I should say that it was directly less profitable, but it is to be remembered that there is no risk with indigo; but as regards the other crops there is, and the ryot has to stand all loss.

3719. Mr. Sale.] Do you think that the people find the cultivation of indigo itself irksome to them?—Necessarily some must, from the fact that the land must be prepared for indigo within a specified time; and it is the object of the planter to get the land pulverised as soon as possible after the rains, so that it may retain its moisture, and strict supervision to ensure this is necessary; and, as a matter of course, it must be more or less irksome to them.

3720. Has the quantity of land in cultivation with indigo increased or decreased within your knowledge?—Taking Tirhoot on the whole, I scarcely think it has increased much. My own cultivation of 5,500 beegahs is somewhat in excess of former years.

3721. Mr. Fergusson.] If a ryot fulfils his engagements, is it not the case that there would be no irksomeness of supervision, and that the irksomeness would be entirely from his neglect to do so?—Decidedly so; many ryots work promptly and cheerfully, and get their work done in half the time the others do, and therefore require no pressing.

3722. Had you ever difficulty at any time in completing your ziraut cultivation in regard to hiring ploughs and the like?—We have a large establishment of our own of bullocks and ploughs, but have occasionally obtained ploughs from our villagers, for which we paid the usual rate, i. e., of four beegahs per rupee of two ploughings; but I believe that rate of late has increased.

3723. Can you state what proportion of the villages you hold in farm is cultivated with indigo?—I have not got the statistics by me to enable me to give an accurate reply, but I should say of my own villages about one-fifth or one-sixth, nominally one-fourth.

3724. Are you prepared to give an opinion, as to whether some points of the Tirhoot system, viz., the drill-plough, the advances at two different periods, and the valuation of the crop on the field could be introduced into Lower Bengal?—From the little that I have seen of the soil of Kishnaghur and Moorshedabad, I should be of opinion that the drill-plough would not answer, as the soil does not retain moisture, and must therefore be sown immediately after rain, so that no object could be gained by first pulverising the land and then sowing them with the drill. I see no reason why advances at two different periods should not be introduced into Bengal; I should think it very desirable. I think that the third change might be introduced, but the difficulty I apprehend is the early setting in of the rains, and the state of the country in Lower Bengal at the time the measurement and valuation would have to be made.

3725. About what height was the plant generally, when the Tirhoot measurement was made?—When it was about three-fourths grown, though when pressed for time, the measurement has sometimes not taken place till after the first manufacture, when the valuation is made on the stumps on the field.

3726. What do you estimate a fair average outturn of 1,000 Tirhoot beegahs of plant?—Two hundred and twenty-five maunds, inclusive of the second cutting. The second cutting depends on the earliness of the first cutting, and on favourable weather afterwards.

3727. Had you ever to complain of the conduct of the police or of the executive authorities in the district?—Yes; I have had most serious cause cause of complaint against one official, Mr. E. Woodcock, magistrate of Moteeharry; in consequence of the persecution which I suffered for several months at his hands, I appealed to Government, but I was informed that Mr. Woodcock was of unsound mind. The result upon my indigo operations was very ruinous, and involved me in very heavy losses at the time, as no respectable zemindar or others dare come near me. I had nothing to fear from the police.

3728. President.] As proprietor of that factory, you are working on your own capital, and free of debt?—Yes, I am working on my own capital.

3729. From your other experience are you in a position to state whether many of the concerns in Lower Bengal are working with their own or borrowed capital?—I should think a great many of them are working on borrowed capital.

3730. Can you state the amount of interest and commission for loan which a concern would pay, offering a fair margin of security, and purchased with a lac of borrowed capital?—I should say 10 to 12 per cent. interest, and 2½ per cent. commission.

3731. Supposing a further sum was required for the outlay, say 50,000 rupees, what would be the charge upon that?—The same rate of interest with 2½ per cent. on the sales of the produce, of which an agent would require a consignment to be made to him. To this is sometimes added a charge of one per cent. for the account current.

3732. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Besides this are there not other charges, such as brokerage and godown rent?—Yes, as a matter of course, the above are the usual agency charges.

3733. President.] When a concern is purchased, will you state exactly what properties are included in the purchase?—Besides the buildings, live and dead stock, putnis, the right of ijaras, the purchaser becomes entitled to the pouna, i. e. he has to pay the liabilities, and becomes entitled to receive all that is due to the factory. The terms on which the dena pouna are taken over may be varied. For instance, it is often stipulated that all the liability of the season just past, shall be paid by the outgoing proprietor, and any advances made on account of the approaching season, have to be refunded by the new purchaser; all other balances belong of right to the incoming purchaser.

3734. Then in such a case the new purchaser would be entitled to any balance of rents on the zemindary account due before the purchase is concluded?—I should certainly say so.

3735. Could you state what would be the market price of a concern of, say 10,000 beegahs, with a cultivation in the proportion of 8,000 ryotti and 2,000 nij, and collections of rent, say of 30,000 rupees in putnis, the return in indigo for the last three years having been 600 maunds, and the annual outlay being from 60,000 to 65,000 rupees?—Previous to the crisis such a concern would be worth, say two lakhs and 50,000 rupees.

3736. Mr. Temple.] That would depend on the full amount of indigo being sown; what would be the price of such a concern if prevented from sowing seven-eighths of its ryotti cultivation?—Putting aside the question what the landed property would fetch in the market, I do not suppose any one would be induced to offer 30,000 rupees for the concern, and if any one did offer, it would only be with the hope of matters coming round with the ryots.

3737. Do you think, supposing any difficulty to be experienced in sowing next year, that men could be found to purchase factories, in the hope of matters coming round in a year or two?—I do not know of any one who would come forward in that case, however hopeful we are, that things will mend and come right again.

3738. Mr. Fergusson.] What do you suggest as to the legislation that would be necessary on the expiry of this present summary law?—I see that there is no way of protecting such advances as those of indigo, except by a summary law; due regard being had for the rights and protection of the ryots.

3739. President.] Can you suggest any means whereby the expenses of manufacture may be lessened, such as improved machinery, &c.?—I cannot suggest any specific plan; but this is a subject which the planters are seriously taking into consideration.

3740. Can you state what has been the comparative expense of producing indigo in Bengal and Tirhoot as well as the comparative profit?—In Tirhoot for the last three years the seasons have been moderately favourable, whereas in Bengal it has been the reverse. In these years I should say that the average of cost in Tirhoot, exclusive of interest and Calcutta agency charges, was about 110 rupees a maund, and in Bengal for the same period from 140 to 150 rupees. But in an ordinary run of years, I should think that they would make the indigo in both divisions, at about the same cash cost, with the exception of a few Bengal concerns, celebrated for fine quality; there are now scarcely more than 10 to 15 rupees difference between the Bengal and Tirhoot indigo in favour of the former; Tirhoot indigo having of late improved in quality very much. The average selling price of Bengal and Tirhoot indigo has been for the last three years, say for Bengal, 210, and Tirhoot 195 to 200.

3741. To what do you attribute this late improvement in the Tirhoot indigo?—Improvement in the process of manufacture; I think chiefly from the mode of packing the vats, which are now stacked lightly, instead of as heretofore very heavily pressed.

3742. Is it, then, that the Tirhoot vats are now packed on the Bengal system, or is there any new plan devised in Tirhoot?—I believe this is the system pursued in the best factories in Bengal, and, in fact, borrowed from them.

3743. Do you wish to file your own circulars of 1857, 1858, and 1859 as part of your evidence?—Yes.

3744. Mr. Sale.] The sum of 65,000 rupees being mentioned as the outlay of cultivating 10,000 beegahs, what would you consider the most serious item of expenditure?—I should say, seed; 10,000 beegahs would require a supply of about 1,200 maunds, which at a fair calculation of 12 rupees a maund, would give 14,400 rupees.

3745. From your own experience, do you think that a considerable increase to the amount expended on the actual cultivation of the plant by the ryot would seriously injure the trade; say, for instance, if instead of taking five or six bundles per rupee, the planter only took three?—No, I do not think it would seriously injure the trade; I would certainly recommend more liberal payments to the ryots, and, in fact, such instructions are being given to the managers of our own factories in Jessore.

W. Moran,
Esq.

24 July
1860.

W. Moran,
Esq.

24 July
1860.

3746. When a factory changes hands, is there not a considerable portion of balances, which are understood by the new purchaser to be irrecoverable, and is any portion of the balances taken into account in fixing the prices?—Yes; there is, of course, a portion of the balances considered as bad; but the good balances always form an item in the valuation of the factory.

3747. Ought not the selling party to be fair and explicit as to the amount of real working balances, and does he never guarantee the purchaser, that a certain amount of balances will be recoverable, say, for instance, 20,000 rupees on a lac?—Certainly; a fair dealing man would be explicit, and it is invariably expected from him by the intending purchaser. In some special cases the amount of recoverable balances are so guaranteed. In general they are taken over, as they stand without a guarantee, on the information given.

[Commission adjourned, at 5.30 p. m.]

Thursday, 26th July 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., c. s., President.

Members:—W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

BABOO PROSONNA KUMAR TAGORE, of Calcutta, Zemindar; Examined on oath.

Baboo P. K.
Tagore.

26 July
1860.

3748. President.] WILL you state to the commission in what districts you have landed possessions?—In Rungpore, Dinagepore, Bograh, Kishnagur, and 24-Pergunnahs.

3749. You have also had great experience in the law and practice in our highest courts, and have held the situation of Government pleader, and are at present clerk assistant to the Legislative Council. Is this not so?—Yes.

3750. Have you had any practical experience in indigo planting; and have you at present any indigo factories in your zemindaries?—I was proprietor of the Islampore concern, situated in my Rungpore estate, which I have abolished. At present I have no factories belonging to me in any of my zemindaries.

3751. What were the reasons that induced you to give up the factories in question?—Originally I had the Islampore concern jointly with the Bagoonbarri concern; I had seven annas share, and the proprietors of the Bagoonbarri concern had nine annas share. Finding that the managers of the concern gave great dissatisfaction to the ryots, and oppressed them in various ways, I thought proper to purchase that portion of the Bagoonbarri concern, which they held, for 35,000 rupees, thus becoming sole proprietor. After this, valuing the whole of my concern at 62,000 rupees, I admitted Mr. Logan as co-sharer of half of it, at a consideration of 31,000 rupees, and placed the management in his hands. I remained in Calcutta, Mr. Logan at Rungpore, but the ryots complained of increasing oppression, because Mr. Logan had the zemindary influence to support him. So I re-purchased his share, and became again sole proprietor, placing it under the management of native gomashitas. I partially reduced the amount of cultivation, and made other concessions to the ryots, bringing down the rent on indigo lands from one rupee to four annas. Still the grounds of complaint continued, and the gomashita in charge represented to me that, unless permitted to carry on the general management under the usual system observed in all factories, they could not manage to give me satisfaction. The ryots continued their complaints, adding that the cultivation was not remunerative, and in the end, from regard to my hereditary tenants, I closed the concern about three or four years ago.

3752. What did you understand by the general system, without which indigo business could not be successfully carried on?—I understand it to involve certain oppressive measures. They are as follows: first, compulsory advances must be had recourse to; secondly, the indigo ryots are generally indebted, and when once in debt it becomes hereditary; thirdly, the factory amlas and servants generally make deductions from the advances, and the ryots seldom receive the full amount of cash; fourthly, shattas, or contracts on stamped paper, which sometimes have signatures or marks, and sometimes none at all. They are sometimes filled up with conditions, but generally left blank, to be filled in as occasion may require. The shattas, even if filled up, do not contain the boundaries of the land to be sown, which gives the planter and his amla power to take any land they please; fifthly, the ryots prepare their lands for their own crops, and the amla mark them off as prepared for indigo; sixthly, the ryots are compelled to work on the indigo lands, and to neglect their own crops at the proper season; seventhly, the plant is taken by measurement by an iron chain, or by koot or guess, and the estimate is always in favour of the planter. The bundles are made up unfairly by putting all the plants, with the roots in one part, and applying the chain on the opposite or leafy part of it; whereas they should be made, by placing half the roots on one side, and the other half on the other side; and applying the measuring chain at the centre. By the former plan, the bundles are reduced to more than one-half in measurement; eighthly, when the plant is taken by guess, and the planter does not look into the matter, the amla take the ryots' plant, for say, 10 bundles, and the ryot gets credit to that extent, but the amla delivers it to the factory as 15 bundles, by making out that the other five bundles had been purchased for cash; ninthly, the balance in the factory books against the names of ryots who have died or deserted, are recovered from neighbours; hours, who are declared to be their relations or partners. In nij cultivation, ryots' lands are taken at the factory instead of the local measurement; but the rent is fixed according to local rates, which give the planter about one beegah and 11 cottahs, for every beegah he is entitled to; tenths, compulsory labour of both cattle and boats is usual in both nij and ryotti cultivation and inadequately paid for; eleventhly, every article of produce has risen in price, indigo plant is alone stationary; besides, indigo cultivation is not remunerative. This is one reason, among others, which have induced the indigo ryots to devote their lands to other crops. The above were the staple of the complaints made by the ryots; and as I found that I could not remove them all without personal residence and superintendence, I thought it better to abolish the cultivation, and bury 62,000 rupees in the river.

3753. Have you not been in the habit of visiting your zemindaries as often as the numerous demands on your time would allow?—Very often; but not so often as I desire, owing to my numerous avocations.

3754. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] How much land had you cultivated with indigo, and what has been done with that land, since you discontinued the cultivation of indigo?—The cultivation of the concern was about 6,000 or 7,000 beegahs, of which 1,000 were nij, the rest were ryotti. Since the discontinuance, the ryots have cultivated other crops; and the nij lands have been given by me to other ryots, for which they have given me salami. My nij lands were of course superior to the ordinary lands.

3755. Mr. Fergusson.] Is not that part of the country more unsuitable for the cultivation of indigo, owing to sudden inundations and early rains, and did not the Bagoobarri concern, when you were interested in it, frequently lose considerable sums of money?—That part of the country is liable to inundations; but I observe that factories have been in existence there for more than 50 or 60 years. And I think the Bagoobarri concern oftener sustained loss than gain; I think, on an average, six years' losses to four years' gain. The loss was not only owing to inundations, but to the want of zemindary influence, and to mismanagement. With all these disadvantages, I believe Mr. Fergusson sold the shares at a high price to me.

3756. Might not the absence of European energy and promptitude be the reason why your native servants were not able to work it successfully?—The native agents could not succeed, because they were more under my control, and prevented from committing oppression. The Europeans would have been more independent, and carried everything with a high hand.

3757. My meaning was as to the promptitude and energy with which Europeans would have acted in the event of a sudden inundation or any such like occurrence?—Certainly, an European superintendent would have made the coolies and workmen work more speedily, than a native superintendent would.

3758. President.] Then is it your decided opinion, that indigo cannot be carried on without zemindary influence, and as a consequence without oppression?—Yes.

3759. But are you not able to suggest any means whereby indigo may be grown by the ryot and manufactured by the planter to their mutual profit and advantage?—Without a very material alteration in the present system, the object cannot be obtained. I would prefer to put in a memorandum on the subject, as I do not wish to answer the question without due consideration.

3760. Mr. Fergusson.] Are you aware that in that same district of Rungpore, a large quantity of indigo plant is grown by the ryots without advances, and sold by them at the rate of four bundles for the rupee, cash?—This is not in my part of the country. I have heard that such a practice exists in the northern part of the district in the Borobarri concern.

3761. How many bundles did you take for the rupee when you carried on your concern?—Originally eight, but I reduced it to six, which amount even was not remunerative to the ryot.

3762. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] If the cultivation of indigo were wholly abolished in Rungpore; do you not think that the ryots would be glad, and that they would sow every beegah with rice and oil-seed and other crops, and that not a single beegah of land now occupied would lie waste?—The indigo is sown on two kinds of soil, chur and high lands. High land is suitable for all kinds of crops; and low or chur land is only suitable for rice, mustard seed, chini, and other rubbi crops. I do not think that a single beegah of land would lie waste if indigo cultivation were abolished. But I would not wish to be understood that I advocate the entire discontinuance of the indigo crop, as it is one of the principal branches of export.

3763. President.] Have you any objection as zemindar to give putni or leases to Europeans?—I have personally, to either European or native. I like to manage my own zemindaries myself. If I give land in putni, my connexion with my ryots ceases for ever. If I give land on lease, I think the ryots are more liable in that case to oppression than the putni ryots, because the leaseholder's interest is only temporary, and he wishes to make hay while the sun shines. I have only one European ijaradar of old standing, who has fourteen villages in Bogra.

3764. From your knowledge of native society, are you of opinion that the majority of zemindars coincide with you?—No. Indolence, inexperience, and indebtedness make native zemindars prefer the system of putni and ijaras, because it saves trouble, and brings money to meet their immediate wants.

3765. Mr. Fergusson.] You were for some time connected with the salt department; do you think that, if private individuals were to offer the same terms to the molunghees, Government, giving up the monopoly, would be able to carry on the manufacture?—I do not think that private individuals would be able to carry it out on the same terms, but the trade would still go on, on a modified system, as was the case after the abandonment of the silk business by the Government.

3766. Then there must be some compulsion, or exercise of Government authority, to make the molunghees work on the present terms, and did you ever hear any complaints of such?—As I don't know anything of the Mofussil, all I know on the subject is hearsay. In former times there was much oppression, but in these days, the system has much improved.

3767. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Do you not think that zemindars of the salt districts would be glad to manufacture salt with their own capital, if Government would give up the monopoly, and charge a certain duty on the quantity manufactured?

Baboo P. K. Tagore.

26 July 1860.

Baboo P. K.
Tagore.

26 July
1860.

tured?—If Government will abandon the salt monopoly, the land now used for salt manufacture will lie waste as it is not fit for any other crop. If the Government will take a reasonable duty and lease the manufacture on the lands of private individuals or zemindars, the trade will still continue with advantage and profit to the manufacturers.

3768. President.] You are a zemindar with large interests, what is your opinion regarding Act X. of 1859, as it affects both the ryots and zemindars?—Generally speaking the law is advantageous to both, perhaps more so in favour of ryots.

3769. Do you not think that, as regards ryots, the provisions of that law tended to consolidate and maintain their rights instead of leaving them to be asserted or vindicated as previously according to the mere measure of the ryots' ability and spirit?—The consolidation of the law in practice has certainly been advantageous, and the law creates no new rights in favour of the ryots, except in three or four instances. First, as regards Section III., formerly, some ryots were required to show that they held at fixed rates, 12 years before the permanent settlement; now the date runs from that settlement itself. As regards Section IV., I do not think so much that it introduces a new right, as it explains the law of presumptive evidence in favour of the ryot. Then Section VI., regarding occupancy, confers a new right.

3770. As zemindar, have you as yet found any inconvenience from Section XI., or do you apprehend any?—I have not experienced any inconvenience, nor do I apprehend any: because, before the promulgation of this law, no zemindar could compel a rich or fat ryot to attend his cutchery; the compulsion applied to the poorer sort of tenants, and that class of ryots would still obey a tulub chitti or summons to the cutchery served on him, without compulsion. The law only repeals the compulsory attendance.

3771. Mr. Fergusson.] Have you not heard that considerable difficulty is experienced in getting rents, which is attributed to the withdrawal of this power?—I have heard of it, but I have never heard of any explanation why it should be. It is only those who depended on compulsory measures, that would feel inconvenience from a withdrawal of the power.

3772. Supposing a landlord is obliged to sue for rent under this Act; from your knowledge of Mofussil courts, within what period of time would he be able to realize a decree?—I think you could get a decree and its execution, within three months, if the officer is not overwhelmed with work.

3773. Supposing 10,000 suits were instituted in Nuddea, don't you think that many persons would be without their decrees for three years, instead of three months?—It depends on the number of officers, and the number of the duties which they have to perform in that district.

3774. Could you explain to us how the rate of rent is ever to be raised under Section XVII., if it has to be proved that the rent paid is below the prevailing rent payable by the same class of ryots for similar land in places adjacent?—The usual process is to serve a notice on the ryot before the end of a year, and then to institute a suit, and prove that the rate is below that of neighbouring villages, either belonging to your estates, or to the estates of others.

3775. President.] Do you think that the Act leaves sufficient power to the zemindar to enable him duly to collect his rents?—It does, as by the old law the current balances were realizable by summary suit. The previous balances were only to be recovered by a regular civil suit; now the process is simpler, and every balance that is recoverable can be recovered by one simple process.

3776. Do you think the powers contained in Section CXIII., and following, are sufficient for the zemindar?—The power of the zemindar in matters of distraint has been reduced from what it was formerly; but the powers under the old law were so liable to be abused by zemindars, talookdars, and jotedars, that a change was necessary for the poorer classes. Formerly, other property besides the mere crop was liable to distraint, now nothing can be distrained, but the standing crop and other ungathered produce; and this in reality is consonant to the spirit of Regulation VII. of 1799, by which only the crops were hypothecated to the zemindar for his rents, and this has not been interfered with.

3777. What do you think will be the result of the new civil code (Act. VIII.), regarding the facilitating of civil suits and improving the courts?—I think the principal is good; delay has been very considerably obviated and false suits reduced. But I think the law requires some modifications to give it more practical effect.

HENRY LUCIUS DAMPIER, Esq., C. S., at present Officiating Junior Secretary to the Board of Revenue, called in; and Examined on oath.

H. L.
Dampier,
Esq., & s.

3778. President.] WILL you state to the Commission the districts or offices in which you have had experience?—As magistrate I have been in the Mudepurah subdivision of Bhaugulpore, and in Purneah, Maldah, Bograh, Rungpore, Howrah, Pubnah, and, for the last three years, in Tirhoot.

3779. As magistrate of Tirhoot, did you enjoy opportunities of observing the working of the indigo system?—Yes, every opportunity.

3780. Will you state as briefly, but as clearly as you can, the nature of the arrangements between planter and ryot?—The material difference, as contrasted with the Bengal system, is, that the ryot is paid by the beegah for the land he cultivates, instead of by the produce. He gets two rupees advance at the beginning of the season, and I think the general rule is, that he gets nothing more till the accounts are squared. Supposing the crop to be a dead failure, and nothing to come up, he gets one rupee more, making three rupees in all. If there is a crop at all, he receives Rs. 4. 6. in addition to the two rupees, making it Rs. 6. 6. in all. This is the general rule, though in some instances there are classifications of crops within the above amount. Should the ryot fail in his weeding or any other operation, the planter sends his factory coolies to do what is necessary, and charges the amount to the ryot under the head of zillah khurch; but I believe they never send their own men, unless they are absolutely obliged to do so. I may mention that the usual indigo beegah is about 130 haths square. The beegah in use in different factories varies; varies; and I believe that made use of by some of the factories on the Moteeharry side is much larger than the one I have mentioned. When a planter takes a lease of a village, from three to four cottahs per beegah are taken for indigo. This is well understood by the ryots.

3781. How is the temptation to do nothing, offered to the ryot who has received two rupees advance, and who will receive three rupees altogether, even should there be no crop, obviated?—The servants of the factory exercise a certain amount of pressure, and if the ryot does not do what is necessary to the lands, the extra money he would otherwise get goes in zillah khurch. Practically, I believe, that difficulty is very little felt, and that the cases are extremely rare in which the ryots voluntarily evade their contracts. Most of the factories have more or less khushki, or what is known in Bengal as be-ilika cultivation, and some factories depend almost entirely on such cultivation. In the neighbourhood of these factories the land is of far less value, and the average rent much lower than it is in other parts of the district, running from three rupees downwards, the average rent being about Rs. 1. 4. to Rs. 1. 8. In these cases it is my conviction that the engagements are, in the strictest sense of the word, voluntary on the part of the ryots. The contracts are usually entered into for three or seven years, the advance being made at the rate of two rupees per annum per beegah; i.e., if a ryot engages to do one beegah for three years, he receives six rupees, two of which will be deducted from the amount he received the first year, two more the second year, and the last two the third year. Most of the factories, however, depend almost entirely on the cultivation within the estates of which they hold ticcass or leases. As I said before, it is a matter of course that where a factory holds any fractional share of a village in lease, every ryot sows from three to four cottahs in a beegah in indigo. In most parts of Tirhoot I do not believe that this cultivation is acceptable to the ryot. I believe it pays him; but it is not nearly so remunerative as other crops would be. I am speaking now particularly of those parts of the district in which the rent rises as high as five and six rupees a beegah, and of which the average rent may be taken as Rs. 2. 8.

3782. Where the rent is five and six rupees a beegah, how is it possible that a payment of Rs. 6. 6. should remunerate the ryot?—In cases where land bearing so high a rent is taken for indigo, the planter is also in the position of zemindar, and, I believe, gives a remission of rent, not charging more than Rs. 2. 8. per beegah. I have said above that the indigo cultivation, in these parts of Tirhoot especially, is not acceptable to the ryots, and, as a general rule, they do not like indigo to be introduced into a village; but when indigo has been cultivated for some time, I do not believe that they feel the least sore about it; they cultivate their indigo to please their landlord, just as much as a matter of course as they pay the usual nuzzur to the zemindar when any family event takes place. A great deal depends on the individual character of the planter; and a case was mentioned to me by a zemindar, the other day, in which he bought the proprietary right of a village that had been for years in farm to a factory. On the current lease expiring, he, wishing to save his ryots from the oppression of indigo, declined renewing the lease; on which the ryots came in a body and told him that they had sown for the factory for years, and that they had always been well treated, and at their request he gave it in farm again. I may add, that the manager of this particular factory is known and acknowledged for his fairness among both Europeans and natives.

3783. Was your interference often sought in any disputes between planter and ryots, whether his own ryots or ryots of another estate growing indigo for him?—Scarcely, if ever, was any complaint brought to me which was bonâ fide between planter and ryot. The planters very often take a lease of a fractional share which is in dispute among the maliks or proprietors of a village, and then a struggle commences, in which the usual complaints are made by the ryots, according to the side they take up. In those cases, no doubt, the planter acts oppressively in forcing the ryots to cultivate indigo, who are unwilling to do so. Generally, when a village is first taken in lease, even if there be no dispute about the zemindary rights, it is my impression that the planter uses more or less illegal pressure to get his indigo sown. The grounds on which the ryots have complained to me verbally, when on my tours, against indigo cultivation, are that their time is so much taken up with indigo portions of their land that they have no time properly to cultivate their other lands. As a pure matter of opinion, I do not think that this is a hardship which really presses on the ryots. Another complaint which they make, is, that the planter generally manages to secure the best land for indigo. For this complaint there is very much more ground.

3784. Then, are we to understand that, when a planter has once got full possession by a lease, complaints of oppression or illegality, either against him or his servants, were comparatively rare?—I should say they were comparatively rare. Cases, of course, do occur in which the planter destroys the crop of the ryot because he wishes to sow his indigo in the field.

3785. Is nothing but indigo grown on indigo lands during the 12 months?—As a general rule, only indigo is allowed to grow on indigo lands during the year, but where the indigo has entirely failed, I believe the ryot is often allowed to sow another crop on the land, giving half the produce to the factory as rent.

3786. Mr. Fergusson.] To your knowledge, have any of the ryots lately evinced any feeling of dissatisfaction with indigo cultivation?—No, they have not, but I have been given to understand that there is more difficulty now in carrying on the be-ilika cultivation than there used to be some years ago, when it was notorious that a ryot used to be punished, in a particular part of the district, by having his name struck off the books. I attribute the fact of the ryots being now less willing to enter into indigo engagements, to the general rise in the price of produce of all sorts, and consequent rise in rent of land; and I believe that a proposal is now under discussion by the planter to raise the price paid for indigo considerably.

3787. President.] Did you find the zemindars averse to giving leases, and of what nature were these leases when given?—As a general rule, the zemindars do not like giving leases to factories. They do so from four motives, the first being an absolute pecuniary benefit, either in the shape of getting a higher jumma from a planter than they would get from any one else; second, for the

H. L.
Dampier,
Esq., C. S.

26 July 1860.

H. L.
Dampier,
Esq., C. S.

26 July
1869

object of securing a loan from the planter; third, in the case of the petty maliks, because they find it more expedient to give a lease of their property to the factory, than to be on bad terms with it. Fourth, when the petty maliks are fighting among themselves as to the extent of their respective shares, one party is often glad to give a lease of what he considers to be his share to the factory, and I consider the willingness with which the planters enter into such disputes to be the chief evil of Tirhoot planting; sometimes the zemindar farms his property for a term of years, say seven or ten at a fixed rent; there may or may not be a bonus. But the more usual arrangement is, that the planter gives a loan or zur-peshgi to the zemindar in consideration of which the zemindar gives him a lease of the estate; usually the principal of the loan, remains untouched until the zemindar repays it in a lump, i. e., the former pays to the zemindar whatever difference there may be between the jumma or rent of his farm, and the interest of the loan. In other cases I believe the arrangement is, that no rent is to be paid to the zemindar, the principal of the loan being gradually repaid from the profits of the estate.

3788. Can you mention any case in which the factory, taking any fractional share of an estate, it resulted either in disturbances or affrays?—Almost every case is followed by a series of petty cases, but one only of a serious nature has occurred in Tirhoot for years. That occurred in January 1859. I have furnished the details in answer to the Commissioner's circular regarding affrays. Those details are taken from the records.

3789. Did the mutiny at all effect indigo operations in the least. Some of the planters have mentioned to me the growing impertinence of the ryots, while others found the ryots and petty maliks more tractable than they had ever been before.

3790. Then on the whole, with the one exception alluded to, you are of opinion that the Tirhoot system is a fair system, and that due regard being paid to any rise in the price of labour or produce, it may continue as heretofore?—That is my opinion. Another evil of it is the means which are adopted for securing the lands which the planter desires to have. I should wish that the ryot were left to make his own selection, or rather, as that would be impracticable, that the contracts be made for specific fields.

3791. Did you ever find complaints from any party that indigo clashed with the cultivation of the poppy?—In the three cases of ryots evading their contracts that have come before me in the three years I was collector, I think in two, the defence of the ryot was, that his lands had been taken for indigo against his will, but I cannot state if this was true, or merely an excuse made to evade and avoid the penalty for the non-fulfilment of his opium contract. No disputes have come to my notice as between the sub-deputy opium agent and the planters.

3792. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you consider that the planters and their assistants in Tirhoot are in any ways different from those in Bengal?—My personal knowledge of the Bengal planters has been too limited to justify my answering that question; but I may add that generally speaking, the estimation in which the Tirhoot planters are held by the natives, is much higher than that in which the planters of Bengal are held.

3793. Do you consider that the ryot of Bengal is as truthful and faithful in fulfilling his engagements as he of Tirhoot?—My impression is that he is not.

3794. Assuming that the Tirhoot beegah is equal to nearly three of the Bengal standard beegahs; does it not appear that the Bengal ryot who gets an advance of two rupees for his beegah, is better off than the Tirhoot ryot, who at the utmost gets Rs. 6. 8. for his crop?—I believe that the Bengal ryot has to pay for seed and carriage; and from the complaints made, I suspect that he has to pay very much more to the factory amla than the Tirhoot ryot. After these deductions, his position would not be better than that of the Tirhoot ryot.

3795. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Considering the way the Bengal planters are said to treat their ryots; should the Tirhoot planter attempt to do the same, what do you think would be the consequence?—I think that the ryots as well as the petty maliks would resent it.

3796. President.] Had you ever any complaints from ryots, that their ploughs were taken or their time was taken for cultivation of the factory ziraut?—I remember one case in which the factory servant had called a ryot to plough an indigo field, he refused to go, because he wanted to plough some other field, but I cannot remember whether the field for which the plough was taken was ziraut or ryotti. The case came before me as one of simple assault, in which I think the factory servant was prosecutor. I remember also two or three other cases, in which disputes of the same sort arose from the factory servant attempting to make the ryot go to his indigo work. Generally these cases were instituted by the factory servants, complaining that certain villagers had turned out against him, and assaulted him. The origin doubtless was, that the factory servant had used force to make the ryot go to his work.

3797. How many sub-divisions had you in Tirhoot?—Only one, Buhara.

3798. Do you think the late rise in salaries has improved the character of the Tirhoot police?—I have been obliged to report that I have seen no improvement as yet. The police of Tirhoot, though not so sharp as that of Bengal, are perhaps less corrupt, though they are bad enough.

3799. President.] You have had some experience in Pubna, were any facts brought to your knowledge there, which could lead you to form an opinion as to the popularity or unpopularity of indigo?—My impression was that the indigo cultivation there was extremely distasteful to the ryots. I derive my impression from conversing with the ryots, and generally from cases that came before me, but I must add that certainly the great majority of cases were from those estates in which the disputes between Mr. Kenny of Salgurmudia and Baboo Ram Rutton Roy were going on, so that it is difficult to say in what cases the ryots' antagonism to planters was the result of his own impulse, and in what he was acting under the influence of his zemindar.

3800. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Was not the late Baboo Ram Rutton Roy very averse to giving leases to planters?—It is my impression that he gave leases to a factory bordering on Mr. Kenny's concerns, with the manager of which he was on good terms, but he was perpetually at feud with Mr. Kenny, and hence constant disputes arose.

3801. President.]

3801. President.] In disputes between zemindars and maliks or small proprietors on one side, and planters on the other, had you in Tirhoot often occasion to put in force Act IV. of 1840 or Act V. of 1848?—Very frequently; more so perhaps than in any other district, but it was chiefly in petty cases; the reason of their frequency is, that there are generally numerous maliks in each estate, and quarrels arose between them or between one malik and the lessee of another, as to what field was in the ziraut or nij jote of each individual malik. Another cause is, that they divide their estates by mutual agreement, and some years after quarrel about the division. There were many cases in which planters were concerned, and in these, I think the question generally was, whether the field was in the ryot's possession, or whether it was the ziraut of the malik from whom the factory held.

H L.
Dampier,
Esq., c. s.
—
26 July
1860.

[Commission adjourned at 5 p. m.]

Friday 27th July 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., c. s., President.

Members;—R. Temple, Esq., c. s.; W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Reverend J. Sale;
Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

GEORGE GORDON MORRIS, Esq., c. s., at present Magistrate and Collector of Gya, called in;
and Examined on Oath.

3802. President.] Do you wish to offer any explanation of the statements made to the Commission on the 11th June last, by Baboo Bijoyo Govind Choudari, a zemindar of Pubna, as regards his dispute with Mr. Stephenson of Dobracole, and an investigation made by you at the Bhowdanga factory?—I certainly did go to Bhowdanga, but the dispute referred to occurred in Sooja Nuggur, which is at least four miles off. I went to the spot in person, after having given due notice to both parties to attend, and spent the whole day in making a local investigation. This was, I believe, in May 1859. There were, in fact, two cases on the part of Mr. Stephenson; accusing the Baboo and his retainers of having uprooted the indigo in a field adjacent to the factory, say 150 yards, and then making a demonstration of attack on the factory itself, which led to the few servants of the factory running away. The little property that was there at the time, such as boxes, &c., were strewed about, and some were said to be abstracted, and at the same time two outhouses were burnt. On the other hand, the Baboo charged Mr. Stephenson's servants with having on the same date attacked and looted his cutcherry, which was in the village, and carried off about 400 rupees in cash. My local investigation convinced me that the latter charge was perfectly false. I remember that there were a number of discrepancies: the jemadar who guarded the cutcherry was stated to have been absent, and then present. The cutcherry also is not in an isolated place, but surrounded by those of the other brothers of Bijoyo Govind, and other sharers of the estate. The officers of two of the cutcheries said that they were all absent on that day; but the head officer of the third cutcherry allowed that he was present on that day, and that no attack had occurred; and if one had, he must have known of it. In fact, I came to the conclusion that this was merely brought as a countercharge.

did you go inside the factory in order to avoid the heat?—I sent out my tent to Bhowdanga and had it pitched there; but owing to the season of the year, I put up at the factory. The tent was pitched in order that those witnesses who were absent at Sooja Nuggur might come there and give evidence.

3804. As regards Mr. Stephenson's case, what explanation do you wish to offer?—It seemed to me that the charges of forcibly uprooting indigo, looting the factory, and arson, were to a certain extent proved; and as Bijoyo Gobind's house in Tanti Bundhu was close by, I summoned him to attend in person. As he was charged with being present when the attack was made, I ordered him to appear himself. I cannot think this to be any indignity, especially as it was a serious case. He never appeared at all. As to advising his mooktyar to compromise, or telling him that the baboo had better make it up with the planter, otherwise it would not be good for the baboo, I deny that I ever said anything of the kind. There being a charge of arson, which I thought to a certain extent proved, it was not likely that I should give advice.

3805. Did you make any general recommendation to the mooktyar for the settlement of the disputes between his employers and the factory?—No, I don't recollect having said anything of the kind; I merely paid attention to the case. I should state, that almost immediately after I left the district, giving my successor, Mr. Molony, the notes of the case, and by him, afterwards, the compromise was accepted.

3806. Then you wish us to understand, that from the result of the one case, viz. the compromise, you are not responsible for its having been accepted by your successor, and in the other you went to the spot, judged of it to the best of your ability, and treated it as a false complaint?—Yes; the one case I left pending, the other I tried on its merits.

G. G. Morris,
Esq., c. s.
—
27 July
1860.

3803. Did you send out your tents; and if so,
72—I.

BABOO JOY KISSEN MOOKERJEE, Zemindar of Ootter-para, Zilla Hooghly, called in; and Examined on Oath.

Baboo J. K.
Mookerjee.

27 July
1860.

3807. President.] IN what districts have you zemindaries or factories?—I have zemindaries and talooks; the greater portion lie in Hooghly, and a small portion in the 24-Pergunnahs. My sudder jumma is about 90,000 rupees, payable at the Collectorate, and by me as putnidar and dur-putnidar, to the Rajah of Burdwan. Regarding indigo factories, I have four small ones in the Hooghly district.

3808. Can you state the out-turn of these factories, as also whether the cultivation is mostly nij or ryotti?—In the Hooghly district there is no nij cultivation, it is almost entirely ryotti. The out-turn of my factories in a good season would be about 150 maunds, but for the last three seasons it has been about half, in consequence of unfavourable weather.

3809. Do you follow the usual system of advances, and supervision over ryots by your own servants as generally practised; and at what rate do you pay for bundles of indigo plant per rupee?—I follow the usual system of advances; i. e., in some factories it is two rupees, and in some three rupees a beegah. The ryot's cultivation is supervised, and the lands measured by amins and tahidgirs. The rate of indigo bundles varies from eight to ten per rupee, which are, however, of a smaller size than those of Kishnaghur. The chain used in my factories is 5 ft. 3 in.

3810. How many indigo ryots have you altogether, and what proportion of land does each man sow with indigo?—Between 500 and 600 in all. Each ryot cultivates from ten cottahs to six beegahs, according to his means and land. I believe the produce of dye from the plant in Burdwan and Hooghly to be much less than in the eastern districts. I made inquiries, but could get no satisfactory explanation for this difference, unless it be some difference in the soil.

3811. On what sort of lands is your indigo sown, and what other crops grow on the same besides indigo?—My indigo is sown on high or danga lands. Some factories, not mine, have chur lands on the Hooghly, but to a small extent; with the indigo sometimes ryots sow teel, barley, wheat; and after the indigo is cut, in all good lands generally potatoes are sown. In inferior lands different kinds of peas and vegetables are sown. I beg to file a memorandum, drawn up by me, of the amount of expense and produce at the minimum rates.

3812. Do your ryots sow indigo, because it is profitable to them, or because they wish to please you as their zemindar?—It is not at all profitable to them, but rather a loss, as my memorandum will show. They sow it to please me, their landlord, and because they have sown it before, and also they wish to avoid the possibility of strangers coming in. I have gradually reduced the extent of my cultivation, in consideration of their complaints, and I have no doubt the ryots would be glad that it were entirely abolished. I also wish to add here, that the cultivation of indigo improves potato lands, and I have no reason to conclude that indigo is injurious to the soil; on the contrary, ryots have told me that it is good for the soil, particularly for potato lands.

3813. You have stated that the ryots would be glad if the cultivation of indigo were discontinued; will you state the reason the ryots have for this?—In the first place, ryots are subjected to a great deal of annoyance and exaction by the factory servants; even with my personal supervision I am unable to prevent the oppression of my servants, and complaints are made by them of damage being done to indigo, which damage the ryot denies. Also there are complaints about the selection and measurement of the best lands, and about deduction made from the advances; similarly about measuring the bundles. These are the reasons, but the chief cause is the unprofitableness. Were indigo profitable, the ryots would put up with some amount of oppression. In some villages, in which a man makes a very large profit of 10 to 70 rupees from other cultivation, he does not mind giving two or three rupees to the amla.

3814. Can you suggest any other system by which indigo might be grown without producing disputes or dislike on the part of the ryot, and will you give us a broad outline of the same?—I would suggest that instead of the present system of interference and supervision over the cultivation and weeding, the manufacturer should enter into a sort of contract for a year or two, with a substantial ryot of a village to deliver plant at a remunerative price, to be left to be fixed by both parties, as is done in silk, cotton, and sugar. I would have these contracts registered and adjudicated summarily, and this should not be confined to indigo but to all contracts.

3815. Have you ever been solicited by Europeans to grant them leases and give them lands in putni, or otherwise to aid them in any mercantile or agricultural speculations?—There are not many Europeans or Armenians in Burdwan and Hooghly; but I have been frequently applied to by gentlemen who are there to grant them either farms, putnis, or mookurrari pottas; but I have invariably resisted the applications. I have, however, assisted them, by directing my own ryots, in my own villages, adjacent to factories, to sow 30, or 40, or 50 beegahs with indigo. I said, if the servants oppress you, complain to the sahib; if he does not listen, complain to me, and I will settle it with the sahib.

3816. On what principle did you steadily refuse such applications; was it a dislike to surrender your influence as zemindar; or a fear that indigo might prove injurious to the ryots, or a fear lest Europeans should acquire too much influence?—Yes; chiefly from the first two causes; I like to manage my zemindaries myself, and introduce such improvements, as cutting khals, making roads, and establishing schools. Also, if European gentlemen acquire lands for indigo cultivation, they think of little else, but endeavour to increase the cultivation, such cultivation being unprofitable to the ryots. As regards the third cause, I have generally found that when Europeans and natives come into contact, the European generally gets the upper hand, and that the courts and authorities (it may be unintentionally) have a leaning in his favour: besides, I should be apprehensive that if I gave 25 rupees out of 50 rupees in putni to an European, he might by degrees absorb the whole.

3817. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] What number of Bengali and English schools and dispensaries have you in your zemindaries?—In my own zemindaries, eight Anglo-vernacular schools, and about

'about 10 or 11, purely Bengali, aided schools, i. e. partly supported by Government, and partly supported by me, together with collections from the scholars. Besides, I have about 100 patshalas, or village schools, which are not supported by me; occasionally I give donations and monthly subscriptions. I have also choupattis, or Sanscrit schools, about eight in number, on my estates. I believe three-fourths of this number of aided schools and patshalas exist on my brother's estates. Between myself and my brother we have dug about 100 tanks of small and large sizes in 60 or 70 different villages. I have also two dispensaries, partly aided by us, and partly by Government. With the assistance of the Ferry Fund Committee we have constructed about 200 miles of roads, with bridges and drains; in some of which we were well assisted by the Ferry Fund Committee. In all, I should say we expended a lac of rupees in these improvements.

3818. Mr. Sale.] Are you in the habit of collecting anything from the ryots, in the aid of cutting roads, or digging tanks?—No, I never did so, although I know it is the custom in other zemindaries; but I, on the other hand, exact a full jumma from the ryots, which other zemindars do not.

3819. Mr. Fergusson.] If a European were to try to purchase a jote or jumma from a ryot within your zemindary, would you permit him or oppose him?—I should, in the case of an entirely new person, because I might not wish him to get a factory; but those who have factories in my illaka have been in the habit of purchasing jummas, and I have not opposed them. Of course I take the usual fee for entering the name of the new purchaser in my records.

3820. President.] You have suggested the registration of contracts, will you state fully the means you would employ to this end?—I would concentrate all offices of a sub-division in one place, and there I would have a registrar whose pay should not be less than 150 rupees, besides the usual establishment, where all contracts and other conveyances should be registered; the registering fee varying from eight annas to 25 rupees. The parties registering should be identified by a mooktyar, or vakil of the court. Notice should be placarded once in the moonsiff's courts, and once in the village, for three days, and thus 200 contracts might be registered in one day.

3821. Have you any golahs or barns for the accumulation of rice, or do you lend rice or money to the ryots?—I had some golahs, and used to lend rice to the ryots, but found that I suffered loss through the fraud of servants, and gave up accumulating rice. I lend money on interest, from 12 to 24 per cent. according to the risk I run in each case. There are several other mahajans on my states. I do not lend money only to ryots and cultivators, but I lend it to men to establish shops, and I encourage men to make purchase of wood, hardware, silk, sugar, hides, and to dig tanks, or to convert small bazars into large ones. In this way I have about one lac of rupees floating. I am of opinion, however, that it were better that zemindars did not lend to the ryots, as it brings about oppression. Therefore I encourage other mahajans to lend to cultivators; for instance, if a ryot owed me 50 rupees rent as zemindar, and 20 rupees debt as mahajan, and if he got a good crop of sugar-cane, the gomashita would recommend me to realise my dues by attachment, which would lead to discontent and loss to the ryot, who would be obliged to sell it at the worst time.

72—I.

3822. But supposing another mahajan lends money to your ryot, and you, not having lent money, have still a claim against such ryots for rents or indigo advances; might not your interests, and those of the mahajan, clash?—Yes, they may, and there have been disputes in this way, but there are not if the mahajan duly considers the matter and understands his business; for instance, there is a ryot with 20 beegahs of land, of which five are to be cultivated with indigo for a factory, with or without zemindary rights, but out of the remaining 15 the mahajan ought to consider that 10 beegahs can be cultivated with rice, one or two with tobacco, and some with vegetables; and if the factory does not require more beegahs to be cultivated with indigo, on the one hand, and the zemindar, on the other, does not press heavily on the ryots for extra cesses, and if the season is not unfavourable, I see no reason why things should not go on smoothly among the three parties.

3823. Then you think there is no real reason why the mahajan should be hostile to the planter?—None at all, unless the zemindar or the planter create some cause of misunderstanding.

3824. Mr. Fergusson.] Is it not likely that the present high price of rice will make the mahajan anxious to have the cultivation of it increased, perhaps to the prejudice and decrease of indigo?—I think it pretty certain that the mahajan would aid the ryot in resisting any increase of indigo cultivation, but I don't think he would interfere if things were allowed to remain as they were.

3825. Mr. Sale.] Do you think that a large proportion of your ryots are in debt to the mahajan?—I should say that half of them are, and those that are indebted, are capable of clearing their debts, if the present favourable state of the market exists for four or five years more.

3826. Has the condition of the whole district of Hooghly improved, and are you in a position to say, if they are in as good a condition as, say the ryots of Jessore and Kishnaghur?—Yes, I should say, as far as my observation goes, that the Hooghly ryots are far better housed, clothed, and pay more rent than the ryots of Kishnaghur.

3827. What is the usual rate of rice and other cultivated lands in your district?—From one to six rupees, rice lands; tobacco lands, from five to 12 rupees; mulberry lands, from eight to 12 rupees; sugar-cane and cotton lands, from four to seven rupees; and potatoes, garden, and jute lands, from four to six rupees; bashto lands, or homestead, from five to 15 rupees.

3828. President.] What is your opinion of Act X., of 1859, and how has it affected you as zemindar?—It has simplified procedure in many instances, and so far it is good. As regards the right of zemindars, it has been infringed in some instances, but as it has been a very short time in operation, I cannot give an opinion as to its practical effect; but I believe when it is more fully known that it will be unfavourable to the collectors of rent, thereby endangering the position of zemindars.

3829. Mr. Sale.] In what respects do you consider that Act X. has infringed the rights of zemindars?—Section 4 throws the burden of proofs on the zemindar, which is contrary to the usual practice. Also section 6 reduces the landholder into a sort of tax collector, by giving a right of occupancy to any one who has held land for 12 years.

Baboo J. K. Mukerjee.

27 July
1860.

K K

Baboo J. K.
Mookerjee.

27 July
1860.

years. Section 26 prevents our measuring our own property without the sanction of the collector. As regards section 11, I believe that if honestly carried out, it will not cause much inconvenience, as we can still summon our ryots, but it may be taken advantage of by evil-disposed persons. With reference to section 28, the quantity of rent-free tenures will so increase by fraud, that eventually zemindaries will not be worth anything. Again, the law of arrest being virtually abrogated, we are obliged to have recourse to distraint and suit, and the officers being not numerically sufficient to get through the work, we are obliged to fee in every step of the process. This I consider a great hardship to the landholders. I may conscientiously say that in a suit of 10 rupees a landlord is put to an expense of five rupees. I do not, however, mean to say, that the expense increases in proportion, but the suits being generally for small sums, the costs become heavy. If the suit be for 100 rupees the legal expenses are very near the same, unless where the presiding officer is young and inexperienced, then the thing is worse. By the new law of distraint restrictions are imposed, which are still more unfavourable to the collector of rents.

3830. President.] Do you think that Act VIII. has already facilitated the decision of civil suits?—It has facilitated the decision of suits certainly, but it has given the uncovenanted judges who are bound to decide a fair proportion of suits in a month, a convenient plan for rejecting all inconvenient issues, which they had not before. This will tend very much to injure suitors. I should say that without improving the class of moonsiffs and sudder ameen this power should not have been conferred. In fact, I think that the training of the judicial branch is insufficient, and it should be an extensive service.

3831. Mr. Fergusson.] Within what time do you think a decree and execution by Act X. can be obtained?—A decree and execution can be obtained in three months if there is no appeal. If there is an appeal it would take an additional month.

Baboo HURONATH RAI, Zemindar, of Narrail, District Jessore, called in; and Examined on oath.

Baboo
Huronath
Rai.

3832. President.] WILL you state in what zillahs you have estates?—In Jessore, Rajshahye, Pubna, Backergunge, Dacca, Furreedpore, 24-Pergunnahs, and Hooghly. My sudder jumma is upwards of two lacs.

3833. How many indigo factories have you, and on what principle do you manage them?—I have 30 factories in the district of Furreedpore, Jessore and Pubna; the total extent of my cultivation is about 18,000 or 19,000 beegahs, both nij and ryotti. I cannot state the exact proportions. I follow the system of advances. I have, of course, the usual establishment of amins, takid-girs, &c. I have one European manager and five European assistants. For the nij we have a certain establishment of bullocks, and we hire the rest. For the ryotti we give advances at two rupees a begah. Our contracts vary from one to five years. With our own ryots we do not often enter into written contracts, but from ryots not on our own estates, we take contracts. When they enter into a contract for five years, they sign a stamp paper for security's sake every year. The expense of this stamp is not charged to the ryot, but the ryot pays for it when the contract is a yearly one. We take six bundles for the rupee. The rate has gradually been reduced from ten to six bundles.

3834. Does the rate satisfy your ryots, and are they content to sow for you?—Our plan is to take a jotedar with perhaps 70 or 80 beegahs, and to require five or ten cottahs from his dependent ryots. Sometimes the jotedar himself is required to sow something. This is not excessive, and does not press upon them; moreover, I have some regard for my ryots, and if a man is in difficulties I let him off. Our out-turn varies from 400 to 900 maunds.

3835. Mr. Sale.] Have you had any difficulties with your ryots this year?—Not as yet, they have sown as usual. I have heard of no difficulties about my own manufacture.

3836. What is your custom in making out your accounts with the ryots?—We give them credit for the number of bundles they give into the factory; and if more than their advances they get excess. If less the balance is carried over to their account.

3837. Mr. Temple.] Are the majority in debt, or do they receive fazil or excess payments?—It all depends upon the season.

3838. If your factory books were examined at the present time, would they show whether the majority are in debt or not?—Without inspecting them I cannot tell.

3839. President.] Have you been often applied to by European gentlemen for putnis or for leases of land?—In some of my old pergunnahs there are not many factories, but in the Mahomed Shai pergunnah, which is a very extensive one, there are several hundred factories. I used to be much applied to for leases, and I give them to several planters for one or two terms; but when the properties were returned to my hands, I found that they were deteriorated in value, owing to disputes, oppressions, and absconding of ryots; so that when the property was returned to me, I was not able to collect half or a quarter of the rent; so in the end, from sheer helplessness, I gave some of my lands in putni. I have given putnis to three or four concerns, Katchikatta, Sinduri, Loknathpore, and one of the concerns of Messrs. Watson in Pubna. Besides this I have given some mourasis and pottahs to Mr. Kenny, as also some properties to the Hizlabut concern.

3840. In each of those cases, do you wish us to understand that if you were an entirely free agent you would not have given them; and that you merely gave those putnis and leases because you could not help it?—Yes, I was afraid of cases in courts and of getting a bad name, and then finding that the authorities had a leaning towards the planters. I really have a dislike to say anything more on this subject; but I can say this, that the ryots are averse to my giving leases or putnis to the planters.

3841. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Have you ever been advised, influenced, or threatened by any magistrate, with a view to your giving properties in leases or putnis?—I can't say what was written to my brother, the late Ram Rutton Roy, unless I look into his records. My brother was the manager, and I was told by him that magistrates have advised him in these matters.

3842. Until such time as you had given a putni or ijara, were you ever treated harshly by the authorities?—

authorities?—Yes, the last year, in the case of a lease we had to give to Messrs. Watson, all kinds of cases arose. My servants were fined and put into prison. I found that I could do nothing right, and they could do nothing wrong; so I was obliged to give them the putni. All my just cases were dismissed, and punishment followed in the cases that they brought against my servants.

3843. Mr. Fergusson.] When you bought the Mahomed Shai pergunna under a decree in the Banerjee suit, did you not find considerable difficulty in finding money to pay for it?—Yes, I found a want of money and had to borrow.

3844. Did you not then give putnis to a considerable extent, to enable you to pay up the money you had borrowed?—No, I did not give the putnis till I paid the money I had borrowed.

3845. Mr. Temple.] Have you had many of your own ryots to cultivate indigo for European planters, and if so, have you found this inconvenient?—Yes, besides putnis and ijaras, some of my ryots cultivate for the planters, and I tell the ryots to sow peaceably for the planter; but there is disadvantage to me in this, for there is always a possibility of ryots deserting on account of oppression (as was the case the other day with Mr. Durand), also where there is indigo the ryots have not time to attend to other crops. And this may endanger my rent.

3846. Under these circumstances, have you found that the ryot becomes less dependent upon you and looks more to his master?—The ryot is mine, and he looks to me; if he gets into any difficulty he expects that I should advise him what to do.

3847. Do you find that ryots cultivating in this way leads to disputes between you and the planter?—Yes, I do, because a good piece of land (say for sugar-cane) may be wanted by the planter for indigo. The ryots come to me, and this leads to disputes.

3848. Have you ever been under the impression that Government had any interest in indigo?—No, never.

3849. Do you consider that an European indigo planter in the Mofussil practically possesses much power, or do you mean that he has obstacles thrown in his way by zemindars, police and others?—I consider that planters in the Mofussil have engrossed a large amount of power and influence, and there is no zemindar that can contend with them. They have only to write a letter to the authorities, and they can get what they like.

3850. Mr. Fergusson.] When you quarrel with a planter do you forbid your ryots to sow indigo for him, whether there are engagements or not?—No, I wouldn't forbid them to sow for what they were down in their books, but I would be down on them for any excess.

3851. Did you never forbid ryots to cultivate, with a view of making planters take putnis or leases, on heavy terms?—No, I never had that desire.

3852. Did you not forbid the ryots in Hizlabut Factory to sow, when the late Mr. Deverinne had it?—I cannot recollect that I ever did it.

3853. President.] During the past season, have you used your influence in the Mofussil to enable the ryots to sow and cut indigo for the planter?—Yes, I have, knowing the state of things in Kishnaghur and Jessore; I have everywhere told my servants in the Mofussil to induce the ryots to sow and cut, as the planters have a large property at stake.

3854. What is your opinion about the chances of the ryots sowing next year?—My opinion is, that without an order from some authority the ryots won't sow.

3855. Mr. Temple.] Do you consider that the provisions of Act X., which deprives a zemindar of the power of summoning his ryots, acts prejudicially on your powers as a landlord?—It will be very injurious, as the ryots are not likely to come with their rents without being sent for. In the present state of things I think it is likely to be injurious. The ryots are not aware of the Act, but so soon as it is known we shall be ruined. Some ryots who do know it are committing folly and obstinacy.

Commission adjourned at 5 p. m.

Baboo
Huronath
Rai.

27 July
1860.

Monday, 30th July 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C. S., President.

Members:—W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Rev. J. Sale; Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

EDWARD PRESTWICH, Esq., Merchant of Calcutta, Examined on oath.

3856. Mr. Fergusson.] ARE you proprietor of the Baraset indigo concern, and how long have you been so?—Yes, I am proprietor of the Baraset concern; I purchased half of it in 1853, and the remaining half three or four years subsequently. The concern was sold to me, as stated in my petition for the removal of Mr. Eden, page 143 of the Blue Book, for 100,000 rupees, and not one lac and 50,000, as stated by Mr. Eden. The outstanding balances were correctly stated by Mr.

Eden to be a lac, 14,474 rupees, 2 annas and 10 pie, including bad and doubtful ones.

3857. What is your cultivation of indigo this year, distinguishing nij and ryotti?—The total of land sown this year in the Baraset concern is 5,641 beegahs, of which 5,111 beegahs are ryotti and 386 nij-abad. There are 143 beegahs shouk dadun sown without advances, and not two-thirds nij-abad, as stated by Mr. Eden in his evidence.

3858. What was your cultivation in 1855?—

E. Prestwich,
Esq.

30 July
1860.

E. Prestwich,
Esq.
30 July
1860.

The cultivation in 1855 was as usual, 11,000 to 12,000 beegahs, and the small out-turn of the concern that season arose from the badness of the weather.

3859. To what do you attribute the falling off in the extent of land sown this year?—I attribute the small quantity of land sown this year principally to the fact of Mr. Eden's frequent communication with the ryots after he had left that district. I believe the combination among the ryots would easily have been broken, as the great majority of them are willing to sow indigo. Whenever the ryots prepared to come to the factory, the ringleaders of the movement used to go to Calcutta, and on their return they would state that they had seen Mr. Eden; that his orders were, that the ryots should remain quiet, and not go near the factory, and not take advances, and that they should receive his support even though not in the district. This, whether true or false, was believed by the ryots throughout the country; and they looked upon it as an order not to sow indigo.

3860. President.] Did you derive this information from those ringleaders themselves?—No, I derived it from the manager and the assistants of the concern, who had ample means of ascertaining the truth.

3861. Did you understand from the managers that they had personally spoken to any of the ryots, who had been in communication with Mr. Eden?—I heard from one of the assistants that he had spoken to Anir Biswas, and that he and others promised to sow, but he did not.

3862. Have you formed any idea of the kind of support which Mr. Eden was to give the ryots, he not being in charge of the district?—I understood it to mean the support of his influence. The ryots said "that he would act for them as their mooktyar."

3863. Did you attach any definite idea to the term mooktyar; was it that he was to act as general agent, or that he was to plead for them in particular cases?—That he would act for them as their legal adviser.

3864. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you know the reason why Mr. Mangles left the Baraset district, and do you think that the ryots believed that it was because he expressed an opinion favourable to the ryots?—No, I do not. The story current in the district was, that Mr. Mangles left the district owing to some misunderstanding with his officers. I do not believe that the ryots thought he had been removed for having expressed an opinion favourable to them.

3865. Have you any large amount of rents in arrears, and uncollected?—I cannot say exactly what amount of rents are in arrears, but I should say over 40,000 rupees. I attribute it partly to the concern having been closed last year, partly to Act X., and to other causes. I cannot speak of the correctness of these causes from my own knowledge, but that is the opinion of the manager of the concern.

3866. Have you taken lands in lease from the ryots this year, and if so, to what extent, and for what purpose?—The only lands which I have taken this year in lease from the ryots are 178 beegahs, for the introduction of the cultivation of cotton. The seed proving bad, and not being able to get a further supply till next year, I ordered the assistant to sow whatever crop he liked in it; and he elected to sow indigo, as being the crop most likely to pay at that season of the year.

3867. President.] What was the amount of indigo sown in the season of 1859, when Mr. Eden was still in the district?—The total amount was 4,104 beegahs, of which 357 was nij-abad, 3,695 ryotti, and 52 shouk-dadun; but a great portion of this plant was destroyed by the ryots after the publication of Mr. Eden's rubakari, dated the 20th February 1859.

Baboo HURRIS CHUNDER MOOKERJEE, of Bhawanipore, in the District of 24-Pergunnahs, called in; and Examined on oath.

Baboo H. C. Mookerjee. 3868. President.] WHAT situation do you hold?—I am a clerk in the service of Government, in the Military Auditor General's Office.

3869. You are the editor of the "Hindoo Patriot"?—I do not hold myself the responsible editor of the paper, but I have sufficient influence with the proprietor to make him adopt any tone of policy I deem fit.

3870. You have had occasion to watch with interest the late indigo crisis, have you not?—Yes.

3871. During the crisis, have any ryots or other parties applied to you for advice?—Yes, numerous persons, zemindars, middle men, and ryots, have come to me for advice from several districts. They applied to me personally.

3872. Will you state the questions on which they generally came to seek your advice?—Before the Act for the summary enforcement of indigo cultivation was passed, the point on which the majority of ryots sought my advice was, how they could best avoid sowing; after the Act was passed, the point on which they chiefly sought my advice was, how they could best resist the coercitory measures taken under it. Latterly, the point that they have generally sought my advice on is, how best they can avoid taking advances, and being made to grow indigo next year. Besides these there have been particular cases in which I have assisted them with advice, and written out petitions and applications to various authorities.

3873. Can you state the general line of advice that you gave to the ryots in the points above referred to?—I invariably advised them to apply to the district authorities in the proper form for redress, and to go to the next appellate authority, if they found no redress at the hands of the district authorities. I cautioned them against ever committing any breaches of the peace, or committing themselves in any manner by acting illegally. I explained to them that the operation of the Act was temporary, and that better measures would be devised next year, when I was sure they would be free to take or not to take advances. I generally advised them to seek for redress in the civil courts, a mode of proceeding which I found was much less resorted to than it should have been. I mean the Act for damages.

3874. As editor of a paper published in English, and therefore likely to be read by Englishmen, had you many communications by letter from parties in the Mofussil detailing their grievances, and asking for your advice?—All letters addressed addressed to the editor of the "Patriot" were received and opened by me, and many of them contained statements of the kind referred to in the question.

3875. Are you in a position to state whether more letters of the kind would be likely to come to you, than would be likely to come to a paper printed in the vernacular, say the "Bhashkar"?—The probability is, that more letters of the kind were addressed to the editor of the "Hindoo Patriot" than to the editor of any vernacular journal.

3876. Have you at any time visited any of the great indigo districts yourself, for instance Jessore, Kishnaghur, or Moorshedabad, and are you personally known to many residents of those districts?—No, I have never visited any indigo district, except Baraset and Hooghly. I am personally known to many inhabitants of the Nuddea district, and to some of Rajshahye, and to some of Mymensing, having made their acquaintance in Bhowanipore.

3877. During the late indigo crisis, have you had occasion to depute any person or persons into the interior, in search of accurate information regarding the state of the districts?—Not especially for the purpose of news. I have recommended legal agents to the ryots to carry on these cases, who have acted as correspondents of the "Hindoo Patriot" then; I have received accurate information from time to time respecting every proceeding or occurrence of any note, from persons in the district.

3878. Mr. Fergusson.] But did you send from this the legal agents whom you recommended the ryots to employ?—The ryots took them up from here. I settled for one of them the terms on which they were to act as mooktyar. This was at a time, when I was told that no mooktyar in the district of Kishnaghur, except in the sudder station, could be induced to take up a ryot's case, in consequence of a mooktyar, Jitu Chatterjee, practising in the Damurhuda subdivision, having been imprisoned on an alleged charge of having instigated the ryots.

3879. President.] Then you can distinctly state that you never deputed emissaries with directions to go from thannah to thannah, or village to village, pointing out to the ryots the line they ought to take?—I distinctly deny having done so, and thank the Commission for having given me this opportunity of making this denial.

3880. Mr. Sale.] Can you state how many of these legal agents went from Calcutta to the indigo districts with your knowledge, to what district they went, and what was the nature of the understanding you had with them previous to their going?—Three in all, to the Nuddea district only. The understanding was, that they should act as mooktyars for the ryots who should pay them.

3881. Mr. Fergusson.] Did you prepare or assist in preparing circular notices respecting indigo, which were said to be distributed in the villages of Kishnaghur?—I know nothing of them, nor have I ever seen them.

Baboo UMESH CHUNDER ROY, of Santipore, Nuddea, Zemindar, called in; and Examined, on oath.

3888. President.] WILL you state in what districts you have factories and zemindaries?—I have zemindaries in Nuddea and Purneah, and also factories in the same.

72—I.

3882. Mr. Sale.] You have stated that after the passing of the summary Act, some of the ryots asked you how they could best resist the coercitory measures taken under it; did they wish to know how they could resist the operation of the Act itself, or did they desire to resist the coercitory measures taken under colour of that Act?—The ryots wished to know how they could resist the operation of the Act generally. I could only advise them how to resist the fearful amount of oppression committed under cover of that Act, by officials as well as planters.

3883. What kind of oppression do you refer to?—Imprisonment in large numbers in low, filthy, narrow godowns, breaking into houses, plunder of property, insult of women by officers of police of various grades, instigated by planters.

3884. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you believe that these things have been done under Act XI. of 1860?—I do, after having made inquiries of every kind in my power, as to the fact of imprisonment; it has been judicially established that cases of the kind did occur.

3885. President.] Are you aware that since the passing of the Act, the Government of Bengal has exercised close supervision over the local authorities in order to prevent injustice or oppression being perpetrated under its colour?—For the first two or three months after the passing of the Act, the supervision of the Government of Bengal was not such as to prevent the provisions of the Act being extensively abused. Since then a closer supervision prevails.

3886. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] It has been stated by Mr. Larmour before the Commission, that there has been a feeling of jealousy between the members of the British Indian Association and indigo planters, on account of some of the members of the latter being vested with the powers of honorary magistrate by the late Lieutenant Governor, Mr. Halliday, now Sir Frederick. As a member of the British Indian Association, do you wish to say anything?—Mr. Larmour's statement is not strictly correct. The Association is composed of members of varied politics. Some of them are friendly towards the planters, others are hostile towards them. The Association did address the Lieutenant Governor on the inexpediency of the appointments at the time they were made, and I beg to file a copy of the Association's address on the subject, dated 29th August 1857.

3887. President.] During the late discussions on indigo, have you thought it your duty to form and to express a clear opinion on the several questions at issue, as affecting the welfare of a large portion of the native population?—I have studied the question with care, and have no doubt in stating that the present system of indigo cultivation is injurious to the ryots in every way; on all points arising out of these discussions, I have formed definite opinions which I have taken every opportunity to express. On one point only I have not been able to form an opinion, viz., what are to be the future relations between ryot and planter.

Baboo H. C.
Mookerjee.

30 July
1860.

3889. Is your system with regard to indigo substantially the same as that pursued by planters?—Yes, it is, and I am associated with an European gentleman as partner. My average

Baboo
U. C. Roy.

Baboo
U. C. Roy.
—
30 July
1860.

of three working factories in Nuddea is about 200 maunds. The cultivation consists of 3,500 beegahs ryotti and 1,500 nij-abad, more or less.

3890. Have you experienced any difficulty in completing your sowings this year?—Yes, in about 20 villages not a ryot has sown for me, either October or spring sowings. Of these, 10 villages are in my own zemindaries, 10 are not.

3891. Can you state the reasons which brought about this refusal?—First, the ryots declare that they never make any profit, though their fathers took advances long ago. Also several ryots have stated in my presence, that everything has risen except indigo, viz., rent, wages, and all kinds of produce, and unless I can show them some better system they can't go on. On a reference to the manager, I also sent for the ryots and the head men of villages, who told me that they can get no day labourers for three and half annas or four annas per day. Also they complain that when the land is measured for indigo, the factory people measure one beegah and 11 cottahs for what is nearly two beegahs, according to zemindary measurement. Also they say the land is ours and we grow the indigo, but if our own cattle damage the plant accidentally, you sue and fine us for damaging your property. Also they complain of suffering by the measurement of the plant. For all these reasons they say, that they will not sow, unless we can give them a system whereby they shall derive profit, or at any rate not suffer loss.

3892. Mr. Sale.] Did you accede to the request of the mundals, and make any new arrangements with the ryots?—I told them I was quite ready to have the plant weighed instead of measured; secondly, the indigo beegah is to be the same as the zemindary. Besides that, I told them to consider how many bundles of plant they could give for the rupee without loss, and they said they would consider. Also they complained that four annas a day was not enough for carting the plant. To this I said, that it was a very important matter, and that I would look into it. On the whole, on consulting with my manager and partner, we determined to make no changes this year, as it would have a bad effect. And that we would look to a better system next year.

3893. Have you had any difficulties in Purneah, and is your system the same there as in Kishnagur?—I have had no difficulty, and I can only speak what my own system is, which is, that the ryots should grow indigo where he liked, and at the cutting time, the planter makes a bid for the crop, it may be four, five, or six and half bundles for the rupee. The ryots cut it, and we purchase it and carry it away from the spot. Sometimes the money is paid beforehand at rent time. I have one factory at Moturwa, which makes from 25 to 30 maunds yearly.

3894. Mr. Fergusson.] What part of the district is it in?—My factory is about four or five Kos from Sahibgunge.

3895. How many beegahs of your ryotti cultivation is not sown in Nuddea?—About 800 or 900 beegahs.

3896. Did you prosecute under the Breach of Contract Act?—No, my partner instituted a suit against some ryots of Bamandas Mookerjee for instigation, which was dismissed.

3897. President.] Have you ever been applied to by European gentlemen for the grant of ijaras and putnis, and with what result?—Yes, I have given lands to many gentlemen. The Bengal Indigo Company hold leases of lands from me, for which they pay about 20,000 rupees; Mr. John White has in putni and ijara about 6,000 rupees.

3898. Did you grant these putnis or leases of your own free will?—The putnis I granted were entirely of my own free will. But the ijaras I gave when I was in extreme difficulty and misfortune, i. e., in the Bengali year 1262; the time of the lease expired, and there was a stipulation that the company should not be carrying on any indigo cultivation either nij or ryotti, either in their own name or that of others, and that if they did, I should have the right of carrying away the crop. When the time expired they sowed indigo forcibly, and this brought on a case of Act IV. of 1840, but on my producing copy of the terms of the lease, the planter lost the case. On this they assembled a great number of lattials and spearmen, and took away more than a thousand head of cattle from the three villages named Bhowna, Mudna, and Hathibanda, and plundered them also. Sixty cases were instituted, and as long as Mr. Palmer, the joint magistrate, had the management of them, the defendants were summoned, and the cases were going on well. When Mr. Elliot took charge, on certain petitions being presented, he summoned me to find recognizances under Act V. of 1848; I represented that it was right to take recognizances from both parties, and to the best of my recollection this was done in the end. Mr. Elliot represented to me that all these disputes arose from my not renewing the lease. I represented to the magistrate that my ryots complained of various oppressions, stating that they were ready to make up the sum which I should have got as salami for the renewal of the lease. In the end, however, Ram Gopaul Mitter, a vakeel, in whom I had much confidence, who lived near Mulnauth, recommended me to renew the lease, saying otherwise there would be no end to plunder and oppression, and that I should never be able to protect my ryots. At length Mr. Larmour came, and whilst negotiations were pending, Mr. Elliot going one day to the cultivation, and not finding the ryots there, struck all the sixty cases off the file. After that the ryots wherever plaintiffs came to me and said there was no use complaining, and that I had better renew the lease. Formerly when Mr. Forlong was manager of the Bengal Indigo Company's concerns there was no trouble, and leases were given by a mere interchange of letters.

3899. Mr. Fergusson.] Since the planters took ijaras and putnis, have you got higher rents than formerly, and has the value of such property improved?—They took the land, according to the old jumma; still in consequence of indigo cultivation, there is no doubt that the state of zemindaries has been improved, by taking up waste lands, as that in some instances 1,500 rental is realised, where it was formerly 1,200. Also my churs on the banks of the river, which were fit for nothing else, have been successfully cultivated with indigo.

3900. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Have the number of ryots increased, and if the number has increased, where have they come from?—In some instances families have increased, and in some instances ryots have taken refuge in my zemindaries in consequence of the oppression of planters.

3901. Do

3901. Do you mean us to understand that your zemindary is actually benefited by the introduction of indigo cultivation, in that waste lands have been occupied, but that the actual condition of the ryots has not improved?—What I mean to say is this, that everything has risen in value but indigo. Formerly men were content to work for two rupees a month and even less; now they can get high wages; the price of cattle is higher, and therefore the ryots feel their suffering because their condition is stationary.

3902. Can you state what advantage the ryots formerly derived from indigo?—Formerly the indigo beegah was not larger than the zemindary beegah, and rents were much lower. The expense of cultivation was also much less, twelve ploughs would be had for a rupee, nor was there such minute attention paid to weeding.

3903. Mr. Fergusson.] Has there been a large rise of rents in Nuddea?—Yes, in some instances it has been double the original rents.

3904. Mr. Forlong states, that he gives his ryots the best lands in Kishnagur at three beegahs for the rupee, in consideration of their sowing one-sixteenth in indigo; if the indigo is stopped, don't you think he will raise the rents pretty considerably?—Certainly he will in such a case.

3905. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] Supposing indigo is stopped, do you not think that the ryots will agree to an enhancement of their rent if allowed to sow their own crops?—Certainly, considering the high price of all grain and produce, rising in some instances to two and three times the original price.

3906. Mr. Fergusson.] But if the price of rice and seed fall to their old price, will not the ryots suffer very considerably from the abolition of indigo, and the consequent raising of rents?—I don't think that the price of produce will fall until the wages of labour and the price of cattle become lower.

3907. President.] Have you been applied to this season by planters for assistance to get their ryots to sow, and have you issued injunctions to your local agents accordingly?—Yes, I have both told my ryots, and written to my Mofussil servants to the above effect, telling the ryots that they must sow as long as the ijara lasts.

3908. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] From your knowledge of Mofussil matters, and the feelings of the ryots, what do you think that they will do next year?—I think that until all sorts of oppression be stopped, and until a higher price be offered for the bundles, the ryots won't sow.

3909. President.] Do you coincide with other native gentlemen as to the prejudicial effect of certain sections of Act X. on their properties and interests?—Yes, I do generally, and I also object to sections 103 and 105, as to the sale of tenures; the latter being rather indefinite.

Baboo ROY KRISHNA MITTRA, Pergunnah Halda, Inhabitant of Goaltalli, Thannah Bagda, Zillah Nuddea, called in; and Examined on oath.

3910. President.] Is your ganti or other property in that village still in your possession?—My family has been long in that village for seven generations from the time of the Mahomedan rule; we had ganti, lakhiraj, devuttur and mohatran lands; we are known throughout the whole country round as a highly respectable family. My lands were not liable to enhancement, and when Mr. Larmour wished to enhance them, I told him that I had very old documents which would be a bar to enhancement; I offered to pay the proper rent, but Mr. Larmour refused; I offered to deposit it with the judge; I then complained to Mr. Elliot, who said I was a turbulent character, as a petition had been presented against me, with others, for assembling lattials; I was kept hanging about for three months. While I was in attendance my houses were knocked to pieces, and the property I had of every kind, plundered; this was done in the month of Bhadro. I at first thought it was no use complaining to Mr. Elliot, but when he went away, I complained to Mr. Cockerell in the month of Agran, and he ordered me to issue a subpœna for the witnesses, though I wished to have them summoned by the darogah; my witnesses were heard, but only two of the defendants were summoned; and in the month of Jyeshto or Baisakh the case was struck off, because I could not point out the defendants; since that, I have never dared to go home, but I have sued under Act X. and got a decree, which is on appeal at the sudder.

3911. Why did you not make your appearance when three other respectable people came from your village before this Commission?—They were living in Calcutta, and I was in Nuddea; I was not aware of their coming here; but I was in Kishnaghur when the Commission sat there, and applied to be heard.

3912. Mr. Sale.] How far is Barra Khanpore from Goaltalli?—About five russis.

3913. Do you know Amir Mullick, and what kind of man is he?—Yes, I know Amir Mullick, he is one of the most respectable men in the country; I have always heard of him as a good character.

3914. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] At the time your houses were knocked to pieces and your property plundered, had Mr. Larmour the power of an honorary magistrate?—Yes, he obtained it in Sraban. My house was knocked to pieces in Bhadro.

3915. Mr. Sale.] Who was your zemindar before Mr. Larmour?—Baboo Sri Gopal Paul Chowdari.

Commission adjourned at 5.15 p. m.

Baboo
U. C. Roy.

30 July
1860.

Baboo R. K.
Mittra.

Tuesday, 31st July 1860.

PRESENT :

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., c. s., President.

Members :—W. F. Fergusson, Esq. ; Rev. J. Sale ; Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

EDWARD DE LATOUR, Esq., c. s., Civil and Sessions Judge, 24-Pergunnahs, called in ;
and Examined on oath.

E.
De Latour,
Esq.

31 July
1860.

3916. President.] WILL you state the districts in which you have had experience?—First in the district of Maldah, then Bhaugulpore, Monghyr and Dinagepore ; in all of those districts I have exercised the full powers of a magistrate. On my return from furlough, in 1847, I was appointed joint magistrate and deputy collector of Furreedpore, from there I was appointed joint magistrate and deputy collector of Noakhally ; thence I was appointed acting collector of Chittagong, and for some time also acted as magistrate ; from thence I was transferred to Arrah, as collector ; and from Arrah, I was appointed additional judge of Gya ; then I was appointed to act as Civil and Sessions Judge of Shahabad ; but owing to severe illness, I was not able to take that appointment, and was obliged to proceed to England on sick leave ; whence I returned three and half years ago. Since my return, I have filled the appointment of Civil and Sessions Judge of the 24 Pergunnahs.

3917. In those of the above districts, where indigo was cultivated, had you fair opportunities of becoming acquainted with the system?—In the district of Maldah I was much in the society of indigo planters, amongst whom I number some of my most esteemed friends ; I would mention Dr. John Lamb, owner of the Mutrapore concern, Messrs. David Gibson and Peter MacArthur, owners of the Sungatolla and Boglia concerns, and Mr. John Taylor, manager of the Gowalti concern, as gentlemen with whom I was very intimate. My experience at Maldah extended over a period of three years, more or less ; during the whole course of my residence in that district, I cannot call to mind the occurrence of a single act of indigo oppression. Taking the districts in geographical order, I proceed next to the adjoining district of Bhaugulpore : I would mention Mr. Charles Barnes and Mr. David Owen, proprietors of the two Colgong concerns ; Mr. Lonsdale, on the other side of the Ganges, either manager or owner of an extensive concern ; and I regret at this time, after the lapse of so many years, that I cannot specify the names of the different planters ; but when I left that district in 1845, as magistrate, I do not recollect that I had under my official cognizance, a single instance of what I should call indigo oppression. Mr. John Oman, who bought the Lower Colgong concern, had his occasional differences with his immediate neighbour, Mr. Barnes, but these were cases such as might occur between rival traders in any part of the world. Carrying on my experience geographically, I come to the next district, Monghyr : my experience as a magistrate, and also as an assistant in that district, is precisely of the same character. Then I would mention the district of Shahabad, where I did not exercise any magisterial authority ; a position better calculated for ascertaining whether any oppression actually existed, because for four months in every year, I used to be encamped in all parts of it ; I was intimately acquainted with the people of that district, as in the course of my duties I used to ride through the country to visit the different Government estates in Arrah, in order to check the assessments ; and frequently, during the heat of the day, I have put up under a peepul tree, and the ryots and villagers have sat down talking to me, and telling me all their little grievances, whatever they might be. In that district I am perfectly satisfied that no such thing as indigo oppression exists. Then I would take the district of Gya, in which I was additional judge on the civil side only. I can also state, that no indigo oppression exists in that district. In the district of Dinagepore, I think there were only one or two factories that I was acquainted with, and I can state that there was no indigo oppression in that district. On my return from furlough in 1847, as before stated, I was appointed to Furreedpore ; on joining that district I found it as nearly in a state of insurrection as it was well possible to be. Shortly before, about the end of 1846, Mr. Dunlop's factory, at Cossimpore, had been attacked and burnt down, his gomashita, called Prasad Kanai Lal, was carried off by the ryots, and up to the time of the disposal of the case at the sessions, no information as to what had become of him had been received ; and in a word, that district was as thoroughly disorganized as it was possible for a Bengal district to be. I found, for the first time in all my Indian experience, the hand of the planter systematically lifted up against the life and property of the ryot ; a system that appeared to me neither to recognize the existence of a magistrate on earth, nor a God in heaven. I found a total absence of ordinary justice. I believe, as far as I can judge from the records of the case, the outrage on Mr. Dunlop's factory originated in the total denial of ordinary justice. My meaning will be clear if I refer the Commission to page 47, of the authorised report of the trial of Doodoo Meah and his followers, in 1847. In Doodoo Meah's defence, after referring to a series of false actions instituted against him by Mr. Dunlop, and which had been dismissed, he refers to an attack made by Mr. Dunlop, his gomashita, and certain baboos, accompanied by a force of 700 or 800 men, armed with guns and other weapons, upon the actual residence of Doodoo Meah himself ; in Bhadro his house was broken into, four of his servants murdered, others severely wounded, and his house and property to the amount of 12 lacs of rupees were plundered ;

the

the bodies of the slain removed, and the darogah sent in the wounded persons as part of an unlawful assemblage; they were forwarded to the magistrate, and one of them, named Amiruddin, died in hospital; the magistrate did not investigate this; but not to be too lengthy, it would appear that terms of compromise were discussed, to which the magistrate was more or less a party; and Doodoo Meah seeing no means of coping with the said gentleman, Mr. Dunlop and the baboos consented to a compromise. Doodoo Meah said in his defence, that the magistrate recorded a proceeding, and got him to sign it; he then sent an English letter and a parwana to the said gentlemen and the baboos: "They have ruined me of wealth, life, talooks, lands and houses, and have made me an outcast from my country." To these proceedings I attribute the retaliation upon Mr. Dunlop's factory in the December following. There is one more point which I would prominently notice. The magistrate himself went to the mofussil, dined with Mr. Dunlop in his tent, and, after some consultation, and after taking the deposition of some of his creatures, and without judging the case, committed Doodoo Meah: this was Doodoo Meah's story. I need not trouble the Commission any further with this.

3918. Can you state what was the result of Doodoo Meah's committal?—Doodoo Meah was convicted by the sessions judge, and on appeal to the sudder court he was acquitted. The grounds of his acquittal are recorded in Appendix; these were, that a note purporting to have been written by Mr. Dunlop's mooktyar, warning him of the intended attack, was not sent to the magistrate until the 20th of January, or one month and fifteen days after the attack on the factory, and Mr. Dunlop's note of the 5th December was not filed till the 20th of July. The Court thought that parties possessed of such clear evidence would have filed it at the time. And as to the letters which were put in for the prosecution, purporting to be written by Doodoo Meah and his friends and adherents from prison, the court naturally distrusted their genuineness, as many of the parties to whom those letters were addressed had been apprehended one month previous to the date of the letters said to be addressed to them. Upon these grounds principally, Doodoo Meah was acquitted, and it may be sufficient to add, that on a general distrust of the evidence, every one was acquitted. [The book, containing the full translation of the trial and the proceedings invested with it, as published by Government, was here submitted by Mr. Latour for inspection.] With reference to what has been stated above, I would wish to bring prominently to notice the system that prevailed, and may or may not prevail still, of European British born magistrates associating with prosecutors, and others having cases in those criminal courts, upon terms of social and familiar intercourse; it appears to my mind to be utterly repugnant to every sense of duty; to be disgraceful to the character of a British judge; it utterly destroys every feeling of confidence in our courts in the minds of the natives, for what native will bring forward his case when he sees, under his own immediate eyesight, such instance of moral corruption in a British magistracy; and well might Doodoo Meah complain of his committal after Mr. Dunlop's dining with the magistrate in his tent, who refused to inquire into the attack on his own house. Such was the disorganized state of Furreedpore, when it was either my misfortune or my good fortune to be sent to that district; I had to solve this problem, whether justice was not better than soldiers. To have continued the previous system would have led to an insurrection in that district which would have probably involved all the factories in the eastern districts in Bengal; and the steps that I took were the simple steps that any magistrate would take, that is, to punish every ruffian, black or white, without exception; and in the discharge of my duty, in the course of one single year, I brought that district into thorough order; at the same time I beg to deprecate any idea that I wish to assume to myself any credit for so doing; I did nothing but my bare duty, and less than my duty I would not do. I have brought with me, to save the Commission needless recapitulation, copies of my proceedings in the various cases in which indigo planters were brought to punishment by me in 1848. In these different cases, a system utterly disgraceful to any one calling himself an European, may be brought to light: cases of kidnapping by Mr. Wise's assistants; a case of kidnapping by Mr. Tissendie, and the conviction and imprisonment of Mr. Pinto, an assistant in the firm of Messrs. Hunter & Co. I first put in my report to Mr. Dampier, Superintendent of Police, No. 246, dated 29th May 1846; the case originated in that revolting practice, if I knew a worse term than revolting, I would use it, of sending in an armed force to plough up and destroy the home cultivation of the ryot, and upon the remonstrance of the ryots, that cowardly ruffianism that spears the ryots down on the spot, and then plunders the village. Then, with the Court's permission, I shall refer to the evidence of Mr. Tissendie: that gentleman says, that he was fined 500 rupees, by the sessions judge, as accessory after the fact. That gentleman states, that I became prejudiced against the proprietors of the concern, Messrs. Hunter & Co.; the only Hunter & Co. that I knew, were my friends in Dhurumtolla; that I declared that I would put down the oppression of that firm. Then, that "on his arrival, Mr. Latour received complaints against Mr. John Driver, for cutting down trees and making roads through a village; he tried the case, but could not make anything of it, as Mr. Driver held a perwana from the former magistrate to make the road; complaints have been made to myself as magistrate in the usual court, that Mr. Driver was trespassing on their grounds and cutting down their trees. Mr. Driver, I presume, justified his proceedings by producing a perwana from a magistrate to do so. I may have considered Mr. Driver justified, but I never considered the magistrate excused. What could be the feeling of a retired citizen at Brompton, finding the owner of a gas factory, wanting to make a short cut to his factory sending in 200 or 300 sappers, who begin to smash his conservatories, cut down his apple-trees, destroy his fences and injure his crops, and to hear in justification that a magistrate had told him he might do so. Comparing little things with great, that was exactly what Mr. Driver was doing, and that proceeding was very much opposed to my notions of the rights of property. Then next Mr. Tissendie refers to my summoning in factory agents. Whenever any particular crime is to be committed which would involve indigo gentlemen or zemindars in the discredit of a criminal prosecution, my experience as a magistrate teaches me, that be it zemindar or be it planter, European or native, a carte blanche is given to the naib or the go-mashta; consequently there is a necessity, when these

E.
De-Latour,
Esq.

31 July
1860.

E.
De-Latour,
Esq.
—
31 July
1860.

these acts come before a magistrate, for summoning these parties. Mr. Tissendie states that when the ryots objected to sow these 35 beegahs in a village called Gungarampore, they did sow, because they had found out, that the magistrate was against the concern, and that they might make out any complaints against the concern upon plain paper." This is not so. The attack upon the village of Gungarampore was to the best of my recollection the first outrage of the kind. I am obliged to Mr. Tissendie for admitting that his assistant went there with the ploughs without his authority. I will not trouble the Commission with it, but hand for inspection of the Commission the entire evidence taken in my own handwriting. Although that evidence was to my mind most conclusive, still I feel that I am much indebted to Mr. Tissendie for admitting the fact of the presence of his assistant, a fact which Mr. Pinto, his assistant, most emphatically denied. In that case Mr. Pinto was sentenced by me to six months' imprisonment in the Furreedpore Gaol, for getting together an illegal assemblage of armed men; my orders were appealed against; my orders were affirmed on appeal by the sessions judge. A further appeal was preferred to the Nizamut Adawlut; my order was affirmed by the Nizamut Adawlut. The advantage I derived from drawing up proceeding in English, I subsequently learnt from Mr. Pinto himself; he told me that I had cost him 500 rupees; I told him I was perfectly ignorant of having done so, and begged him to explain: he told me that he had sent to the sheristadar of the sessions judge a Bank of Bengal note for 500 rupees, in consideration of which, when the case came on, he was to read the evidence falsely. But Mr. Swetenham being totally ignorant of the Bengali language paid no attention whatever to the vernacular, and disposed of the case with reference to the proceedings that were in English. Then I would refer to Mr. Tissendie's committal. (Committal filed, No. 349.) The history of that case was a report made by the darogah that the other man who had been wounded in that attack on the village of Gungarampore, had been carried off by Mr. Tissendie's people. Upon that I addressed an official letter to Mr. Tissendie, which I now beg to put in, No. 206, telling him (filed) that if those men died in his custody I would bring him to trial for murder, because at that particular time they required the best medical attendance which was only procurable at the civil station. Shortly afterwards these men were in communication with my nazir, being released by Mr. Tissendie. I proceed now to file letter No. 351, which is my report into the inquiry of kidnapping. Briefly, I took these three men with me, as soon as the state of the river and a good easterly breeze would enable my guard boat to run up into the Pubna district. The report of that inquiry is embodied in letter No. 294. I proceeded to the factory of Soojunpore, in the district of Pubna; Mr. Sheriff was the assistant there; I told him the object of my visit, and advised him to accompany me, and told him to be satisfied that he had the utmost extent of fair play. Accordingly we started, preceding the three wounded men, who proceeded in a direction to a building not under immediate observation at all, which, when unlocked, was shown to be the factory godown or dyeing house; this in itself was not very material, for at some time or other they might have had knowledge of this fact, being indigo ryots. This was 25 miles from the village where they had been attacked.

Then we crossed a small stream, went through some indigo cultivation, and came to some heavy bamboo topes, and the man brought us all at once to a pucka house of the dewan, one Chuckerbutty, whom I brought with me from Furreedpore. I had been much puzzled at an expression used by some of the kidnapped people, that they were confined in an upper room with a well in it. The dewan objected to our going in, and said that it was the zenanah, but subsequently he waived that objection; we entered the room and found exactly what corresponded with the statement of the kidnapped parties. Similarly, at every stage and in company with Mr. Tissendie, I contrasted their evidence with the premises, and Mr. Tissendie was in due course committed to the sessions court, and was fined 500 rupees. The next case will show how some planters endeavour to make false criminal charges a means of obtaining leases. In this case Mr. Croply was the person principally concerned. It turned out that the active parties in getting up the false charge were the factory servants; Mr. Croply then being ill. The worst feature in that case is, I consider, Mr. Croply's willingness to relinquish the prosecution, provided the party gave him a lease for indigo land (No. 93). I beg now to put in the sentence of my court of the 19th August 1848 upon Mr. A. Forde, an assistant of Mr. Wise at Dacca, for kidnapping Kisto Chunder Chowdari. He was sentenced to pay a fine of 500 rupees, and in the event of the fine not being realized, he was sentenced to imprisonment in the Furreedpore Gaol for a period of one month; I also submit my report to Mr. Dampier in the proceedings on that case. As also in the case of Mr. Wise in the same matter, with a like sentence. I also put in letter No. 327, to show the lattial practice, and that I could not send a witness from my court, without his being intercepted by Mr. Forde. There is one thing more I wish to state, that considerable odium has been thrown on the missionaries for saying that "not a chest of indigo reached England without being stained with human blood." That has been stated to be an anecdote. That expression is mine, and I adopt it in the fullest and broadest sense of its meaning, as the result of my experience as magistrate in the Furreedpore district. Speaking of that experience in England four years ago, I stated that the result of my experience as a magistrate in Furreedpore led to that conclusion. I have seen several ryots sent into me as a magistrate, who have been speared through the body. I have had ryots before me who have been shot down by Mr. Forde. I have put on record to-day how others have been first speared and then kidnapped; and such a system of carrying on indigo I consider to be a system of bloodshed. I hold now depositions in my hands independently of those already filed, which will show how Mr. A. Forde accompanied by a fleet of 50 or 60 boats attacked the village of Chargoal; how several men were shot down at the time; how Mr. Forde was himself one of the party who did it; how the men were stowed away into the deck of the boats, removed to the factory, had such shots picked out of them, as could be picked out; how the men were removed to places of imprisonment in the Dacca district, and kept in confinement until the man prosecuting the case was compelled to give in a razinama. That case not having been disposed of, as the case which I have already put in, I do not wish to trouble this Commission with this. The original papers can be got from the Manickgunge Court.

Court. I only want to justify the expression of bloodshed. Then another expression made use of by me was about human misery. Those papers already put in will show many of the facts that this Commission must be thoroughly satiated with. The whole principle of the Indigo Law VI. of 1823, was that there should be two things, first there should be a contract in writing; second, that the contract should refer to a piece of ground with defined boundaries. I charge upon the indigo planters as far as my experience in the Furreedpore district goes, that they have grossly violated the essentials of the law. If that be thought too strong an expression, I would say that they have purposely neglected it. The people in Furreedpore during my investigation took me into their villages, showed me their houses with the indigo plant growing up to their very doors. They complained that it was almost impossible that their cows could leave the sheds without getting into the indigo. No ryot would willingly give up his homestead land for indigo cultivation; to obviate that difficulty, the planter dispensed with any written agreement. The Commission has been told by planters' witnesses of ryots' signatures being taken to a blank stamp paper; first, that enables the dishonest planter, who is a disgrace to the brotherhood of planters, to seize upon any land of the ryots that he chooses; second, it enables the factory to fill up a bond of the year 1850, which any factory gomashita could put in in a suit and prove by hired witnesses; therefore, the ryot who signs a blank stamp is in every sense the merest slave of the factory. Such a system I consider something worse than dishonest. It lies at the root of all the dissatisfaction of the ryot.

3919. But as a judicial officer, have you ever had occasion to think that suits or bonds had been got up in this way?—My answer referred to the power of the factory to provide a bond, to the coercive force which that knowledge must carry; judging from the presumption of conduct, the man who would plough up the ryots' crop, would stick at nothing whatever. Such bonds have not come under my judicial notice.

3920. Then, you do not think it possible that determined men might commit acts of open illegality or violence, and that the same men might yet shrink from proceedings tainted with forgery and fraud?—I draw a vast distinction between a case where parties equally matched in strength and other resources, have a fair stand up fight. Victor or vanquished, I might possibly feel proud to shake hands with both parties. The attack upon a poor man's cultivation is a sneaking un-English proceeding. The person who could do that act, might not hesitate in filling up a bond. And I would wish to state, that these things if now done, they are done under the carte blanche given to the factory gomashita who becomes the agent in carrying it out.

3921. Mr. Fergusson.] Do you think that a man who would fill up a blank stamp paper intended for a habulyat, would hesitate to forge the whole of the bond, and as you never knew such a case, do you think it fair to suggest that such a thing is done by planters?—As before remarked, every suspicion must attach upon a concern that takes the ryots' signature to a blank stamp. Speaking in the mind of a ryot, I can only say, that I should be sorry to be a ryot in any such concern. No honest purpose can be gained by such a practice. The practice is self-suggestive of unfair dealing, and it commonly arises in one or two things stated above, either to give the planter power to take any land he likes, or to keep the ryot in constant fear; and be it with the one object or other, I consider them both mischievous. As to my suggesting that planters can be capable of such conduct, I say simply that what is possible may happen. Why do not these planter gentlemen render it open and fair, by taking written agreements?

3922. Do you not think that the cunning, fraud and perjury of the Bengal ryots is often more than a match for the asserted violence of the planter, and conducive to it?—I think that the character of the ryot not improperly described in the question addressed to me, is mainly owing to oppressions, not of to-day or yesterday, but as long as there have been ryots. Whether such idiosyncrasies can compete with or match any active oppression, may or may not be the case. I know that oppression is never necessary, that sooner or later it carries with it its own reward. Good masters make good servants; good planters, good ryots. As for instance, why has Mr. Bell of Muddundery, in the district of Jessore, carried out the whole of his cultivation without the slightest difficulty? I have reason to believe that Mr. Bell has done the first, working a factory under every disadvantage. The terms upon which such factories can be worked are known, I believe, to the Commission. Various stated, I have been told that the charges for interest, brokerage, &c. range from 21 per cent. upwards. Bearing in mind the season, the margin of profit, if any, that can survive to the planter working under such a system in connexion with the great rise of rice and other products, is such that no legislation can possibly succeed in keeping such factories going. It is not the presence of the capitalist that I, as a civilian, object to, but to the absence of the capitalist in all such factories, and the day which substitutes the real capitalist for the speculative owner, will be one of the greatest advantage to British India. The factory stands mortgaged as security. The produce of the current season is mortgaged over to the Calcutta firm, and the debt in the books of the Calcutta firm, is what the ryot is into the books of the factory; with this distinction that the one gets an account and the other does not. I am of opinion that with reference to the immense increase in the value of any other kind of produce, no system of legislature compatible with common equity, can maintain such factories, the resources of the planter being altogether circumscribed, and that the moment such factories are closed, and in their stead the bonâ fide capital substituted, will be a day of great advantage to India. My remark only refers to factories bought on borrowed capital.

3923. But do you not know that the real capitalist will look for, or obtain the same return from his money as is current in the country, which is what the borrower has to pay, less a certain sum for insurance on the part of the lender?—Whether the capitalist will be satisfied with an interest less than the current interest of the country, I know not. But I think that the capitalist would find a very large profit on that sum, which is now paid by the speculating planter to his mortgage. It is not only the interest that we have to deal with, but it is the incidental charges of commission, brokerage and so forth, that swell the expenses in the year's total. I feel satisfied that the real owner, working his factory with his own capital, would be able to deal very

E.
De-Latour,
Esq.

31 July
1860.

E.
De-Latour,
Esq.
—
31 July
1860.

liberally with his ryots, and make a large fortune in the course of a few years.

3924. Are you not aware, as I state it to be the fact, that Mr. Bell is a capitalist having purchased, and now working the concern with his own money, and is not the result different to what you state?—I am not aware of the terms upon which Mr. Bell holds his factory. Looking at a letter from that gentleman where he alludes to paying interest upon block, I should have not supposed him to have been the actual owner. I can understand that a series of unfortunate seasons might bring down an independent owner to a state of debt and difficulty; but so soon as that state is aimed at, I am of opinion that under the present circumstances of the planter the factory cannot be carried on under any system of fostering legislation.

3925. Will you please to state how long you were in the Furreedpore district, and how long had you been qualified for the public service when you took charge of it?—I was at Furreedpore upwards of a year, that is speaking in general terms, in 1848; I entered the service in 1833.

3926. Did I understand you to qualify your statement as to indigo being stained with human blood, by limiting that statement to Furreedpore, or what other districts do you include in it?—I stated at starting that personally I was thoroughly satisfied, that no oppression whatever existed in the districts of Dinagapore, Malda, Bhagulpore, Monghyr, Shahabad and Gya. I might add that I am well aware, that we have nothing of this kind in Patna, Tirhoot and Chuprah. Far be it from me to attribute to the planters of those districts that system of outrage which I actually witnessed at Furreedpore, that was something perfectly new to my experience as a magistrate; how far it prevails in the adjacent districts with the exception of the Dacca district, I cannot say. I have placed before the Commission the official results of my experience as a magistrate in the Furreedpore district and in the sub division of Manickgunge attached to Furreedpore. That the system of kidnapping is not limited to those districts can be shown by the records of the magistrates' court of Mymensingh. I allude to the case of kidnapping in which some of Mr. Wise's people were brought to trial in that court, but I conceive it to be the special duty of this high Commission to visit those districts, and ascertain whether the practice obtains elsewhere than in those districts where I have witnessed it myself.

3927. During the time you were at Furreedpore, was not the district in a state of agitation, owing to the spread of the doctrines under Doodoo Meah, and was not he found guilty by the sessions judge, aided by a jury, of turbulent assemblage and committing violence?—Doodoo Meah, as stated before, was convicted at the sessions. Referring to the report of the trial, I find that the trial was held by a jury of three Mahomedans and three Hindoos, who pronounced him guilty. Doodoo Meah was the head of a sect called Ferazees. They particularly resisted the oppressive cesses levied upon them by Hindoo zemindars, such as those on marriages and other occasions; and a great deal of disturbance was caused in consequence, great ill-will arising therefrom. During my own experience in Furreedpore, I never had any trouble with the Ferazees, but that the district was disturbed I have already admitted. I said that it was on the verge of insurrection.

I hold in my hand an official record showing that there were 1,213 persons accused of criminal offences who had never been arrested when I took charge of the district. That paper assuredly speaks volumes for the disorganized state of the district. With the permission of the Commission, I beg to hand in an attested copy of the same.

3928. Was not Doodoo Meah considered such a dangerous character, politically, that he was made a state prisoner during the rebellion in 1857?—Doodoo Meah had been again convicted of some offence at the local sessions. He was sent down to the Alipore gaol, but was released on appeal to the Nizamut Adawlut. He was detained as a state prisoner for some time in the Alipore gaol.

3929. How many cases of kidnapping came under your knowledge when you were in Furreedpore besides the one you have mentioned?—In addition to those cases, twelve years after date, I cannot say how many other cases there were of kidnapping; in fact, till I saw my reports, I had even forgotten some of these cases. The system of kidnapping I would state is not limited to the planters of those districts. Wherever there is a native agency entrusted with the management of estates or factories you will have kidnapping. Since I have been in the 24-Pergunnahs I have addressed the Government with the view of passing a special law to the prevention of this so common an offence.

3930. Do you think this offence as common among planters as it is among zemindars?—I consider the offence of kidnapping as common to both planter and zemindar; it is the customary resort of the violent and the oppressive, be he white or be he black. These cases that I have submitted as evidence, will show that where parties have been wounded the common practice is to carry them off and shut them up, until their relations prosecuting the charge agree to withdraw their prosecutions.

3931. In the course of your researches after the documents you have produced to-day, do you not think you would have come across any other cases of kidnapping by Europeans in Furreedpore, had they existed?—I made no search for papers of any kind. When I saw Mr. Tissendie's evidence I merely requested the joint magistrate of Furreedpore to send me certified copies of those particular cases. I wish it to be understood distinctly that I have been searching for evidence nowhere to condemn the planter. Those documents refer to things within my own knowledge. Being a servant of the people of this country, in the employment of Government, it becomes my duty to state, distinctly and assuredly, what I have this day stated.

3932. Do you remember applying to the magistrate of Jessore to know if there were any records of conviction against Mr. Tissendie during the twelve years he had resided in that district, and to his replying in the negative?—I cannot state whether any such application was ever made. It is very probable that such an application was made, as in all commitments to the sessions the records of previous convictions are put in; such an application would be in every sense formal, no matter whether the individual chanced to be a planter or any one else.

3933. In the matter of kidnapping, cannot you understand that there may be such utter want of confidence in the courts, and particularly of the native amla, that men liable to be accused are driven to that offence from fear of being unjustly condemned?—I am of opinion that cases of kidnapping napping are very frequently got up. But I cannot understand a case of kidnapping, such as those that I have had the honour to put before the Commission, without an intention of giving cover to acts of violence, by keeping the unfortunate individual shut up until the case is compromised. The question of the corruption of the courts is a very large one. That corruption exists I have no doubt, but it cannot always be borne in mind that the courts of the country are quite good enough on the civil side, otherwise they would not resort to them; and I have always thought that in the talk of the corruption of the civil courts, the argument is paraded just in the same sense and spirit as Mr. William Sykes would take objection to the police courts in London and the Old Bailey.

3934. One half of the concern in Mr. Tissendie's management is in Pubna; is it not the case that during the time you were in Furreedpore there were no complaints against Mr. Tissendie in Pubna; and after you left there were no complaints there or in Furreedpore, and was not the district quite quiet after you left?—Whether there were or were not complaints against Mr. Tissendie in Pubna, I cannot possibly say; whether, after I left Furreedpore, there were any complaints brought against Mr. Tissendie I am wholly unable to say; whether the district of Furreedpore was or was not quiet I cannot say, but I should regret to learn that my labour had been utterly thrown away.

3935. President.] You are probably familiar with the working of the new Civil Code, are you of opinion that it has much shortened the delay in law suits?—The practical working of this code is a good deal neutralized by the procedure, sections CLV. to CLIX., as to the service of summons; it would be desirable, instead of the process as it stands, in all cases where a summons cannot be served upon a party or a male relation, that the summons should be appended to the dwelling house as the proclamation, thereby rendering a separate proceeding and taking of evidence unnecessary. And the Court at any time, upon the affidavit of the party, should be at liberty to issue a summons for the arrest of any absconding witness; with these alterations the code would work more effectively. Provision should be made for a restraint upon unnecessary evidence. In every case there is one party anxious to expedite and another to retard the decision of the case. In the 24-Pergunnahs, parties have taken advantage of the alteration of the stamp law. Formerly, upon any issue of summons, a separate application upon stamp paper was put in. I hold in my hands a return of seven cases under the new law. In those seven cases there were 1,600 witnesses; in one case alone there were 835. The examination of those 835 witnesses, with fair diligence, would occupy the time of the Court for three months; that case I believe to refer entirely to the genuineness of a deed of gift. In any such case the evidence of a very few witnesses would suffice; I beg to put in the return. It was prepared in my own office, and is authenticated by me; until this state of affairs is altered, of course the operation of this law will be materially prejudiced. To obviate this state of things I brought the matter to the notice of Government, and if resort cannot be had to the re-imposing of the stamp duty, the Court should have the power, which is inherent in every court, of rejecting superfluous evidence.

3936. Taking a case either on a bond or contract, or for damages of any kind within the cognizance of a moonsiff, what period do you think would be sufficient to get it through the court in the first instance?—I think that all cases of simple contract, bonds, and generally any case not requiring local inquiry, or affecting right, or real property, may be disposed of with reference to the state of the files, in two months; with a clear file, when a moonsiff can take up a case de die and in diem, that period might largely be reduced; the essential benefit of Act VIII. will be the discontinuance to some extent of false action.

3937. Can you mention any such cases of moonsiffs with clear files ready to take up case after case?—In the 24-Pergunnahs I should say there are no clear files. I have been under the necessity of applying for an additional moonsiff at the Sudder station. In the course of, possibly, another year or two, the files will probably be clear, and when those alterations noted above become law, that Act may be worked almost like a Small Cause Court with respect to above class of cases.

3938. Supposing a case of the kind to be won in the Moonsiffs' Court in two months, what time would it require to get through the appeal as a matter of right, that is, before a Judge, a Principal Sudder Ameen, not too much overburdened with work?—The present code obstructs the disposal of appeals in this way. The Appellate Court is obliged to give notice to the respondent in every case. Formerly, I used to go through every case in appeal, and only served notice upon the respondent when their cause was shown for disturbing the judgment of the lower court. In such cases only used notice to be served at all. The dispatch of business was greatly facilitated, and the respondent was saved the expense of increasing harassment and trouble in supplying a vakil. I consider that the present law of appeal will rather hinder than facilitate the dispatch, and there are some orders which, under this code, may be appealed against. As, for instance, under the XXXVI. section, where an appeal lies from an order requesting a plaint either as being defective in its particulars, or the subject-matter being beyond the jurisdiction, or by reason of insufficient valuation. Not to take up an appeal in such matters without the Court issuing notice to the respondent seems quite uncalled for; the Appellate Court should only issue notice to the respondent upon cause shown for disturbing the judgment of the lower court in matters respecting its merits. The delay in disposing of appeals under the present code as it stands must of course depend upon the state of its files. By the time that the moonsiff will have clear files it is to be hoped that the Appellate Courts will have clear files. With the leisure we hope some day or other to find, we may dispose of such cases almost with the rapidity with which we do criminal cases within the 24-Pergunnahs. At the close of the last criminal year, out of 900 appeals, I think there were only three appeals undisposed of. In the 24-Pergunnahs my experience is this, that we have a great deal too much work thrust upon individuals. We are now, very properly, made deposition writers; i. e., so much time is taken away from the decisions and given to the construction of cases. I have had, myself, in a single case, some 95 sheets of foolscap paper of deposition writing; that, with leisure, I have not the least objection to; one knows exactly what one has to decide about; but I have found a great falling off of the work done by my additional Principal Sudder Ameen, which in one instance, when section CLXXII. was complied with,

E.
De-Latour,
Esq.

31 July
1860.

E.
De-Latour,
Esq.
—
31 July
1860.

with, was very clearly owing to the time occupied by that court in deposition writing. Then I noticed that Christian, Mahomedan and Hindoo holidays occupied 120 days in the year, leaving a period for work far short of the work we are expected to perform.

3939. Supposing a suit not affecting real property were passed through the Moonsiff's and other Judge's Court, is there anything to prevent a dissatisfied and litigious person from endeavouring to get the suit admitted in special appeal, though the amount appealed against should be only 10 rupees?—I think there is no special appeal upon matters laying in evidence. I have never known a want of ingenuity in the Sudder Court in any case whatever, as to any such endeavour to get a special appeal admitted, and so long as that Court forbears to notice with proper censure any false statement of fact or otherwise, such practice will continue to prevail.

3940. Do you not think that the decision of the Appellate Court, whether that of Civil Judge or Principal Sudder Ameen, might be final in cases not affecting real property up to a certain amount, say 300 rupees, unless the presiding judge thought it fit to recommend the admission of a special appeal from any peculiarity or novelty in the case itself?—My opinion is, that in all such cases where the Appellate Court concurred with the lower court, judgment should be final and conclusive. There may be exceptions to that rule, but in all such cases I think the decision of the Appellate Court should be final. In no case in this country am I of opinion that it should be within the discretion of an Appellate Court to concede or refuse permission to appeal. In any novel and peculiar case it might be open to the Appellate Court to record a certificate conceding a special appeal on those particular points. This is a subject upon which I would not like to express my final views. There is a great deal in the subject, and on mature consideration I might become a convert to the conclusiveness of the judgment of the lower Appellate Court in all such cases within a specified pecuniary limitation.

3941. Mr. Sale.] What is your opinion of the working of Act X. of 1859?—The operation of Act X. will in every respect be advantageous to the people. It may be worked to their great prejudice. It should have been entrusted exclusively to experienced judicial officers, and not as is too often the case to inexperienced and very young assistants. Cases for rent are nine times in ten merely tentative actions. At the bottom there lurks either some question of enhancement, or some question of property and gaining decrees are looked to, as the future documentary evidence upon which actions will be subsequently brought.

3942. Is it your opinion that section XI. of that Act will work prejudicially to the interest of zemindars?—I am of opinion that section XI. can work no prejudice to the zemindar. It would be convenient if zemindars who maintain the contrary, would kindly detail to the Commission the practice of compulsion observed by them heretofore, but as no ryot refuses to pay his just rent, I am of opinion that on a simple summons he would attend the zemindary cutchery to pay his rents.

[Commission adjourned at 5. 15 P. M.]

Friday, 3d August 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., c. s., President.

Members:—R. Temple, Esq., c. s.; W. F. Ferguson, Esq.; Reverend J. Sale;
Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

ALEXANDER FORBES, Esq., Editor of the "Hurkaru," called in; and Examined on oath.

A. Forbes,
Esq.
—
3 August
1860.

3943. President.] WILL you please state to the Commission the districts and concerns in which you have had experience?—I first went to Comercolly, about the year 1844, to Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore's estates, where I continued two or three years, both as assistant and in charge of factories. I afterwards had the zemindary management of Shazadpore, in the district of Pubna, and continued there some time after the Baboo's death. I then left the Baboo's employment, and was employed for a short time by Khwaja Ali Mea, in the zemindary management of his estates of Pergunnah Hattia, in the district of Mymensing. From thence I went to Dacca, where I took charge of Dr. Lamb's factories and zemindaries, in the districts of Dacca, Tipperah, Furreedpore and Noacolly. My mofussil residence terminated in November 1858, but I still have the management of Dr. Lamb's affairs. I wish my reply to this Commission Circular, No. 29, to be filed as evidence.

3944. We perceive from that reply that all Dr. Lamb's cultivation is nij, spread over a considerable tract of country; but you also have had experience in ryotti, have you not?—Yes, in Comercolly.

3945. Are you of opinion that in the eastern districts of Bengal there exist facilities for Europeans possessed of capital, to establish a nij cultivation on a scale corresponding to, or greater than, that of Dr. Lamb?—Dr. Lamb's cultivation is not a very large one, and it might be practicable to get up a cultivation of, say 5,000 beegahs, which is the extent of his cultivation, but scattered over a considerable tract of country. I do not, however, think that the nature of the land in those districts is such as to give encouragement to such a venture. I say so, because Mr. Dunlop top of the Cossimpoore factory found it most profitable to give up all the lands he had on the Kurmnassa and Megna rivers, and Mr. George French, who tried, a few years ago to re-open the Kartikpore concern in the Dacca district, which at one time belonged to Dr. Lamb, found it unprofitable to do so. I myself have closed two factories because they were not profitable. The chief reason is the poverty of the land and the rapid rising of the river. I might also state that indigo plant will give only 15 to 18 seers in a good season there; but in Kishnaghur, not unfrequently, we get nearly a maund, when of course the quality of the indigo is inferior.

3946. Do you coincide in opinion with the planters that the difficulty of obtaining suitable lands and procuring labour, or the expense of keeping up a large establishment of ploughs and bullocks, form the practical obstacles to an extension of nij cultivation?—In the Dacca district there is certainly a great want of suitable land, but there is no want of labour. Labour has increased very much in value of late years, for I am now paying five rupees wages, where three years ago I paid three rupees; but I can still very well afford to do this in my indigo cultivation. All my cultivation is nij, but I keep no ploughs nor bullocks, as I find no difficulty in hiring in the market as many as I want; therefore, this is no obstacle.

3947. Then we are to understand that Dr. Lamb is working on his own capital, and his cultivation is profitable?—Yes; I might, however, state that 22 years resulted in a slight loss. There are very great facilities of water-carriage, which enable us to bring our plant from long distances, say eight or ten miles.

3948. Mr. Temple.] Do you find European superintendence necessary for your nij concern?—Dr. Lamb tried for three years to do without European superintendence in this very concern, and the result was, that at the end of that time he offered the factories for sale for 6,000 rupees, and could find no purchaser. I myself have paid him for my half share of the factories 16,000 rupees. I have now an European assistant there.

3949. President.] Still the expense of supervision involved in nij cultivation would be less than that for ryotti, would it not?—No; an assistant could as well superintend 5,000 beegahs of ryotti as he could of nij.

3950. What was the extent of your ryotti cultivation in Pubna, and at that time were you aware of any dislike evinced by the ryots against indigo?—It is so long ago that I cannot precisely state the extent of the ryotti cultivation, but it was considerable. As to the dislike of the ryots to indigo cultivation, that depends upon the season of the year. When advances were being given, they eagerly took them. When sowing or weeding was to be done they tried in every way to shrink from doing so, or to do it carelessly. But, as to any general feeling of dislike to indigo sowing in particular, I was never aware of it.

3951. Did you experience any difficulties in ryotti cultivation from the police, from the zemindars, or from the authorities, or any other party?—No; the whole of the cultivation was within the Baboo's own estates; there was no such opposition. The police we never allowed to interfere; I once had a little difficulty with Baboo Ramrutton Roy, but on writing to Calcutta it was removed. This was about the lease of a village which had expired. The Baboo demanded salami on the renewal of the lease; we refused, and Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, having so much influence over Baboo Ramrutton Roy, at once brought the matter to a satisfactory conclusion.

3952. Mr. Temple.] Had you any difficulties with the magistrate or other authorities in Pubna?—No; as we never allowed the police to interfere, no question arose between us and the magistrate.

3953. President.] Are we to understand that this is the case, or that it might usually be the case wherever a planter was in the position of a zemindar?—I consider it to be the first duty of a zemindar, whether planter or otherwise, to keep the police out of his estate, because their oppressions ruin the ryots. As an instance of this, I may mention that I once took the lease of a considerable estate which had been under khas management for the three previous years. I took it upon the deputy collector's papers when I went to take possession. I found that several villages had during that time ceased to exist. The cause was a suicide which had taken place. The magistrate sent three darogahs, one after another, to investigate: they had utterly ruined the ryots. The interest of the zemindar induces him to protect the ryot from such oppression. This he does by keeping the police as much as possible out of his estate, by concealing, and assisting his ryots to conceal, crime; and when the darogah does, in spite of all this, visit a zemindary, bribing him judiciously, watching his conduct by means of mooktyars, and watching the progress of the case before the magistrate, in order that it may be at once determined, and all oppression on account of it cease. As a general reply to the question, zemindary influence is sufficient to make all cultivation go on smoothly. I want to put in a pamphlet which Dr. Lamb has written, styled "The Experiences of a Landholder and Indigo Planter in Eastern Bengal." To the accuracy of the facts detailed therein, I am ready to testify, having conducted and examined into the cases referred to. My object in filing it is to show that as long as Dr. Lamb was a mere indigo planter he never came into contact with any of the courts either civil or criminal; but since he became a proprietor of land, as an investment, he has suffered so much from the courts, resurreptions, &c., that he has within the last few months directed me to dispose of all his property in this country, which I am now doing, at 12 years' purchase.

3954. Do you wish us from this to infer that an European taking his zemindary in aid of indigo, and not with a view to profit, may find it answer its purpose, but that an investment in land, with a view solely to zemindary management and profit, will not answer?—Yes; when I managed Baboo D. Tagore's estate, I let a village to the Hizlabut factory, which collected only 7,000 rupees annually. The factory willingly paid 10,000 for the lease, thus suffering a loss of 3,000 rupees for the sake of indigo.

3955. Mr. Temple.] Then you consider that it is not worth the while of an European to hold land in Bengal merely for its own sake, without reference to indigo?—I myself have had many opportunities of making very advantageous purchases of land at times when it was very difficult for me to obtain any other investment for money, but the experience I had gained in managing estates for others completely deterred me from thus investing. There is a Bengali proverb, current in the eastern districts, to the effect that he

A. Forbes,
Esq.

3 August
1860.

A. Forbes,
Esq.

3 August
1860.

who buys land must be prepared to forge, perjure, and go himself to prison.

3956. Do natives and Europeans both find the same difficulty in acquiring and retaining land, or is the difficulty peculiarly experienced by Europeans?—Yes; exactly the same difficulties. The European, by his superior energy and general education, is rather better off than the natives.

3957. President.] Are we, then, to understand that an investment in land is a bad speculation for Europeans, and even a worse one for natives?—Yes; my experience in Pergunnah Hattia, which belonged to a native who would keep no lattials, and would allow no mokaddama khurch (law expenses), shows that he had lost, at the time I took charge, about one-quarter of his estate, which had only been a few years before partitioned and mapped by Government officers, so that there was not the indefiniteness of boundaries, which might be brought forward by objectors, who might say that he had lost no land which he was entitled to. An unscrupulous neighbour had gained all that he had lost, so that the purchase of land was not a bad speculation for the latter. As an instance how this was done, I was one day informed that the neighbours had forcibly cut 20 droons of rice land, which up to that time had notoriously belonged to Khwaja Ali Mulla. On my sending to inquire the reason of this, and pointing out that the land was included in the partition, the reply made was, that the shareholder knew that it was our right, but hoped to gain possession under Act IV. of 1840, by which he might get the land, and that if he lost the case he lost nothing.

3958. How would you account for the fact that when estates are put up for sale for arrears of revenue they are eagerly bid for, and that comparatively few estates are so put up for sale at all, or that whenever zemindary, talookdarry or other rights are put to sale in execution of decrees of court, there is good competition for them, or that in the district of Cuttack, which is not settled in perpetuity, estates sold as in the statement now produced have been purchased within the last five years at a high proportion of the purchase money to the profit?—With regard to the first part of the question, referring to estates put up for arrears of revenue, if the estate is at all productive it is generally deeply mortgaged before it is allowed to go for arrears of revenue. The mortgagers, therefore, bid for it; but, more than this, the possession of a zemindary gives great power to the possessor, and enables him to carry on his other business to a much greater profit. Our experience in the eastern districts is, that all the old landed proprietors are dying out, and their estates are purchased by mahajans. Their children again enter upon the same course of extravagance and debauchery which brought down the old landholder, and in the third generation the estates will again probably change hands. The want of all political or public employment for the rich native is, I am certain, one reason why, having no taste for debauchery, they plunge into the excitements of owning lands and having law-suits. A mahajan also adds greatly to his dignity by becoming a landed proprietor; unscrupulous men never hesitate to buy land. Some of the Dacca bankers and others, who have made their money in commerce, will not even keep a zemindary if thrown into their hands in satisfaction of a mortgage. The purchase of an estate sold for a decree of court is sure to bring in its train a large number of law-suits. With regard to this statement now in my hands, I can only state that Dr. Lamb's estates have been offered by me, for the last three months, to all the greatest landed proprietors in Calcutta; having been so long in his possession there can be no flaw in the titles; and in only one case have I succeeded in obtaining 13 years' purchase of the profits. In this statement, I see estates sold at from $6\frac{1}{2}$ to $57\frac{1}{2}$, and one at $74\frac{1}{2}$ years' profit. None of these estates, however, have a very heavy sudden jumma, and it is the case all over the country that very large sums of money will be paid for land in the neighbourhood of the house of a rich man.

3959. Mr. Temple.] Then are we to understand that to rich people a landed purchase would yield no substantial profit, after the defrayal of law expenses, in the most comprehensive sense of that term?—In the pamphlet which I have handed in, Dr. Lamb states that his profits; after paying the sudden jumma and expense of collections, are about 30,000 rupees; but the amount really remaining to him, after the disbursement of those expenses, is only about 6,000 rupees per annum. These estates were acquired at an expenditure of many lacs of rupees, which, if invested at even English interest, would have given a very much greater return than has ever been received by Dr. Lamb; as a general answer to the question, I would state that my own opinion is, that the purchase of land in this country is a very unprofitable speculation.

3960. Is not Dr. Lamb's a most strange case of misfortune, and do you think that, if all purchasers of landed estates had been as unfortunate as Dr. Lamb appears to have been, so many transfers of land would occur as have occurred and are occurring?—I think Dr. Lamb has spent a great deal more money upon trying to assert his rights than most natives would have done, as they would have been ruined long ago. I believe it is the case, that almost all the old landholders in Bengal have been ruined, and that if there is not a great change soon made in our courts, and in the administration of the law generally, the present race will be ruined also; their land passing into the hands of the present money-lenders, by mortgage and other silent methods, which cannot be tested by the returns of sales in revenue and other courts.

3961. Is not the constant lending of money on landed security and a frequent transfer from one class to another a sign of the marketable value of land?—While money is always obtainable in Calcutta at from three to six and seven per cent. from natives as well as Europeans, no loan on mortgage of landed property was ever made to my knowledge, and I have, as secretary to the bank in Dacca, lent largely upon such security at less than 12 per cent., within a margin upon the value of the estate of at least 50 per cent., estimated as selling at 12 years' purchase of the profit.

3962. Would men like bankers invest their money in landed property unless they got an actual net profit, besides the influence and position which you have described?—Bankers, as long as engaged in their trade, will not invest in land. They lend upon mortgage of land, but with such a margin as ensures their getting rid of it. When a banker wishes to rise in his position, he will pay large sums for influence. And, as I have before said, if he be an unscrupulous man, he will make profit from land.

3963. It has been stated in evidence by planters and and zemindars that the price of land has greatly increased of late years. If this be the fact, then land has marketable value?—No; because, if I remember rightly, these putnis were all, or most of them, taken at an annual loss, for the purpose of the cultivation of indigo; but there is another reason why the value of land should rise, which is, the fall in the value of money, which cannot now purchase from Rs. 1. 3. to Rs. 2. 3. of the quantity of produce or labour which it could do five years ago.

3964. In your opinion do the difficulties mentioned in respect to the acquisition and retention of landed property at a profit arise from the character of the people and the constitution of society in the Mofussil, or from the state of the law and the administration of justice, or what?—I have the very highest possible opinion of Bengalis in general, both as merchants and as ryots. I impute the whole of the difficulties of the inhabitants of the Mofussil to the insecurity of life and property under the police, and the impossibility of obtaining justice from the civil courts.

3965. President.] How do you reconcile the above opinion as to the insecurity of life and property with the fact that several planters of great knowledge and experience have testified to the absolute security of their own lives and property in the Mofussil, and have stated that the real difficulty was with land tenures?—Although my own life was three times threatened within a month, and the magistrate, when applied to, informed me that he could not protect me, and that I must protect myself, in consequence of which I hired 50 lattials, who lived in the house with me for two months, I do not mean to say that the life and property of a European is insecure in the Mofussil. The natives know too well that a great noise would be made were an European injured; but with regard to native life and property there is absolutely no security at all, as I have known many instances where zemindars and others have caused murder to be committed in many cases without its ever being reported; but when it came to the notice of the magistrate they almost invariably escaped. The evidence of the planters, which I have read, states, I believe, that in general they had no experience in civil suits. I have conducted upwards of 100 of those civil suits in every court from the Moonsiffs to the Privy Council, and the above is my experience of the administration of justice in civil cases.

3966. Mr. Temple.] Will you state briefly what particular defects in the administration of civil justice caused this difficulty?—The primary cause is, that the fountain, the Sudder Court, is confused and turbid; no principles of law or equity guide its decisions. A precedent laid down by a full bench one year is upset by another full bench three years afterwards, so that there is no guide to our transactions. The Sudder Court also refuses, as in the case of the Rajah of Burdwan, to be guided by the decision of the Privy Council. In the Mofussil, my experience of native principal Sudder Amins is, that they are dishonest, and that the Government throw every obstacle in the way to their dishonesty being exposed, or themselves brought to justice. One reason that I have for making so strong a statement is, that I was engaged for about three years, on the part of Dr. Lamb, in bringing to justice Syed Abbas Ali, principal Sudder Amin of Dacca, who was acquitted by Government servants of the highest rank, but was at last brought to justice, at the expense of about one and a half lac of rupees, by Mr. Sconce, and condemned to dismissal from the service by Mr. Metcalfe; and that so desirous does Government seem to hide these cases that a copy of Mr. Metcalfe's decision, pronounced in open court, has been refused to me by the judge, who referred it to the Sudder Dewanny and the Governor General in Council. With regard to Sudder Amins and Moonsiffs, some of those who have received an English education are very intelligent persons, and I believe do justice in the small cases between ryots, zemindars and mahajans who come before them. But I do not think, and this applies to almost all the judicial officers with the exception of Europeans, that they can stand the pressure of Government in any cases affecting its right course before them. The amlas are so very corrupt, and really of so little use now that most of the records are in the language of the judge of the court, that they should be completely removed. They must be highly bribed in every case, or they will prevent the papers and documents of the case and the proper witnesses from coming before the judge. I myself have paid 3,000 rupees to the amla of a judge, not with the least hope of influencing his judgment, for he was one perfectly fitted for the appointment he held, but to secure that, a number of very long and very important documents should all be laid before him. With European suitors, this is generally arranged by the mooktyar, and something I know sticks to the mooktyar.

3967. President.] Before how many principal Sudder Amins and in how many districts have you had to conduct cases?—In three districts, and before more than half a dozen principal Sudder Amins.

3968. Besides the case mentioned by you, have you ever proved, or attempted to prove, dishonesty in the case of any such officer?—The expense and trouble which I experienced on the one case was a good lesson to me, rather to submit to any injustice and loss than to attempt to bring the offender to justice.

3969. Mr. Temple.] Is there anything in the civil procedure as now established which impedes the course of justice?—There was great delay under the former procedure. As regards the new procedure I have had no practical experience.

3970. Then to improve the administration of justice, especially as regards the interests of European residents, is there any specific reform that you could recommend?—I would first advocate the introduction of English into the courts, on the ground that it is more necessary that the judge should understand the case than that the suitors should understand the proceedings; secondly, I would recommend that all our judges should have a legal training, and should have themselves practised as pleaders; as I am sure that no one who has not prepared and conducted a case can properly decide one. In place of the existing Sudder, I would have a court of experienced lawyers, assisted by an educated bar, something like the Supreme Court. Their decisions would be a secure and steady guide to those of the Lower Court, and would remove that uncertainty of the law which creates such misery in a state. Of course the bar in the Mofussil would require to consist of men, natives or others, having an English education, and this would have the effect of sweeping away those curses of the Mofussil Courts, the present illiterate and conscientiousless Vakeels. As regards the native principal Sudder Amins, I would recommend that they be replaced

A. Forbes,
Esq.

3 August
1860.

A. Forbes,
Esq.

3 August
1860.

as soon as possible by men having an English and legal education, and that the principle of raising them from the bar should be introduced, which will have the effect of inducing a higher class of men to enter the profession.

3971. President.] How would you propose, if the proceedings were in English, that the judge and bar should get at the pith of the huge mass of documents which are usually filed in a case affecting landed property, as for instance old decrees in Persian and Bengali, proceedings from various courts and collectorates, and divers zemindary papers, all such being in the vernacular?—The progress of substitution of the English language must, of course, be gradual, and a great many of those papers would, before it is fully introduced, become obsolete. There are at present translators attached to the civil courts, and in cases of appeal to the Privy Council at present, all those documents are translated. But I see no greater difficulty in substituting English for Bengali than occurred 20 years ago, when Bengali was substituted for Persian.

3972. Mr. Temple.] Under the English system, as recommended by you, would not the translator acquire much of the power which now appertains to the amla; for instance, when you pay 3,000 rupees to the amla, in order that they may lay before the judge the language which the judge understood, how much would you have to pay to the translator in order that he might put a correct translation before the judge?—It must be remembered that the Vakils will understand English, and have the opportunity of testing the correctness of the translator, and bringing any incorrectness before the judge. My object in making English the language of the court is that the judge may be able to read and judge of the importance of each document himself. I wish to state in the least offensive manner possible, that there are many judges who do not understand the language of the pleadings before them, or of their own court. One case of this sort was mentioned by Mr. Latour in his evidence, viz., that of Mr. Swetenham, who, having all his life been in provinces where Hindustani was spoken, was suddenly made judge of a Bengali district.

3973. Do you think that perjury, forgery and the like are less frequent and glaring in courts where English is used, than in courts where the vernacular is used?—I have no experience of courts where English is used, but I know this, that no respectable man in the Mofussil will ever enter a court, and the reason commonly given for this is, that they might be suspected of in person practising the arts which are there common.

3974. If the reforms which you recommended be carried out, would the settlement of European residents in the interior be augmented?—Anything that would make justice more certain would not only increase the flow of European capital towards the Mofussil, but would drive out from Calcutta native capitalists and gentlemen who dare not now live in the Mofussil for fear of being be-hoormuttet (dishonoured) by false cases got up by the police and the like.

3975. Mr. Fergusson.] You have lived in districts where there are no factories, as well as where there are; it has been stated to us, that in the latter there are more outrages than the former; what is your experience?—In Pergunnah Hattia, where there were no factories, no Europeans, and which was 70 miles distant from a magistrate, four zemindars lived within a few miles from the cutchery. I myself kept 50 lat- tials day and night, and they kept from 100 to 300 each. The whole of the rice crops were cut by means of those lattials. A scene occurred close to my cutchery, which will give an idea of the general insecurity. A female zemindar demanded 3,000 rupees mathut from a village: the bannias refused; she pretended to forgive them, and asked all their wives to a nautch; the men also were asked. On a signal the curtain drew up, and showed every woman with an up-country burkundaze standing beside her, and their husbands were informed that if the 3,000 rupees were not paid within an hour, their wives would be dishonoured. The money was paid. In that district the magistrate plainly told me that he would not protect me, I must protect myself. I was within 100 yards of the house where this took place, and heard it at the time.

3976. Do you consider that the ryot is better off in an indigo district, or in a rice growing district?—In this Pergunnah Hattia, which was purely a rice growing district, I never knew such poor ryots; they had scarcely enough for one meal a day, and the rents collected from the large extent of country showed how poor the population was from having to depend upon one kind of crop alone.

3977. Have you had any experience of a district where the cultivation of indigo had ceased, and what was the effect upon the ryot?—I saw the Batiacole concern in Pubna closed. The zemindars and ryots had been very much opposed to the last proprietors, but within two years they used to beg Europeans to re-open on account of the great want of money. They said they had quantities of rice, but rice was not clothes. Those factories of Mr. Dunlop's which he closed in the Dacca district before we entered, the ryots have often begged of me to re-open them, as the price of all their produce had much fallen.

3978. Is it within your experience that the mahajans exercise a supervision over the rice crop, for which they have advanced, and in what way?—The mahajan is a money lender, and of course anxiously cares that the value of the security for the repayment of his money shall not deteriorate. The ryot's crop is the security upon which he lends the money, and he daily watches it, and compels the ryots to cultivate it and weed it, by the simple process of stopping these supplies. If he will not attend to the proper cultivation of his crops he shall not eat. I have seen this personally, and know it to be the common custom of this country.

3979. Did you know Mr. A. A. Dunlop of the Cossimpoore concern, and can you speak of his character, and that of Doodoo Meah?—I was well acquainted and did business with both. Mr. Dunlop had several ijaras from me, and I can therefore speak of his conduct to the ryots. He was, among all the planters I have known, one of the kindest and most just men I knew, and I scarcely ever heard a complaint from a ryot against him. He was also a most honourable man and a gentleman. Doodoo Meah is the son of a faquir who obtained great influence among the ryots by successfully opposing some oppressing zemindars, and at length became head of the large class of the Ferazees, numbering about 3,000,000 of men. When at the height of his power he was one of the most oppressive persons imaginable. He inflicted the punishment of death upon those of his followers who displeased him, by beating them with enormous shoes, until his tyranny became became too great, and the sect separated into several divisions. That religion had nothing to do with his influence is evident from the fact that one of these sects is now led by a Hindoo. No zemindar could stand before him. Mr. Dunlop was the first man who opposed him; the consequence was an attack upon Mr. Dunlop's factory, and the murder of his gomashita. For this offence Doodoo Meah was tried at Furreedpore. On that occasion there were 3,000 boats filled with his followers at the ghaut, and so great apprehension of danger, that the regiment at Dacca with artillery were ordered to hold themselves in readiness to march. Every one who knew the facts of the case concurred in the justice of his conviction. It was commonly reported that his acquittal was the result of fear on the part of the Government.

3980. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] In what year was this, and in what district were you at the time?—I was on a visit to Dacca; I don't remember the year in which it took place.

3981. Mr. Fergusson.] Can you state the condition of the Furreedpore district at the time that Mr. Latour had charge of it, and afterwards?—The district was in as bad a condition as may be well supposed, from its having had for 10 years before a succession of some of the worst magistrates in Bengal, who permitted the lawlessness of Doodoo Meah to come to a head. Mr. Latour made things much worse by indiscriminately attacking all Europeans. There was universal rejoicing when he left the district. The district has since been very quiet, having lately had good magistrates.

3982. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Was the rejoicing amongst the planters, or was it among any other class?—It was I believe universal, and in the part of none more than the amla.

3983. President.] Are you aware that Mr. Latour's name is mentioned by the peasantry of Noakholly with regard?—I am not aware of it, but I know that he nearly ruined Mr. Courjon, against whom he took petitions on plain paper. Mr. Courjon had nothing to do with indigo; he is a zemindar.

3984. Mr. Temple.] Can you speak with confidence as to what was the public opinion of the native zemindars, ryots and others, with respect to Mr. Latour's administration?—I cannot speak much about that. I have never heard him praised.

3985. Was not there a considerable improvement in the criminal administration in the Furreedpore district during Mr. Latour's incumbency?—I do not think so.

3986. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] In your Mofussil experience did you ever observe any lawlessness in planters and other Europeans' conduct in Furreedpore and the neighbouring districts?—It depends upon what you call lawlessness. My keeping 50 lattials was lawless. My beating a tahidgir for disobeying orders is lawless. In that way I myself and other planters have been guilty of lawlessness. We have also sometimes taken the law into our own hands; but if you mean, have I seen lawlessness practised for a bad end, I must say that I have seen very little of it, on the part of either European or native zemindars or planters. In my management of the estates of Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, I was guilty of great lawlessness in taking possession of a village which had been decreed to him by the Supreme Court, and which the mofussil courts refused to give me any assistance in taking possession of. It is also a well known fact that it is useless to ask the civil courts to give you possession of property they decree to you, unless you send a guard of lattials with the Amin who goes out, when it may be necessary, even in the execution of a decree of civil courts, to turn out by force the old possessors; but I don't call that lawlessness.

3987. Will you state whether, in all your experience, you have known of any cases of kidnapping, burning and plundering of houses, &c. by planters and others?—I have heard of cases of kidnapping, but have had no personal experience in such things; but I beg here to state that there is no form of accusation that can be more easily brought against a mofussil resident than that of goom or kidnapping, and none which gives him more trouble. His enemy pays one of his own servants to keep out of the way, and until he is produced, the other party is subjected to incessant annoyance on the part of the magistrate and the police. It is therefore a very favourite accusation. With regard to burning and plundering houses, I have no experience whatever.

3988. Mr. Temple.] Within your knowledge and experience are ryots ever confined in godowns?—I once shut up a ryot for a night myself. I found a ryot confined in my godown once, and discovered that he was a debtor of my burkundazes, who had shut him up to recover his dues.

3989. On the whole, do you believe that kidnapping, confining in godowns, and burning of houses is rare or frequent?—I believe it to be very rare indeed, and to be becoming more so every day.

3990. Have you in any district been particularly troubled by the police, and can you mention any notable instance within your knowledge of misconduct on their part?—I never was in any district where the police were not the greatest curse in it. I never had an Act IV. case, or any investigation in the Mofussil conducted by them, for which I had not to pay very largely. I will give an instance of what caused me to determine never to refuse a policeman a bribe. I once applied to the Thannah for a help to enable my ryots to cut some rice. Man came, but on proceeding to the spot it turned out that there was no need for him, as no one opposed the peaceable cutting of the rice. On his return he called at my cutcherry, and asked me in person to give him a present of five rupees. I refused, whereupon he went to the Thannah and gave in a report, stating that on going to the ground he found that instead of my requiring protection I was committing great oppression, and had then 12 burkundazes armed with muskets and bayonets; that on seeing him they ran away, and he was unable to catch any of them, but they had dropped some of their powder and ball, which he presented to the darogah with his report. The darogah sent to me, and said that if he got 50 rupees he would not send in the burkundaze's report; as if the report had gone in I should have been summoned to attend on the magistrate 70 miles distant, and the whole of the collections of about 40,000 rupees would have been put a stop to, and probably lost for ever. I paid the 50 rupees, and resolved never to refuse to pay a bribe again. Darogahs generally send in prepared two reports in cases of Act IV. of 1840, one of which they send in accordingly as they are paid. Such reports have been sent to me for my approval.

3991. Can you recall within your recollection many such cases as those above mentioned?—At

A. Forbes,
Esq.
3 August
1860.

A. Forbes,
Esq.

3 August
1860.

least a dozen dispossession cases. Of the other many, in all of which the police take bribes.

3992. Have you ever known a darogah or policeman free from this vice?—I knew one Mahomedan darogah who spent the whole day in prayer and would take no bribes, but as he left the whole of the business to a Bengalie mohurrir, we had to pay rather more highly to this man than the darogah would have probably taken himself.

3993. In reference to the police being a curse of the district, do you speak of petty corruption, or are they guilty of gross violence and oppression?—It depends upon the wealth of the party how much they will take. Torture is of daily use in thannahs, and I have known of many cases of gross violence and oppression.

3994. Can you state briefly how this state of things is to be reformed?—A great increase of the police and judicial functions of the magistrate.

3995. Mr. Sale.] Do you wish us to understand that in the only case in which you have had experience of ryotti cultivation, the ryots generally applied to you for advances, and as generally sought to evade the fulfilment of their contracts?—The ryots generally applied willingly for advances. They would, I am certain, have all evaded their contracts had they not known that we were exercising supervision over them.

3996. How do you reconcile this with your high opinion of the Bengali character as expressed in a previous answer?—I speak of the ryots as comparing them with the same class at home, who I have no doubt would, if they received money at Christmas, evade if possible doing what they had received that money for, at Midsummer next.

3997. Baboo C. M. Chatterjee.] In the editorial of the Hurkaru of the 16th of May, under the heading of the Indigo Commission, I believe you would refer to the late Dwarkanauth Tagore, amongst other zemindars, as having extorted money from European planters; will you be pleased to state the particulars of the extortion to which you allude?—The word extort is probably not so good as that of wrest, which is used in a former part of the article. I have already mentioned one case in which Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore took 3,000 rupees a year more for the lease of a village than was collected. There were several other bargains made with planters by Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore, the particulars of which I cannot give, but it was generally remarked by planters who had to deal with him that he made very hard bargains. My meaning was, that the 3,000 rupees extra might have been paid to the ryot as part price of the plant, and not have gone into the Baboo's pocket as zemindar.

3998. What made the Hizlabut concern take the lease of villages for 10,000 rupees, the jumma of which you stated was 7,000, and was it not profitable to that concern to pay that 10,000 rupees for those villages, and have they not renewed the lease from time to time at the same rate?—The cause of the Hizlabut concern taking that lease was that if they had not done so, the Baboo would have exercised the illegal power of forbidding the boatmen and carters by which that village is chiefly inhabited from contracting with the factory, and would in fact have shut up the Sudder factory of Hizlabut.

3999. When the first lease was taken by the Hizlabut concern did they not take it willingly, or was any compulsion used by the zemindar?—I don't remember when the first lease was taken, but if the factory had not secured the zemindary right, they would have had no boats or carts.

4000. Mr. Temple.] Can you state your opinion as to what terms should be offered in future by the planters to the ryots?—I beg to record my opinion that this is a question which must be left to be settled by the planter and the ryots themselves. Any interference on the part of Government can only complicate the question, and should be confined to providing good magistrates, good judges and good police, who shall see justice done to all, and leave no room for oppression on the one part, or fraud in the other.

4001. Can you state whether zemindars offer opposition to indigo planters, direct or indirect, or whether they are averse to Europeans acquiring land?—When powerful enough, they invariably offer opposition in 100 ways until they are either conquered, or get the salami they wish for. I believe also that they are in general opposed to the settlement of Europeans in Bengal, in consequence of their being, where Europeans are settled, unable to use the ryot as their own.

4002. Do you think that any opposition of this kind would have been conciliated if they had been appointed honorary magistrates?—My opinion is, as I stated before, that the rich native has no object of ambition. And that would be a very proper way of initiating him in the duty and privilege of self-government. It would be conferring on him nothing new, for he already exercises the power.

4003. Did you as an indigo planter receive due support from the magistrate, or have you anything to complain of against them?—Generally speaking, I have nothing to complain.

[Commission adjourned, 5.45 P.M.]

Saturday, 4th August 1860.

PRESENT:

W. S. SETON-KARR, Esq., C. S., President.

Members:—W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Rev. J. Sale; Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.

CHARLES CHAPMAN, Esq., C. S., Collector of Customs, Calcutta, called in;
and Examined on oath.

4004. President.] WILL you describe to the Commission, as fully as possible, the system of advances in the salt agencies of which you have had charge?—I had charge of Hidgeli from February 1852 to August 1853, and of Chittagong from September 1853 to September 1857. When the Government allot the quantity of salt to be made in such agency, the salt agent directs so much to be manufactured in each aurung. Towards the middle or latter end of November, the molunghis are brought before the salt agent or deputy salt agent, and receive the first advance. This is generally about five annas in the rupee on the quantity they engage to manufacture. The manufacture commences in December, and a second advance is generally given in February or the early part of March. The date of advance in the different aurungs is fixed by the agent, and a further advance is fixed to each molunghi, and acknowledged before the agent or his deputy. This advance is regulated according to the quantity of salt actually manufactured by each molunghi. In a similar manner, two or more advances are given during the manufacturing season. Each advance is regulated in a similar way to that before described. For the payment of each advance the gomashta or head officer of each aurung prepares a statement explaining the quantity of salt manufactured, the amount of advance given, and the balance estimated to be due to the molunghis. This money is not paid by the gomashta or the aurung officers themselves, but by the poddar of the agency treasury in the presence of the agent, sitting a few yards from him. The poddar is an under officer of the treasurer appointed by him. At the end of the season, when the salt is all weighed into the store, the account of each molunghi is made up separately, and on a fixed day the molunghis come into the Sudder office and receive whatever fazil may be due to them in the presence of the agent. Some received a good deal and others nothing; it entirely depended upon the amount of their manufacture. In Hidgeli the balances were very small. In Hidgeli the molunghis generally belong to the villages in each aurung, and each molunghi considers his khallari or fire-place as his own hereditary property, and is very unwilling to give it up. In Chittagong, the order of the advances is much the same as in Hidgeli; but of late years the majority of the molunghis were non-residents of the districts; the majority came from Noakally, and part of Tipperah, and some even from 100 miles from the agency. In Chittagong it is made with each man who has a fire-place for 400 maunds. In September or October a first advance of four or six annas on the value of the contract quantity is given to the molunghis. In November a further advance of six or four annas is given; then before the commencement of the manufacture, 10 to 12 annas or three rupees four annas for the value of the contract quantity are actually paid in cash before a single chittack is manufactured. The reason of this is that the molunghis have to pay the coolies in advance the full amount of their pay for four months, less one rupee, besides having to make arrangements for pots, &c. The manufacture commences about the end of December and lasts until the 8th or 9th of April. Every spring tide a further advance is made of two annas, sometimes three annas later in the season, because then the boats come to enable the molunghis to purchase fuel. At the end of the manufacturing season the molunghis are paid before they leave on the estimated out-turn, calculating each fara or wooden measure to contain 38 seers of salt. After the salt has been weighed in the golahs, a final settlement is made with the molunghis. The advances are invariably paid in my own presence, excepting one or two during the manufacturing season. The balances were greater in Chittagong than in Hidgeli. These, if caused by unforeseen circumstances, were generally remitted. I remember one season procuring a remission of 21,000.

4005. What means are taken to see that molunghis worked out the amount of one advance before others were made: did the agent or deputy agent visit the aurungs in person?—Each molunghi had a hath-chitti on his golah. The daily amount of salt measured was entered in this hath-chitti. This hath-chitti or the counterpart was inspected by me or my deputy agent before making further advances. We could not possibly inspect the entire file of fire-places. My assistant was out every day, and I visited it as many times as I could. During the manufacture the advances were all paid at the aurungs; I think there were five in Hidgelee, but was afterwards increased; Chittagong had two, and afterwards three.

4006. What was the form of contract with the molunghis, and were they limited to any particular amount of salt?—There was a regular form of contract, agreement and security bond. There is no restriction in regard to the quantity manufactured by each molunghi. In fact I used to manage them by giving rewards, and by praising them, to make as much salt as they possibly could. A good molunghi would manufacture from 1,300 to 1,400 maunds in one fire-place. My average manufacture in Chittagong was 800 maunds in both southern aurungs. We did not give advances on 1,000 maunds, because that scale would be likely to lead to carelessness or extravagance.

4007. Are the molunghis generally hereditary men, or do you have frequent applications from fresh men to be permitted to engage in salt?—We have the same men as near as possible every year, who have manufactured for years. We are rather chary of admitting unknown men. Such men,

C. Chapman,
Esq.4 August
1860.

C. Chapman,
Esq.
4 August
1860.

men, when admitted, generally learn their work under others until they rise to the dignity of a head molunghi. A set of molunghis will contract for 20 or 25 fire-places, their shares being clearly defined in each portion. They enter into a joint agreement.

4008. Do you ever refuse to allow molunghis to continue manufacturing on account of past carelessness, and is that felt by them as a deep privation?—Yes, most certainly, I have deprived a good many of their license, when they either run into default or ruin, so badly as to be of no use having them. Sometimes they come back after two or three years' cessation; but unless they come under a good security, I did not take them back.

4009. Mr. Fergusson.] Has there been any increase in the remuneration of the molunghis during the last three or four years?—I was sent down in 1853 to Chittagong to re-establish the agency on a reduced price of one anna, i. e. from eight annas to seven annas a maund. The manufacture of the agency had been in abeyance for a year. This reduced price continued for two years. The saving in the outlay would be 30,000 rupees on four lacs and 80,000 maunds. In consequence of the great demand of labour in Arracan the price was gradually raised from seven to ten and a half in the southern aurung, and twelve in the northern, which I believe it was during the past season.

4010. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Do the amla of the agency and the molunghis get an allowance of salt to eat?—The amla in Hidglee used to get what they call a compensation.

4011. Is it not the case that, after the season is over, the khallaris are knocked down by order of the agent to prevent illicit manufacture?—In Hidgeli, when the salt agent thought that the manufacture was getting slack, either from the too great flooding of the churs or from heavy rain, a day was fixed, and on that date the manufacture in the entire agency ceased, and the fire-places were broken up. (You will find a full description of the manufacture of salt in the number of the Government selections on salt manufacture at Tumlook by Mr. H. C. Hamilton.)

4012. Mr. Fergusson.] Do not the molunghis sometimes complain of being long detained from the rice cultivation to continue the manufacture of salt to a late period in the season?—I don't recollect a complaint being made to me of that kind. In fact, in Hidgeli, I do not think the early rice is sown. In Chittagong the coolies all wish to be home by the month of April. Some of them have 80 to 100 miles to travel. After the first heavy fall of rain in the end of March or beginning of April, they make off, and we never attempt to stop them. After heavy rain the manufacture goes on very slowly, or it may be that the molunghis live at a distance, and it may be that they are anxious to cultivate their rice. In Chittagong the molunghis work on till the 20th of April.

4013. Would not the lands which are reserved for fuel in Hidgeli and Tumlook be available for cultivation for rice and other crops?—There is no doubt that some of the lands here and there might after a considerable outlay be brought into cultivation, but I should be rather sorry to try it as a speculation, because it is so much impregnated with salt and intersected with khals, and, besides, the embankment which a speculator would have to make would be very much exposed, whereas the Government embankment is inside the fuel and salt lands, and they serve as a protection to the lands.

4014. Do you consider the manufacture of salt by the molunghis perfectly voluntary?—Most certainly so; I am positive that no salt agent would for the sake of the agency attempt to force a molunghi to manufacture, but their principal inducement is that during the period of the manufacture of salt, they have no cultivation of their own to look after. From December to May in Hidgeli, and from January till April in Chittagong, they have no employment of any kind.

4015. President.] What means are taken to prevent extortion by the amla and exaction?—The amount paid to the molunghis depends upon the strict or lax supervision of the agent or his assistant. As customary in the country they don't object to pay a dusturi so long as it is moderate; and however vigilant a salt agent may be, it is impossible to put a total stop to such payments, the same as it would be in any other office in India. I do not think that there were any cases of gross extortion, except one, in which the gomashta was dismissed after a careful investigation.

4016. Do you think that the salaries of the gomashtas, addadars and others are adequate to prevent corruption?—I consider the salaries very inadequate, but at the same time I doubt very much whether double the amount of pay would prevent the molunghis from offering and the amla from receiving.

4017. Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee.] Are you aware that store darogahs generally take excess in weight from manufacturing darogahs, and at the time of the delivery to the merchants, the former manage to sell the excess on their own account; in this transaction are not the molunghis the sufferers?—Store darogahs are allowed a fixed rate for wastage of salt, and consequently I have no doubt that they take full weight into their golahs, and, when possible, a little excess. But in regard to their selling to merchants, I know nothing about it.

4018. Are you not aware that sometimes merchants' boats are seized by station darogahs for excess?—They have been seized, but generally speaking the excess has been very trifling. There is an allowance for excess and for wastage, and on account of the moisture absorbed from the atmosphere, salt never weighs the same.

4019. Mr. Sale.] Have you ever had occasion to sue the molunghis for breach of contracts?—Never, in any one case; but the gomashta being responsible to Government for any balances due by the molunghis, the gomashta occasionally obtains the salt agent's permission to proceed against the molunghis for the recovery of the balance, in the same way as any zemindar would proceed against a ryot. We very rarely proceed to extremity. Generally speaking, when there is a balance due, they manage to pay it off.

APPENDIX

TO THE

REPORT OF THE INDIGO COMMISSION.

APPENDIX, PART I.

Appendix No. 1.

ABSTRACT of the REPLIES of INDIGO PLANTERS to the Questions

	1. State, briefly but clearly, the different kinds of land tenures within which indigo cultivation is carried on by your concern or factory, whether Talooks or Putni Talooks, or Durputni Talooks or Ijaras, i.e., leased lands, all such being held by the concern.	2. Do you follow the system of cultivating through ryots, resident in talooks or villages belonging to other parties; that is to say, do you follow what is familiarly known as the be-ilaka system; and if so, to what extent, and with what success?	3. Have you any knowledge of any system of purchasing bundles of indigo from cultivators, who take seed from the factory but receive no advances, and who cultivate on whatever lands of their own they please, without any supervision by the factory servants?	4. Have you any knowledge of any system of cultivators cultivating indigo on their own account, and selling the plant at the best market they can find?	5. What proportionate account of cultivation in your concern is nij and what amount is ryotti? Can you give the relative extent in beegahs?	6. What form of contract or agreement is in use in your factories? Is the agreement drawn up to cultivate for a term of years, and if so, for how many years; or is the term undefined?	7. Can you give the following details of the cultivation as within your knowledge and as carried on within your neighbourhood: 1st. The average rent per beegah payable by the ryot for lands on which he grows indigo for the concern.	8. 2d. The average expenses of the ryot cultivating the indigo plant per beegah, including ploughing, sowing, weeding, cutting, and carting.	9. 3d. The average number of bundles which a beegah of indigo land produces, and the average return, in indigo, of a thousand bundles of plant.
KISHNAGUR. G. R. Clarke, Esq., Manager Bengal indigo Company, Khal-bolia Concern.	Zemindary 14 Putni Durputni, &c. 64 Leased - 42 120 Ryots - 3,722	Be-ilaka villages 63, ryots 1,249	Yes, on a limited scale; 4 to 5 bundles the rupee.	No.	Nij 5,000 Ryotti 14,000 Ryots. Beegahs. 2,297 sow 2 849 " 3 634 " 4 451 " 5 254 " 6 265 " 8 126 " 10 74 " 15 21 " 20 4,971	3 to 5 years, sometimes undefined.	Year's rent Rs. 1. 4. Half year's, i.e., Indigo rent - 10 Ten days' labour at 3 annas a day 1 15 6 Two ditto at 2 annas a day - 4 - Seed - 6 - Rent - 10 - Tot. Rs. 3 3 6	Average rate 15 to 30 bundles; 1,000 bundles 7 maunds.
F. Saupin, Esq. of Callipole.	Putni talooks, ijaras and pottas in different villages.	Yes, and found little difficulty.	None.	Never in this concern; but formerly did so buy in other concerns in small quantities.	Beegahs. Nijabad 200 Ryotti 6,300 Total 6,500	None.	12 annas to 1 rupee.	Rs. 2. 12. for ploughing, sowing, weeding and rent; carting not charged.	12 to 16 bundles; 4 maunds per 1,000 bundles.
John White, Esq., Banskheria.	94 villages, of which 23 are putni, 35 Durputni, 10 Sehputni, 26 ijara or durijara, and 3,700 beegahs, chur land.	77 be-ilaka villages.	Yes, to a small extent; at 4 bundles per rupee.	No.	4,200 beegahs nij, and 14,000 beegahs ryotti.	From 1 to 5 years, more generally the latter.	8 to 10 annas per beegah.	About 3 rupees.	A beegah well cultivated will yield 25 bundles. Produce of 1,000 bundles is from 5½ to 6 maunds.
Thomas Savi, Esq., Mohegunge Concern.	Putni, Durputni, ijara, pottas.	Out of 3,000 beegahs, 1,700 beegahs be-ilaka.	To a limited extent; 4 bundles for the rupee.	No.	Nij 9,000, beegahs ryotti 3,000.	No form, only blank stamp-paper.	For jumma lands 5½ annas per beegah, and 10½ anns. per ticca or jutbundi lands.	Rs. 1. 8. including ploughing, sowing, weeding, cutting and carting.	Average of last 3 years, 3 bundles per beegah. 5 or 6 mnds. per 1,000 bundles.
J. White Smith, Esq., Katuli Concern.	Putni, durputni, tehputni, sehputni, ijara.	Very little be-ilaka.	No.	No.	11,000 beegahs, ryotti and nij-abad.	None.	12 annas a beegah.	2 rupees a beegah.	8 bundles per beegah, 6 to 7 maunds per 1,000 beegahs.
J. Tisendie, Esq., Shikarpore Factory.	Putni, Durputni, ijara, jote, jumma.	Both with equal success.	Yes, in the Meergunge and Nosibshai concerns in 1847-48.	No.	Beegahs. Nij 6,900 Ryotti 20,000 Total 26,900	On stamp-paper, usually for 5 years.	6 annas to a rupee.	Annas. Ploughing 8 Weeding 4 Cutting 3 Total - 15	On chure 12 bundles; on high lands 8. 1,000 bundles from chur plant 5½ maunds, from high land 7½ mds.

APPENDIX, PART I.

Appendix, No. 1.

embodied in the Indigo Circular, No. 29, dated the 28th May 1860.

4th. The average price charged to the ryot for seed per seer, and the average amount of a required for a beegah.	10.	5th. The number of bundles usually taken for the rupee.	11.	What size are your bundles of indigo, and how do you measure them?	12.	Are you in the habit of suing defaulting ryots for breach of contract, and how many of such cases do you institute on the average within the year?	13.	Are you in the habit of giving cash advances to your ryots every year, whether such ryots be on the right side of the balance sheet or not?	14.	What is the expense of holding and cultivating a beegah of nij or khas lands, including rent, sowing, and all other expenditure as specified in clause 2 of Question 7, and what number of ploughs and bullocks is kept up at the factory?	15.	If the concern holds land in talook, putni, or lease, what proportion of land in each village so held is sown with indigo through ryots?	16.	Do you find it necessary to exercise any supervision over the contracting ryots during the season of cultivation, in order to ensure the fulfilment of their contract; and if so, in what way?	17.	Do you permit the ryots to sow the crops usually known as the cold weather crops, on lands from which indigo has been cut during the preceding rains; that is, do you allow a cold weather crop to precede the indigo sown in February or March or April, and do you allow any cold weather crop to be sown with October sowings?	18.	Have you any knowledge of any system of advances made to carry on the cultivation of crops other than indigo; and if so, can you say how such a system works?	19.	What is the size of the beegah in your district?	20.
Per seers Annas 1. 6-4 seers per beegah.	Six.	By a 6-foot chain.	No.	A ryot in debt gets half the money value of the plant of last year.	Rs. 3. 4. a beegah. 65 to 70 ploughs, 800 coolies.	No clear answer given.	Field servants kept up for this purpose.	Yes.	Rice.	55 yards of 22 inches; or 21,511 square feet.
1 anna per seer, 4 seers per beegah.	Six.	By a 6-foot chain.	Never.	No; not unless plant is given to cover old balances.	Rs. 3. 8. a beegah. No ploughs kept.	About 1-16th.	Yes.	Yes.	Mahajans make advances to ryots, and charge interest at 70 per cent.	About 120 feet square.
1 anna per seer, 4 seers per beegah.	Four.	By a 6-foot chain.	Not until this year.	Not always.	Rs. a. Rent 1 4 Seed 1 4 Cultivation 1 8 Total 4 0	1-16th or 1-18th.	Indispensable.	Yes; as also with spring sowings.	Rice.	55 yards of 32 inches.
1½ anna per seer, 4 seers per beegah.	Four.	By a 6-foot chain.	No.	According to the circumstances of the ryots.	4 rupees per beegah. 100 ploughs, 211 buffaloes and bullocks.	1,300 beegahs out of 29,500 beegahs.	Undoubtedly; by means of amins and takidgirs.	Yes.	No.	120 square feet.
About 5 pice a seer, 5 seers per beegah.	4 bundles per rupee.	No clear answer.	Never.	Not unless clear of balances.	With a cold weather crop 2 to 28; without 4 to 4-8. No ploughs or cattle.	About 1-20th	Great supervision.	Yes.	Yes, Rice. Advances made in kind.	Zemindary beegah 80 haths, indigo beegah 96.
1 anna per seer, 4 seers per beegah.	6 bundles.	By a 6-foot chain.	No.	Not always.	1 rupee 11 annas.	Chur lands about a quarter, high lands not 1-20th.	Yes.	Always.	Rice.	80 haths of 20 inches.

Abstract of the Replies of Indigo Planters to the Questions embodied in

	1. State, briefly but clearly, the different kinds of land tenures within which indigo cultivation is carried on by your concern or factory, whether Talooks or Putni Talooks, or Durputni Talooks or Ijara, i. e., leased lands, all such being held by the concern.	2. Do you follow the system of cultivating through ryots, resident in talooks or villages belonging to other parties; that is to say, do you follow what is familiarly known as the be-ilaka system, and if so, to what extent, and with what success?	3. Have you any knowledge of any system of purchasing bundles of indigo from cultivators who take seed from the factory but receive no advances, and who cultivate on whatever lands of their own they please, without any supervision by the factory servants?	4. Have you any knowledge of any system of cultivators cultivating indigo on their own account, and selling the plant at the best market they can find?	5. What proportionate account of cultivation in your concern is nij and what amount is ryoti? Can you give the relative extent in beegahs?	6. What form of contract or agreement is in use in your factories? Is the agreement drawn up to cultivate for a term of years, and if so, for how many years; or is the term undefined?	7. Can you give the following details of the cultivation as within your knowledge and as carried on within your neighbourhood:— 1st. The average rent per beegah payable by the ryot for lands on which he grows indigo for the concern.	8. 2d. The average expenses of the ryot cultivating the indigo plant per beegah, including ploughing, sowing, weeding, cutting, and carting.	9. 3d. The average number of bundles which a beegah of indigo land produces, and the average return, in indigo, of a thousand bundles of plant.
Kishnagar—continued.
M. Tweedie, Esq., Loknathpore Concern.	All kinds of leased lands.	Be-ilaka to some extent.	Yes, on a limited scale.	No.	Beegahs. Ryotti 8,000 Nij - 2,000	Yes, the term varies.	8 to 10 annas.	Can't say.	8 bundles a beegah.
J. Forlong, Esq., Nischindipore Concern.	Villages. Talooks - 5 Putni talooks 87 Ijara - - 37 Be-ilaka - 53 Total - 182	Yes.	To a limited extent, 3½ to 4 bundles per rupee.	Yes, to a small extent.	Beegahs. Ryotti 26,000 Nij - 4,000	Yes, on stamp paper for 5 years.	From 5 annas to a rupee.	Rs. 2-4-6 per beegah, including carting and stamped paper.	11 bundles per beegah, 8 maunds per 1,000 bundles.
H. Sibbald, Esq., Nundunpore Concern.	Villages. Talook - 1 Putni talook 17 Ijara - 33 Be-ilaka - 13 Total - 64	Yes; to a small extent.	No.	No.	Beegahs. Nij - 7,691 Ryotti 2,831 Total 10,522	Undefined period.	From 6 to 12 annas per beegah.	From 2 to 3 rupees.	From 8 to 12 bundles, 1,000 bundles would give 6 mds.
Archibald Hills, Esq., Katchikatta Concern.	All descriptions.	From 4,500 to 4,600 with average success.	No.	No.	Beegahs. Nij - 2,825 Ryotti 16,375 Total 19,200	None.	About 10 annas.	Exclusive of rent, 1 rupee.	11 or 12 bundles per beegah, 7 to 14 maunds per 1,000 bundles.
PURNA.
E. Roberts, Esq., Hizlabut Concern.	Talook, putni talook, durputni, ijara, potta.	Yes, to about one-fourth.	Yes.	No.	Beegahs. Ryotti 7,700 Nij - 4,300 Total 12,000	For 1 year.	From Rs. 1 to 1-4 beegah.	Can't state.	From 10 to 12 bundles, and 1,000 bundles would give 6 mds.
H. D. Fergusson, Esq., Comedpore Concern.	Mourusi, jote, ijaras.	Yes, to about one-eighth.	No.	No.	Beegahs. Nij - 1,200 Ryotti 6,800 Total 8,000	Yes, yearly.	12 annas.	2 rupees.	10 to 20 bundles per beegah, 5 mds. per 1,000 bundles.
John Stevenson, Esq., Dobracole Concern.	Talooks, putni talooks, jotes, Dur-ijarah.	About 750 beegahs with partial success.	No.	No.	Beegahs. Nij - 6,000 Ryotti 4,000 Total 10,000	Annual.	12 annas.	Being chur land, only 12 annas.	7 bundles; 1,000 bundles would give 4 mds.
J. Phillips, Esq., Diluri Concern.	Every description.	To a small extent with success.	No.	No.	In equal proportion.	5 years.	5 to 6 annas.	10 annas.	6 to 8 bundles per beegah; 5 to 6 maunds per 1,000 bundles.
G. R. Barry, Esq., Serajgunge Concern.	Ijaras and pottas.	No.	No.	No.	All nij.	None.	8 annas.	Rupees 2-8.	12 bundles per rupee; 5 maunds per 1,000 bundles.
JESSORE.
G. Mears, Esq., Sinduri Concern.	Talooks. Putni talooks, dur-putni, ijara.	Not to any extent.	Yes.	No.	Beegahs. Nij - 4,762 Ryotti 35,486 Total 40,248	10 years.	6 annas to 1 rupee.	Can't say.	5 to 25 bundles per beegah, 7 to 13 maunds per 1,000 bundles.

the Indigo Circular, No. 29, dated the 28th May 1860—continued.

4th. The average price charged to the ryot for seed per seer, and the average amount of seed required for a beegah.	5th. The number of bundles usually taken for the rupees.	What size are your bundles of indigo, and how do you measure them?	Are you in the habit of suing defaulting ryots for breach of contract, and how many of such cases do you institute on the average within the year?	Are you in the habit of giving cash advances to your ryots every year, whether such ryots be on the right side of the balance sheet or not?	What is the expense of holding and cultivating a beegah of nij or klas lands, including rent, sowing, and all other expenditure as specified in clause 2 of Question 7, and what number of ploughs and bullocks is kept up at the factory?	If the concern holds land in talook, putni, or lease, what proportion of land in each village so held is sown with indigo through ryots?	Do you find it necessary to exercise any supervision over the contracting ryots during the season of cultivation, in order to ensure the fulfilment of their contract; and if so, in what way?	Do you permit the ryots to sow the crops usually known as the cold weather crops, on lands from which indigo has been cut during the preceding rains; that is, do you allow a cold weather crop to precede the indigo sown in February or March or April, and do you allow any cold weather crop to be sown with October sowings?	Have you any knowledge of any system of advances made to carry on the cultivation of crops other than indigo; and if so, can you say how such a system works?	What is the size of the beegah in your district?
10.	11.	12.	13.	14.	15.	16.	17.	18.	19.	20.
1 to 2 annas per seer, 4 seers per beegah.	4 to 6 bundles.	By a 6-foot chain.	Seldom.	In many cases.	4 to 6 rupees per beegah; no ploughs kept up.	1-10th.	Yes; constant supervision.	Always.	No.	80 haths of 22 inches.
1 anna per seer, 4 seers per beegah.	4 bundles.	By a 5-foot 3-inch chain.	No.	Yes, to those who have no balances.	From 3 rupees 15 annas to 4 rupees 9 annas.	1-16th.	Yes.	Yes.	No.	65 guj (yards) square of 32 inches.
1 anna per seer, 4 seers per beegah.	4 per rupee.	By a 5-foot 3-inch chain.	No.	In many cases.	Rupees 2-8 to rupees 4-8.	1-16th.	Yes.	Yes.	No.	80 haths of 18 inches.
1 anna per seer, 4 seers per beegah.	4 bundles.	By a 6-foot 5-inch chain.	No.	No.	From Rs. 2-11 to 2-15.	1-10th.	Yes; absolutely necessary.	Yes.	No.	80 haths of 24 inches.
9 pie per seer, 5 seers per beegah.	6 bundles.	By a 6-foot chain.	No.	No.	Rs. 3-6.	7 per cent.	Yes, indispensable.	Yes.	Yes, sugar-cane and rice.	21,511 sq. feet.
5 pice per seer, 5 seers per beegah.	6 bundles.	20 cubic ft. by a 6-foot chain.	Not always.	—	—	1-8th.	Yes.	No.	No.	80 haths of 20 inches.
About 3 pice a seer and 6 seers to the beegah.	6 bundles.	By a 6-foot chain.	No.	No.	Rs. 1-1 per beegah, 150 ploughs.	In high land 1 in 30 beegahs, on chur 1 in 3.	Yes.	Yes.	Yes, all crops.	80 haths of 20 inches.
1 anna per seer, 4 seers per beegah.	8 bundles.	By a 6-foot chain.	No.	Yes.	About 2-14; 35 ploughs, 140 head of cattle.	Variable.	Certainly.	Yes.	Yes, for all crops.	80 cubits of 20 inches.
5 seers per beegah.	4 to 6 bundles.	By a 6-foot chain.	No ryots.	—	3 rupees.	About 2 per cent.	Not necessary, having no ryots.	No.	No.	100 haths of 16 inches.
1 anna per seer, 4 seers per beegah.	4 bundles.	By a 6-foot chain.	No.	No.	4 rupees.	Can't say.	Yes.	Yes.	No.	80 yards of 22 inches.

Abstract of the Replies of Indigo Planters to the Questions embodied in

	1. State, briefly but clearly, the different kinds of land tenures within which indigo cultivation is carried on by your concern or factory; whether Talooks or Putni Talooks, or Durputni Talooks or Ijara, &c., leased lands, all such being held by the concern.	2. Do you follow the system of cultivation through ryots, resident in talooks or villages belonging to other parties; that is to say, do you follow what is familiarly known as the be-ilaka system, and if so, to what extent, and with what success?	3. Have you any knowledge of any system of purchasing bundles of indigo from cultivators, who take seed from the factory but receive no advances, and who cultivate on whatever lands of their own they please, without any supervision by the factory servants?	4. Have you any knowledge of any system of cultivators cultivating indigo on their own account, and selling the plant at the best market they can find?	5. What proportionate account of cultivation in your concern is nij and what amount is ryotti? Can you give the relative extent in beegahs?	6. What form of contract or agreement is in use in your factories? Is the agreement drawn up to cultivate for a term of years, and if so, for how many years; or is the term undefined?	7. Can you give the following details of the cultivation as within your knowledge and as carried on within your neighbourhood:— 1st. The average rent per beegah payable by the ryot for lands on which he grows indigo for the concern.	8. 2d. The average expenses of the ryot cultivating the indigo plant per beegah, including ploughing, sowing, weeding, cutting, and carting.	9. 3d. The average number of bundles which a beegah of indigo land produces, and the average return, in indigo, of a thousand bundles of plant.
Jessore—continued.
A. Battersby, Esq., Nubshahi Concern.	Talooks. Putni, dur-putni, jote, mourusi, ijara.	Very little.	No.	No.	Beegahs. Nij - 4,500 Ryotti 15,500 Total, 24,000	No.	1 rupee.	2 rupees.	9 bundles per beegah, 6½ maunds per 1,000 bundles.
T. Brae, Esq., Baboolally Concern.	Talooks. Putni, dur-putni, mourusi, ijara.	To a small extent.	No.	No.	Beegahs. Nij - 2,000 Ryotti 5,000 Total, 7,000	Undefined.	1 rupee.	3 rupees.	10 bundles per beegah, 6 to 7 maunds per 1,000 bundles.
D. H. Kearnes, Esq., Pergauty Factory.	Putni, ijara, pottah.	954 beegahs be-ilaka.	Yes, to a trifling extent.	No.	Beegahs. Nij - 937 Ryotti 1,307 Total, 2,244	Yearly.	1 rupee.	1 rupee 2 annas.	10 to 25 bundles per beegah, 5 maunds per 1,000 bundles.
H. Oatts, Esq., Hazarapore Factory.	Talooks. Putni, mourusi, ijara, jote, jummas.	Yes, to a small extent.	No.	No.	3-4th ryotti and 1-4th nij.	From 1, 3, 5, and 10 years.	10 annas.	1 rupee.	10 bundles per beegah, 7 maunds per 1,000 bundles.
James Savi, Esq., Sericole Concern.	Talooks. Putni, dur-putni, ijara, jote.	Yes, to a small extent.	Yes.	No.	Beegahs. Nij - 3,000 Ryotti 8,000 Total, 11,000	For 5 and 10 years.	1 rupee.	From 12 annas to 1-12.	From 3 to 14 bundles, and 1,000 bundles yield 5 maunds.
Henry Mackenzie, Esq., Jingeragatcha Factory.	Villages. Putni talook, dur-putni 1 Talooks - 7 Ijara - 32 Ganti jummas - 2 Tahsil me-hals - 30 Be-ilaka - 99 Total - 171	Yes, in 99 villages.	Yes.	Yes.	Formerly 150 beegahs nij and 7,850 ryotti, now 25 beegahs nij, and 5,000 ryotti.	From 1 to 20 years.	From 4 annas to 12 annas.	Exclusive of rent, 1 rupee.	From 16 to 25 on best land, from 5 to 10 on worst land; 5 to 10 maunds per 1,000 bundles.
R. C. Bell, Esq., Mudderry Concern.	Putni, dur-putni, ijara, mouruse, purchased talooks and jotes.	On a limited scale with success.	No.	No.	Beegahs. Nij - 5,000 Ryotti 5,000 Total 10,000	Undefined.	From 6 to 8 annas.	About 2-8 rupees.	10 to 15 bundles; 1,000 bundles yield 5 to 6 maunds.
PURNEAH.
Richard De-Courey, Esq., Lallpore Concern.	2 villages in ijara.	Yes, largely.	Yes, I encourage the system myself.	No.	Beegahs. Nij - 300 Ryotti 5,000 Total 5,300	Term undefined.	No answer.	From 2 to 2-8.	From 20 to 40 bundles.
James Egerton, Esq., Kajah Concern.	Ijara only.	Yes, entirely.	No.	No.	Beegahs. Nij - 150 Ryotti 5,000 Total, 5,150	Yearly.	4 annas to 1 rupee.	Rupees 2 to rupees 2-8.	25 bundles.

the Indigo Circular, No. 29, dated the 28th May 1860—continued.

4th. The average price charged to the ryot for seed per seer, and the average amount of seed required for a beegah.	5th. The number of bundles usually taken for the rupee.	What size are your bundles of indigo, and how do you measure them?	Are you in the habit of suing defaulting ryots for breach of contract, and how many of such cases do you institute on the average within the year?	Are you in the habit of giving cash advances to your ryots every year, whether such ryots be on the right side of the balance sheet or not?	What is the expense of holding and cultivating a beegah of nij or khas lands, including rent, sowing, and all other expenditure as specified in clause 2 of Question 7, and what number of ploughs and bullocks is kept up at the factory?	If the concern holds land in talook, putni, or lease, what proportion of land in each village so held is sown with indigo through ryots?	Do you find it necessary to exercise any supervision over the contracting ryots during the season of cultivation, in order to ensure the fulfilment of their contract; and if so, in what way?	Do you permit the ryots to sow the crops usually known as the cold weather crops, on lands from which indigo has been cut during the preceding rains; that is, do you allow a cold weather crop to precede the indigo sown in February or March or April, and do you allow any cold weather crop to be sown with October sowings?	Have you any knowledge of any system of advances made to carry on the cultivation of crops other than indigo; and if so, can you say how such a system works?	What is the size of the beegah in your district?
10.	11.	12.	13.	14.	15.	16.	17.	18.	19.	20.
2 annas per seer, 4 seers per beegah,	4 bundles.	By a 6-foot chain.	Never.	No.	It is variable; 150 head of cattle.	About 7 per cent.	Yes.	Yes.	I believe all crops.	25,000 square feet.
1 anna 7 pie per seer, 5 seers per beegah.	Four.	By a 6-foot chain.	Never.	No.	5 rupees; 50 to 60 ploughs.	About 1-10th.	Yes, very.	Yes, and encouraged to.	No.	100 cubits in length.
2 annas per seer, 4 seers per beegah.	6 bundles.	By a chain 3½ cubits in length.	No.	No.	3 rupees 10 annas; 62 bullocks and 24 ploughs.	No clear answer given.	Yes.	Yes.	No.	10 cubits square.
1 anna per seer, 4 seers per beegah.	Four.	By a 6-foot chain.	Never.	No.	About 3 rupees.	No clear answer given.	Yes.	Yes.	Yes, rice.	81 haths of 22 inches.
9 pie per seer, 5 seers per beegah.	From 4 to 8.	By a 6-foot chain.	No.	No.	3-8 to 4 rupees; we have 75 ploughs and 150 head of cattle.	About 1-15th.	Yes.	Yes, almost always.	Yes, in all grain crops.	80 haths of 23 inches.
2 annas per seer, 1½ to 1¾ seer per beegah.	From 8 to 10 bundles.	By a chain of 5 feet 3 inches long.	Very seldom.	Certainly not.	Don't know.	A very small proportion indeed.	Most necessary.	Sometimes.	No.	80 haths.
1 anna 6 pie per seer, and 2 seers per beegah.	6 to 8 bundles.	By a 6-foot chain.	Never of late.	If necessary.	1 rupee; we have no ploughs or bullocks.	No direct answer.	Yes.	Invariably.	No.	80 cubits square.
Annas 1½ per seer and 4 seers for a beegah.	6 bundles for the rupee.	By a chain 6 feet long.	No.	Yes.	4 rupees a beegah.	A very small proportion.	Yes.	Undoubtedly.	None.	80 haths.
No charge.	Four and a half.	6 feet round. The bundles are seldom measured.	No.	Not in full.	No nij or khas land in this concern.	1 beegah by each ryot.	Yes.	Invariably.	In some concerns.	60 yards square.

Abstract of the Replies of Indigo Planters to the Questions embodied in

	State, briefly but clearly, the different kinds of land tenures within which indigo cultivation is carried on by your concern or factory, whether Talooks or Putni Talooks, or Durputni Talooks or Ijara, &c., leased lands, all such being held by the concern.	Do you follow the system of cultivating through ryots, resident in talooks or villages belonging to other parties; that is to say, do you follow what is familiarly known as the be-ilaka system, and if so, to what extent, and with what success?	Have you any knowledge of any system of purchasing bundles of indigo from cultivators, who take seed from the factory but receive no advances, and who cultivate on whatever lands of their own they please, without any supervision by the factory servants?	Have you any knowledge of any system of cultivators cultivating indigo on their own account, and selling the plant at the best market they can find?	What proportionate account of cultivation in your concern is nij, and what amount is ryotti? Can you give the relative extent in beegahs?	What form of contract or agreement is in use in your factories? Is the agreement drawn up to cultivate for a term of years, and if so, for how many years; or is the term undefined?	Can you give the following details of the cultivation as within your knowledge and as carried on within your neighbourhood:— 1st. The average rent per beegah payable by the ryot for lands on which he grows indigo for the concern.	2d. The average expenses of the ryot cultivating the indigo plant per beegah, including ploughing, sowing, weeding, cutting, and carting.	3d. The average number of bundles which a beegah of indigo land produces, and the average return, in indigo, of a thousand bundles of plant.
	1.	2.	3.	4.	5.	6.	7.	8.	9.
Purneah—continued.
H. S. Cave, Esq., Doo-mur Factory.	Ilaka and be-ilaka.	Yes.	Yes, to a small extent.	No.	Beegahs, Nij - 1,000 Ryotti 10,000 Total 11,000	Undefined term.	8 annas.	2-8 to 3 rupees.	35 bundles; 1,000 bundles yield 4 maunds.
A. D. Forbes, Esq., Rahikpore Concern.	In putni only.	Entirely so.	No.	No.	All ryotti.	On stamp-paper for 10 years.	About 2 annas.	About 12 annas.	16 bundles per beegah; 3½ maunds per 1,000 bundles.
A. J. Forbes, Esq., Sultampur Factory.	Zemindary istamrari putni.	One - third be-ilaka.	Yes, but the cultivation is supervised.	Yes.	Beegahs. Nij - 330 Ryotti 16,000 Total 16,330	On stamp-paper for 10 years.	2 annas.	12 annas 6 pie or less.	12 bundles per beegah; 3½ maunds per 1,000 bundles.
RUNGPORE.
T. Deveria, Esq., Kishengunge Concern.	No clear answer.	None.	Yes.	Yes.	All ryotti.	On stamp-paper for 7 years up to last year, now 3 years.	10 annas 5 pie.	No clear answer.	1 to 70 bundles per beegah; 3 to 5 maunds per 1,000 bundles.
J. Gouldhawke, Esq., Khalispore Concern, Jessore, formerly of Rungpore.	Zemindary.	Almost all be-ilaka.	Yes, but they buy their seed in the market.	Yes.	All ryotti, 50 or 60 beegahs excepted.	For the current season.	8 annas per beegah.	1 rupee 2 annas.	25 bundles.
MALDA.
P. McArthur, Esq., Singitolla and Boyli Concerns.	Ijara, jotes, mourusi, potta.	Yes, to a considerable extent.	No.	No.	Beegahs. Nij - 8,500 Ryotti 7,000 Total 15,500	Annual.	4 annas.	Rupees 1-8 per beegah.	20 per beegah; 3½ maunds per 1,000 bundles.
J. J. Gray, Esq., Goamalti Concern.	Putni, jotes, ijara.	Yes, to a small extent.	Yes.	No.	All ryotti.	Generally 5 years.	3 to 6 annas.	No clear answer.	20 bundles per beegah; 3½ maunds per 1,000 bundles.
MOORSHEDABAD.
Henry Deverill, Esq., Ackragunge Concern.	Putni, jotes, ijara.	No.	No.	No.	About half-and-half.	For 5 years.	3 to 10 annas.	1 rupee.	No answer.
J. F. Hedger, Esq., Turtipore Concern.	Ijara, putni, jotes.	Yes, to a small extent.	No.	No.	Beegahs. Nij - 800 Ryotti 17,200 Total 18,000	Generally 5 years.	6½ annas.	No clear answer.	10 bundles per beegah; 4½ maunds per 1,000 bundles.
RAJSHAHYE.
G. McLeod, Esq., Rajapore Concern.	Putni, dur-putni, ijara.	To a considerable extent.	No.	No.	½ nij, ½ ryotti.	On stamp-paper for 5 years.	6 annas.	14 annas exclusive of carting.	8 to 12 bundles per beegah.

the Indigo Circular, No. 29, dated the 28th May 1860—continued.

4th. The average price charged to the ryot for seed per seer, and the average amount of seed required for a beegah.	5th. The number of bundles usually taken for the rupee.	What size are your bundles of indigo, and how do you measure them?	Are you in the habit of suing defaulting ryots for breach of contract, and how many of such cases do you institute on the average within the year?	Are you in the habit of giving cash advances to your ryots every year, whether such ryots be on the right side of the balance sheet or not?	What is the expense of holding and cultivating a beegah of nij or khas lands, including rent, sowing, and all other expenditure as specified in clause 2 of Question 7, and what number of ploughs and bullocks is kept up at the factory?	If the concern holds land in talook, pottni, or lease, what proportion of land in each village so held is sown with indigo through ryots?	Do you find it necessary to exercise any supervision over the contracting ryots during the season of cultivation, in order to ensure the fulfilment of their contract; and if so, in what way?	Do you permit the ryots to sow the crops usually known as the cold weather crops, on lands from which indigo has been cut during the preceding rains; that is, do you allow a cold weather crop to precede the indigo sown in February or March or April, and do you allow any cold weather crop to be sown with October sowings?	Have you any knowledge of any system of advances made to carry on the cultivation of crops other than indigo; and if so, can you say how such a system works?	What is the size of the beegah in your district?
10.	11.	12.	13.	14.	15.	16.	17.	18.	19.	20.
—	Nij cultivation.	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
9 pie per seer, and 5 seers per beegah.	6 bundles.	By a 6-foot chain.	No.	No.	2 rupees 4 annas 50 to 60 bullocks.	No clear answer given.	Yes.	Yes.	No clear answer given.	100 haths of 18 inches.
—	—	By a 6-foot chain.	No.	Yes.	From 1 rupee 4 annas to 1 rupee 8 annas.	I sow 5,000 beegahs all nij.	Yes.	Yes, to the extent of 2,000 beegahs.	Yes.	No answer.
No charge.	No direct answer.	We receive per beegah not bundle.	Very seldom.	Not as a rule.	6 rupees.	3 cottahs per beegah.	Yes.	No.	Yes, for turneric and rice.	$\frac{3}{4}$ th an English acre.
4 rupees a maund.	7 for the rupee.	By a chain $4\frac{1}{2}$ cubits long.	Very few.	Yes.	Can't say.	No such lands held.	Yes.	Yes.	No.	16 doons, each doon 6 cubits.
$2\frac{1}{2}$ annas per seer; 4 seers per beegah.	Yes.	By a 6-foot chain.	Never.	Yes.	Rupees 1-8 to rupees 3. 175 ploughs and 700 bullocks.	No clear answer.	Yes.	I do.	Yes, all crops.	80 haths square.
3 annas per seer; 6 seers per beegah.	10 bundles.	By a 6-foot chain.	Never.	Sometimes.	Can't answer.	No settled proportion.	Certainly.	Yes.	Yes, in all crops as well as for cocoons.	100 cubits.
4 annas a beegah.	6 bundles per rupee.	By a 6-foot chain.	Never.	Yes.	About 150 ploughs.	No distinct answer.	Yes.	Invariably.	Yes, rice.	80 cubits of 18 to 20 inches.
6 to 9 pie per seer; 5 to 8 seers per beegah.	10	By a 6-foot chain.	No.	Yes.	Rupee 1-2 $\frac{1}{2}$ per beegah.	About half.	Yes.	Yes.	No.	80 haths of 19 to 20 inches.
1 anna per seer; 4 seers per beegah.	6 bundles.	By a 6-foot chain.	Never.	No.	Rupees: Rent - 6 - Cultivating and sowing 1 2 - weed- ing - 6 - cutting - 3 3 carriage - 6 - seed 1 - - Total 3 7 3	Less than 1-16th on high, and $\frac{1}{2}$ to 6-16ths on chur land.	Yes.	Yes.	Yes, rice, sugar, mulberry and most other crops.	80 cubits of 20 and 22 inches.

Abstract of the Replies of Indigo Planters to the Questions embodied in

	1. State, briefly but clearly, the different kinds of land tenures within which indigo cultivation is carried on by your concern or factory, whether Talooks or Putni Talooks, or Durputni Talooks or Ijara, &c., leased lands, all such being held by the concern.	2. Do you follow the system of cultivating through ryots, resident in talooks or villages belonging to other parties: that is to say, do you follow what is familiarly known as the be-ilaka system, and if so, to what extent, and with what success?	3. Have you any knowledge of any system of purchasing bundles of indigo from cultivators, who take seed from the factory but receive no advances, and who cultivate on whatever lands of their own they please, without any supervision by the factory servants?	4. Have you any knowledge of any system of cultivators cultivating indigo on their own account, and selling the plant at the best market they can find?	5. What proportionate account of cultivation in your concern is nij and what amount is ryotti? Can you give the relative extent in beegahs?	6. What form of contract or agreement is in use in your factories? Is the agreement drawn up to cultivate for a term of years, and if so, for how many years; or is the term undefined?	7. Can you give the following details of the cultivation as within your knowledge and as carried on within your neighbourhood:— 1st. The average rent per beegah payable by the ryot for lands on which he grows indigo for the concern.	8. 2d. The average expenses of the ryot cultivating the indigo plant per beegah, including ploughing, sowing, weeding, cutting, and carting.	9. 3d. 1. The average number of bundles which a beegah of indigo land produces, and the average return in indigo, of a thousand bundles of plant.
COMERCOLLY.
J. P. Hampton, Esq., Salgurmurdia Concern.	Putni, dur-putni, ijara, dur-ijara.	Yes, to a small extent.	Yes.	No.	Beegahs. Nij - 2,573 Ryotti 10,655 Total 13,228	From 1 to 10 years, also for an unde- fined pe- riod.	8 to 10 annas.	Can't decidedly answer.	12 bundles per beegah; 6 maunds per 1,000 bundles.
BEERBHOOM.
Messrs. Erskine & Co., Ilambazar Concern.	Putni, dur-put- ni, and ijara.	Yes, chiefly.	Yes, to a small extent.	No.	All ryotti; from 30,000 to 34,000 beegahs.	Annual agree- ments.	From 8 as. to 1 rupee.	Only his labour	From 5 to 25
BANCOORAH.
J. M. Cheek, Esq., Ban- coorah Concern.	Talooks putni, dur putni ta- looks, ijara, mokururri mahals.	Yes, entirely, and with suc- cess.	Yes, in the main.	No.	Beegahs. Nij - 1,000 and 30,000 to 40,000 ryotti. Total 31,000 to 41,000	Annual.	8 annas as an average.	8 annas.	9 to 10 bun- dles, and from 3 to 3½ maunds to 1,000 bun- dles.
BURDWAN.
Charles Savi, Esq., Moisdea Factory.	Putni, ijara, and jote pottahs.	Yes.	Yes.	None.	¾ Nij, ¼ ryot- ti, 6,400 nij and 2,200 ryotti.	Signatures on blank, stamp paper un- defined.	8 annas.	Very little.	From 6 to 10 bundles and from 4 to 5 maunds per 1,000 bun- dles.
FURREEDPORE.
Patrick Smith, Esq., Cossimpoire Factory.	Talooks putni talook, mou- rusi, jumma, ijara and be- ilaka.	Yes, ¾ be- ilaka to ¼ ilaka.	Yes.	No.	All ryotti.	Agreements for 5 years.	1 rupee.	2 rupees.	10 bundles.
MYMENSING.
James Burrell, Esq., Soobuncolly Concern.	Chur and leased lands.	Almost all nij.	No.	No.	All nij.	—	6 to 8 annas.	1 rupee 8 an- nas.	8 to 10, and produce of 1,000 be- gahs, 30 to 50 maunds.
MIDNAPORE.
J. Terry, Esq., Midna- pore Concern.	Putni, ijara.	Yes, about 4,000 bee- gahs.	No.	No.	Beegahs. Nij - 4,872 Ryotti 27,963 Total 32,835	Annual.	About 4 as.	12 annas.	6 bundles, produce of 1,000 bun- dles, 5 to 6 maunds.
DACCA.
A. Forbes, Esq., Seraj- abad Concern.	Zemindary.	No; entirely nij.	No.	Not at the present time.	All nij.	I have no contracts.	I have no ryotti culti- vation.	—	—
CHUPRAH.
T. MacDonald, Esq., Pertabpore Factory.	Mokurari lands, ticca zaraut, ticca villages.	No.	No.	No.	¾ Nij and 1-4th ryotti.	Only with my under- tenants for a specified period.	2-12.	No, clear.	No direct an- swer.

the Indigo Circular, No. 29, dated the 28th May 1860—continued.

4th. The average price charged to the ryot for seed per seer; and the average amount of seed required for a beegah.	5th. The number of bundles usually taken for the rupee.	What size are your bundles of indigo, and how do you measure them?	Are you in the habit of suing defaulting ryots for breach of contract, and how many of such cases do you institute, on the average, within the year?	Are you in the habit of giving cash advances to your ryots every year, whether such ryots be on the right side of the balance sheet or not?	What is the expense of holding and cultivating a beegah of nij or khas lands, including rent, sowing, and all other expenditure as specified in clause 2 of Question 7, and what number of ploughs and bullocks is kept up at the factory?	If the concern holds land in talook, putni, or lease, what proportion of land in each village so held is sown with indigo through ryots?	Do you find it necessary to exercise any supervision over the contracting ryots during the season of cultivation, in order to ensure the fulfilment of their contract; and if so, in what way?	Do you permit the ryots to sow the crops usually known as the cold weather crops, on lands from which indigo has been cut during the preceding rains; that is, do you allow a cold weather crop to precede the indigo sown in February or March or April, and do you allow any cold weather crop to be sown with October sowings?	Have you any knowledge of any system of advances made to carry on the cultivation of crops other than indigo; and if so, can you say how such a system works?	What is the size of the beegah in your district?
10.	11.	12.	13.	14.	15.	16.	17.	18.	19.	20.
5 to 6 seers per beegah; 1 to 1½ per seer.	5 bundles.	By a 6-foot chain.	No.	Sometimes.	About 3 Rs. 8 annas per beegah; 125 ploughs, 500 bullocks.	About 1-9th.	Yes.	Generally speaking, yes.	No.	18 cubits of 21½ inches.
2 annas per seer; 4 seers per beegah.	4 and 5.	By a 5-foot 3-inch chain.	Rarely.	No.	2 rupees.	In ilaka 1-20th, in be-ilika 1-40th.	Yes.	Yes.	Rice and other seed crops.	95 square haths.
6 pice per seer; 5 seers per beegah.	Five.	By a 6-foot chain.	Never.	No.	4-8 to 5 rupees.	About 1-10th	Yes.	Yes.	Yes, rice.	100 cubits square.
6 pice a seer and 7 to 8 seers per beegah.	Eight.	By a 7-foot chain.	No.	No.	Cost not stated; 50 ploughs, with 4 bullocks to the plough.	No clear answer.	Yes.	Yes.	Yes, oats, rape and mustard seed.	120 cubits of 18 inches.
2 annas per seer; 5 seers per beegah.	Eight.	By a 6-foot chain.	Never.	No.	3 rupees to 5 rupees.	No clear answer.	Yes.	Yes.	No.	From 135 to 240 square feet.
5 pice a seer; 6 seers to the beegah.	Eight.	By a 6-foot chain.	No.	No.	5 rupees.	1 to 12 beegahs.	Yes.	Yes.	Yes, opium.	180 feet square.
2 annas per seer; 2½ to 3 seers per beegah.	Eight.	By a 7-foot chain.	No.	No.	No reply.	No such cultivation.	Yes, indispensable.	Yes.	Yes, oats.	140 feet square.
2 annas per seer; 2½ seer per be-gah.	Eight.	By a 7-foot chain.	Rarely.	No.	12 annas 6 pie per beegah; 22 ploughs, and 80 bullocks.	80 beegahs in each vil-lage.	Yes.	Yes.	Yes.	140 feet square.
The market price.	6 bundles.	By a 6-foot chain.	Yes, about 10 to 12 a year.	No.	No nij.	About 8 per cent.	Yes.	Yes.	Yes.	No answer.

Appendix, No. 2.

STATEMENT showing the Number of Europeans who are recorded as Sudder Proprietors, and who hold Lands in Putni.

DISTRICTS.	Number of Europeans recorded as Sudder Proprietors.	Number of Estates of European Sudder Proprietors.	Aggregate Sudder Jumma.	Number of European Putnidars.	Number of Putnis held by Europeans.	Aggregate Sudder Jumma.	REMARKS.
			Rs. a. p.			Rs. a. p.
Backergunge - -	7	23	42,092 12 4 $\frac{3}{4}$	1	2	not known.
Balasure - -	none	-	-	none	-	-
Bancoorah - -	2	2	23 5 -	2	2	5,577 13 11
Beerbhoom - -	4	4	4,466 3 11	1	3	6,284 4 3	Of the four sudder proprietors only two European firms are recorded as such, but the other two are known to be proprietors.
Behar - -	1	5	5,938 6 1	none	-	-
Bhagulpore - -	27	30	41,843 7 11 $\frac{1}{2}$	3	3	1,553 3 5 $\frac{1}{2}$
Bogra - -	3	16	4,792 2 7 $\frac{1}{4}$	none	-	-
Burdwan - -	6	9	36,448 3 8	16	21	not known.
Chittagong - -	4	6	28 4 4	none	-	-	The holdings are on various tenures, and consist entirely of small house and garden lands. No indigo or silk factories in the district.
Chumparun - -	7	7	not known	none	-	-
Cuttack - -	none	-	-	none	-	-
Dacca - -	27	26	18,521 2 11 $\frac{1}{2}$	none	-	-
Dinapore - -	2	3	6,891 1 5 $\frac{1}{4}$	1	1	26,227 5 11 $\frac{3}{4}$	There are, besides three Europeans holding in farm from Government, 13 estates with an aggregate sudder jumma of Rs. 61,633. 2. 10 $\frac{1}{2}$.; scarcely any indigo, however, is grown in the district, the soil being unsuited to the cultivation of the plant.
Furreedpore - -	none	-	-	6	237	98,865 5 4 $\frac{1}{2}$	This amount does not include the sudder jumma of the estate held by Mr. Battersby.
Hooghly - -	none	-	-	4	4	not known.
Jessore - -	28	66	25,536 1 3 $\frac{3}{4}$	13	34	63,490 - 1
Malda - -	3	8	1,145 3 1 $\frac{1}{2}$	3	7	16,329 8 8
Midnapore - -	3	10	21,540 4 3 $\frac{1}{2}$	1	1	50,556 1 1 $\frac{3}{4}$	But there are nine Europeans who hold, on farming leases, 18 estates, the aggregate sudder jumma of which is Rs. 19,410. 5. 9.
Monghyr - -	6	9	1,444 2 5 $\frac{1}{4}$	none	-	-	There are, besides putnis , about 18 farms let out to Europeans either by Government or zemindars.
Moorshedabad - -	8	23	1,05,853 - -	9	20	1,14,394 8 -
Mymensing - -	5	77	70,458 8 -	-	not known	-
Noakolly - -	none	-	-	none	-	-
Nudea - -	29	65	67,144 12 8 $\frac{1}{2}$	11	21	2,26,694 6 7	Inclusive of three durputni mehals.
Patna - -	13	7	14,458 15 9	none	-	-
Pooree - -	none	-	-	none	-	-
Pubna - -	9	21	4,446 - 7	12	74	56,293 7 1
Purneah - -	14	69	5,36,259 8 6 $\frac{1}{2}$	3	-	not known.
Rajshahye - -	4	7	31,758 15 -	3	3	10,074 4 -	It is believed that Messrs. Watson & Co. have absorbed, by means of purchase or transfer, the property and rights of every other European in the district.
Rungpore - -	none	-	-	none	-	-
Sarun - -	4	8	14,904 10 6 $\frac{1}{2}$	none	-	-
Shahabad - -	5	13	889 5 6 $\frac{1}{2}$	none	-	-	The putni system is not unknown in this part of the country.
Sylhet - -	none	-	-	none	-	-
Tipperah - -	7	13	36,077 5 -	3	6	1,042 6 9	The so-called putnis are held from Government as ijaras for a term rather than as putnis , although the holders enjoy during that term all the rights of bona fide putnidars .
Tirhoot - -	11	17	12,879 1 7	none	-	-	Neither putni nor any similar tenure known in this district.
Twenty-four Pergunnahs - -	33	23	7,558 5 9	none	-	-	Soonderbund grantees are included.
TOTAL - -	243	567	10,84,509 6 2	92	439	6,79,882 10 - $\frac{1}{4}$

Appendix, No. 3.

COMPARATIVE STATEMENT showing the Fluctuations or Rise in the Price of Articles of ordinary Use and Consumption, and in the remuneration for Labour, in the Years 1855 and 1860, in Districts in which Indigo Cultivation is carried on.

	Jessore.		Burdwan.		Cutwa, in Burdwan.		Culna, in Burdwan.		Moorshedabad.		Bancoorah.		Mymensing.		Backergunge.		24-Pergunnahs.		Santipore, in Nuddea.		Chagdah, in Nuddea.
	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.
	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.
Wages of labourer or workman, per day	2	3 6	1 6	2 6	1 6	2 3	1 3	2	2	2	1 3	2 6	2	4	1 6	2 6	2	3	1 6	2 6	2	3
Hire of a cart, per day	4	8	10	12	6	8	4	6	6	8	4	6	5	12	1 6	2 6	10	1	4	8	4	6
Hire of a boat, per month	20	30	40 to 125	50 to 150	14	16	15	25	15 8	19	no rivers or boats		9	20	depends on number of oars			30	45	25	35
Price of coarse rice (not in the husk) used by the lower classes, per maund	1	1 14	15 11	2 2	1 4	2	1 4	2 6	1 12	2 2	1	2	13	1 12	1 4	1 14	1 6 to 1 12	2 2 to 2 8	1 1	2 4	14	2 4
Rice or grain in the husk, per maund	10	1 4	10	1 7 6	15	1 12	12 (cutcha.)	1 12	14	1 2	8	1	7	1			8	1 1 to 1 8	10	1 6	10	1 2
Ghee, per maund	20	35	17	32	12 (cutcha.)	25	16	30	16	32	15	20	20	40			20	28 to 36	17 8	38 8	23	40
Mustard, per maund	9 4	12	6 8	10 4	6 10 6 (cutcha.)	10	6	9	2 4	3	7 10	9 3	8	10	16	26 to 27	10	11	7	11 8	6 8	10
Linseed, per maund	13	15	6 8	10 4	6 10 6 (cutcha.)	10	6	9	2 4	3	none	none	8	10					6	10	6	9
Common vegetables, per seer or per bundle	3	6	3	9	1 9	1 6	1 6	2 6	4	1	6 pie seer	9 pie seer	3 pie bdl.	3 pie bdl.				double price	from 3	to 9	3	9
Tobacco, per seer	2	3	2	2	1 9	1 6	1 6	2 6	2 6	4	1	2	1 3	2	2	5 4	2	2	9	1 3	9	1
Pulses - Arhur, per maund	2 8	3			1 8	2	1 6	2 8	1 9	2 8	1 12	2 4	2 8	4 6			1 14	3 2	1 2	1 14	1 4	2 8
Kalai, per maund	1 4	2 8													1 4	1 4					1	2 6
Khesari, per maund	10	1 4
Mosari, per maund	1	3	4½	9													1 1	1 14
Mungh, per maund	1 14	6 8	7½	2½													2 6	5
Sola or gram, per maund	3	3
Peas, per maund	12	1 4																	15	1 12	1 3	1 14
A suit of clothes, Dhootie and Chudder	1 4	1 8	2	2 8	3	3 8	1 8	2	1 2	1 12	1 4	1 10	1	1 8	1 2	1 10	12	1	1	1 4	1	1 4
Fish, per seer	1	2 6	3	4	1 6	2	1 6	2	1 3	2	1 3	2	1	2	4	50 p. ct. more	2	3 6	3	4	2	3
Bullock cart, each	3 8	7 8	15 to 30	20 to 40	10	12	10	14	8	10	6	8	8	16			8 to 9	12	7	9	8	10
Plough, including yearly repairs	1	1 8	1 10	1 12	1 12	2	1 1	1 4	2	2 8	12	1 4	10	1 8	13 6	13 6	12 to 1	1 12 to 1 14	1	1 12	1	1 4
Harrow	1	1 8	1 4	1 8	4	4	1 8	1 12	1 8	2	3	4	8	1	2 6	2 6			1	1 4	1	1 4
Kodali or mattock	10	14	12	1 4	1 2	1 12	1	1 4	3 seer p. Re.	2 seer p. Re.	14	1 4	8	1	6 to 8 As.	10	14 to 1	1 8	12	1 4	12	1 2
Brass pot, per seer of weight	12	1 4	13	1	1	14	10	14	14	1 2	11	14	1	1 8	1 4	2	14	1 to 1 2	1	1 2	15	1 2
Keep of a pair of bullocks, per month	2 8	5	10	15	5	6	6	9	2	3	5 10	10 4	3	7			3 8	7 8	4	6	3	6
Price of a pair of ploughing bullocks	20	32	10 to 40	16 to 60	20	30	20	30	8 to 16	10 to 20	25	40 to 50	16 to 40	40 to 80	10	20	12 to 30	20 to 40	14	30	16	36
Price of a milch cow	20	30	8 to 20	16 to 40	16	25	20	25	4 to 12	5 to 15	7	12 to 15	8	10 to 20	10	20	4 to 25	6 to 40	4	8	4	8

	Ranaghat, in Nuddea.		Hanskali, in Nuddea.		Hoogly.		Kishnagur.		Baraset.		Patna.		Gya.		Shahabad.		Tirhoot.		Midnapore.		Pubna.
	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.	Rates of 1855.	Rates of 1860.
	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.
Wages of labourer or workman, per day	2 6	3	2	2 6	2 3	3	as. 1 3 to 1 6	as. 2 to 2 6	as. 2 to 2 6	as. 3 to 4	1 6	2	as. 1 to 2	as. 1 to 2	1 3	2	1 6	4 6	6 to 7 as.	1 6 to 2	1 6 to 2	3 6
Hire of a cart, per day	6	8	4	6	12	1	as. 4 to 6	as. 6 to 8	as. 6 to 8	10	8	as. 9 to 12	8	as. 6 to 8	as. 8 to 10	4	4	5 to 8 as.	5 to 8 as.	16	25
Hire of a boat, per month	25	35	20	30	12	15	4	6	20	30			64	64			20	35	no answer
Price of coarse rice (not in the husk) used by the lower classes, per maund	14	2 4	12	2	1 2	2 6	1 5 9	2 9	1 8 6	1 10	1 4	1 11 6	1 1	1 14	1 5 4	2	1 4	10	1 14	12	1 6
Rice or grain in the husk, per maund	10	1 3	10 6	1	1	2 2	10 6	1 4 6	12	1 10	11	1	1 5	2 1	1	1 5 4	10 8	1	8	1 10	8 2
Ghee, per maund	17 10	40	16	32	20	32	18 10	23 5	20	40	18	21	12	22 8	11	26	11 8	20 to 25	25 to 32	15 8	21 10 8
Mustard, per maund	7	12	6 10	10	7 8	12	7 12	9 13	10	10 10 9	17	26	7 8	6	5	10	7	8	12	6 5	7 2
Linseed, per maund	6	11 8	6	9 4													7	9
Common vegetables, per seer or per bundle	3	9	3	1	3	3			6	6	2	1½	4	4	6	6	3	4	no great quantity of them	1	1
Tobacco, per seer	9	1	9	1	1	1 3	1 8	1 3	1 3	1 6	2	2	1 6	2 3	1 7	2 8	1 3	2	2 6	1	1 5
Pulses - Arhur, per maund	1 4	2 10	1	1 12	1 9	3 2			2 8	3 2	1 6 6	1 15	1 8	1 14	1 5 4	2	1 7	1 12
Kalai, per maund	1	2 4	14	2													1	5 4
Khesari, per maund											1 4	1 9					1
Mosari, per maund											1 4	1 6 6					1 5 4	2
Mungh, per maund
Sola or gram, per maund
Peas, per maund	1	2	1	1 8	1 2	1 13	2 2 6	2 14 6	1 8	2 8			1 8	1 14
A suit of clothes, Dhootie and Chudder	1	1 4	1	1 4	1 6	1 8	1	1 4	12	1	1	1	1 6	1 6	1 12	2 4	1	1 8			1 12
Fish, per seer	2	3	1 6	2	2 6	4 6	5 8 p. md.	5 14 p. md.	2 4½	4	2	2	1	1	6	1	8
Bullock cart, each	7 8	11	6	9	12	16	6 10	8 4	9	12	*85	95	*30	30	20	25	12	15	4	6 to 7	5 8
Plough, including yearly repairs	1	1 8	1	1 4	1 7	1 10	1 8	1 12	1	1 6	1	1	11	13	1	1 4	7	9	2	3	2 4
Harrow	1	1 8	1	1 4	3	5	1 12	2 4	12	1 8	1	1	6	8	8	12	4	6	not used in this district	3	3
Kodali or mattock	14	1 1	14	1 8	13	1 2	1	1 4	10	12	8	8	8	8	8	12	8	10	5 4	8	14
Brass pot, per seer of weight	1	1 4	1 2	1 4	1	1 2 6	11	1 1	1	1 4	13	1	1	2	1	1 3	1 1	1 6</

* Cart and pair of bullocks.

Appendix, No. 4.

ESTIMATE of the Average Out-turn per Beegah of Articles of Ordinary Cultivation.

	Jessore.		Burdwan.		Cutwa, in Burdwan.		Culina, in Burdwan.		Moorshedabad.		Bancoorah.		Mymensing.		24-Pergunnahs.		Santipore.		Hooghly.		Kishnagur.		Baraset.
	Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.
	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.
		Rs. a. p.						Rs. a.		Rs. a.	Mds. Srs.	Rs. a.		Rs. a.		Rs.		Rs. a. p.		Rs. a. p.	Bees* Arreest	Rs. a. p.
Rice, early -	16 mds.	14 - -	6 to 16 mds.	1 5 p. md.	6 mds.	20 per md.	5	11 -	9	20 4	13 20	10 11	4	3 8	{ Grain 6 mds. Straw 3 kns.	6 to 9 3	8	11 - -	6½ mds.	10 8 3	1 6	8 10 -	8 to 11	10 to 14
Rice, late -	20 "	20 - -	4 to 16 "	1 7 6 p. "	- -	2 2 "	6	15 -	10	20 -	15 -	15 -	8	8 -	{ Grains 7½ mds. Straw 3 kns.	7½ to 11½ 3	8	12 - -	5¼ "	9 - -	1½ -	8 10 -	7 to 9	12 to 16
Vetches and pulse	3 "	3 12 -	2 to 4 "	2 7 p. "	5 "	2 - "	3	5 -	8	10 -	1 -	2 10	1 20	{ from 8 a. { to 2 Rs. }	4 mds.	6	3 30 to 5 mds.	5 to 9 10 9	- -	- -	1½ to 2 mds.	2 8 to 3	5 to 6	10 to 12
Barley -	4 "	6 - -	1 to 2 "	1 15 p. "	4 "	1 - "	5	5 -	8	12 -	5 -	5 -	-	-	-	-	3 10	4 12 -	- -	- -	10 arrees	3 6 -	-	-
Oats -	not grown	- -	not grown	- -	4 "	1 2 "	5	8 12	-	not grown here	none.	-	-	-	-	-	no cultivation	- -	- -	- -	3½ mds.	7 - -	-	-
Wheat -	5 mds.	11 4 -	3 to 5 mds.	2 6 p. "	4 "	8 "	5	11 4	6	12 -	4 -	10 8	-	-	-	-	5	9 - -	- -	- -	10 arrees	8 - -	-	-
Tobacco -	5 "	33 2 -	- -	- -	2½ "	2 - "	6	30 -	8	32 -	-	scarcely any.	2	19 -	5 "	25	6	14 - -	- -	- -	3½ mds.	42 - -	6 to 8	20 to 25
Sugar-cane -	-	50 - -	10 to 30 "	2½ to 3 p. "	15 "	2 - "	18	41 to 42	1,000 stems	30 -	13 mds.	42 4	8	{ no clear answer }	6 "	30	5	12 8 -	200 mds.	25 - -	15 "	37 - -	10 to 12	25 to 30
Jute or hemp	6 "	18 12 -	{ 30 Srs. to 1 md. 10 srs. }	5 11 p. "	4½ "	1 8 "	6	21 to 42	13	26 -	{ no jute, hardly. Hemp 1 md. }	3 -	2½	4 -	5 "	15 3	4	10 - -	5 "	12 - -	5 "	10 - -	4 to 6	14 10 to 23
Mustard (Sursoo and Rai)	3 "	8 10 -	1 to 5 mds.	3 12 p. "	3 "	3 - "	2 20	8 -	3	9 -	1 35	4 14	1 md.	2 8	-	-	1 15 to 3	3 to 6	2 "	4 - -	1½ to 2½	3 2 to 6 4	3 to 5	9 to 15
Sola or gram	4 "	12 - -	1 to 3 "	2 12 p. "	3 "	1 8 "	3	7 8	7	17 8	1 -	2 10	-	-	-	-	5	12 8 -	- -	- -	1½ mds.	3 - -	-	-
Safflower	not grown	- -	- -	- -	- -	- -	-	not grown	-	13 Srs.	6 8	none.	-	-	-	-	no cultivation	- -	- -	- -	- -	- -	-	-
Indigo grown for seed	3 mds.	36 - -	1 to 3 "	8 p. "	3 "	5 - "	-	not grown	-	3½	{ from 3 to 20 Rs. }	2 -	16 -	-	-	-	2	14 - -	- -	- -	- -	- -	3 to 4	-
Mulberry	-	- -	4 to 10 "	1 8 p. "	- -	- -	-	not grown	-	2 bundles (from Joist to Agran) 15 mds.	44 -	none.	-	-	-	-	no cultivation	- -	- -	- -	- -	- -	-	-
Pottol, koomra, &c.	-	10 - -	1,000 in No.	19-8 p. 1,000 "	1,000 in No.	3 pie each	40	50 -	80	100 -	10 -	18 12	-	-	no acct. kept.	25 to 30	{ 20 to 30 400 in No.	40 to 70 12 8	200 in No.	10 - -	- -	- -	-	{ 6 to 22 p. beegah. }
Khira or cucumbers	4 "	20 - -	3,000 in "	4-p. 1,000 "	5,000 in "	1 pie for 4	300 in No.	9 -	50	100 -	none.	-	5	2 8	ditto	12 to 15	2,000 "	10 - -	2,400 "	10 - -	- -	- -	-	-
Flax	not grown	- -	3 to 7 mds.	35-p. md. "	2 mds.	4 - md.	6	15 -	6	33 -	none.	-	20 srs.	4 -	1½ mds.	6	2 to 3	6 to 9	2½ mds.	10 - -	5 mds.	25 - -	-	-
Potatoes	-	- -	16 to 30 "	1 12 p. "	- -	- -	40	30 -	14	42 -	none.	-	4 mds.	10 -	- -	- -	no cultivation	- -	25 "	25 - -	- -	- -	-	-

	Patna.		Behar.		Shahabad.		Tirhoot.		Chagdah, in Nuddea.		Ranaghaut, in Nuddea.		Hanskali, in Nuddea.		Bhangulpore.		Purneah.		Sonthal, Pergunnah.		Rajshahye.		Midnapore.		Pubna.
	Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.		Return per Beegah.
	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.	In Maunds.	In Money.
		Rs. a. p.		Rs. a. p.		Rs. a.				Rs. a. p.		Rs. a. p.		Rs. a. p.		Rs. a. p.		Rs. a. p.		Rs. s. p.		Rs. a. p.		Rs. a. p.		Rs. a. p.
Rice, early -	6 mds.	7 2 -	6 mds.	3 8 6	6	8 -	10 to 12	8 to 12	8 mds.	9 - -	6 mds.	7 2 -	8 mds.	8 - -	12 mds.	12 - -	10 to 11	5 to 9 10	4 mds.	3 9 -	10 mds.	5 - -	6 mds.	6 - -	5 mds.	6 - -
Rice, late -	6 to 10	6 to 10	7½ "	7 8 -	10	13 8	16 to 14	13 to 14	8 "	10 - -	8 "	10 - -	9 "	10 2 -	16 "	16 - -	13 to 15	7 8 to 13	12 20	15 10 -	10 "	4 - -	8 "	6 - -	4 30 "	6 12 6
Vetches and pulse	5 to 8	6 to 10	4 "	4 - -	5	10 8	6 to 10	9 to 12	1 20 to 3 30	3 9 to 3 12	2 to 3 "	3 12 to 4 8	5 to 7	7 8 to 10	8 "	8 - -	4 to 5	3 to 6 10	7 "	17 8 -	5 to 6 "	3 to 4	- -	4 "	4 - -
Barley	6 mds.	7 4 4	6 "	4 8 -	7	11 -	12 to 9	10 to 12	-	no cultivation	-	no cultivation	5 "	7 8 -	5 "	5 - -	4 to 7 20	3 to 5	-	-	6 "	3 - -	- -	5 "	4 - -
Oats	8 "	16 - -	-	- -	-	-	8 to 12	9 to 12	-	ditto	-	ditto	-	no cultivation	8 "	11 - -	9	9	-	-	6 "	3 - -	- -	-	-	-
Wheat	7 "	10 12 4	4 "	5 - -	6	13 -	6 to 8	12 to 12½	-	ditto	-	ditto	2 20	5 - -	10 "	15 - -	4 to 8	5 to 8	12 20	31 4 -	5 "	7 8 -	- -	4 "	5 8 -
Tobacco	7 "	21 - -	-	- -	-	-	12 to 16	32 to 36	7 to 8	18 to 20	4 mds.	8 - -	4 mds.	8 - -	8 "	32 - -	5 to 17 20	7 8 to 52 8	-	5 "	10 - -	- -	-	-	-	-
Sugar-cane	15 "	26 1 4	10 "	10 - -	20	17 4	10 to 12	20 to 24	4	10 - -	4 "	10 - -	5 "	10 - -	9 "	23 8 -	- -	- -	25	30 5 4	12½ "	25 - -	fluctuating	40 to 100	30 "	63 12 -
Jute or hemp	-	- -	-	- -	-	-	5 to 6	15 to 18	4	10 - -	3 "	6 12 -	2 20	7 - -	-	- -	- -	- -	-	-	4 - -	4 - -	- -	7 "	9 10 -	-
Mustard (Sursoo and Rai)	4 "	6 2 5	3 "	4 8 -	5	13 -	6 to 8	13 to 16	{ from 1 to 1 25 }	2 12 to 5 4 }	{ 1 15 to 2 5 srs. }	{ 3 1 6 to 4 14 }	2 to 3	5 to 8 4	3 to 6	7 8 to 12	5 20 to 6	12 to 12 8	4 20	11 4 -	3 "	4 to 6	2 to 3	4 to 6	5 "	8 12 -
Sola or gram	10 "	11 7 -	5 "	5 - -	6	12 -	6 to 10	9 8 to 13	2	5 - -	2 20 mds.	6 4 -	5 "	11 4 -	12 mds.	18 - -	3 to 5 20	4 8 to 6 8	9	22 8 -	5 "	5 - -	- -	- -	3 "	4 2 -
Safflower	5½ "	24 - -	15 seers.	6 - -	-	-	1 to 1½	20	-	no cultivation	-	no cultivation	-	no cultivation	-	10	6 10 -	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-
Indigo grown for seed	-	- -	-	- -	-	-	-	-	2	14	2 mds.	12 - -	2 20	15 - -	{ 1 20 to 3 mds. }	12 12 to 40 Rs. }	5	50	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-
Mulberry	-	- -	-	- -	-	-	-	-	-	no cultivation	-	no cultivation	-	no cultivation	-	-	-	-	-	-	40 "	25 - -	- -	20 - -	28 bundles	28 - -
Pottol, koomra, &c.	30 "	30 - -	-	- -	-	-	-	12 to 16	{ 20 to 30 400 in No.	50 to 60 12 8	20 to 30 200 in No.	40 to 70 12 8	20 to 30 2,000 in No.	40 to 60 12 8	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	10 - -	500 mds.	7 13 -
Khira or cucumbers	10,000+ "	15 10 -	-	- -	-	-	-	12 to 14	2,000 "	15 - -	2,000 "	10 - -	2,000 "	7 - -	-	-	11	5 8	-	-	-	-	-	-	600 "	9 6 -
Flax	-	- -	7½ seers.	4 6	-	-	5 to 6	15 to 16	2 to 3 mds.	7 to 10	2 to 3 mds.	6 to 8	2½ to 3½	6 10	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	6 "	8 10 -
Potatoes	6 "	12 12 9	8 mds.	4 - -	30	30 -	20 to 25	16 to 16½	15 to 20	40 to 60	-	no cultivation	-	no cultivation	-	-	37 26	25	-	-	4 mds.	6 - -	- -	-	6 "	8 10 -

* A Bees is equal to 4 Maunds.

† An Arrees is equal to 6½ Seers.

‡ Sic. in orig.

Appendix, No. 5.

STATEMENT showing the Instances in which Land has been Sold under Decrees of Courts, within the last Three Years, in Six Districts.

Denomination of Courts.	Description of Right under which the Land was Held.	Sudder Jumma.	Amount Sold for.	Denomination of Courts.	Description of Right under which the Land was Held.	Sudder Jumma.	Amount Sold for.
NUDDEA :				NUDDEA—continued.
Principal Sudder Ameen's Court	Lakhraj - - -	- - -	45 - -	Sudder Moon-siff's Court -	Jotejumma - - -	- 14 6	5 4 -
	Jotejumma - - -	not known -	150 - -		Ditto - - -	4 - -	11 10 -
	Lakhraj - - -	- - -	20 - -		Mowroosee - - -	2 8 -	0 12 -
	Jotejumma - - -	- 3 3	2 - -		Ditto - - -	1 - -	1 9 -
	Lakhraj - - -	- - -	14 - -		Jotejumma - - -	2 10 9	25 - -
	Lakhraj - - -	- - -	8 - -		Ditto - - -	3 8 -	18 8 -
	Jotejumma - - -	not known	160 - -		Ditto - - -	1 - -	20 - -
	Lakhraj - - -	- - -	301 - -		Ditto - - -	- 14 -	75 - -
	Jotejumma - - -	564 5 2	225 - -		Ditto - - -	1 - -	8 8 -
	Putnee - - -	1,300 - -	5,800 - -		Ditto - - -	- 8 -	14 8 -
	Lakhraj - - -	- - -	405 - -		Ditto - - -	1 - -	15 - -
	Talookdaree - - -	3,293 6 1	1,610 - -		Ditto - - -	- 11 -	44 8 -
	Ditto - - -	934 7 6	650 - -	Court of the Moonsiff of Sooksagur -	Lakhraj - - -	- - -	22 - -
	Jotejumma - - -	1 - -	34 8 -		Mowroosee - - -	104 - -	50 8 -
	Talookdaree - - -	1,046 13 4	580 - -		Lakhraj - - -	- - -	139 - -
	Ditto - - -	81 11 7	275 - -		Jotejumma - - -	not known -	100 - -
	Ditto - - -	97 6 6	310 - -		Ditto - - -	- ditto -	30 - -
	Jotejumma - - -	1 8 -	1 8 -		Ditto - - -	1 4 -	6 12 -
	Tulkur - - -	not known -	2,005 - -		Ditto - - -	not known -	11 - -
	Jotejumma - - -	28 - -	31 - -		Ditto - - -	- ditto -	22 4 -
	Lakhraj - - -	- - -	13 - -		Ditto, none - - -	9 15 -	82 4 -
	Talookdaree - - -	1,857 12 -	5,387 10 -		Ditto - - -	not known -	48 8 -
	Ditto - - -	371 10 7	3,100 - -	Court of the Moonsiff of Meherpore -	Ditto - - -	- ditto -	70 - -
	Ditto - - -	1,404 13 5	7,300 - -		Ditto - - -	- ditto -	41 8 -
	Lakhraj - - -	- - -	251 - -		Ditto - - -	- ditto -	293 8 -
	Ditto - - -	- - -	221 - -		Ditto - - -	- ditto -	251 - -
	Talookdaree - - -	not known -	2,000 - -		Ditto - - -	- ditto -	40 - -
	Ditto - - -	- ditto -	2,000 - -		Under-tenant - - -	not known -	17 5 6
	Ditto - - -	- ditto -	1,500 - -		Ditto - - -	8 11 2	10 8 -
	Ditto - - -	158 2 4	1,225 - -		Putnee - - -	not known -	10 - -
	Jotejumma - - -	101 4 2	70 - -		Lakhraj - - -	- - -	19 - -
	Lakhraj - - -	11 - 6	570 - -		Jotejumma - - -	10 6 2	8 - -
Sudder Ameen's Court	Ditto - - -	- - -	709 8 -		Under-tenant - - -	31 - -	68 - -
	Ditto - - -	- - -	719 - -	Court of the Moonsiff of Dowlutgunge	Mowroosee - - -	1 - -	3 - -
	Ditto - - -	- - -	35 4 -		Lakhraj - - -	- - -	18 - -
	Mowroosee - - -	483 12 6	425 - -		Jotejumma - - -	22 - -	162 - -
	Ditto - - -	32 - -	1,006 - -		Lakhraj - - -	- - -	13 - -
	Jotejumma - - -	1 - -	1 4 -		Jotejumma - - -	94 4 9½	20 - -
	Zemindaree - - -	1,145 3 -½	875 - -		Lakhraj - - -	- - -	9 14 -
	Jotejumma - - -	131 4 7½	505 - -		Ditto - - -	- - -	189 6 -
	Ditto - - -	137 6 -½	7 8 -		Mowroosee - - -	1 8 -	20 - -
	Lakhraj - - -	- - -	151 - -		Jotejumma - - -	12 3 2½	30 - -
	Jotejumma - - -	8 - -	12 - -		Mowroosee - - -	2 4 3	19 12 -
Sudder Moonsiff's Court	Mowroosee - - -	8 - -	10 - -	Court of the Moonsiff of Hanskhali -	Ditto - - -	3 12 -	20 - -
	Ditto - - -	2 13 5	34 8 -		Ditto - - -	- 8 -	50 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 6 -	7 8 -		Lakhraj - - -	- - -	93 8 -
	Jotejumma - - -	1 - -	17 - -		Jotejumma - - -	5 6 -	10 - -
	Mowroosee - - -	- 6 -	6 - -		Ditto - - -	12 - -	58 - -
	Ditto - - -	2 8 -	8 - -		Ditto - - -	4 - -	29 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 10 8	16 - -		Mowroosee - - -	- 8 -	35 - -
	Lakhraj - - -	- - -	7 - -		Lakhraj - - -	- - -	140 - -
	Ditto - - -	- - -	52 8 -		Jotejumma - - -	1 - -	12 - -
	Ditto - - -	- - -	200 - -		Ditto - - -	42 10 1	101 8 -
	Mowroosee - - -	1 - -	10 - -	Court of the Moonsiff of Kaguspokhurea	Lakhraj - - -	- - -	36 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 6 -	2 - -		Lakhraj - - -	- - -	20 2 -
	Ditto - - -	- 14 -	14 8 -		Ditto - - -	- - -	86 - -
	Jotejumma - - -	1 - -	20 8 -		Ditto - - -	- - -	14 12 -
	Ditto - - -	- 12 -	6 - -		Jotejumma - - -	70 14 9½	50 - -
	Mowroosee - - -	- 11 -	9 - -		Lakhraj - - -	- - -	200 - -
	Jotejumma - - -	2 8 -	81 - -		Ditto - - -	- - -	23 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 2 9	39 - -		Ditto - - -	- - -	503 12 -
	Mowroosee - - -	1 - -	8 - -		Zemindaree - - -	9 2 -	136 - -
	Lakhraj - - -	- - -	45 - -		Lakhraj - - -	- - -	102 - -
	Jotejumma - - -	- 12 -	25 - -		Jotejumma - - -	26 8 6½	26 - -
	Ditto - - -	1 - -	7 8 -		Ditto - - -	30 8 -	35 - -
	Ditto - - -	1 - -	30 - -		Zemindaree - - -	29 2 -	60 - -
	Ditto - - -	1 8 -	1 2 -		Jotejumma - - -	22 8 -	200 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 13 3	22 - -		Ditto - - -	- - -	15 - -
	Ditto - - -	1 4 -	11 - -		Mowroosee - - -	15 9 3	52 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 9 -	5 - -		Jotejumma - - -	19 - -	22 10 -
	Mowroosee - - -	1 10 -	7 - -		Ditto - - -	16 - -	20 - -
	Jotejumma - - -	1 8 -	24 8 -		Ditto - - -	57 4 9	86 - -
	Mowroosee - - -	1 1 -½	1 - -		Ditto - - -	39 - -	30 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 4 -	- 4 -

Denomination of Courts.	Description of Right under which the Land was Held.	Sudder Jumma.	Amount Sold for.	Denomination of Courts.	Description of Right under which the Land was Held.	Sudder Jumma.	Amount Sold for.
NUDDEA—continued.				JESSORE—continued.
Court of the Moonsiff of Panghatta	Lakhraj	- - -	177 8 -	Putni	- - -	5 2 -	2 - -
	Ditto	- - -	112 - -		Ditto	214 - -	2,755 - -
	Talookdaree	9 10 9	175 - -		Ditto	192 7 -	2,225 - -
	Jotejumma	17 5 3	152 - -		Ditto	430 2 4	411 - -
	Lakhraj	- - -	21 - -		Ganti jumma	292 14 -	110 - -
	Ditto	- - -	90 - -		Ditto	28 - -	695 - -
	Jotejumma	30 - -	181 - -		Ditto	46 5 3	120 - -
	Lakhraj	- - -	43 - -		Ditto	28 10 6	15 - -
	Jotejumma	24 8 10½	51 - -		Ditto	33 - -	15 - -
	Ditto	43 - -	154 - -		Ditto	8 4 -	2 - -
Court of the Moonsiff of Santipore	Ditto	23 1 7	40 - -	Ditto	- - -	100 4 -	505 - -
	Ditto	1 10 6	5 - -		Ditto	4 13 -	5 - -
	Lakhraj	- - -	21 - -		Ditto	632 7 3	1,910 - -
	Ditto	- - -	53 - -		Ditto	9 - -	75 - -
	Jotejumma	1 - -	17 8 -		Ditto	290 - -	500 - -
	Ditto	not known -	7 2 -		Dur Putni	125 - -	411 - -
	Ditto	1 3 6	20 - -		Ditto	1,845 5 2	7,505 - -
	Ditto	1 4 -	20 - -	Mowroosee jumma	- - -	53 - -	400 - -
	Ditto	not known -	39 - -		Ditto	29 - -	400 - -
	Ditto	- ditto -	18 - -		Ditto	771 - -	1,050 - -
Court of the Moonsiff of Santipore	Mowroosee	3 12 -	7 - -		Jotejumma	47 - 8	250 - -
	Lakhraj	- - -	35 - -		Ditto	1 11 5	16 - -
	Zemindari	12 9½	12 - -		Ditto	7 - 6	2 - -
	Under-tenant	- 8 -	50 - -		Ditto	43 4 7	20 - -
	Lakhraj	- - -	43 - -		Ditto	2 15 7	1 - -
	Jotejumma	2 9 -	82 - -		Under-tenant jumma*	10 - -	3 - -
	Ditto	- 7 6	5 8 -		Ditto	8 - -	2 - -
	Ditto	1 - -	2 10 -		Ditto	3 8 -	1 - -
	Ditto	- 10 -	26 - -		Ditto	40 15 4	160 - -
	Lakhraj	- - -	444 8 -		Ditto	18 - -	70 - -
Principal Sudder Ameen's Court	Jotejumma	not known -	3 - -	Ditto	- - -	5 - -	51 - -
	Ditto	- ditto -	40 - -		Ditto	6 - -	1 - -
	Lakhraj	- - -	16 8 -		Ditto	7 8 -	10 - -
	Jotejumma	- 3 3	50 - -		Ditto	27 - -	50 - -
	Ditto	1 4 -	10 - -		Ditto	10 2 4	40 - -
	Ditto	1 8 -	13 - -		Ditto	- 12 -	1 4 -
	Lakhraj	- - -	130 - -		Ditto	6 6 2½	30 - -
	Jotejamma	4 4 -	172 - -		Ditto	7 8 -	3 - -
	Ditto	not known -	32 - -	Lakhraj	- - -	- - -	50 - -
	Lakhraj	- - -	48 - -		Ditto	- - -	5 - -
JESSORE:	Jotejumma	35 3 9	103 - -		Ditto	- - -	60 - -
	Ditto	7 14 7½	105 - -		Ditto	- - -	2 - -
	Lakhraj	- - -	14 - -		Ditto	- - -	28 - -
	Ditto	- - -	42 - -		Ditto	- - -	20 - -
	Jotejumma	2 - -	37 - -		Ditto	- - -	20 - -
	Ditto	1 8 -	40 8 -		Ditto	- - -	12 - -
	Ditto	1 - -	34 - -		Ditto	- - -	9 - -
	Ditto	4 1 -	37 4 -		Ditto	- - -	6 - -
	Ditto	1 - -	17 8 -		Ditto	- - -	7 - -
	Ditto	not known -	7 2 -		Ditto	- - -	5 - -
Judge's Court-	Ditto	1 3 6	20 - -	Ditto	- - -	- - -	10 - -
	Ditto	1 4 -	20 - -		Ditto	- - -	40 - -
	Ditto	not known -	39 - -		Ditto	- - -	61 - -
	Ditto	- ditto -	18 - -		Ditto	- - -	3 - -
	Mowroosee	2 8 -	7 - -		Ditto	- - -	1 - -
	Jotejumma	1 4 -	7 - -		Ditto	- - -	3 - -
	Lakhraj	- - -	35 - -		Ditto	- - -	3 - -
					Ditto	- - -	6 - -
					Ditto	- - -	5 - -
					Ditto	- - -	1 - -
Principal Sudder Ameen's Court	Mowroosee jumma	not known -	- 4 -		Ditto	- - -	1 - -
	Ganti jumma	16 8 -	41 - -		Ditto	- - -	1 - -
	Ditto	4 - -	6 - -		Ditto	- - -	1 - -
	Lakhraj	- - -	511 - -		Ditto	- - -	1 - -
	Ditto	- - -	63 - -		Ditto	- - -	1 - -
	Ditto	- - -	26 - -		Ditto	- - -	1 - -
	Ditto	- - -	11 - -		Ditto	- - -	1 - -
	Ditto	- - -	85 - -		Ditto	- - -	1 - -
	Ditto	- - -	4 - -		Ditto	- - -	1 - -
	Ditto	- - -	- - -		Ditto	- - -	1 - -
Principal Sudder Ameen's Court	Zemindaree	118 7 6	345 - -	Ditto	- - -	- - -	1 - -
	Ditto	64 - 6	300 - -		Ditto	- - -	5 - -
	Ditto	13 4 3	429 - -		Ditto	- - -	3 - -
	Ditto	6 - 6	205 - -		Ditto	- - -	8 - -
	Ditto	665 10 -	5,110 - -		Ditto	- - -	5 - -
	Ditto	392 10 6	2,310 - -		Ditto	- - -	1 - -
	Ditto	76 5 6	810 - -		Ditto	- - -	1 - -
	Ditto	638 12 2	1,805 - -		Ditto	- - -	15 - -
	Ditto	1,282 8 -	2,400 - -		Ditto	- - -	4 - -
	Ditto	8,647 13 6	17,100 - -		Ditto	- - -	5 - -
Principal Sudder Ameen's Court	Ditto	285 2 6	1,400 - -	Ditto	- - -	- - -	6 - -
	Ditto	869 9 9	1,100 - -		Ditto	- - -	5 - -
	Ditto	4 11 1	1,600 - -		Ditto	- - -	5 - -
	Talookdaree	42 3 10	3,865 - -		Ditto	- - -	5 - -
	Ditto	60 2 -½	750 - -		Ditto	- - -	10 - -
	Putni	1,066 10 -	8,900 - -		Ditto	- - -	10 - -
	Ditto	295 13 1	56 - -		Ditto	- - -	15 - -

* Note.—By the term "under-tenant" is meant the person who holds under the gantidar, jotedar, or tenant-proprietor. The under-tenant is known by the various denominations of koljama, koorfa, or shikmi.

Denomination of Courts.	Description of Right under which the Land was Held.	Sudder Jumma.	Amount Sold for.	Denomination of Courts.	Description of Right under which the Land was Held.	Sudder Jumma.	Amount Sold for.
JESSORE—continued.				JESSORE—continued.
Sudder Ameen's Court	Talookdari	42 14 -	40 - -	Sudder Moon-siff's Court	Under-tenant jumma	- 14 -	1 - -
	Mowroosee jumma	396 10 - ¹ / ₂	525 - -		Ditto	- 14 -	1 - -
	Ditto	43 - 10	300 - -		Ditto	1 8 -	1 - -
	Ganti jumma	25 15 2	810 - -		Ditto	2 10 -	15 - -
	Ditto	12 - -	12 - -		Ditto	1 6 -	8 - -
	Ditto	550 9 -	1,750 - -		Ditto	- 5 6	5 - -
	Ditto	457 - -	265 - -		Ditto	8 - -	40 - -
	Ditto	156 9 5	1,322 - -		Ditto	3 - -	15 - -
	Ditto	29 - -	10 - -		Ditto	1 - -	1 - -
	Ditto	17 5 3	75 - -		Ditto	- 5 -	1 - -
	Ditto	130 - -	2,005 - -		Ditto	1 - -	1 - -
	Jotejumma	13 13 10	126 - -		Ditto	- 10 4 ¹ / ₂	12 - -
	Ditto	70 - -	430 - -		Ditto	2 8 -	3 - -
	Ditto	10 - -	15 - -		Ditto	1 5 3	47 - -
	Ditto	84 10 2	220 - -		Ditto	1 10 9	not known.
	Ditto	25 3 1	10 - -		Ditto	2 2 9	- ditto.
	Ditto	43 13 7	105 - -		Ditto	3 10 9	- ditto.
	Ditto	146 6 5	10 - -		Ditto	- 8 3 ¹ / ₂	2 - -
	Ditto	53 13 -	6 - -		Ditto	- 8 3 ¹ / ₂	3 - -
	Under-tenant jumma	2 12 -	16 - -		Ditto	- 10 -	2 - -
	Ditto	2 2 -	8 - -		Ditto	1 - -	10 - -
	Ditto	1 8 -	- 4 -		Ditto	1 - -	44 - -
	Ditto	2 8 -	- 4 -		Ditto	7 8 -	25 - -
	Ditto	3 4 -	1 - -		Ditto	1 9 -	1 - -
	Ditto	1 4 -	1 - -		Ditto	5 8 -	1 - -
	Lakhraj	- - -	295 - -		Ditto	1 1 -	1 - -
	Ditto	- - -	1,125 - -		Ditto	2 6 -	2 - -
Sudder Moon-siff's Court	Talookdari	10 4 1 ¹ / ₂	31 - -	Court of the Moonsiff of Jhenidah	Ditto	1 12 -	42 - -
	Mowroosee jumma	29 - -	2 - -		Ditto	1 5 2	39 - -
	Ditto	29 - -	25 - -		Ditto	1 - -	3 4 -
	Ditto	7 - -	22 - -		Ditto	4 6 -	15 - -
	Ditto	7 3 8 ¹ / ₂	7 - -		Ditto	2 8 -	9 - -
	Ditto	14 - -	14 - -		Ditto	1 - -	2 8 -
	Ganti jumma	22 1 3	62 - -		Lakhraj	- - -	15 - -
	Ditto	21 5 2	175 - -		Ditto	- - -	15 - -
	Ditto	21 14 3	31 - -	Court of the Moonsiff of Lohagurra	Zemindaree	10 4 -	31 - -
	Ditto	194 1 6	350 - -		Ditto	44 10 -	1,001 - -
	Ditto	37 7 5 ¹ / ₂	87 - -		Talookdaree	14 8 -	32 - -
	Ditto	33 4 5	106 - -		Under-tenant jumma	3 12 - ¹ / ₄	25 - -
	Ditto	23 3 -	375 - -		Ditto	26 10 4	1 - -
	Ditto	80 - -	225 - -		Ditto	18 8 -	- 8 -
	Ditto	15 13 7	543 - -		Ditto	3 - -	20 - -
	Jotejumma	5 5 4	120 - -		Ditto	19 13 6	30 - -
	Ditto	19 3 2	106 - -		Ditto	2 6 1 ¹ / ₂	5 - -
	Ditto	19 3 2	65 - -		Ditto	1 5 -	4 - -
	Ditto	32 4 2	25 - -		Ditto	3 8 -	10 - -
	Ditto	13 7 3	26 - -		Ditto	9 8 -	10 - -
	Ditto	4 7 9	4 - -		Ditto	4 15 3 ¹ / ₂	60 - -
	Ditto	7 4 6	6 - -		Ditto	9 2 -	26 - -
	Ditto	5 5 3	70 - -		Ditto	26 2 1	76 - -
	Ditto	10 13 3	36 - -		Ditto	13 3 -	13 8 -
	Ditto	69 3 3	15 - -		Ditto	33 1 1 ¹ / ₂	25 - -
	Ditto	12 12 -	2 - -		Ditto	18 6 8 ¹ / ₂	13 - -
	Ditto	2 6 9	2 - -		Ditto	5 13 6	10 - -
	Ditto	2 6 9	2 - -		Ditto	3 12 -	4 - -
	Ditto	6 13 7	1 - -		Ditto	10 5 -	61 - -
	Ditto	11 3 9	11 - -		Ditto	7 10 10	50 - -
	Ditto	36 13 4	137 - -		Ditto	27 13 1	71 - -
	Ditto	17 12 -	11 - -		Ditto	5 4 -	40 - -
	Ditto	12 12 9	51 - -		Ditto	25 8 -	31 - -
	Ditto	3 3 -	36 - -		Ditto	47 4 -	35 - -
	Ditto	4 11 8	20 - -		Ditto	26 - -	50 - -
	Ditto	5 5 -	26 - -		Ditto	68 12 5 ¹ / ₂	25 - -
	Ditto	2 10 7	2 - -		Ditto	15 - -	26 - -
	Ditto	2 2 1	2 - -		Ditto	7 8 3 ¹ / ₂	43 - -
	Ditto	7 - -	17 - -		Ditto	11 - -	19 - -
	Ditto	20 8 -	107 - -		Ditto	11 4 -	3 - -
	Ditto	10 10 7	90 - -		Lakhraj	- - -	50 - -
	Ditto	6 6 6	80 - -		Ditto	- - -	80 - -
Sudder Moon-siff's Court	Under-tenant jumma	1 4 -	1 - -	Court of the Moonsiff of Lohagurra	Jotejumma	20 - -	35 - -
	Ditto	1 7 4	9 - -		Ditto	2 11 -	3 - -
	Ditto	10 - -	17 - -		Ditto	6 - -	92 - -
	Ditto	2 2 -	2 - -		Ditto	9 - -	20 - -
	Ditto	5 - -	4 - -		Ditto	7 5 4	73 - -
	Ditto	1 - -	20 - -		Ditto	18 - -	108 - -
	Ditto	- 13 -	1 - -		Under-tenant jumma	1 4 -	15 - -
	Ditto	- 8 -	1 - -		Ditto	1 - -	10 - -
	Ditto	2 - -	9 - -		Ditto	6 7 -	10 - -
	Ditto	7 5 -	13 - -		Ditto	7 11 -	11 - -
	Ditto	1 4 -	3 - -		Ditto	4 - -	5 - -
	Ditto	3 5 3	16 - -		Ditto	9 8 -	40 - -
	Ditto	1 10 -	1 - -		Ditto	1 13 -	35 - -
	Ditto	5 - -	1 - -		Ditto	3 - -	81 - -
	Ditto	1 1 -	1 - -		Ditto	2 2 -	35 - -
	Ditto	- 8 -	1 - -		Ditto	6 6 4	26 - -
	Ditto	- 12 -	2 - -		Ditto	4 - -	20 - -
	Ditto	1 - -	1 - -		Ditto	2 - -	8 - -
	Ditto	- 3 -	1 - -

Denomination of Courts.	Description of Right under which the Land was Held.	Sudder Jumma.	Amount Sold for.	Denomination of Courts.	Description of Right under which the Land was Held.	Sudder Jumma.	Amount Sold for.
JESSORE—continued.				JESSORE—continued.
Court of the Moonsiff of Commercolly	Jotejumma - - -	60 1 - 4	150 - -	Court of the Moonsiff of Singhea	Ganti jumma - - -	24 6 3 1/2	3 - -
	Ditto - - -	4 4 - -	14 - -		Ditto - - -	34 8 4	36 - -
	Ditto - - -	4 4 - -	16 - -		Ditto - - -	2 2 1	4 - -
	Ditto - - -	61 15 - -	75 - -		Ditto - - -	10 10 6	1 - -
	Ditto - - -	81 15 - -	50 - -		Ditto - - -	3 8 - -	2 - -
	Ditto - - -	26 6 - -	35 - -		Ditto - - -	30 - - -	5 - -
	Ditto - - -	26 6 - -	35 - -		Ditto - - -	12 - - -	12 - -
	Ditto - - -	6 - - -	50 - -		Ditto - - -	2 - - -	2 - -
	Under-tenant jumma	1 12 - -	1 - -		Ditto - - -	17 10 - -	55 - -
	Ditto - - -	2 12 - -	6 - -		Ditto - - -	7 - - -	15 - -
	Ditto - - -	32 13 - -	67 - -		Ditto - - -	1 5 1	1 - -
	Ditto - - -	7 1 6	12 - -		Ditto - - -	1 6 1	1 - -
	Ganti jumma - - -	13 5 3 1/2	12 - -		Ditto - - -	32 6 4 1/2	12 - -
	Ditto - - -	24 - - -	22 - -		Ditto - - -	1 12 - -	10 - -
Court of the Moonsiff of Trimohani	Ditto - - -	18 5 4	20 - -	Court of the Moonsiff of Singhea	Ditto - - -	10 8 - -	65 - -
	Ditto - - -	80 - - -	225 - -		Ditto - - -	2 8 - -	20 - -
	Ditto - - -	9 1 7	51 - -		Ditto - - -	1 14 - -	4 - -
	Ditto - - -	6 10 6	60 - -		Ditto - - -	10 8 6	60 - -
	Under-tenant jumma	4 12 9 1/2	4 - -		Ditto - - -	25 9 4	115 - -
	Ditto - - -	2 8 - -	5 12 - -		Ditto - - -	60 15 2	26 - -
	Ditto - - -	57 13 3 1/2	50 - -		Ditto - - -	2 4 1 1/2	17 - -
	Ditto - - -	19 - - -	5 - -		Ditto - - -	2 4 1 1/2	5 - -
	Ditto - - -	14 8 - -	8 - -		Ditto - - -	16 3 - -	76 - -
	Ditto - - -	7 - - -	15 - -		Ditto - - -	16 3 - -	66 - -
	Ditto - - -	19 12 1	20 - -		Ditto - - -	50 5 1 1/2	82 - -
	Ditto - - -	174 9 11	202 - -		Ditto - - -	38 7 6 1/2	82 - -
	Ditto - - -	20 8 - -	12 - -		Ditto - - -	2 - - -	26 - -
	Ditto - - -	8 - - -	17 - -		Ditto - - -	1 8 - -	13 - -
Lakhranj	Ditto - - -	11 4 - -	30 - -	Court of the Moonsiff of Singhea	Ditto - - -	1 10 - -	38 - -
	Ditto - - -	1 5 - -	1 - -		Ditto - - -	4 8 3 1/2	5 - -
	Ditto - - -	4 4 3	3 - -		Ditto - - -	21 6 - -	40 - -
	Ditto - - -	3 3 2	3 - -		Under-tenant jumma	18 13 6	3 - -
	Ditto - - -	11 2 3 1/2	17 - -		Ditto - - -	4 4 - -	3 - -
	Ditto - - -	3 4 - -	22 - -		Ditto - - -	4 4 - -	3 - -
	Ditto - - -	5 13 10	5 - -		Ditto - - -	6 8 - -	3 - -
	Ditto - - -	- - -	5 - -		Ditto - - -	2 - - -	20 - -
	Ditto - - -	- - -	5 - -		Ditto - - -	6 - - -	1 - -
	Ditto - - -	- - -	13 - -		Ditto - - -	3 4 - -	1 - -
	Ditto - - -	- - -	1 - -		Ditto - - -	4 - - -	50 - -
	Ditto - - -	- - -	14 - -		Ditto - - -	14 - - -	3 - -
	Ditto - - -	- - -	1 - -		Ditto - - -	6 - - -	5 - -
	Ditto - - -	- - -	5 8 - -		Ditto - - -	4 12 9 1/2	3 - -
Fala Moonsiff's Court	Ditto - - -	- - -	5 8 - -	Court of the Moonsiff of Singhea	Ditto - - -	3 12 - -	1 - -
	Ditto - - -	- - -	1 - -		Ditto - - -	14 10 9	50 - -
	Ditto - - -	- - -	5 8 - -		Ditto - - -	4 14 - -	6 - -
	Ditto - - -	- - -	11 - -		Ditto - - -	16 - - -	6 - -
	Ditto - - -	- - -	5 - -		Ditto - - -	9 14 - -	11 - -
	Ganti jumma - - -	168 3 6 1/2	300 - -		Ditto - - -	7 7 6	7 - -
	Ditto - - -	20 - - -	42 - -		Ditto - - -	8 8 3 1/2	106 - -
	Jotejumma - - -	3 - - -	4 - -		Ditto - - -	5 5 3 1/2	37 - -
	Ditto - - -	1 8 - -	2 - -		Ditto - - -	8 - - -	5 - -
	Ditto - - -	2 - - -	5 4 - -		Ditto - - -	10 - - -	31 - -
	Ditto - - -	3 12 - -	5 - -		Ditto - - -	5 9 4	31 - -
	Ditto - - -	5 - - -	8 - -		Ditto - - -	39 8 - -	12 - -
	Ditto - - -	3 12 - -	5 - -		Ditto - - -	4 8 - -	9 - -
	Ditto - - -	3 12 - -	8 - -		Ditto - - -	27 12 5	117 - -
Noabad Moonsiff's Court	Under-tenant jumma	5 1 - 4	17 - -	Court of the Moonsiff of Singhea	Ditto - - -	1 4 - -	3 - -
	Ditto - - -	22 7 4	72 - -		Ditto - - -	2 - - -	3 - -
	Ditto - - -	13 11 5	36 - -		Ditto - - -	5 - - -	11 - -
	Ditto - - -	12 6 7	25 - -		Ditto - - -	10 10 5	9 - -
	Ditto - - -	10 2 - -	13 - -		Ditto - - -	15 - - -	11 - -
	Ditto - - -	8 - - -	65 - -		Ditto - - -	5 14 - -	75 - -
	Ditto - - -	18 - 7	80 - -		Ditto - - -	12 - - -	53 - -
	Ditto - - -	6 4 10	6 - -		Ditto - - -	9 9 - -	5 - -
	Lakhranj - - -	- - -	60 2 - -		Ditto - - -	2 - - -	30 - -
	Ditto - - -	- - -	230 - -		Ditto - - -	2 - - -	31 - -
	Mowroosee jumma - -	251 4 - -	100 - -		Ditto - - -	17 8 - -	9 - -
	Ganti jumma - - -	10 10 4 1/2	13 - -		Ditto - - -	30 - - -	13 - -
	Ditto - - -	437 8 - -	150 - -		Ditto - - -	11 - - -	7 - -
	Jotejumma - - -	12 - - -	7 - -		Ditto - - -	1 10 - -	3 - -
	Under-tenant jumma	5 4 6	10 - -		Ditto - - -	24 13 6	9 - -
Court of the Moonsiff of Singhea	Ditto - - -	5 - - -	8 - -	Court of the Moonsiff of Singhea	Ditto - - -	1 9 3 1/2	1 8 - -
	Ditto - - -	5 7 8	8 - -		Ditto - - -	1 9 3 1/2	2 - -
	Ditto - - -	1 - - -	9 - -		Ditto - - -	2 8 - -	55 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 8 - -	6 - -		Ditto - - -	10 - - -	10 - -
	Ditto - - -	1 - - -	4 - -		Lakhranj - - -	- - -	135 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 12 - -	3 - -		Ditto - - -	- - -	17 - -
	Ditto - - -	6 8 - -	2 - -	Court of the Moonsiff of Singhea	Jotejumma - - -	37 5 1 1/2	260 - -
	Ditto - - -	2 8 - -	2 - -		Ditto - - -	78 12 - -	55 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 14 - -	38 - -		Ditto - - -	25 - - -	151 - -
	Ganti jumma - - -	64 9 2	116 - -		Ditto - - -	30 - - -	33 - -
	Ditto - - -	17 6 1 1/2	10 - -		Ditto - - -	22 - - -	34 - -
	Ditto - - -	20 6 6	26 - -		Ditto - - -	34 12 - -	43 - -
	Ditto - - -	1 7 - -	20 - -		Ditto - - -	30 8 - -	210 - -
	Ditto - - -	53 12 - -	5 - -		Ditto - - -	25 12 10	107 - -
	Ditto - - -	43 5 2	21 - -		Ditto - - -	80 12 7	1 - -
					Ditto - - -	115 - - -	80 - -
					Under-tenant jumma	7 7 - -	20 - -
					Ditto - - -	16 14 3 1/2	46 - -
					Ditto - - -	19 8 - -	11 - -

THE INDIGO COMMISSION.

297

Denomination of Courts.	Description of Right under which the Land was Held.	Sudder Jumma	Amount Sold for	Denomination of Courts.	Description of Right under which the Land was Held.	Sudder Jumma.	Amount Sold for
JESSORE—continued.				JESSORE—continued.
	Under-tenant jumma	13 6 -	14 - -		Under-tenant jumma	11 3 2	14 - -
	Ditto	8 3 4½	70 - -		Ditto	2 7 6½	4 - -
	Ditto	4 5 -	47 - -		Ditto	1 12 -	16 - -
	Ditto	10 13 11	50 - -		Ditto	2 - -	5 - -
	Ditto	12 - -	21 - -		Ditto	5 8 -	21 - -
	Ditto	9 - -	8 - -		Ditto	5 12 -	16 - -
	Ditto	18 - -	7 - -		Ditto	8 8 -	37 - -
	Ditto	10 - -	7 - -		Ditto	15 - -	2 - -
	Ditto	16 - -	15 - -		Ditto	8 - -	3 - -
	Ditto	18 - -	26 - -		Ditto	1 - -	15 - -
	Ditto	5 5 -	14 - -		Ditto	9 6 -	17 - -
	Ditto	3 - -	2 - -		Ditto	8 7 6	5 - -
	Ditto	16 - -	4 - -		Ditto	5 14 -	5 - -
	Ditto	8 - 4	21 - -		Ditto	3 7 4	3 - -
	Ditto	13 - -	32 - -	Court of the Moonsiff of Sulkea	Ditto	2 2 1	2 - -
	Ditto	9 - -	9 - -		Ditto	4 11 2	40 - -
	Ditto	18 - -	18 - -		Ditto	23 5 2	14 - -
	Ditto	9 - -	8 - -		Ditto	6 4 -	5 - -
	Ditto	8 - -	1 - -		Ditto	6 4 -	7 - -
	Ditto	21 - -	5 - -		Ditto	4 - -	5 - -
	Ditto	16 - -	5 - -		Ditto	12 - -	10 - -
	Ditto	8 - -	5 - -		Ditto	1 12 -	9 - -
	Ditto	2 - -	20 - -		Ditto	1 12 -	6 - -
	Ditto	14 - -	7 - -		Ditto	- 10 -	2 - -
	Ditto	17 - -	16 - -		Ditto	19 9 1½	41 - -
	Ditto	8 - -	7 - -		Ditto	13 9 7	5 - -
	Ditto	15 - -	3 - -		Ditto	- - -	58 6 -
	Ditto	3 - -	1 - -		Lakhradj	- - -	34 12 -
	Ditto	3 - -	3 - -		Ditto	- - -	100 8 -
	Ditto	24 - -	61 - -		Mowroosee	16 - -	60 - -
	Ditto	14 - -	9 - -		Ditto	2 4 -	20 - -
	Ditto	9 8 -	24 - -		Ditto	23 - -	201 - -
	Ditto	5 - -	17 - -		Ganti jumma	3 - -	10 - -
	Ditto	25 - -	30 - -		Ditto	15 2 -½	150 - -
	Ditto	9 - -	43 - -		Under-tenant jumma	9 12 -	2 4 -
	Ditto	2 11 1	5 - -		Ditto	13 6 2	- 9 -
	Ditto	11 6 -	3 - -	Court of the Moonsiff of Dhurnipore	Ditto	13 4 1½	31 - -
	Ditto	6 - -	5 - -		Ditto	11 5 1	26 - -
	Ditto	3 8 -	11 - -		Ditto	15 12 -	4 - -
	Ditto	3 - -	1 - -		Ditto	3 - -	2 - -
	Ditto	2 12 -	3 - -		Ditto	6 - -	5 - -
	Ditto	8 3 5	99 - -		Lakhradj	- - -	14 - -
	Ditto	6 - -	40 - -		Ditto	- ditto	136 8 -
	Ditto	2 4 -	10 - -		Jote jumma	10 12 9½	2 - -
Court of the Moonsiff of Sulkea	Ditto	4 14 1½	11 - -		Ditto	9 6 3½	2 - -
	Ditto	4 11 3½	9 - -		Ditto	6 6 -	21 - -
	Ditto	1 12 2	5 - -		Ditto	3 8 -	12 - -
	Ditto	5 5 2	5 - -		Ditto	1 - -	1 - -
	Ditto	10 9 3½	26 - -		Ditto	25 - -	46 - -
	Ditto	3 15 1	19 - -		Ditto	14 - -	5 - -
	Ditto	5 5 2	14 - -		Ditto	7 9 8	3 8 -
	Ditto	8 - -	14 - -		Ditto	16 5 6	7 8 -
	Ditto	9 - -	51 - -		Ditto	29 13 10	25 - -
	Ditto	6 15 -½	11 - -		Ditto	4 - -	8 - -
	Ditto	1 8 -	30 - -		Ditto	6 10 -	36 - -
	Ditto	3 - -	30 - -		Ditto	3 8 -	2 - -
	Ditto	11 3 6	6 - -		Ditto	6 6 -	1 - -
	Ditto	11 8 -	3 - -		Ditto	3 8 -	1 - -
	Ditto	9 9 -	2 - -		Ditto	18 8 -	7 8 -
	Ditto	12 - -	6 - -		Ditto	4 - -	15 - -
	Ditto	16 - -	15 - -		Ditto	6 - 5	133 - -
	Ditto	1 5 -	11 - -		Ditto	32 7 -	6 - -
	Ditto	1 - -	1 - -		Ditto	6 12 4	25 - -
	Ditto	- 12 -	1 - -		Ditto	6 - -	20 - -
	Ditto	9 5 3½	6 - -		Ditto	8 12 6	4 - -
	Ditto	9 9 3½	4 - -	Court of the Moonsiff of Kalopole	Ditto	47 3 -	81 - -
	Ditto	16 - -	5 - -		Ditto	38 6 4½	205 - -
	Ditto	9 5 3½	8 - -		Ditto	9 12 1	207 - -
	Ditto	16 - -	9 - -		Ditto	28 10 6	100 - -
	Ditto	12 8 -	6 - -		Ditto	3 8 -	13 - -
	Ditto	1 - -	3 - -		Ditto	11 12 7	57 - -
	Ditto	2 10 6	26 - -		Ditto	4 9 -	135 - -
	Ditto	8 - -	21 - -		Ditto	6 7 5	26 - -
	Ditto	2 4 -	3 - -		Under-tenant jumma	3 8 -	9 - -
	Ditto	6 4 -	2 - -		Ditto	1 1 -	26 - -
	Ditto	1 8 -	49 - -		Ditto	2 8 -	2 4 -
	Ditto	9 7 3½	13 - -		Ditto	2 4 -	1 - -
	Ditto	1 - -	5 - -		Ditto	1 1 -	2 - -
	Ditto	5 - -	9 - -		Ditto	1 4 -	7 - -
	Ditto	26 - -	18 - -		Ditto	1 9 2	2 - -
	Ditto	4 - -	7 - -		Ditto	10 8 -	32 - -
	Ditto	1 - -	9 - -		Ditto	3 1 7	16 - -
	Ditto	25 - -	7 - -
	Ditto	27 - -	22 - -
	Ditto	6 14 6	16 - -
	Ditto	5 5 -	5 - -
	Ditto	2 8 -	14 - -
	Ditto	5 8 -	17 - -
	Ditto	11 - -	43 - -
	Ditto	14 12 -	11 - -
	Ditto	19 4 -	22 - -
	Ditto	19 10 7	20 - -

APPENDIX TO THE REPORT OF

Denomination of Courts.	Description of Right under which the Land was Held.	Sudder Jumma.	Amount Sold for.	Denomination of Courts.	Description of Right under which the Land was Held.	Sudder Jumma.	Amount Sold for.
MOORSHEDEABAD—continued.				MOORSHEDEABAD—continued.
Principal Sudder Ameen's Court	Zemindaree	117 15 6	425 --	Sudder Ameen's Court	Jotejumma	not known	8 --
	Ditto	49 3 3	700 --		Ditto	ditto	4 --
	Ditto	127 12 6	1,300 --		Ditto	ditto	5 --
	Ditto	1 13 3	250 --		Ditto	ditto	1 12 --
	Ditto	18 2 1½	125 --		Ditto	ditto	8 --
	Ditto	22 9 6	211 --		Ditto	ditto	16 8 --
	Ditto	47 2 1½	751 --		Ditto	ditto	18 --
	Ditto	117 8 3	955 --		Ditto	ditto	20 --
	Ditto	3,369 9 6	15,300 --		Zemindaree	89 5 --	360 --
	Ditto	220 8 1½	3,710 --	Sudder Moon-siff's Court	Jotejumma	9 --	79 --
	Jotejumma	1 --	1,001 --		Ditto	8 --	62 --
	Ditto	2 8 --	1,312 --		Ditto	1 5 6	34 --
	Ditto	40 --	10 --		Ditto	4 13 --	86 --
	Ditto	43 --	5 --		Ditto	not known	16 8 --
	Ditto	52 4 --	500 --		Ditto	ditto	81 --
	Ditto	2 13 --	6 --		Ditto	ditto	29 --
	Ditto	14 6 6	12 --		Ditto	ditto	55 --
	Ditto	43 10 3	110 --		Ditto	ditto	12 --
	Ditto	56 1 3	25 --		Ditto	ditto	4 --
	Ditto	54 8 3	3,002 --		Ditto	ditto	5 --
	Ditto	9 11 --	14 8 --		Ditto	ditto	4 --
	Ditto	1 1 --	17 8 --		Ditto	3 2 --	106 --
	Ditto	8 6 --	16 --		Ditto	7 --	25 --
	Ditto	not known	576 --		Ditto	2 8 --	25 --
	Ditto	34 6 3	10 --		Ditto	not known	121 --
	Jotejumma	not known	9 --		Ditto	ditto	26 --
	Ditto	ditto	5 8 --		Ditto	ditto	50 --
	Ditto	ditto	4 8 --		Ditto	1 --	2 --
	Ditto	ditto	41 --		Ditto	7 --	3 8 --
	Ditto	ditto	19 10 --		Ditto	7 --	8 --
	Ditto	ditto	370 --		Ditto	not known	13 4 --
	Ditto	ditto	3 12 --		Ditto	4 8 --	2 --
	Dur Putnee	1,160 3 1½	1,317 --	Court of the Moonsiff of Kandhee	Ditto	not known	121 --
	Jotejumma	not known	12 8 --		Ditto	ditto	26 --
	Ditto	ditto	37 --		Ditto	ditto	50 --
	Ditto	6 --	8 --		Ditto	ditto	108 --
	Ditto	not known	7 8 --		Ditto	ditto	510 --
	Ditto	ditto	2 10 --		Ditto	ditto	52 4 --
	Ditto	ditto	3 4 --		Ditto	ditto	24 --
	Ditto	ditto	39 --		Ditto	ditto	12 12 --
	Ditto	28 --	14 --		Ditto	ditto	20 8 --
	Ditto	11 --	1,525 --	Court of the Moonsiff of Hurhurpara	Zemindaree	1,543 13 4	475 --
Sudder Ameen's Court	Ditto	not known	20 4 --		Ditto	1,543 13 4	1,055 --
	Ditto	ditto	23 4 --		Jotejumma	6 8 --	8 --
	Ditto	5 --	925 --		Ditto	11 8 --	10 --
	Ditto	not known	23 4 --		Ditto	4 --	4 --
	Ditto	ditto	37 4 --		Ditto	4 6 --	4 --
	Ditto	ditto	24 4 --		Ditto	3 4 --	1 12 --
	Ditto	ditto	26 4 --		Ditto	2 3 --	1 4 --
	Ditto	ditto	4 4 --		Ditto	3 --	1 12 --
	Ditto	ditto	2 --		Ditto	3 --	1 8 --
	Ditto	ditto	3 4 --		Ditto	2 3 --	1 4 --
	Ditto	ditto	4 4 --		Ditto	4 --	1 8 --
	Ditto	1 2 --	5 12 --		Ditto	24 8 7	10 --
	Ditto	not known	7 4 --		Ditto	7 --	40 --
	Ditto	ditto	25 --		Ditto	12 8 --	40 --
	Ditto	ditto	250 --		Ditto	12 --	3 8 --
	Ditto	ditto	42 --	Court of the Moonsiff of Gowas	Jotejumma	not known	282 11 --
	Ditto	12 2 3	18 8 --		Zemindaree	ditto	93 8 --
	Ditto	not known	11 4 --		Jotejumma	ditto	3 14 6
	Ditto	ditto	48 4 --		Ditto	ditto	9 13 6
	Ditto	ditto	8 --		Ditto	7 13 --	18 --
	Ditto	ditto	13 --		Ditto	34 15 4	85 --
	Ditto	ditto	46 4 --		Ditto	3 11 4	5 12 --
	Ditto	ditto	12 14 --		Ditto	not known	4 --
	Ditto	ditto	3 8 --		Ditto	not known	47 8 --
	Ditto	ditto	8 --		Ditto	ditto	36 2 --
	Ditto	ditto	40 --	Zemindaree Resumed Lakhraj	Ditto	ditto	15 12 --
	Ditto	ditto	5 --		Ditto	ditto	67 4 --
	Ditto	ditto	15 --		Zemindaree	53 2 6	205 --
	Ditto	ditto	179 --		Resumed Lakhraj	301 --	130 --
	Ditto	ditto	182 --		Jotejumma	59 14 3	14 --
	Ditto	ditto	212 --		Koorfa Jote	not known	94 --
	Ditto	ditto	125 --		Ditto	ditto	9 --
	Zemindaree	1,013 15 4½	1,588 --		Ditto	ditto	23 6 --
	Jotejumma	not known	9 8 --		Ditto	4 6 4	45 --
	Ditto	ditto	10 --		Ditto	not known	8 --
	Ditto	ditto	14 --		Ditto	ditto	6 --
	Ditto	ditto	14 --		Ditto	ditto	5 4 --
	Ditto	ditto	11 --		Ditto	ditto	9 12 --
	Ditto	ditto	40 --		Ditto	ditto	25 2 --
	Ditto	ditto	1 --		Ditto	ditto	28 8 --
	Ditto	ditto	3 --		Ditto	ditto	11 5 --
	Ditto	ditto	450 --		Ditto	1 11 --	4 8 --
	Ditto	ditto	1 4 --		Ditto	not known	1 10 --
	Ditto	ditto	13 --		Ditto	ditto	14 7 6
	Ditto	ditto	10 --
	Ditto	ditto	13 --
	Ditto	ditto	1 8 --
	Ditto	ditto	15 --
	Ditto	ditto	9 --

Denomination of Courts.	Description of Right under which the Land was Held.	Sudder Jumma.	Amount Sold for.	Denomination of Courts.	Description of Right under which the Land was Held.	Sudder Jumma.	Amount Sold for.
MOORSHEDEABAD—continued.				MOORSHEDEABAD—continued.
Court of the Moon- siff of Gowas	Koorfa Jote	Not known	1 6	Jotejumma	Not known	408 8
	Ditto	ditto	8 12		ditto	94 4
	Ditto	ditto	48 4		ditto	42
	Jotejumma	244	82		ditto	16
	Koorfa Jote	Not known	40		ditto	12
Court of the Moon- siff of Lallbagh	Ditto	ditto	102 4	Ditto	ditto	7 8
	Zemindaree	22 9 1	285		ditto	20
	Ditto	116 14 2	275		ditto	6 8
	Jotejumma	Not known	27		ditto	14 12
	Ditto	10 6	50		ditto	34
	Ditto	10 6	105 15		ditto	18
	Ditto	Not known	60		ditto	13 3
	Ditto	ditto	7		ditto	103
	Ditto	ditto	67		ditto	150
	Ditto	ditto	52		ditto	16
	Ditto	ditto	9		ditto	2
	Ditto	3 3	14 8		ditto	12
	Jotejumma	Not known	13 5		ditto	13
	Ditto	ditto	35 2		ditto	30
	Ditto	ditto	12 8		ditto	1
Court of the Moon- siff of Jungbypore	Ditto	ditto	7	Ditto	ditto	10
	Ditto	ditto	11		ditto	96
	Ditto	ditto	3 11 6		ditto	15
	Ditto	ditto	1 3		ditto	87
	Ditto	ditto	2		ditto	2 8
	Ditto	ditto	340		ditto	32 12
	Ditto	ditto	2 4		ditto	7 4
	Ditto	ditto	24 8		ditto	32
	Ditto	ditto	34 7		ditto	20
	Ditto	ditto	12 12		ditto	61
	Ditto	ditto	40		ditto	46 8
	Ditto	ditto	9		ditto	36 8
	Ditto	ditto	22		ditto	5
	Ditto	ditto	1 13 3		ditto	53 12
	Ditto	ditto	22 8		ditto	4 12
	Ditto	ditto	6		ditto	1 4
	Ditto	ditto	7		ditto	2 4
	Ditto	ditto	64		ditto	63 1
	Ditto	ditto	9		ditto	19 4
	Ditto	ditto	15		ditto	9
	Ditto	ditto	110 8		ditto	42 4
	Ditto	ditto	15		ditto	30 4
	Ditto	ditto	42		ditto	70
	Ditto	ditto	20		ditto	25 8
	Ditto	ditto	22 8		ditto	24 4
	Ditto	ditto	1 2		ditto	65 4 6
	Ditto	ditto	4 14		ditto	15 4
	Ditto	ditto	4		ditto	6
	Ditto	ditto	8 12		ditto	90
	Ditto	ditto	1 6		ditto	36 4
	Ditto	ditto	19 12		ditto	39 12
	Ditto	ditto	62 4		ditto	240 4
	Ditto	ditto	3 4		ditto	1
	Ditto	ditto	8 4		ditto	3
	Ditto	ditto	29 4		ditto	8 10
	Ditto	ditto	63 4		ditto	2
	Ditto	ditto	6 8		ditto	1
	Ditto	ditto	29		ditto	11 8
	Ditto	ditto	2 12		ditto	11 9
	Ditto	ditto	18		ditto	23 1
	Ditto	ditto	2 1		ditto	50
	Ditto	ditto	29 8		ditto	4
	Ditto	ditto	1 8		ditto	3 2
	Ditto	ditto	5		ditto	3
	Ditto	ditto	10		ditto	75
	Ditto	ditto	13 6		ditto	27
	Ditto	ditto	5 6		ditto	3
	Ditto	ditto	5		ditto	39 6
	Ditto	ditto	12 5		ditto	29 12
	Ditto	ditto	1		ditto	16
	Ditto	ditto	32 1		ditto	10 7
	Ditto	ditto	14		ditto	25 4
	Ditto	ditto	2 8		ditto	323
	Ditto	ditto	61		ditto	81
	Ditto	ditto	16		ditto	18
	Ditto	ditto	24		ditto	23
	Ditto	ditto	4		ditto	6 10
	Ditto	ditto	12 12		ditto	6 10
	Ditto	ditto	6		ditto	3 4
	Ditto	ditto	18 4		ditto	6 6
	Ditto	ditto	30		ditto	12
	Ditto	ditto	21		ditto	48 6
	Ditto	ditto	41		ditto	180
	Ditto	ditto	1 5		ditto	40
	Ditto	ditto	10		ditto	7 8
	Ditto	ditto	8		ditto	38
	Ditto	ditto	44		ditto	16
	Ditto	ditto	70		ditto	7 4
	Ditto	ditto	46		ditto	8
	Ditto	ditto	102		ditto	21 3
	Ditto	ditto	93		ditto	16 4
	Ditto	ditto	100		ditto	20 4
	Ditto	ditto	187		ditto	22
	Ditto	ditto			ditto	19 8

APPENDIX TO THE REPORT OF

Denomination of Courts.	Description of Right under which the Land was Held.	Sudder Jumma.	Amount Sold for.	Denomination of Courts.	Description of Right under which the Land was Held.	Sudder Jumma.	Amount Sold for.
DACCA:				DACCA—continued.
Judge's Court	Zemindaree or Talook-daree.	194 2 1½	53 - -	Court of the Moonsiff of Bohor -	Putnee - - -	1 5 -	12 - -
	Ditto - - -	50 1 2½	230 - -		Ditto - - -	1 10 -	10 8 -
Principal Sudder Ameen's Court	Zemindaree or Talook-daree.	840 15 3½	2,700 - -		Ditto - - -	7 - -	8 8 -
	Ditto - - -	946 11 2½	2,000 - -		Ditto - - -	30 5 2	305 - -
	Ditto - - -	55 2 6	140 - -		Ditto - - -	3 9 -	750 - -
	Ditto - - -	2 6 5	27 - -	Court of the Moonsiff of Pullas -	Zemindaree - - -	65 9 -	155 7 -
	Ditto - - -	26 2 1½	34 - -		Ditto - - -	200 4 9	365 - -
	Ditto - - -	499 15 9½	600 - -		Ditto - - -	Not known -	42 15 -
	Ditto - - -	109 8 2	1,300 - -		Ditto - - -	- ditto -	32 - -
	Ditto - - -	53 13 10½	645 - -		Ditto - - -	- ditto -	15 - -
	Jotejumma and under-tenant.	64 2 4	202 - -		Ditto - - -	- ditto -	35 - -
	Ditto - - -	234 - -	500 - -		Ditto - - -	- ditto -	168 15 10
Sudder Ameen's Court	Zemindaree - - -	397 11 4½	910 - -	FURREEDPORE:	Lakhraj - - -	- - -	26 8 9
	Ditto - - -	78 13 11	825 - -		Ditto - - -	- - -	91 - -
	Ditto - - -	10 10 8	16 - -		Zemindaree or Talook-daree.	1,939 8 -	7 - -
	Ditto - - -	3 - 6	505 - -		Ditto - - -	3 15 11½	525 - -
	Ditto - - -	102 6 5	1,407 - -		Ditto - - -	11 6 6	675 - -
	Ditto - - -	68 10 -	1,150 - -		Ditto - - -	12 8 6	225 - -
	Ditto - - -	34 2 1½	165 - -		Ditto - - -	5 13 10½	100 - -
	Putnee - - -	83 - -	1,261 - -		Ditto - - -	619 11 4	1,100 - -
	Jotejumma - - -	6 - -	251 - -		Ditto - - -	3 - 3	3 8 -
	Ditto - - -	9 - -	8 - -		Ditto - - -	130 6 5	38 - -
Sudder Moonsiff's Court	Ditto - - -	- 3 -	21 - -		Ditto - - -	1,531 10 11½	396 - -
	Ditto - - -	5 15 -	10 - -		Putni - - -	106 10 8	3,735 - -
	Zemindaree - - -	1,898 10 8	87 - -		Lakhraj - - -	- - -	12 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 5 4	41 - -		Jotejumma and under-tenant.	20 - -	221 - -
	Ditto - - -	26 - 6½	79 - -		Ditto - - -	22 - -	68 - -
	Ditto - - -	35 10 11½	49 - -		Ditto - - -	51 3 2½	510 - -
	Ditto - - -	961 1 - 3	2,000 - -		Ditto - - -	41 9 7	3 - -
	Jotejumma - - -	- 1 9	6 - -		Ditto - - -	2 13 10	1 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 1 9	3 - -		Ditto - - -	4 8 6	1 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 1 9	5 - -	Principal Sudder Ameen's Court	Ditto - - -	3 12 -	250 - -
Court of the Moonsiff of Narain-gunge	Ditto - - -	- 1 9	3 - -		Ditto - - -	180 - -	200 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 1 9	1 - -		Ditto - - -	19 4 -	18 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 1 9	3 4 -		Ditto - - -	40 1 11	52 8 -
	Ditto - - -	- 1 9	6 - -		Ditto - - -	45 5 4	20 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 1 9	6 - -		Ditto - - -	36 12 9½	195 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 1 9	1 4 -		Ditto - - -	78 6 8	5 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 1 9	6 9 -		Ditto - - -	37 5 7	1,615 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 1 9	8 - -		Ditto - - -	6 6 5	3,005 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 1 9	4 - -		Ditto - - -	6 9 7	135 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 1 9	12 - -		Ditto - - -	6 6 5	70 - -
Court of the Moonsiff of Bohor	Ditto - - -	8 1 -	42 - -		Ditto - - -	37 14 7½	350 - -
	Ditto - - -	5 2 -	12 - -		Ditto - - -	100 12 -	600 - -
	Zemindaree - - -	11 4 -	106 - -		Ditto - - -	- 8 -	1 - 9
	Ditto - - -	30 9 4	11 - -		Ditto - - -	Not known -	6 - -
	Ditto - - -	25 - -	100 4 -		Ditto - - -	182 - -	690 - -
	Ditto - - -	25 - -	101 - -		Ditto - - -	- 1 -	3 - -
	Ditto - - -	13 8 -	8 - -		Ditto - - -	- 2 -	5 - -
	Ditto - - -	1 1 -	16 - -		Ditto - - -	1 10 8	9 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 10 6	8 - -		Jotejumma - - -	- 8 -	7 - -
	Ditto - - -	15 14 4	160 - -		Ditto - - -	2 - -	30 - -
Court of the Moonsiff of Narain-gunge	Ditto - - -	3 3 2½	25 - -		Ditto - - -	186 2 2	5,950 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 1 -	5 - -		Ditto - - -	17 1 1	250 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 4 8	43 - -		Ditto - - -	10 10 8	120 - -
	Ditto - - -	Not known -	13 14 -		Ditto - - -	10 10 8	155 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 2 -	25 - -		Ditto - - -	10 10 8	230 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 9 3	35 - -		Ditto - - -	28 1 2	501 - -
	Ditto - - -	4 7 10½	31 - -		Ditto - - -	64 - -	1,425 - -
	Ditto - - -	25 9 7	43 - -		Ditto - - -	160 5 -	201 - -
	Ditto - - -	14 10 7	42 - -		Ditto - - -	30 6 8	60 - -
	Ditto - - -	145 14 -	9 - -		Ditto - - -	68 - -	1,562 - -
Court of the Moonsiff of Bohor	Ditto - - -	145 14 -	4 - -		Zemindaree - - -	888 14 8½	280 - -
	Ditto - - -	101 14 6	31 - -		Ditto - - -	28 11 9	165 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 3 -	7 2 -		Ditto - - -	234 10 8	1,070 - -
	Ditto - - -	1 6 -	11 - -		Zemindaree - - -	440 11 8½	52 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 11 -	5 - -		Ditto - - -	41 10 8	240 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 3 -	3 - -		Ditto - - -	7 8 6½	150 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 14 -	4 8 -		Ditto - - -	211 10 -	65 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 5 6	7 4 -		Ditto - - -	19 7 4	55 - -
	Ditto - - -	26 2 4½	81 - -		Ditto - - -	14 8 7	50 - -
	Ditto - - -	2 4 6½	25 - -		Ditto - - -	372 4 3½	80 - -
Court of the Moonsiff of Bohor	Ditto - - -	1 2 6	2 4 -		Ditto - - -	10 6 7	10 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 2 -	32 - -	Sudder Moonsiff's Court	Lakhraj - - -	- - -	110 - -
	Ditto - - -	Not known -	14 - -		Jotejumma - - -	19 10 -	15 - -
	Ditto - - -	6 14 11	156 - -		Ditto - - -	9 8 -	20 - -
	Ditto - - -	71 10 4	200 - -		Ditto - - -	24 - -	37 - -
	Ditto - - -	- 4 -	62 - -		Ditto - - -	16 - -	42 - -
	Zemindaree - - -	95 3 3	160 - -		Ditto - - -	8 - -	8 - -
	Ditto - - -	18 11 7	141 - -		Ditto - - -	1 - -	4 - -
	Ditto - - -	14 14 9	114 - -		Ditto - - -	4 - -	13 - -
	Putnee - - -	4 12 -	30 - -		Ditto - - -	6 4 -	1,340 - -
	Ditto - - -	1 1 9½	6 - -		Ditto - - -	8 12 3½	16 - -

Denomination of Courts.	Description of Right under which the Land was Held.	Sudder Jumma.	Amount Sold for.	Denomination of Courts.	Description of Right under which the Land was Held.	Sudder Jumma.	Amount Sold for.
FURREEDPORE—continued.				FURREEDPORE—continued.
Sudder Moonsiff's Court—cont'd.	Jotejumma	28 6 1½	9 - -	Court of the Moon-siff of Bhanga—continued.	Zemindaree	Not known	10 - -
	Ditto	29 2 2½	38 - -		Ditto	2 3 1½	155 - -
	Ditto	20 - 4	70 - -		Ditto	11 6 6½	460 - -
	Ditto	21 7 3	40 - -		Lakhraj	- - -	100 - -
	Ditto	2 4 -	7 - -		Ditto	- - -	22 - -
	Ditto	3 12 -	7 - -		Ditto	- - -	17 - -
	Ditto	1 8 -	4 - -		Ditto	- - -	15 - -
	Ditto	- 12 -	4 - -		Ditto	- - -	15 4 -
	Ditto	9 12 11	16 - -		Jotejumma	22 4 4½	200 - -
	Ditto	53 5 -	200 - -		Ditto	205 14 2	100 - -
	Ditto	10 5 1½	50 - -		Ditto	4 4 3	34 - -
	Ditto	9 - 9	5 - -		Ditto	12 4 3	23 - 9
	Ditto	12 12 9	9 - -		Ditto	3 11 3	10 8 -
	Ditto	254 2 4	600 - -		Ditto	4 4 3	21 - -
	Ditto	4 15 3	80 - -		Ditto	28 13 10½	135 - -
	Ditto	14 4 10	105 - -		Ditto	32 - -	58 - -
	Ditto	154 5 10	1,350 - -		Ditto	1 10 -	20 8 -
	Ditto	4 10 -	23 - -		Ditto	3 3 2	6 - -
	Ditto	10 - -	76 - -		Ditto	9 5 4½	40 - -
	Ditto	10 11 2	145 - -		Ditto	53 14 10½	33 - -
	Ditto	1 12 -	4 - -		Ditto	5 8 -	32 - -
	Ditto	2 12 9	20 - -		Ditto	36 9 4	44 - -
	Ditto	2 4 3	5 - -		Ditto	154 5 10½	1,350 - -
	Ditto	28 - -	575 - -		Ditto	113 1 - ¾	900 - -
	Ditto	4 10 8	18 - -		Ditto	10 - -	137 - -
	Ditto	40 12 9	46 - -		Ditto	95 3 9	445 - -
	Ditto	64 6 11½	42 - -		Ditto	4 10 8	18 - -
	Ditto	22 11 8	26 - -		Ditto	40 12 9	46 - -
	Ditto	7 14 1	46 - -		Ditto	14 14 -	32 - -
	Ditto	155 7 -	140 - -		Ditto	3 3 2	2 - -
	Ditto	4 1 9	29 - -	Court of the Moon-siff of Muxud-pore	Zemindaree	24 1 1	315 - -
	Ditto	12 12 9	14 - -		Ditto	187 12 2	750 - -
	Ditto	3 10 -	102 - -		Ditto	17 - 3	232 - -
Court of the Moonsiff of Manickgunge	Zemindaree	Not known	25 - -		Ditto	11 11 9	41 - -
	Ditto	12 - 7½	30 - -		Ditto	3 12 3	6 - -
	Ditto	3 3 2½	42 - -		Ditto	10 10 8	54 - -
	Ditto	- 15 11	50 - -		Ditto	28 1 2	65 - -
	Ditto	20 12 5½	50 - -		Ditto	1 4 3	16 - -
	Ditto	1 8 -	5 - -		Ditto	6 15 -	29 - -
	Ditto	- 5 -	5 - -	HOOGLY :	Zemindaree	6 12 -½	308 - -
	Ditto	13 14 5½	15 - -		Putni	426 8 6	10,025 - -
	Ditto	1 4 3½	37 - -		Jotejumma	40 3 -	134 12 -
	Ditto	- 4 -	32 - -		Lakhraj	- - -	495 8 -
	Ditto	2 2 -	100 9 -		Jotejumma	- - -	- - -
	Ditto	2 2 -	8 - -		Putni	- - -	- - -
Court of the Moonsiff of Le-chragunge	Zemindaree	98 7 2½	40 - 2		Jotejumma	- - -	- - -
	Ditto	29 3 2½	15 - -		Lakhraj	- - -	- - -
	Ditto	6 6 6	8 - -	Principal Sudder Ameen's Court	Zemindaree	1,702 6 2	8,855 - -
	Ditto	25 8 6	13 - -		Putni	6,246 15 4	9,520 - -
	Ditto	201 5 -	530 - -		Jotejumma	417 7 -	3,356 6 -
	Ditto	57 13 1	150 - -		Aymah	5 11 -	66 4 -
	Ditto	27 11 9	10 - -		Lakhraj	- - -	5,327 6 -
	Ditto	152 11 9½	555 - -	Adl. Pl. Sudder Ameen's Court	Jotejumma	131 7 -	1,013 8 -
	Ditto	57 9 7	270 - -		Lakhraj	- - -	303 9 -
	Ditto	38 6 5	310 - -		Zemindaree	101 11 7	310 - -
	Ditto	144 12 3	610 - -		Jotejumma	27 3 4	1,664 8 -
	Ditto	493 12 9½	1,624 - -		Lakhraj	- - -	1,806 8 -
	Ditto	214 11 8½	101 - -	Sudder Moonsiff's Court	Zemindaree	5 13 6	311 - -
	Ditto	1 7 3½	83 - -		Jotejumma	209 13 8	834 12 -
	Ditto	229 1 9½	975 - -		Lakhraj	- - -	592 - -
	Ditto	20 10 4½	101 - -	Court of the Moon-siff of Pandooah	Jotejumma	360 15 11	832 4 -
	Ditto	- 5 7½	35 - -		Aymah	152 3 -½	180 - -
Court of the Moon-siff of Bhanga	Jotejumma	8 13 -	125 - -		Lakhraj	- - -	720 11 -
	Ditto	4 5 9	60 - -	Court of the Moon-siff of Serampore	Jotejumma	848 4 -	1,860 14 -
	Ditto	378 9 2½	70 - -		Lakhraj	- - -	138 - -
	Ditto	4 4 3	41 - -	Court of the Moon-siff of Sulkeah	Jotejumma	124 6 8	1,515 13 -
	Ditto	151 - -	16 - -		Jotejumma	- - -	- - -
	Ditto	28 12 9½	825 - -		Jotejumma	124 6 9	62 8 -
	Ditto	2 2 2½	17 4 -		Lakhraj	- - -	361 8 -
	Ditto	187 7 10	10 - -		Jotejumma	- - -	- - -
	Ditto	- 1 8	190 - -		Lakhraj	- - -	- - -
	Ditto	Not known	135 - -		Jotejumma	211 12 -	59 4 -
	Ditto	2 8 -	52 - -	Court of the Moon-siff of Hurripal	Jotejumma	- - -	- - -
	Ditto	Not known	30 - -		Lakhraj	- - -	- - -
	Ditto	- 4 -	13 - -	Court of the Moon-siff of Oolooberia	Jotejumma	- - -	- - -
	Ditto	- 6½	13 - -		Lakhraj	- - -	- - -
	Ditto	8 - -	9 - -		Jotejumma	- - -	- - -
	Ditto	- - -	- - -		Lakhraj	- - -	- - -
Court of the Moon-siff of Bhanga	Zemindaree	6 4 -	1,340 - -		Jotejumma	709 13 10½	424 13 9
	Ditto	10 2 2	70 - -		Lakhraj	- - -	1,241 14 9
	Ditto	12 4 3	132 - -	Court of the Moon-siff of Amtah	Jotejumma	650 15 -	1,711 8 9
	Ditto	12 - -	77 - -		Lakhraj	- - -	1,704 14 -
	Ditto	15 3 3	32 - -		Jotejumma	- - -	- - -
	Ditto	- - -	- - -		Lakhraj	- - -	- - -
	Ditto	- - -	- - -		Jotejumma	- - -	- - -
	Ditto	- - -	- - -		Lakhraj	- - -	- - -
	Ditto	- - -	- - -		Jotejumma	- - -	- - -
	Ditto	- - -	- - -		Lakhraj	- - -	- - -
	Ditto	- - -	- - -		Jotejumma	- - -	- - -
	Ditto	- - -	- - -		Lakhraj	- - -	- - -

Appendix, No. 6.

STATEMENT showing the Sale of ESTATES for Arrears of Government Revenue and on other Accounts for the last Three Years. In several instances the Gross Rental was not known, and Cyphers, or "Not available," are inserted in such cases.

Number of Estates sold.	Sudder Jumma.	Price at which the Estate was knocked down.	Estimated Gross Rental.	Number of Estates sold.	Sudder Jumma.	Price at which the Estate was knocked down.	Estimated Gross Rental.
1	13 5 3	24 - -	26 10 6	62	3 13 3	5 - -	7 10 6
2	11 8 7	41 - -	23 1 2	63	- 3 -	1 1 -	- 6 -
3	3 5 11 $\frac{1}{2}$	16 - -	6 11 11	64	- 7 3	1 12 -	- 14 6
4	1 7 10	9 - -	2 15 8	65	5 9 7	18 - -	11 3 2
5	77 3 3	755 - -	154 6 6	66	5 7 11	7 - -	10 15 10
6	6 9 11	41 - -	13 3 10	67	- 5 5 $\frac{3}{4}$	1 1 -	- 10 11 $\frac{1}{2}$
7	4 2 1	19 - -	8 4 2	68	7 - -	31 - -	14 - -
8	38 - 1 $\frac{1}{2}$	72 - -	76 - 3	69	2 14 4	1 - -	5 12 -
9	1 - -	9 - -	2 - -	70	- 9 -	10 - -	1 2 -
10	3 2 6	3 4 -	6 5 -	71	40 14 10	1 1 -	81 13 8
11	10 5 -	1 - -	20 10 -	72	1 7 -	14 - -	2 14 -
12	1 9 4	13 - -	3 2 8	73	- 8 4	1 1 -	1 - 8
13	- 14 7	- 1 -	1 11 2	74	74 13 8 $\frac{3}{4}$	37 - -	149 11 5 $\frac{1}{2}$
14	3 13 3	5 - -	7 10 6
15	- 3 7	1 4 -	- 7 2		JESSORE.
16	3 10 2	- 1 -	7 4 4	75	24 7 3	12 - -
17	5 7 2	- 1 -	- 2 4	76	212 10 10	2,100 - -
18	- 10 5	3 - -	1 4 10	77	6 12 2	107 - -
19	- 10 1	3 4 -	1 4 2	78	7 2 10	395 - -
20	1 12 3	3 - -	3 8 6	79	32 - -	510 - -
21	8 6 6	50 - -	16 13 -	80	7 7 6	415 - -
22	9 - 6	25 - -	18 1 -	81	8 11 4	300 - -
23	- 4 3	1 12 -	6 - -	82	5 10 2	80 - -
24	- 10 6	1 4 -	1 5 -	83	7 13 11	100 - -
25	30 11 1	160 - -	61 6 2	84	7 9 6	41 - -
26	- 6 1	1 4 -	- 12 2	85	117 1 3	101 - -
27	7 11 10 $\frac{1}{2}$	46 - -	15 7 9	86	24 1 -	130 - -
28	3 12 3 $\frac{1}{2}$	12 - -	7 8 7	87	1 - 10	30 - -
29	3 14 7	45 - -	7 13 2	88	1 10 6	33 - -
30	1 13 8	6 - -	3 11 4	89	21 6 -	212 - -
31	- 5 10	1 8 -	- 11 8	90	- 2 2	20 - -
32	- 5 9	11 - -	- 11 6	91	8 12 10	9 - -
33	11 14 11	55 - -	23 13 10	92	10 2 2	- - -
34	59 3 6	170 - -	118 7 -	93	56 9 1	230 - -
35	- 5 9	3 8 -	- 11 6
36	82 13 5	106 - -	165 10 10		PUBNA.
37	21 11 5	12 - -	43 6 10	94	1,847 7 8	525 - -
38	12 11 11	30 - -	25 7 10
39	13 10 8	25 - -	27 5 4		MOORSBEDABAD.
40	51 4 11	260 - -	102 9 10	95	1 5 2	1 5 2	1 8 -
41	14 12 8	180 - -	29 9 4	96	- 8 -	1 - -	1 - -
42	10 9 7	590 - -	21 3 2	97	- 14 3	1 - -	1 6 -
43	57 10 3	60 - -	115 4 6	98	7 5 10	8 - -	9 - -
44	74 13 8 $\frac{3}{4}$	130 - -	149 11 5 $\frac{1}{2}$	99	2 6 5	8 - -	3 - -
45	917 15 1	201 - -	235 14 2	100	138 - 5	410 - -	361 13 10
46	4 15 -	6 - -	9 14 -	101	63 6 5	200 - -	89 - -
47	- 7 5	3 8 -	- 14 10	102	85 4 7	3 225 - -	58 8 6
48	6 - 9	11 - -	12 1 6	103	36 5 4	1,100 - -	34 15 10
49	2 10 7	15 - -	5 5 2	104	31 - 6	260 - -	34 13 -
50	21 11 5	13 - -	43 6 10	105	38 1 4	5,050 - -	42 11 4 $\frac{1}{2}$
51	30 2 2	125 - -	60 4 4	106	38 11 7	1,120 - -	0 0 0
52	74 13 8 $\frac{3}{4}$	28 - -	149 11 5 $\frac{1}{2}$	107	27 9 8	850 - -	55 3 4
53	12 15 7	44 - -	25 13 2	108	25 13 7	85 - -	51 11 8
54	1 11 7	2 4 -	3 7 2	109	31 14 11	400 - -	63 13 10
55	74 13 8 $\frac{3}{4}$	31 - -	149 11 5 $\frac{1}{2}$	110	16 4 7	1,200 - -	28 7 10
56	- 7 5	3 - -	- 14 10	111	7 8 10	500 - -	10 1 10 $\frac{1}{2}$
57	1 1 -	2 8 -	2 2 -	112	- 8 -	2 - -	1 - -
58	- 3 8	1 8 -	- 7 4	113	- 14 3	2 - -	1 6 -
59	1 9 10	4 - -	3 3 8	114	17 7 10	650 - -	unknown.
60	- 7 -	1 8 -	- 14 -
61	5 12 3	7 - -	11 8 6

Number of Estates sold.	Sudder Jumma.	Price at which the Estate was knocked down.	Estimated Gross Rental.	Number of Estates sold.	Sudder Jumma.	Price at which the Estate was knocked down.	Estimated Gross Rental.
115	101 - -	850 - -	unknown.	183	- 4 11	- 1 -	- 6 9 $\frac{1}{2}$
116	8 10 9	22 - -	10 4 -	184	- 8 9	3 4 -	0 0 0
117	199 13 6	5,500 - -	146 6 9	185	- 1 4	13 - -	0 0 0
118	196 13 11	400 - -	225 15 -	186	15 10 2	257 - -	0 0 0
119	1 7 9	2 - -	23 10 -	187	14 3 2 $\frac{1}{2}$	12 - -	0 0 0
120	118 - 10	310 - -	12 4 9	188	96 8 6 $\frac{1}{2}$	16 - -	101 6 4 $\frac{1}{2}$
121	25 13 7	16 - -	51 11 3	189	22 12 11	505 - -	28 8 6
	RAJSHAHIE.			190	16 1 1	1 - -	0 0 0
122	26 15 3	10 - -	40 - -	191	13 13 10 $\frac{1}{2}$	1 - -	0 0 0
123	45 - 1	108 - -	77 - -	192	184 12 6	101 - -	205 5 - $\frac{1}{2}$
124	16 15 10	29 - -	22 3 4	193	2 14 11	26 - -	0 0 0
125	11 10 3	10 - -	25 - -	194	4 2 10	4 3 -	0 0 0
	FURREEDPORE.			195	5 5 4	4 - -	0 0 0
126	1 2 4 $\frac{1}{2}$	- - 3	-	196	2 11 6 $\frac{1}{2}$	8 - -	0 0 0
127	59 11 3 $\frac{1}{2}$	107 - -	-	197	- 1 7 $\frac{1}{2}$	13 - -	0 0 0
128	2 9 -	38 - -	-	198	2 7 -	10 - -	0 0 0
129	311 21 7 $\frac{1}{2}$	- - 3	-	199	4 4 3	8 - -	0 0 0
130	59 11 3 $\frac{1}{2}$	1 - -	-	200	- 8 6 $\frac{1}{2}$	3 - -	0 0 0
	DACCA.			201	17 2 11	1,015 - -	0 0 0
131	42 9 7 $\frac{1}{2}$	2,585 - -	53 6 1 $\frac{1}{2}$	202	1 11 2	70 - -	0 0 0
132	- 5 4	12 - -	0 0 0	203	4 14 10 $\frac{1}{2}$	8 - -	0 0 0
133	2 13 8 $\frac{1}{2}$	2 - -	1 - -	204	4 10 7	412 - -	0 0 0
134	1 11 -	8 - -	0 0 0	205	1 1 1	12 - -	1 2 3
135	1 11 -	41 - -	0 0 0	206	- 3 2 $\frac{1}{2}$	61 - -	0 0 0
136	1 11 -	2 - -	0 0 0	207	1 9 7 $\frac{1}{2}$	14 - -	0 0 0
137	- 5 4	2 - -	0 0 0	208	16 - 1 $\frac{1}{2}$	4,600 - -	0 0 0
138	6 2 6	1 - -	2 - -	209	1 1 1	11 - -	0 0 0
139	5 12 -	1 - -	0 0 0	210	- 5 3	2 4 -	0 0 0
140	- 8 6 $\frac{1}{2}$	- 10 -	0 0 0	211	2 - 8 $\frac{1}{2}$	16 - -	2 7 5 $\frac{1}{2}$
141	2 2 1 $\frac{1}{2}$	1 - -	0 0 0	212	2 6 5 $\frac{1}{2}$	7 - -	0 0 0
142	8 8 11 $\frac{1}{2}$	332 - -	0 0 0	213	2 11 8 $\frac{1}{2}$	425 - -	0 0 0
143	2 - 9 $\frac{1}{2}$	3 - -	0 0 0	214	- 5 6	12 - -	- 7 7 $\frac{1}{2}$
144	3 3 2 $\frac{1}{2}$	260 - -	1 - -	215	- 5 9	15 - -	- 7 11 $\frac{1}{2}$
145	1 1 1	14 - -	- 2 3	216	- 8 9	12 - -	0 0 0
146	5 5 4	5 5 4	- 14 9	217	- 5 6	3 8 -	- 7 7 $\frac{1}{2}$
147	- 5 3	9 - -	0 0 0	218	- 5 9	3 8 9	- 7 11 $\frac{1}{2}$
148	4 9 8	20 - -	0 0 0	219	122 14 3 $\frac{1}{2}$	530 - -	149 13 5 $\frac{1}{2}$
149	9 2 2	1 - -	2 - 11 $\frac{1}{2}$	220	31 11 9	925 - 9	0 0 0
150	1 11 11	10 8 -	2 - 6 $\frac{1}{2}$	221	55 3 1	2,975 - -	0 0 0
151	1 12 5	2 - -	2 7 6	222	12 - - $\frac{1}{2}$	15 - -	0 0 0
152	- 4 11	2 - -	- 6 9 $\frac{1}{2}$	223	21 10 5	19 - -	0 0 0
153	- 6 5	21 8 -	0 0 0	224	184 12 6	8 - -	205 5 - $\frac{1}{2}$
154	- 4 11	1 8 -	- 6 9 $\frac{1}{2}$		BACKERGUNGE.
155	161 1 10 $\frac{1}{2}$	6,500 - -	0 0 0	225	108 7 6	58 - -
156	11 11 9	22 - -	0 0 0	226	640 12 10	1,200 - -
157	15 11 1	630 - -	0 0 0	227	12 12 10	1 1 -
158	22 12 11	500 - -	24 4 2 $\frac{1}{2}$	228	19 13 9 $\frac{1}{2}$	- 1 -
159	16 1 1	35 - -	0 0 0	229	13 3 5 $\frac{1}{2}$	- 1 -
160	175 3 6	132 - -	229 - 8	230	108 7 6	34 - -
161	80 9 5	11,900 - -	0 0 0	231	383 7 7 $\frac{1}{2}$	10,600 - -
162	311 7 5 $\frac{1}{2}$	60,010 - -	407 12 9 $\frac{1}{2}$	232	3 4 6	29 - -
163	- 5 4	- 5 6	0 0 0	233	2 2 2	2 7 -
164	3 3 2 $\frac{1}{2}$	3 4 9	0 0 0	234	9 9 7 $\frac{1}{2}$	11 8 -
165	- 8 6 $\frac{1}{2}$	- 1 -	0 0 0	235	8 - -	4 - -
166	- 12 9 $\frac{1}{2}$	- 13 -	0 0 0	236	4 12 10	- 1 -
167	- 3 2 $\frac{1}{2}$	4 - -	0 0 0	237	1 13 10 $\frac{1}{2}$	- 1 -
168	2 2 1 $\frac{1}{2}$	212 - -	0 0 0	238	108 7 6	3 - -
169	- 1 7 $\frac{1}{2}$	7 4 -	0 0 0	239	309 13 9 $\frac{1}{2}$	5,600 - -
170	11 2 4 $\frac{1}{2}$	132 - -	0 0 0	240	559 11 11 $\frac{1}{2}$	11,100 - -
171	7 7 5 $\frac{1}{2}$	9 - -	0 0 0	241	129 7 2 $\frac{1}{2}$	75 - -
172	2 12 1 $\frac{1}{2}$	170 - -	0 0 0	242	475 12 11	625 - -
173	2 15 2 $\frac{1}{2}$	2 - -	0 0 0	243	2 2 2	10 - -
174	- 3 2 $\frac{1}{2}$	80 - -	0 0 0	244	10 - 7	70 - -
175	6 6 5	501 - -	0 0 0	245	2 5 6 $\frac{1}{2}$	35 - -
176	17 1 1	7 - -	0 0 0		BURDWAN.
177	1 1 1	- 1 -	0 0 0	246	18 4 5	43 - -
178	4 14 10 $\frac{1}{2}$	- 1 -	0 0 0	247	11 8 11	24 - -
179	- 12 9 $\frac{1}{2}$	1 - -	0 0 0	248	10 1 11	201 - -
180	- 3 2 $\frac{1}{2}$	4 - -	0 0 0	249	18 6 5	62 - -
181	1 1 1	1 4 -	0 0 0	250	11 8 11	40 - -
182	- 5 3	2 - -	0 0 0	251	3 15 7	5 - -

Not available.

Number of Estates sold.	Sudder Jumma.	Price at which the Estate was knocked down.	Estimated Gross Rental.	Number of Estates sold.	Sudder Jumma.	Price at which the Estate was knocked down.	Estimated Gross Rental.
252	5 14 2	66 - -	Not available.	270	22 3 6	324 - -	4 7 -
253	5 9 7	28 - -		271	- 6 6	12 - -	- 13 -
254	22 14 8	210 - -		272	12 10 -	15 - -	12 10 -
255	11 6 1	6 - -		273	32 6 6	33 - -	145 13 3
256	11 13 9	6 8 -		274	12 8 -	18 - -	56 4 -
257	- 7 3	- 8 -		275	297 11 6	1,385 - -	366 3 3½
258	- 6 8	- 8 -		276	172 - 1	1,205 - -	212 15 3
259	- 10 3	- 11 -		277	134 6 1½	605 - -	166 6 6
260	6 4 -	245 - -		278	371 3 2	8,500 - -	0 0 0
261	5 14 2	142 - -		279	85 4 10	506 - -	100 5 8
				280	191 15 -	3,225 - -	0 0 0
24 PERGUNNAHS.				281	1 2 3	50 - -	0 0 0
262	25 5 6	1,830 - -	0 0 0	282	1 12 11	10 - -	3 9 9
263	2 6 9	90 - -	0 0 0	283	- 11 3	2 - -	1 6 5
264	2 10 11	40 - -	0 0 0	284	- 7 -	25 - -	- 14 -
265	3 7 3	60 - -	6 14 5	285	35 - -	390 - -	0 0 0
266	5 11 9	20 - -	11 11 6	286	372 6 1	5,500 - -	0 0 0
267	38 3 5	2,775 - -	0 0 0	287	597 14 11	7,000 - -	0 0 0
268	7 5 2	155 - -	7 5 2	288	499 - -	7,750 - -	0 0 0
269	28 - 8	670 - -	56 1 3	289	30,148 9 3	1,300 3 -	0 0 0

Appendix, No. 7.

STATEMENT furnished by Mr. Larmour, General Manager Bengal Indigo Company, regarding several Ryots who had cut a large average of Plant.

NAMES OF RYOTS.	Page.	Puttanjat No.	Land under Advances.	Bundles cut.	Average per Beegah.	NAMES OF RYOTS.	Page.	Puttanjat No.	Land under Advances.	Bundles cut.	Average per Beegah.
Mulnath:						Barrackpore:
Nizam Sheik - - -	1	588	1 10	60	40	Tara Chund Ghose - -	314	665	3 10	89 $\frac{1}{2}$	25 $\frac{3}{4}$
Bis-u Sheik - - -	6	594	4 0	81	20 $\frac{1}{2}$	"Burha" Madab Ghose -	316	667	3 0	81 $\frac{1}{2}$	27
Bahadur Sirdar - -	14	602	2 0	75	37 $\frac{1}{2}$	Madhu Watun Mundal -	331	682	1 0	30	30
Satabdi Mullick - -	16	604	4 10	91	20 $\frac{1}{2}$	Tinkaori Ghose - - -	333	684	1 0	32 $\frac{1}{2}$	32 $\frac{1}{2}$
Ramprasad Satak Kalu	21	609	2 0	46 $\frac{1}{2}$	23 $\frac{3}{8}$
Suderpore:						Ghazipore:
Anundo Ghose - - -	31	620	4 10	94 $\frac{1}{2}$	21 $\frac{1}{2}$	Jamir Mundal - - -	348	1,006	5 0	130 $\frac{1}{2}$	26
Gobindo Ghose - - -	32	621	4 0	87	21 $\frac{1}{2}$	Jai Nal Mundal - - -	354	1,012	3 0	72 $\frac{1}{2}$	24
Kamal Ghose - - -	41	630	1 10	34 $\frac{1}{2}$	23	Kuchil Ghose - - -	359	1,017	1 10	33	22
Jogeshur Ghose - - -	54	643	1 0	38	38	Omberpore:
Notredenga:						Taju Mundal - - -	380	62	3 10	67 $\frac{1}{2}$	19 $\frac{1}{2}$
Nalu Mundal - - -	55	358	2 10	76	30 $\frac{1}{2}$	Munu Mundal - - -	404	86	1 0	20 $\frac{1}{2}$	20 $\frac{1}{2}$
Dinu Mundal - - -	58	361	7 0	200	28 $\frac{1}{2}$	Panchpotta:
Badun Mundal - - -	62	365	1 0	24 $\frac{1}{2}$	24 $\frac{1}{2}$	Mohun Dass Bairagi - -	427	473	1 0	32 $\frac{1}{2}$	32 $\frac{1}{2}$
Sati Suntoosh Mundal	63	366	10 0	231	23	Mohun Ghose - - -	429	475	3 0	71 $\frac{1}{2}$	23 $\frac{1}{2}$
Kadir Khalassi - - -	65	368	3 10	100 $\frac{1}{2}$	28 $\frac{1}{2}$	Molong Mundal - - -	432	478	2 10	53 $\frac{1}{2}$	21
Baradenga:						Gopal Ghurami - - -	433	479	2 0	56 $\frac{1}{2}$	28
Bhagomunto Sirdar -	81	384	11 0	294 $\frac{1}{2}$	26 $\frac{1}{2}$	Ramdhun Ghose - - -	436	482	2 10	61	24
Haran Ghose - - -	102	405	1 0	32 $\frac{1}{2}$	32 $\frac{1}{2}$	Udai Ghose - - -	437	483	2 10	67 $\frac{1}{2}$	27
Saili:						Umesh Ghose - - -	438	484	2 10	52	21
Katabdi Mundal - - -	110	988	2 0	41 $\frac{1}{2}$	20 $\frac{1}{2}$	Chitokongapore:
Fulia:						Seraj Mundal - - -	506	1,069	1 10	36	24
Sodi Mundal - - -	129	1,121	2 0	46 $\frac{1}{2}$	23 $\frac{1}{2}$	Taju Mundal - - -	509	1,072	2 0	55 $\frac{1}{2}$	27 $\frac{1}{2}$
Raju Mundal - - -	155	1,377	3 10	74 $\frac{1}{2}$	21	Nokpote:
Gopalnuggur:						Gungadur Naik - - -	553	687	5 0	156 $\frac{1}{2}$	31
Taju Mundal - - -	191	851	5 0	141 $\frac{1}{2}$	28 $\frac{1}{2}$	Ramdhun Boikanto Biswas	554	688	8 0	230	28 $\frac{1}{2}$
Takur Dass Chango -	194	854	2 0	42	21	Gobindo Bhogoban Dass	568	703	1 0	27 $\frac{1}{2}$	27 $\frac{1}{2}$
Ishur Ghose - - -	216	876	4 0	80 $\frac{1}{2}$	20	Ishur Mundal - - -	567	702	1 0	28	28
Porom Ghose - - -	220	880	1 0	20 $\frac{1}{2}$	20 $\frac{1}{2}$	Sham Prem Dass - - -	609	1,348	11 0	293	26 $\frac{1}{2}$
Rampore:						Tinkaori Dass - - -	610	1,349	6 0	122 $\frac{1}{2}$	20 $\frac{1}{2}$
Mandari Biswas - - -	303	929	1 10	37	24 $\frac{1}{2}$	Madhubore:
Baoul Kani Mundal -	304	930	3 0	64 $\frac{1}{2}$	21 $\frac{1}{2}$	Ishur Chundur Biswas -	731	147	2 0	51	25 $\frac{1}{2}$
						Ramkumar Biswas - - -	732	148	6 0	147 $\frac{1}{2}$	24 $\frac{1}{2}$
						Ramsunder Mundal - - -	738	155	11 0	265	24
						Shibram Ghose - - -	743	160	5 0	164 $\frac{1}{2}$	33
						Kartik Biswas - - -	744	161	12 0	436 $\frac{1}{2}$	36 $\frac{1}{2}$
						Menazuddin Sirdar - -	746	163	2 0	46 $\frac{1}{2}$	23 $\frac{1}{2}$
						Ishur Gobindo Ghose - -	751	168	4 0	93 $\frac{1}{2}$	23 $\frac{1}{2}$

NAMES OF RYOTS.	Page.	Puttan- jat No.	Land under Advances.	Bundles cut.	Average per Begaah.	NAMES OF RYOTS.	Page.	Puttan- jat No.	Land under Advances.	Bundles cut.	Average per Begaah.
Shobipore:						Mauchdah:
Bungsidar Sirkar - - -	774	288	12 0	367½	30½	Poramkani Mundal - - -	1018	26	6 10	156½	23½
Holoram Sirkar - - -	777	291	2 0	60½	30½	Binod Mundal - - -	1019	27	4 10	115½	25½
Ishur Mundal - - -	779	293	2 10	81	32½	Daim Mundal - - -	1021	29	1 0	33½	33½
Jai Urjun Mundal - - -	792	306	4 0	87½	21½	Mohauptore:
Modhusudan Ghose - - -	798	312	2 0	50½	25½	Bahadur Mundal - - -	1026	267	4 0	81½	20½
Natobar Ghose - - -	810	324	1 10	41½	27½	Magore Khali:
Umesh Kapalu - - -	811	325	1 0	28½	28½	Bisonath Kaori - - -	1054	976	0 10	10	20
Monigram:						Thoasde:
Haladhar Kapali - - -	846	108	1 0	25½	25½	Fakir Chand Dass - - -	1061	1,210	2 10	64½	26
Joyan Gaun - - -	857	119	1 10	46½	31	Tinkaori Ghose - - -	1066	1,225	3 0	83	27½
Bolnaipore:						Digambur Dass - - -	1072	1,221	1 0	33	33
Satak Sheik - - -	874	4	2 10	71½	28½	Nitai Dass - - -	1074	1,223	0 10	11	22
Nussir Mundal - - -	875	5	1 10	37½	25	Mothora:
Harup Kani Mundal - - -	877	7	3 0	94	31½	Sadi Dhobak - - -	1097	938	7 0	215	30½
Sirang Mundal - - -	882	21	1 0	31½	31½	Suribut Mundal - - -	1102	943	4 0	94½	23½
Momar Khan - - -	883	22	10 0	254½	25½	Chandpore:
Hoodah:						Ishur Dass - - -	1145	980	5 0	136½	27½
Gurini Daim Mundal - - -	897	1,270	1 0	29½	29½	Gour Chunder Dass - - -	1146	981	5 10	157½	28½
Gopal Mali - - -	915	1,288	2 0	52½	26½	Kinu Ghose - - -	1147	942	3 10	101½	29
Malihara:						Doorgapore:
Jakir Mundal - - -	928	646	4 0	108	27	Molong Mundal - - -	1166	189	2 10	67	26½
Guru Chund Mundle - - -	939	657	1 0	21	21	Gobindpore:
Monohurpore:						Kashinath Ghose - - -	1222	239	2 10	78½	31½
Ram Mohun Dutt - - -	946	435	2 10	65	26	Katabdi Sirdar - - -	1246	455	11 0	220½	20
Chini Mundal - - -	949	438	4 0	91	22	Podu Sirdar - - -	1210	227	11 0	240½	21
Kinn Mundal - - -	950	439	2 10	66	26½	Bharutpore:
Bholai Mundal - - -	951	440	4 10	116	25½	Gour Ghose - - -	1254	523	3 10	74	21
Panchu Mundal - - -	952	441	6 10	202	31	Kharani Mundal - - -	1259	528	6 10	166	25½
Paunparha:						Radanath Ghose - - -	1265	533	6 0	144	24
Madhu Ghose - - -	984	1,339	2 0	43½	21½	Shuntospore:
Kala Chand Ghose - - -	985	1,340	1 10	36	24	Shabul Penda - - -	1310	1,100	1 0	61	16
Molong Mundal - - -	987	1,342	1 0	33	33	Balia:
Aushur Haut:						Suntosh Mundal - - -	1334	1,192	2 0	43	21½
Satak Goldar - - -	993	334	4 0	84	21
Ghulami Goldar - - -	994	335	4 0	90½	22½

Appendix, No. 8.

EXTRACT from Mr. Larmour's Books, showing the Debit and Credit Accounts of Three Ryots.

ACCOUNT of TAJU MUNDAL of AMRAPORE.

CREDIT.	Rs. a. p.	DEBIT.	Rs. a. p.
Indigo plant delivered according to book, 67½ bundles, at 6 bundles per rupee -	11 4 -	26 December. Balance of 1858, page No. 174, for 3½ begaahs - - - -	36 6 7
Seed delivered - - - -	- 4 -	This year's advances - - - -	3 - -
	Rs. 11 8 -	Stamp - - - -	- 4 -
		TOTAL - - - Rs.	39 10 7
		Expense of cultivation - - - -	- 10 -
		Cutting of plant - - - -	- 8 -
		Price of seed - - - -	1 12 -
		Carting - - - -	- 13 6
		TOTAL - - - Rs.	43 6 1
		Deduct received - - - -	11 8 -
		Balance against Ryot - - - Rs.	31 14 1

ACCOUNT OF HARO CHAND MUNDAL of KANASAUL.

CREDIT.		DEBIT.
Indigo plant delivered according to account, 37½ bundles at 6 bundles per rupee - - - - -	Rs. a. p. 6 4 -	7th January. Balance of 1858, at page No. 557, on 3 beegahs. 1 Additional 1 beegah, or 4 beegahs in all. TOTAL - - - Rs.	Rs. a. p. 59 2 -
		Present advances - - - - -	2 8 -
		Stamp - - - - -	- 8 -
		TOTAL - - - Rs.	62 2 -
		Expense of cutting the plant - - -	- 8 -
		Price of seed - - - - -	2 2 9
		Carting - - - - -	- 7 6
		TOTAL - - - Rs.	65 4 -
		Deduct received - - - - -	6 4 3
		Balance against the ryot - - - Rs.	59 - 3

ACCOUNT OF HANIF MUNSHI MUNDAL of GHAZIPORE.

CREDIT.		DEBIT.
Indigo plant delivered according to account, 20½ bundles at 6 bundles per rupee - - - - -	Rs. a. p. 3 6 8	4th January. Balance of 1858, at page No. 636, 3 beegahs - - - - -	Rs. a. p. 67 3 -
Seed - - - - -	- 4 -	This year's advances - - - - -	2 8 -
		Stamp - - - - -	- 8 -
TOTAL - - - Rs.	3 10 8	TOTAL - - - Rs.	70 3 -
		Weeding - - - - -	- 1 3
		Cutting - - - - -	- 8 -
		Price of seed - - - - -	1 4 -
		Carting - - - - -	- 4 3
		TOTAL - - - Rs.	72 4 6
		Deduct received - - - - -	3 10 8
		Balance against ryot - - - Rs.	68 9 10

I, Hanif Munshi Mundal, having compared my account with the factory, acknowledge a balance against me of Rs. 68. 9. 10., and for the year 1860, I received 1-8 advance for 3 beegahs of land, and have given an acknowledgment this 27th December 1859.

Appendix, No. 9.

STATEMENT filed by Mr. R. T. Larmour, showing the Number of Indigo Ryots of the Bengal Indigo Company Concerns who received excess in 1858-59.

NAME OF CONCERN.	Total Number of Ryots.	Number of Ryots who received excess Payment for Plant delivered.
Mulnath Concern - - - - -	11,157	837
Katgarra Concern - - - - -	4,876	286
Khalbolia Concern - - - - -	4,971	739
Patkabbarri Concern - - - - -	2,196	586
TOTAL - - -	23,200	2,448

Appendix, No. 10.

App. No. 10.

TRANSLATIONS of Forms of Three Agreements to cultivate Indigo.

(1.)

SRI SRI DOORGA SHAHA.

To the High in Dignity Srijut Joy Kissen
Mookerjee.

THIS ikrar for contract of an indigo advance is executed by Sri Sheikh Ashruf, to the following effect:—

I am a neel dadun ryot (i.e. a tenant receiving an advance for the cultivation of indigo) of your working indigo factory at Hasnan, in pergunnah Chowmaha. In the khata (account books) of the year 1263, there is a balance, according to calculation, of Rs. 2. 5. 18. on account of one beegah of land, to which add 10 annas received to-day as this year's advance. Being thus a debtor, in the aggregate, of Rs. 2. 15. 18., I, under contract, give in writing this agreement. From the year 1264 to the year 1273, during these 10 years, I shall cultivate indigo, and deliver the indigo plant at your indigo factory at Hasnan at the rate of 10 bundles for the rupee. Whatever expenses I shall take from you on account of indigo seed, cultivation, conveyance, &c., I shall, according to calculation, deduct the same from the price of the indigo plant; if anything be due to me, I shall receive it in cash. During the term of the contract, I shall conform to the advance in proportion of the land at the rate of the said advance, and cultivate indigo on the land at the above advance, and receive the value of the indigo leaves at the factory rates. If, through malice, I cause any injury in the cultivation of indigo, I shall make it good by calculating the damages of the manufactured indigo. Therefore, I have by way of contract, given in writing this engagement. The end. Year 1264, date 15th Posh.

Witnesses.

Sri Kalachand Koonwar, inhabitant of Boros-hanthu.

Sri Hiru Haru, inhabitant of Oojanu.

Sri Bhadrinath Ghose, inhabitant of Hasnan.

Sri Kedar Khan, inhabitant of Hasegara.

Writer of this. Doorga Churn Chattopadhyaya, inhabitant of Doomlah, has not put his name to this agreement.

(2.)

SRI SRI HURL

To the High in Dignity Mr. John White, of the Hanskhali Factory.

THIS agreement on account of indigo advance for a limited period is executed by Sri ———, to the following effect:—

I am a neel dadun ryot (tenant who receives an advance to cultivate indigo) of the Sahib's factory at the sum of rupees on account of beegahs of land is the advance of the year 1858-59, and on adjusting the accounts of 1857-58, Rs. is the balance against me, which is stated to be on account of the cultivation of beegahs of land. This, together with the value of stamped paper for the agreement aggregating Rs. as advances for the present and past years, I have received on beegahs of land. Accordingly, I, of my own accord, tender this kabulyat, regarding the cultivation of indigo on beegahs of land, and delivering indigo plant and indigo seed, year by year, for a term of five years, from the year 1858-59 to the year 1863-64, to this effect. Having cultivated indigo every year on the said beegahs of land for which advance has been paid, I shall deliver the indigo plant to the factory. I shall have the Lal and fertile lands, and lands fit for indigo cultivation, measured every year by the amin and khalasis of the factory, by the old factory rope, which is 55 yards long, each yard being 32 inches in length, and mark them off, and till and cultivate them by the 30th March, cultivating indigo on the surveyed lands from time to time as I am ordered, and weed and improve them at the proper time.

The terms for cultivating the lands for which an advance has been received, are, that I shall take every year, for each beegah, country indigo seed at the rate of three seers, Purnea seed at four seers, and seed from the Upper Provinces at the rate of five seers. I shall pay its price at four annas per beegah. If, at the time of weeding, good indigo be produced, then I shall, as required, receive weeding expenses. I shall, as I may be ordered, cut the indigo plant, both of the first and second cuttings, on account of the entire land for which advance has been received, within the 30th September of each year, and deliver it to the factory. I shall pay without objection, the expenses incurred by the concern for employing persons to cut the indigo. The expenses incurred for conveying the indigo to the factory by means of the boats and carts of the concern, shall be borne by me: I shall receive for the first indigo crop at the rate of four bundles for the rupee, and for the second crop at the rate of six bundles per rupee, each bundle being as much as may be contained in an iron chain four cubits long, at 18 inches per cubit.

I shall dig up by the roots the indigo seed on the lands for which advance has been given, bring it to the factory and thrash it, and receive the price thereof separately at the rate of four rupees per maund, each seer weighing 80 sicca rupees. If in this, I, through wickedness, sell the indigo seed at another place, or fail to deliver it at the factory, then I shall pay for the same at a price of 10 rupees per maund. Except the above advance, I shall not take a second advance under another name. If I do not every year clear and cultivate the lands for which an advance has been given, and do not sow the proper quantity on the above lands, or if I give the indigo of that land to any other factory, then I shall pay the above mentioned gentleman every year, the profits of the manufactured indigo at the rate of 10 rupees per beegah. Every year, at the close of the cutting of indigo, the advance and the expenses for seed sown, and for the weeding, carriage, &c., being added together, whatever balance may on adjusting the hath-chittis be found due on calculation, the same

R R 4

(after

App. No. 10. (after keeping in force the aforesaid amount of advance every year during the above term), as also whatever may be due by me for the price of the indigo seed sown, and the expenses for weeding, &c., shall be deducted from the price of the indigo plant, and if there be any surplus, I shall receive it. During the above term of five years, I shall cultivate indigo and deliver the indigo plant and indigo seed; if, on the expiry of the above term, there be any balance remaining, I shall, in proportion thereto, cultivate indigo land in the year 1864-65, deliver the indigo plant, and clear the balance. If, during the above term, on the plea of having delivered indigo plant, I neglect to cultivate indigo in any year, I shall, as stated above, make good the price of manufactured indigo. If I fail to do so, you shall realise it by the laws in force. I shall not during the above term, petition to deposit money. If I do so, it is inadmissible. Therefore, I have given in writing this agreement for a limited period. Year 1859.

Witnesses' names.

(3.)

SRI SRI DOORGA.

To the High in Dignity the Worshipful
Mr. F. Maclagan.

THIS agreement of an indigo advance is executed by Sri Lakhan Poora, inhabitant of Bastopore, to the following effect:—

I am a neel-dadun ryot (i. e., a tenant receiving an advance for the cultivation of indigo), of your Loknathpore factory. On adjustment of the accounts of the year 1858, Rs. 3. 1. 4. are proved to be due; and I have taken two rupees to-day on account of hal-dadun, or advance for the present year, and two annas is the value of stamped paper for the agreement. Thus, inclusive of past and present years, having received in the aggregate an advance of Rs. 5. 3. 4. on account of two and a half beegahs of land, I, of my own accord, give in writing this agreement for a period of nine years, from the year 1859 to the year 1867, on condition that I shall annually produce indigo plant, and the indigo seed grown at the second cutting on the said land, and deliver the same at your factory; that during the above term, having tilled and cultivated every year the land most suitable for indigo, taken seed from your factory, sown the seed, and by means of weeding and other process of cultivation, at the fit time, produced indigo plant and cut it, I shall deliver it at your factory, and receive its value at the rate of six bundles for the rupee. I shall pay for the value of the seed which I shall take for the purpose of sowing, at the rate of eight annas per beegah. Having reaped the indigo seed grown on this land after the first cut, and taken it to your factory, and thrashed it down, I shall receive its value at the rate of four rupees for a maund weighing 80 siccas (per seer). Whatever money I shall receive for cultivation of the indigo lands, or for any other matter, shall be debited to me in my accounts. If, from wickedness or neglect, I do not cultivate indigo, or if in delivering the indigo plant or indigo seed to you, I practise any sort of deceit, then, with reference to the indigo market, whatever may be your claim for manufactured indigo on each beegah, I shall without objection pay for the same. For the above term, I and my heirs shall carry out the conditions of this agreement. I have mentioned the price of the seed to be sown at the rate of eight annas per beegah. Should the market price of the seed rise, then it is optional with you to increase or decrease this rate according to the market price. Therefore, I have given in writing of my own accord this agreement of an indigo advance. End. The Bengal year 1259, dated 12th Magh.

Witnesses.

Sri Kutubdi Sheikh, inhabitant of Loknathpore.
Sri Azim Sirdar, inhabitant of ditto.
Sri Rupni Sheikh, of the said factory.

App. No. 11.

Appendix, No. 11.

STATEMENT showing the Number of serious Offences connected with Indigo Planting which occurred in the undermentioned Districts within the last Five Years.

Tirhoot.—Only one such case occurred in this district; it originated in a long-standing dispute between the owners of Damooderpore Nundun. One party, that of Rupnarain Chowdari, claimed a 5 annas 17 gundahs and $2\frac{1}{2}$ chittacks interest in the undivided village, while the opposite party, that of Hurryhur Chowdari, denied their title to more than 2 annas $11\frac{1}{2}$ gundahs interest. Finding their opponents too strong for them, Rupnarain's side gave their share in farm to the Keota factory. Indigo was sown upon the disputed lands and uprooted by the opposing party, who were punished for it by the joint magistrate. That officer found that the lands were in the occupancy of Rupnarain's party, and that therefore the possession of the factory should be upheld. He also bound down the other side to keep the peace. These orders, however, were reversed in appeal, on the ground that the dispute was one which properly belonged to the civil courts to decide, but it was left to the magistrate, if he chose, to bind over both parties to keep the peace. The question of possession thus being left open, Hurryhur's people immediately proceeded to sow the lands with chuna and other crops. On this followed a succession of representations from the contending parties respectively of apprehended breaches of the peace, till, on the 14th January last, the nearest police jemadar, although thus repeatedly warned, went off to the extremity of his jurisdiction to inquire into some other case. On the next morning the factory jemadar led a large body of men, said to be 500 in number, armed with weapons, to the fields in question, and ploughed up and destroyed the crops which had been sown by Hurryhur's party, who appeared to have made no resistance, only protesting against the proceeding, for which several of them were cut down or assaulted. Some of the wounds were very severe, and one man died in hospital. Arson was also charged, but not proved. The factory jemadar, named Durpi Chowdari, and eleven others, were convicted at the sessions sions and sentenced, the former to ten and the rest to seven years imprisonment.

Dacca.—There were two cases of an aggravated nature, of which one occurred between the people of Mr. Wise and those of Moulavi Abdul Ali, when Gopaul Khalassi, belonging to the first party, fell a victim to the outrage. Ten persons of both parties were committed to the sessions court for trial, and eight of them were convicted and sentenced to imprisonment. The following are the Sudder Court's remarks on this case:—

"This case comes before us both as a referred and as an appealed case; as a referred one, because the law officer convicts the prisoners as concerned in a mutual affray attended with murder. The sessions judge convicts them of riot attended with murder.

"Baboo Anodapershaud, for the prisoners, urges, first, that his clients have been convicted on insufficient evidence; second, that if guilty they can only be deemed guilty of mutual affray and not of riot. These two pleas rest so entirely on the general evidence that it will be the best course to consider them in connexion with that evidence.

"Witnesses 1, 16, 17, 18, depose to the case being one of forcible trespass on the lands of Moulavi Abdul Ali, and of plunder on the part of Wise's people, and to Gopaul, the deceased, being a servant of Moulavi Abdul Ali, and having been killed by Wise's people, and to two others of Abdul Ali's people being wounded by the same, all three having been carried off by Wise's people on an elephant. Witnesses 4, 5, 6, 7, depose to the people of Moulavi Abdul Ali having attacked the Amin and a few people ploughing for Wise on the land of the latter, and to their having killed Gopaul, a servant of Wise's. The witnesses on both sides give this conflicting evidence, and this court has only to determine how much of the whole is to be trusted, for we cannot subscribe to the doctrine urged by counsel, that where we distrust any we must distrust the whole. This plea has been before overruled (vide Joyperkas Sing's case, 14th May, volume 7th, part 1st, page 657). We are disposed to believe that part of the evidence of witnesses, Nos. 16, 17, 18, in regard to Wise's people plundering the village Hematpore with a band of 300 or 400 armed men; for the testimony as to details is most vague and unsatisfactory. We are at the same time not disposed to credit the evidence of witnesses 4, 5, 6, 7, as to the deceased, the Amin, one other person, and two or three boys being the only parties concerned on the part of Wise, for the ability to take off deceased (to secure his body when dead would be an equal object to both parties, since they each claim him as their servant when alive) contradicts such evidence.

"The objections of Baboo Annoda Pershaud as to the precise number of men deposed by witnesses 4, 5, 6, 7, to have struck lattee blows, and his plea as to the distance, 200 cubits, being too far to enable the witnesses to see and identify persons, do not affect the main matter in this conviction, viz., whether prisoners were or were not concerned in one or other of the offences found by the law officer and sessions judge respectively.

"On the whole we think the evidence to their being so concerned is sufficient, but we think the circumstances of the case show that there was a mutual affray, and of that we convict the prisoners.

"Baboo Annoda Pershaud has urged that in this view the measure of punishment should be reduced.

We do not concur in this. The fact of a conviction of mutual affray by criminating two opposite parties does not exculpate one of them. The pleader's view that the term implies that one party was the aggressor is not necessarily correct, nor is it at all proved in this case that his clients were not the aggressors, though we are not prepared to say that it is proved that they were so. In fact, we are satisfied that the prisoners were engaged in a mutual affray attended with murder. There is no proof that, for self-preservation of prisoners, such mutual affray was absolutely necessary, and this is the only exculpatory plea the law recognises, or this court can adopt.

"Looking to the frequency of affrays in Eastern Bengal, and to the necessity of severe punishment with a view to endeavour to prevent them, we decline to interfere with the measure of punishment.

"We reject the appeal.

"We have to add that Mr. Allan was about to address the Court for Wise, when Mr. Fagan objected, on the ground that Wise was not a party as prosecutor or prisoner. We admit the objection, as under such circumstances Wise himself could not personally have pleaded; as, too, his interests were those connected with his civil rights, and as the offence was one properly coming before the courts by a public prosecution.

"We have to notice to the sessions judge that many witnesses, both for the prosecution and the defence, do not appear to have been examined by him. In such cases, he should distinctly place on his records the reason why each witness entered in the calendar was not examined."

The second case was inquired into by Mr. Assistant Bell, and the prisoners on the part of Mr. Wise were convicted and sentenced to various terms of imprisonment by him and Mr. Assistant Magistrate Harvey. The remarks of Mr. Bell fully illustrate the nature of the case. In the village of Oojan Kalika Prosaud are two strips of chur land, on which Mr. Wise has for many years cultivated indigo. Mr. Wise, with certain coshanees, held possession of this village as talookdar. The zemindar disputed Mr. Wise's talookdari rights, and obtained their formal annulment by a decree of the Sudder Court. In Ashar last Mr. Wise's talookdari rights accordingly ceased, and the zemindar was formally put in possession of the village by the nazir of the Civil Court. In relinquishing possession of the village as talookdar, Mr. Wise considered that he still retained possession of the two churs as cultivator. The villagers, who were adverse to the cultivation of indigo, were of the opposite opinion. They considered that Mr. Wise's connexion with the village ceased upon the zemindar acquiring possession. Hence the present quarrel. The villagers, on the one side, were anxious to obtain the chur for themselves; Mr. Wise, on the other hand, was determined to retain possession. Several petitions were presented to the court by Mr. Wise, to the effect that the villagers were attempting to oust him from indigo land which he had for a long time cultivated. The darogah was accordingly ordered to see that no one interfered with Mr. Wise in the exercise of his just rights, provided that the land was truly in his possession.

Eventually the darogah repaired to the spot, and it was in his presence on the morning of the 10th of March that the present disturbance occurred. A large concourse of Mr. Wise's people, with ploughs, two elephants, and a number of lattials,

App. No. 11. lattials, marched upon the chur. Reaching the chur, they divided themselves into three parties; one party advanced in the direction of the darogah and the police, another party made a rush for the village, while the remainder proceeded to plough the land. Immediately after three houses simultaneously caught fire. The villagers came up in a body in the direction of the burning houses, and Mr. Wise's lattials retreated to the middle of the chur. Seeing, however, that the villagers were few in number, they returned to the charge; elephants and lattials advanced; the villagers were driven through the village to an open maidan beyond; two men were wounded, and the rest dispersed. Mr. Wise's lattials then quietly retired, appropriating whatever they could lay their hands on in their retreat. By the orders of the magistrate, I investigated this case upon the spot. In forming an opinion on the merits of the case, the following points are necessary to be considered:—

1. Upon whom does the responsibility of this disturbance rest?

2. By whom were the houses burnt?

1. That the villagers were eager to prevent Mr. Wise cultivating the chur is clear enough; but they made no active demonstration until Mr. Wise's people left the chur and attacked the village. If Mr. Wise's men had remained on the chur, there would have been no disturbance, particularly as the police were on the spot. Mr. Wise's people provoked the disturbance by leaving the chur and marching upon the village. Moreover, if Mr. Wise's people had not been the aggressors, but had merely been acting in self defence, they would not have pursued the villagers over a distance of nearly half a mile. That they did so is not only clear from the evidence of the police and the other witnesses, but from circumstantial evidence as well. I distinctly traced the footprints of the elephants from the chur to the plain where the men were wounded. The responsibility, therefore, of the affray, in my opinion, clearly rests with Mr. Wise's people.

2. I now proceed to consider the second point. It is urged, on behalf of Mr. Wise, that the villagers themselves set fire to the houses, in order to aggravate the charge. This is by no means unlikely. Certainly no advantage could result from the burning of these small huts. Moreover, neither the police nor the other independent witnesses could swear that the houses were set on fire by Mr. Wise's men. The only direct evidence on this point is the evidence of the villagers, interested parties in the case. On these grounds I do not consider that this part of the charge is proved. The defendants have filed a petition in their defence. They object to the evidence of the witnesses taken on the 24th of March, on the ground that the former witnesses could not identify Mr. Wise's people, and that the fact of the present witnesses being able to do so renders their evidence suspicious. It is quite true that the witnesses, with one or two exceptions, who were examined on the 21st of March, declare that they could identify no one. But the reason of this was clear enough; they had all been that morning to Mr. Wise's cutcherry, under the plausible pretext of settling their dadun accounts. These dadun accounts had a wonderful effect upon the villagers. The men who, on my first arrival, were loud in their complaints now hung back. After waiting patiently for some time, I sent for the two head men of the village and the zemindar gomastah. They told me that Mr. Wise's amla, by threats and promises, were doing their utmost to hush up the case, and that they had so worked upon the minds of the villagers that no one dared to give evidence against them. I replied that the law would protect them, that such excuses would not be listened to, and that I expected the witnesses to come boldly forward and speak the truth. They promised, though with evident reluctance, to do what they could in the matter, and on the following day they produced the witnesses whose depositions were taken on the 24th of March at the thannah. The three defendants now before the court were apprehended by the darogah and his burkundazes immediately after the affray. Their share in the disturbance appears to me to have been small; as ryots of Mr. Wise, they were merely there to swell the number of Mr. Wise's followers. Taking part, however, in an unlawful assembly, they have rendered themselves liable to punishment; but as they have already undergone considerable hardship and annoyance, I content myself with sentencing them to punishment.

Moorshedabad.—Only one case, which arose out of a dispute in sowing indigo; vide Blue Book on Indigo Cultivation in Bengal, Part I., page 341, paragraph 3 to 6, of Mr. Assistant Magistrate Kean's Report, No. 94, dated 16th March 1860, The case is pending.

Bograh.—One case, in which an attack was made on an indigo planter. Twenty-five of the offenders were punished with six months' imprisonment and fine.

Furreedpore.—Four cases in the five years, in which several persons were sentenced to various periods of imprisonment.

Pubna.—Nine cases during the five years, being one case of breaking up indigo to sow rice, and one of plundering one gola house; one case of resistance to indigo sowing, attended with murder, and attacking and plundering a house in consequence of a dispute about indigo; one case of assembling lattials to sow by force; four cases of breaking up other crops to sow indigo, attended with arson; and one case of riot, attended with murder.

Malda.—One case of affray, attended with murder, in which the defendant was released.

Monghyr, Patna, Rajshahye, Mymensing, Rungpore, Bhagulpore, Shahabad, Burdwan.—No serious cases.

SERIOUS OFFENCES connected with Indigo in the District of Nuddea that have occurred during the last Five Years.

This Statement is printed at length, on account of the important space which the district has lately filled in public estimation.

Year and Office Number.	Prosecutors, &c.	Defendants, &c.	Charge, and Particulars of the Case.	Decision, Date, Appeal, Grounds of Acquittal.
1855:
No. 197	Budun Ghose, inhabitant of Boira, servant of Umesh Chunder Pal Chowdori.	Arthur Brodrick, planter, and others.	Murder of Bistu Ghose.—Bistu Ghose is said to have informed on May 26 against some of Mr. Brodrick's lattials , and have gone with some chowkidars to arrest them; Mr. B. and his party are said to have pursued them, whence an affray, in which Bistu Ghose was said to have been killed by clubs, and his body thrown into the Ganges.	Dismissed by deputy magistrate, Santipore, July 9, 1855, on the ground of being a got-up case; it was also proved that Bistu Ghose was still alive. August 7, 1855, appeal was made to the session judge against the order of deputy magistrate, but rejected on the ground that the deputy magistrate had gone fully into the case.
No. 101	Government - -	M. De Dombal, planter, and others.	Plunder.—Mr. De Dombal, with 150 lattials , is said to have gone and plundered two houses in Ischunderpore, in which attack two men were wounded. The attack was made because the ryots of Ischunderpore refused to take advances for indigo.	On July 31, 1855, Mr. De Dombal was acquitted; the rest of the defendants (5) were sentenced to one year's imprisonment and 100 rupees fine, or hard labour if not realised in seven days each. The deputy magistrate said that it appeared that Mr. De Dombal, though aware of the attack, was not present; that his son, M. F. De Dombal, was present. He was ordered to appear and give bail, but eventually did not come. Appeal was made to the session judge, who on August 23d, 1855, acquitted all the defendants.
1856:
No. 405	Asul Sheik, of Hurrah	Nobinchunder Biswas, gomashtha of Mr. Smith.	Illegal confinement.—* This case has been burnt, therefore no particulars can be given.	Imprisonment for three months, and a fine of 20 rupees, or two months additional, September 23, 1856.
No. 6	Government - -	(1) Rhada Mohun Chatterjee, and 40 others, in the service of Kalachund Bhat-tarcharjyo, zemindar of Belpokuria.	Riot and assault.—Mr. De Dombal gave information of an attack made on him by the defendant, to the thannah and the magistrate. Two of the defendants charged Mr. De Dombal with firing on them, who admitted that he did so, but for purposes of intimidation, not injury.	Defendant (1) sentenced to three months' imprisonment and 16 rupees fine in four days, in lieu of labour, and 100 rupees fine, or three months additional. Defendants (2, 3, 4, 5) sentenced to two months' imprisonment, and eight rupees fine in four days in lieu of labour, and 50 rupees fine or two months additional imprisonment each, November 5, 1856. Appeal to session judge on November 17. Defendant (1) acquitted; but decision against the rest upheld.
1857:
No. 26	Moti Ulla, servant of Mr. Larmour, Bengal Indigo Company.	(1) Raju Sirdar; (2) Loknath Bhose, and others, in service of Brijonath Pal Chowdari.	Illegal assemblage and attempt to commit breach of peace.—The defendants appear to have issued from Brijonath Pal Chowdari's factory, and proceeded in the direction of Mr. Larmour's factory (Boochankali). The thannah burkundazes being present, soon stopped any actual breach of the peace. Many previous disputes had existed between the parties, and Pal Chowdari was on recognizances.	Defendant (1) sentenced to 100 rupees fine or six months' imprisonment, and 20 rupees fine in lieu of labour, February 4, 1857. Two other defendants sentenced to the same, February 11, 1857. Defendant (2) to three months' imprisonment, and 12 rupees fine in lieu of labour, and 200 rupees fine or three months imprisonment additional, and 12 rupees in lieu of labour. Appeal to session judge, March 7, 1857. Defendant (2) was acquitted, on the grounds of insufficient proof; the rest of the decision upheld.
No. 326. 41.	Digambar Singh, burkundaz of Koturia factory (Mr. De Sharon's).	Ram Chunder Roy, Tara Chunder Roy, and others, talookdars of Joirampore.	Plunder and arson.—A quarrel exists between the factory and those talookdars. The defendants were said to have come and plundered a godown of the factory, assaulted the prosecutor, and carried off 64 head of cattle, a ledger book and 10 rupees.	Dismissed by deputy magistrate (Nuddea), February 24, 1857, because the evidence of the prosecutor and his witnesses was entirely at variance.
No. 136. 330.	Podai Turufdar, and others, servants of Motee Baboo, zemindar.	Shital Chunder Moorkerjee, and others, servants of Mr. Roberts, Bogoola factory.	Plunder of village of Hoseindanga.—There was said to have been an attack on this village on February 17, because the ryots of it were unwilling to take advances, or to let Mr. Roberts have the village in lease.	Struck off the file, May 30, 1857, on account of the absence of all parties to the plaint.

Serious Offences connected with Indigo in the District of Nuddea that have occurred during the last Five Years—continued.

Year and Office Number.	Prosecutors, &c.	Defendants, &c.	Charge, and Particulars of the Case.	Decision, Date, Appeal, Grounds of Acquittal.
858 : No. 18	Rammohun Sircar, servant of Mr. A. Hills, and Government and Akbur Sheik.	Isob Biswas, Vazir Sheik, Hurru Sheik, and others.	Riot, attended with wounding and plunder.—On May 11, 1858, about 80 inhabitants of the village of Betai attacked Mr. A. Hill's cutcherry in that village, took several papers, wounded a government peada and chowkeydar, then went to another quarter of the village, and plundered there and severely wounded six men. This last attack was made because the sufferers would not join them against the factory.	Isob Biswas and Brindawun Dutt, the leaders, fined 100 rupees, or six months' imprisonment with labour, or 15 rupees in lieu of labour, to be paid in five days. Four defendants, 50 rupees fine, or three months' imprisonment, 15 rupees to be paid in 5 days, or labour. Four defendants, 25 rupees fine, or six weeks' imprisonment, labour or five rupees in five days. Four defendants, 25 rupees fine, six months' imprisonment, labour or five rupees in five days. One defendant, 25 rupees fine, or six weeks' imprisonment, five rupees or labour as five days. Four defendants, 50 rupees fine, or three months' imprisonment, and 10 rupees in five days or labour. Appeal generally confirmed the order.
No. 159. 346. (a.)	Loknath Khalassi, servant of Mr. Larmour, Mulnath factory.	(1) Dorab Mundul, and three others, and 11 others.	Affray and assault - - - -	March 3, 1858, defendants (1, 2, 3, 4) sentenced to six months' imprisonment, and 200 rupees fine, or six months' addition with labour. Defendants (5-16), to three months' imprisonment, with labour.
(b.)	Ditto - - - -	Mainu, and others -	Affray and assault - - - -	March 31, 1858, acquitted, because the identification was not conclusive.
(c.)	Ditto - - - -	(1) Dorab Mundel, and six others.	Assault, wounding, riot - - - -	March 31, 1858, Defendant (1) sentenced to six months and 200 rupees fine or six months' labour. Defendants (2-6), three months with labour.
(d.)	Government - - - -	Issurchunder Biswas -	Attempt at assault (on the ground of a letter found in his house).	March 31, 1858, defendant bound over in two sureties of 500 rupees each for good conduct for one year.
(e.)	Ditto - - - -	Shamchunder Paul Chowdry, zemindar of the village in regard to which the dispute took place.	Breach of the peace (e).—Certain tenures in Dihi Sametalah were declared valid for the B. I. Company by the civil court. A disposition to oust the holders by leaguering the ryots and under-tenants existed. On this occasion they attacked Mr. Cockshott, the agent of the B. I. Company, quite unprovokedly on the morning of January 15, as he went to visit the plaintiffs. He was attacked by about 30 lattials , with two servants, wounded, but escaped on horseback.	March 31, 1858, held in recognizance to keep the peace in respect to the B. I. Company, in 5,000 rupees. Appeal to the session judge, but decision upheld.
No. 111. (a.)	Bosti Lall - - - -	(1) Mr. H. D. Tripp, and (2) Juggobundhu Shah, naib of Akupore factory.	Forcibly detaining timber.—It appeared that defendant (2), forcibly detained a quantity of timber belonging to the prisoners, while being conveyed down the river, near the Akupore factory; defendant (1), manager of the Bamondi concern, caused the timber to be removed to his own factory. The timber was first of all appropriated by defendant (2). The owner petitioned the darogah, who made it over to prosecutor in the presence of defendant (2), but it was gradually taken away by the factory people, and on one occasion, when the darogah and some police were present with a view to rescue the timber, defendant (1) was conspicuous in ordering the removal of the timber.	March 11, 1858, defendants sentenced to a fine; 200 rupees given as compensation to the prosecutor. Defendant (2), 100 rupees fine or two months' imprisonment.
(b.)	Rameshur. and Government.	(1) Mr. H. D. Tripp, (2) Kisto Lall, (3) Atabdi.	Illegal imprisonment of Rameshur.—Rameshur was in charge of the timber, gave information to the police of the detention of the timber, and came to Mr. Tripp at first to ask for the restoration of the timber. Mr. Tripp ordered defendants (2 and 3) to remove Rameshur, and confine him in a factory godown. Nothing was heard of him for three months. On February 15 information was given to the assistant magistrate, Kurrimpore, of his whereabouts. He was discovered by the magistrate in a deserted building, under the surveillance of defendant (2), when he was released.	Defendant (1) sentenced to fine of 300 rupees, and costs. Defendants (2, 3), 20 rupees fine each, or two months' imprisonment; out of this, 25 rupees compensation to Rameshur.

Serious Offences connected with Indigo in the District of Nuddea that have occurred during the last Five Years—continued.

Year and Office Number.	Prosecutors, &c.	Defendants, &c.	Charge, and Particulars of the Case.	Decision, Date, Appeal, Grounds of Acquittal.
1858: No. 17. (a.)	Government - - -	(1) Ramnarain Roy, (2) Joychund Sircar, and four others.	Affray, with plunder (a) - - -	June 14, 1858, defendants (1, 2) sentenced to six months, and 250 rupees fine or labour. Defendants (4, 5, 6), six months, and 20 rupees fine or labour. Appeal to sessions judge, decision upheld, July 30, 1858.
(b.)	Ditto - - -	Russi Takidgir, and others.	Affray, with homicide (b).—A dispute about a purchase in the putni lease of a share in the Sonapoot estate existed between Mr. Forlong and the other shareholders of the old talook. While this was being settled, this affray took place; a large party of the people were proceeding to erect a cutcherry, and were opposed by the villagers, and two or three men were said to be wounded; one was said to be killed.	June 14, 1858, acquitted, on ground of insufficient evidence.
(c.)	Ditto - - -	Madhu Sirdar - -	Affray, with plunder (c) - - -	June 19, 1858, six months' imprisonment, and 20 rupees fine or labour.
No. 549. 72.	Madun Ghose - -	Hurri Bhattacharj, and 15 others, Belpukuria factory.	Aggravated assault, with wounding and carrying off cattle.—An old dispute between the factory and the villagers was the original cause of this. There appears to have been a cattle trespass on the one hand, and a seizure of cattle by the factory people on the other; hence an affray, and the prosecutor wounded on the head.	This case was referred to the magistrate of Nuddea, on October 29, 1858, and was dismissed by him on the ground that the witnesses were palpably partially inclined, and that the prosecutor much misrepresented the case.
No. 637	Government - - -	(1) Kali Dass Chuckerbutty, (2) Gorai Sheik.	Riot, and resistance to the police.—There is a quarrel between the Loknathpore factory and the zemindar Brindhabun Chunder Sircar, especially about some leases. On this occasion, the cattle of the villagers of the zemindar was carried off by the factory people; the ryots rescued them; the factory people rallied, and headed by the defendants, opposed by the police, joined by another large body, and were with much difficulty stopped by the darogah and his burkundazes.	December 11, 1858, defendant (1), two months' imprisonment, and 50 rupees fine in two days, or labour. Defendant (2), two months' imprisonment, and 20 rupees fine in two days, or labour. Appeal to session judge upheld, March 25, 1859.
1859: No. 91. (a.)	Mr. E. Roberts, and Government.	Brindhabun Sircar -	Assembling armed men with intent to commit a breach of the peace.	May 12, 1859, 200 rupees fine or two months' imprisonment, and 2,000 rupees recognizance not to break the peace for a year.
(b.)	Ditto - - -	Swarup Ghose, and four others.	Illegal assemblage and assault of the prosecutor	May 12, 1859, two months' imprisonment, and 20 rupees fine or labour, each.
(c.)	Ditto - - -	Halodhur Ghose and four others.	Illegal assemblage and assault of the prosecutor (c).—Mr. Roberts, the manager of the Khalbolia concern of the B. I. Company, and his assistant Mr. Tweedje, going to take possession of Shibnibas, in which village defendants in the case were, prior to a lawsuit, the proprietors, were attacked by some armed men in the village; the plaintiff was wounded; five were identified. Defendant was convicted because these men had assembled in his house, and because of his antecedents with these planters.	May 12, 1859, defendant acquitted on the ground of generally insufficient evidence. June 23, 1859, Brindhabun Sircar acquitted, but security kept on. Decision confirmed against the rest by session judge.
No. 160 (a.)	Purno Chunder Chuckerbutty and others.	Srinath Biswas, gomahsta of the Poragatcha village (Mr. White, Bansberria).	Illegal assemblage and assault with wounding.	May 31, 1859, three months' imprisonment and 50 rupees fine or labour.
(b.)	Ditto - - -	Halodhur Ghose -	Illegal assemblage and assault with wounding.—A party of spearmen had collected in the Rampore village, apparently in the interest of the Bansberria factory, were observed by prosecutor and his burkundazes, who ordered them to be arrested; they resisted, and the defendant coming up ordered them to drive off the police; of these they knocked down one, and soon after retired. The identity of defendant in case (a) was clearly established.	Acquitted (1), because of doubt of identity in the Mohurri's mind; (2) Prosecutor's testimony that he was elsewhere engaged at the time of dispute. June 23, 1859, defendant in case (a) acquitted by the session judge.

Serious Offences connected with Indigo in the District of Nuddea that have occurred during the last Five Years—continued.

Year and Office Number.	Prosecutors, &c.	Defendants, &c.	Charge, and Particulars of the Case.	Decision, Date, Appeal, Grounds of Acquittal.
1859: No. 236	Miyajan Biswas and others of Govindpore: papers with Commissioner.	Servants in the Bamberria factory.	Affray, and seizure of cattle.—Some cattle were seized by the ryots as trespassing in their fields, and were being taken to the factory, when the assistant in charge ordered a rescue, and an affray followed, in which Shital Tarafdar was wounded, and carried off by the factory people. No cattle were rescued. Shital Tarafdar was never seen again, having died in confinement at some factory.	Defendants four months imprisonment each, and 50 rupees fine, or one month more each. The case of Shital Tarafdar has been separately tried, and is still under investigation.
No. 21	Kalichurn Sirkar (Ramnuggur factory).	Thakur Dayal and others.	Affray, attended with murder.—The factory people were taking trespassing cattle to the pound, when a rescue was made by the ryots, and a man wounded, so that he died afterwards.	At the sessions two defendants punished with four and three years' imprisonment, another acquitted.
No. 396	Ramdhon Kamar and others; papers with the Commissioner.	Mr. W. White and his servants (15).	Plunder.—Defendants assembled a force of club-men, and in open daylight attacked and plundered the village of Gobindpore, with a view to compel the villagers to sow indigo.	November 19, 1859, Mr. W. White fined 300 rupees, defendants 1, 12 released, 13, 15 sentenced to six months' imprisonment, and 20 rupees in lieu of labour.
No. 273. 383	Moniram Patak, of Shunkorparrah, Raya Pandey Baugh Pandey for Mr. Roberts.	Motee Lall Ghose, Noyan Ghose, Ram Sheik, Dinu Sheik, Brindhabon Sircar, and 12 others.	Illegal assemblage, assault, wounding.—Plaintiffs were digging up some land in front of Brindhabon Sircar's house. The latter ordered them to be stopped by force, and an affray ensued.	December 3, 1859, 16 defendants fined 25 rupees each or one month's imprisonment, and five rupees fine or labour. Brindhabon Sircar fined 50 rupees forfeiture of recognizance of 2,000 rupees.
1860: 9	Dinu Ghose, Nilmoni Napit.	Baoul Christian	Arson.—Defendant was accused of setting fire to some houses, at the instigation of the Dewan of Chandergote factory, of the Hadra concern, to make the village sow indigo. Acquitted, because of the inconsistency of evidence as to particulars of the fire, and on account of the character of the object and the instrument chosen for such an object.	Acquitted, February 14, 1860.
	Government - -	Dinu Ghose and Nilmoni Napit.	False complaint.—Countercharge charge to the above.	February 14, 1860, two months' imprisonment each, and 10 rupees fine or labour.
No. 104	Haris Dass - -	Ali Khan; and five servants of Mr. G. Smith, Ruttunpore factory.	Illegal imprisonment of prosecutor's father.—Prosecutor deposed that he heard of his father having been seized by the six prisoners and taken to the factory, went there, but could hear nothing of him. Dismissed by magistrate because witness and plaintiff palpably false.	March 1, 1860, dismissed.
No. 1	Nuffur Mandhul and four others, ryots.	Jadub Roy, Dewan of the Hurra factory and others.	Illegal arrest and imprisonment.—It was alleged that Biro Mundul, son of prosecutor, and two others, were arrested by lattials under the orders of defendant (1); that they were kept at the Hurra factory a day and night; that they were sent to two other factories; that one of them escaped, who gave information to the darogah, and that the rest were subsequently released.	April 9, 1860, acquitted by deputy magistrate; the witnesses to the release could not recognize the parties released. It was improbable, too, that they would be confined together; their release after a moderate reward had been offered was another suspicious circumstance.
No. 85	Modhu Sheaik, and others, ryots in Thannah Hurrah.	Rameshwar and 50 others, servants in Hurrah factory.	Illegal arrest and imprisonment.—It was alleged by the prosecutors that they were confined for some time in different factories because they refused to sow indigo.	April 24, 1860, released by deputy magistrate because there was (1) want of local natural evidence, (2) improbability in the evidence of the best witness, (3) speedy release after moderate reward offered, (4) no advantage taken by the captors to threaten the friends of their prisoners.
No. 43	Anundo Sheikh -	Servants of Shokadoha factory.	Illegal imprisonment.—It was alleged that the prosecutor was arrested by the gomashita of Shokadoha factory, as an inhabitant of Pathurgattaa village opposed to the factory; that he was moved from factory to factory, ill treated, confined with others, for several days.	April 28, 1860, released by deputy magistrate because (1) there were no eye witnesses to the arrest or release, (2) suspicious nature of the evidence of the other kidnapped men.
No. 30	Tin Kaori Mandol -	Jadu Ghose, and others, of Beerpore factory, the house of the prosecutors.	Plunder and wounding.—It was alleged that three Europeans and a large band of lattials surrounded the house of the prosecutor, plundered it, and other houses. • Viz., Messrs. H. Sibbald, W. G. Smith, and Saubolle.	April 30, 1860, released, because there was (1) no decided proof of wounds inflicted, (2) no proof of who began the assault, (3) no probability of so small results from so large an assembly, (4) general exaggeration in the terms of the charge.

Serious Offences connected with Indigo in the District of Nuddea that have occurred during the last Five Years—continued.

Year and Office Number.	Prosecutors, &c.	Defendants, &c.	Charge, and Particulars of the Case.	Decision, Date, Appeal, Grounds of Acquittal.
1860: No. 62	Government - -	Munniruddin Biswas, and 22 others.	Resistance to the police.—A petition was sent to the darogah of Bagda by one of Mr. Larmour's people to say that, on their going to Barakhanpore, they were driven out by the villagers; the darogah went to the spot, saw the naib reading the parwanna and proclamation of March 29 and April 9 to some 25 ryots. They laughed at it, and swore not to obey it; the ringleaders, four, were arrested, and presently rescued by a party of laltials, 200. Subsequently, the military police, under the magistrate (Mr. Macneile) arrested 18 men, and one more was next day arrested and identified.	April 12, 1860, 19 of the defendants sentenced to six months' imprisonment and hard labour, and 20 rupees fine or six months addition and labour. Four of the defendants could not be found. Appeal to session judge, June 20, 1860, and decision upheld.
No. 108	Prannath Roy, police jemadar, and Government.	Nazir Mandul, and others, ryots.	Rescue of prisoners from the police -	June 27 and July 4, one defendant was sentenced to three months' imprisonment and 10 rupees fine, payable in seven days, or labour; the rest to six months' imprisonment and 50 rupees fine, payable in seven days, or labour. Appeal to session judge, with whom the case still rests.
No. 77	Budaruddin, burkundaze of Bagda.	Gunni Biswas and three others.	Assault.—Prosecutor was sent by his darogah to arrest some of the villagers of Ramkishtopoor. Instead of doing this, he went to Andaria, and appears to have tried to make some ryots go with Mr. Larmour's amin to the factory to get indigo land; hence a dispute arose, and the burkundaz was ejected from the village.	April 17, 1860, released, and burkundaze put on his defence; the burkundaze was afterwards suspended for three months.
No. 74	Moonshee Biswas -	Baka Ulla Peyada -	Assault and attempt to plunder.—Prosecutor and others were originally charged by defendant's party under Act XI. 1860, with destroying indigo. This charge was dismissed; thereupon this countercharge was brought. Defendant and his party appear to have gone to the village to force the prosecutor to pay their rents to the Khalbolia factory; they were resisted by the villagers, and forced to run off; the prosecutor, not satisfied with the charge he could establish, brought after charges, such as stealing cattle, failing in proving those, he was held to fail in all.	Released, July 9, 1860.
No. 102	Jiban Peada - -	Kullum Shah and 33 others.	Riotous assembly.—The prisoners assembled one morning, and proceeded in a riotous manner to within the precincts of the Paikpore factory armed with spears; no violence was actually offered to the factory servants.	Twenty-one of the defendants sentenced to two months' imprisonment and 20 rupees fine in five days or labour, and 50 fine and one month under same conditions. Appeal to session judge; appeal upheld.
No. 26	Mandari Mirza - -	Uma Churn Sandial, and two others, servants of Mr. Meares, Chaundpore factory.	Assault and wounding.—Prosecutor alleged that on going out to cut grass he saw the three defendants with about 40 laltials; he fled homeward, was pursued and wounded by one of the defendants; that the villagers turned out, and the factory people fled.	April 4, 1860, released. Evidence for the prosecutor was very unsatisfactory.
No. 461	Sheraj Sheikh Peyada, Foujdari court, Nuddea.	Ujal Biswas, and 16 others.	Assault and riotous assemblage - -	May 1, 1860, six defendants sentenced to three months' imprisonment each. One defendant sentenced to one month's imprisonment and six rupees fine in two days or labour. One defendant sentenced to three month's imprisonment and 20 rupees fine in days or labour; the rest were acquitted. Appeal; the papers are still with the session judge.
No. 735	Ramchurn Chatterjee, gomasta of Mr. Wood, Purindapore factory.	Hosain Ghurami, and 13 others.	Assault and riotous assemblage - - -	May 30, 1860, three defendants sentenced to one month's imprisonment and 10 rupees fine in five days or labour. One defendant sentenced to one month's imprisonment; the rest were released. Appeal; papers with the session judge.
No. 73	Chander Malita, ryot of Joyrampore.	Kamiruddin Sirkar, of Loknathpore factory, and four others.	Assault - - - - -	March 19, 1860, three defendants sentenced to one month's imprisonment and five rupees fine in five days or labour. One defendant acquitted. Appeal; decision upheld by session judge, but papers not yet come back.

Serious Offences connected with Indigo in the District of Nuddea that have occurred during the last Five Years—continued.

Year and Office Number.	Prosecutors, &c.	Defendants, &c.	Charge, and Particulars of the Case.	Decision, Date, Appeal, Grounds of Acquittal.
1860: No. 79	Gopal Sheikh, ryot	1, Kamiruddin Sirkar; 2, Haris Ghose.	Assault - - - - -	Defendant (1) acquitted. Defendant (1) sentenced to one month's imprisonment and five rupees fine or labour.
78	Waris Mridha, and others, Khalassis of Mr. Larmour, Katgarra factory.	Gopal Mundal, and 40 others.	Assault.—The prosecutors went by Mr. Larmour's orders, and tried to persuade the ryots of Doorgapore to take indigo seed from the factory. These ryots and their neighbours were much excited at the time, and had previously attacked Mr. Larmour, and a body of about 150 men fell on the prosecutors and severely handled them.	Three prisoners sentenced to six months and labour or 20 rupees fine, payable in seven days, and 50 rupees fine or six months addition. Four prisoners sentenced to six months and labour, or 20 rupees fine, payable in seven days. One prisoner (a chowkidar) ditto, and dismissed without pay. One prisoner three months' imprisonment and labour, or 10 rupees fine in seven days; the rest proved a sort of alibi , and were acquitted. Appeal to the session judge. Decision upheld, June 15, 1860.
No. 121	Mr. Cockshott, Katgarra factory; papers still with the sessions judge.	Idu Mandul, and nine others, ryots of Ramkistopore.	Attack on the prosecutor - - -	July 18, 1860, one month, and 20 rupees fine in seven days or labour. Appeal.
No. 143	Mr. Campbell, Joy-pore factory.	Hassan Ulla Biswas, and 12 others.	Tumultuous assemblage.—Mr. Campbell and Mr. Larmour riding through Andulia, were suddenly and unprovokedly attacked by the prisoners, armed with latties. The prosecutors and Mr. Larmour had to escape at once. The prisoners arrested one hour afterwards.	May 14, 1860, one defendant sentenced to six months' imprisonment, and 20 rupees fine in seven days, or labour; the rest to three months' imprisonment, and 10 rupees fine in seven days, or labour. Appeal to session judge. Decision upheld, June 16, 1860.
Damurhuda. No. 24.	Ram Chunder Biswas, and six others.	Debnath Biswas, and 18 others, Mr. Wood's factory servants.	Attack on village of Sharabaria, accompanied by wounding, plunder of houses, sowing indigo by force.—The defendants on the 5th May proceeded to Sharabaria village to sow indigo by force; then the prosecutor was severely wounded by one of the defendants; two other men were also wounded. The defendants also riotously attacked the above village, and plundered to a slight extent two or three houses.	May 30, 1860, defendant (1) sentenced to three months' imprisonment and 25 rupees fine, payable in five days or labour, and 100 rupees fine, or three months addition and same condition. Defendant (1) sentenced to three months' imprisonment and 10 rupees fine, payable in five days or labour, and 25 rupees fine, or one month addition and same conditions. Ten defendants sentenced to two months (d) imprisonment and 10 rupees fine, payable in five days or labour.
Karimpore. No. 55	Khushi Sheik, peada of the Amjhupi factory.	Ramlall Biswas, and three others, ryots.	Violent assault and false accusation of criminal offence.—The prosecutor was seized by the defendants, and given in to the authorities on the charge of driving cattle away belonging to them; he was violently treated by them. It was proved, however, that some hundreds of ryots had that day assembled at the village, and that prosecutor having gone there to change money was attacked by the defendants.	March 20, 1860, defendant (1) sentenced to two months' imprisonment, and 20 rupees fine, or one month additional imprisonment, and six rupees fine in lieu of labour. Defendants (2) sentenced to three months' imprisonment and 30 rupees fine, or two months' additional imprisonment, and nine rupees fine in lieu of labour. Defendants (3) 20 rupees fine, or one month's imprisonment. Defendants (4) 20 rupees fine, or one month's imprisonment. Appeal to session judge, May 17, 1860. Decision upheld.
1860: No. 63	Hasil Sheik, a takidgir of the Amjhupi factory.	Ramlall Biswas, and six others, ryots.	Riotous assemblage and attempted attack on the Amjhupi factory.—The ryots of several villages assembled in numbers at the village Amjhupi; a party of about 100 approached the factory, but after shouting and brandishing their sticks, they dispersed of their own accord.	March 21, 1860, dismissed. The fact of the assemblage was established, but not the intent, and the witnesses for prosecution gave palpably false evidence.
No. 74	Miajan Sheik and Goburdhun Khan, chowkidars of the Sonadoha factory.	Siriam Biswas, and nine others, ryots.	Violent assault, illegal imprisonment, false accusation of criminal offence.—Defendant had an altercation with prosecutors, as they were on their way to the factory. Prosecutors threatened to take defendant to the factories, defendant shouted for assistance, a number of ryots came and took the prosecutors, confined them all night, and took them next day to the thannah.	April 17, 1860, defendant (1) sentenced to six months' imprisonment, and 50 rupees fine in lieu of labour. Defendants (2, 3) sentenced to six months' imprisonment, and 20 rupees fine (each) in lieu of labour. Defendants (4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9) sentenced to three months' imprisonment, and 15 rupees fine (each) in lieu of labour. Appeal to session judge. Decision upheld, May 23, 1860.

Serious Offences connected with Indigo in the District of Nuddea that have occurred during the last Five Years—continued.

Year and Office Number.	Prosecutors, &c.	Defendants, &c.	Charge, and Particulars of the Case.	Decision, Date, Appeal, Grounds of Acquittal.
1860 : No. 193	Bukshi Biswas, amin of the Chitka factory; Tinkaori Sheik, burkundaz of the Katuli factory; Jadu Sheik and Pundit Sheik, ryots.	Brojo Biswas, and 11 others.	Assault and wounding and illegal imprisonment.—The prosecutors had gone to inspect the indigo growing on land attached to Mobarukpore village, found two or three ryots ploughing the abandoned lands of the village, threw the ploughs aside, and drove the ryots off; news got to the village; the ryots issued forth, seized, bound, and conveyed to a hut the prosecutors; they were released 12 hours afterwards by a thaunnah jemadar.	May 28, 1860, defendants sentenced to three months' imprisonment, and 15 rupees fine in lieu of labour, each. Appeal to session judge. Decision upheld, June 27, 1860.
No. 190	Zamir Sheik, takidgir	Dwarkanath Gosain, ryot.	Violent assault and false imprisonment.—No independent testimony to be obtained in this case, but apparently prosecutor was seized by the ryots of the village, assaulted and confined in the house of the defendant, and found and released three days afterwards by a thanah burkundaz.	June 16, 1860, dismissed; the evidence for the prosecution was palpably false, the witnesses not having been present at the occurrence. Also, the defendant was not sole occupier of the house, and not having been present at the release could not be identified with the capture of the prosecutor.

15 August 1860.

W. J. Herschel, Officiating Magistrate.

JESSORE.

LIST of serious Affrays and Disputes attended with Violence, arising out of Matters connected with Indigo for the last Five Years in the District of Jessore.

No.	Name of Plaintiff and Defendants.	Crime Charged.	Final Orders.	REMARKS.
1855: No. 1	Ramlal Ghose versus Gorai Mondul and 10 others.	Culpable homicide of Swarup Ghose.	Four defendants were sentenced by the sessions judge to one year's imprisonment with labour, labour commutable to a fine of 25 rupees, and the remaining seven to six months with labour, commutable to a fine of 10 rupees.	A report of this case will be found at page 967 Nizamut Adawlut Reports, dated 5 November 1855, volume V.
1856: No. 2	Kudi Bibi versus Gollabdee and Kuchai.	Affray with homicide of Shukur Mahmood.	Defendants sentenced by the sessions judge to be imprisoned for two years each, and released in appeal by the Nizamut Adawlut.	Ditto - - page 519, dated 16 April 1857.
1857: No. 3	Gorai and Mr. Oram versus Gobindo Mo-joomdar, and many others.	Plundering Mathurapore factory, with arson, wounding Mr. Oram, and assaulting Ramnarain Balagusti.	Twelve defendants sentenced by the sessions judge to be imprisoned for seven years, 21 for five years, two for one year, 12 released, but some of the defendants released by the Nizamut Adawlut.	A very full report of this well known case will be found in the Nizamut Reports, pages 16 and 31, dated 27 January 1858. The planter was entirely acquitted of all blame, and was very roughly treated by his opponents; a number of the attacking party were sentenced to seven or five years' imprisonment, which they are undergoing.
1858: No. 4	Maniruddin Sheikh versus Rohomali Mir, and others.	Murder of Zamiruddin	Nine defendants released on trial by the sessions judge, and two convicted as accessories after the fact, but released by the Nizamut Adawlut.	Nizamut Adawlut Report, page 126, of 28 April 1858.
No. 5	The Queen versus Gobindo Ghose, and others.	Affray with wounding of Ramkumar Sirdar.	Two defendants were sentenced to be imprisoned for one year with labour, and 200 rupees fine or one year, 50 rupees in lieu of labour; and eight for two years with labour, and 100 rupees fine or one year, and 30 rupees fine in lieu of labour, and the remaining 13 were released.	This case occurred on the factory people going to sow some land in indigo; they were resisted by the villagers, and Ramkumar Sirdar was said to have been killed; this fact was, however, not proved.
No. 6	Akul Mengo and others, on the part of Mr. French of Ramnagar versus Ramchurn Chukerbutty and others, on the part of Rajah Prosononauth Roy.	Riotous assault with homicide, of Tinkari Fakir.	Defendants were committed to the sessions, but released.

App. No. 12.

Appendix, No. 12.

LETTER REGARDING THE ABDUCTION OF HAROMANI.

From the Officiating Magistrate of Nuddea to the President of the Indigo Commission, No. 462, dated Kishnaghur, 13 June 1860.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to reply to your letter, No. 45, of the 8th instant, regarding the charge of abduction preferred by Mathur Biswas.

2. This case occurred on the 12th February. Mathur Biswas having complained to the magistrate against the factory, returned to his home on the 12th, when he heard that his daughter-in-law had that morning been carried off to the factory by Risom Singh, jemadar, and Madhoo Singh, burkundaze, and Kutub Takidgir and imprisoned. He went to the thannah and got the darogah to send three burkundazes to the factory, and the darogah afterwards followed himself, on the plaintiff sending word that the woman was in the factory house. The darogah saw Mr. Taylor there, who said that Mr. Hills had left in the afternoon for Kanainuggur. The darogah, however, went round the house and looked into the rooms, but found no one there. He therefore simply reported the matter to the then magistrate, who passed an order on the 14th, that if plaintiff had anything to complain of he should come before him, and do so. On the 13th February the darogah reported that he had been to Mr. Hills at Katchikatta, who had denied all knowledge of the matter, but that he was still looking out for the woman. This report was filed on the 15th.

On the 14th February the police reported that the woman had turned up, and had put in a withdrawal of the charge.

The razinamah is signed by Mathur Biswas, and states that "the statement which I made about Risom Singh having carried off my daughter-in-law is false. She went without my knowledge to her father's house, and has come back to-day. I have no complaint to make."

The plaintiff was directed on the next day, under the magistrate's order of the 14th, to prosecute before him if he wished to do so. He gave a written reply that he did not intend to prosecute.

On the 28th I came to the district, and shortly after this the Damurhudah sub-division was opened, and an assistant placed in charge. This case was brought forward on the 8th March, when it was struck off. The order runs: as "plaintiff has not prosecuted, the case is struck off and the records are filed."

On the 9th March Mathur Biswas put in a petition charging Mr. Archibald Hills and Risom Singh and Madhu Singh and Juran Singh and Adaityo Biswas and Shukur Mahomud and Kutubdi Takidgir and others, some 25 or 30 men, with having seized his brother's daughter-in-law, Haromani, who was going alone to fetch water, and carried her off to the Katchikatta factory, the Saheb riding after them; and stating that he had put in the razinamah, because he was told that unless he did, he would not get the woman back; that accordingly he resolved to get her back, and then to complain to the magistrate; that he had questioned the woman when he recovered her, who said that she could not tell him all, but that Mr. Hills had kept her in his room till about 11-30 p.m., and had then sent her in a palki with closed doors to the east; that by evening she reached a Brahmin's house, where they would not receive her; that she was carried on to a barber's house and there refused admittance, and after that to the Poamari factory, whence they carried her to another factory (Gosain Doorgapore), where the gomastah sent her to the house of Swarup Biswas, an amin of the factory, and relative of Mathur Biswas.

Plaintiff was ordered by the assistant magistrate to produce the woman on the 9th of March.

On the 10th her deposition was taken. She stated that about 9 o'clock in the day she was seized by 10 *piyada*s on her way back from the ghaut and taken to Katchikatta factory, and shut up for three hours in the room of the factory; that there were several people present, whose names she does not know; that about noon she was put into a palki with bearers, and sent off as above described.

She continues that—"all the people who took me away from the ghaut *behur*ated me. I know one of them, Madhu Roy, who comes to the village occasionally." She then added, "when they were carrying me off, a Saheb on horseback ordered me to be taken off." She charges them with "seizing me and destroying my caste and honour," and calls witnesses. She states on examination distinctly, that first Madhu Roy and then six or seven others successively forced her person, in the factory room to which they took her.

The darogah was ordered to inquire fully into the deposition which was sent to him. He reported on the 13th March, that he considered the charge of carrying off the woman proved; that the burkundazes who went to release her actually saw her being taken into the factory room, but did not dare to follow in, but sent word to the thannah, and that before the arrival of help the woman had been got away; that the charge of rape was not established.

On the 28th the depositions of the witnesses were taken, and on the 30th two defendants were sent in by the darogah, whose defence was taken and their witnesses summoned.

On the 5th April the case was called up by myself and struck off the file.

The circumstances under which this was done were these.

Mr. Maclean the assistant magistrate was almost breaking down under the enormous number of cases pending before him; the first week in April having been the most critical week in the late period of excitement, I was obliged to go up to Damurhudah myself for three days to look through his file, and strike off every case which did not appear of importance to decide at once, or which appeared likely not to yield any good result.

Looking over this case it appeared, first, that the fact of the razinamah having been put in was alone enough to make it very difficult to secure a conviction; and, secondly, that the alleged rape looked exceedingly like a charge added to give colour and strength to a story, which in other respects was very well proved.

On

On these two grounds I thought it hardly likely that a conviction could ensue, and struck the case off.

I have now gone closely into the evidence, and I have no manner of doubt left that the charge, as regards the rape, is totally false. The abduction seems very clearly proved by evidence, independent of the plaintiff's own assertions. App. No. 12.

I have, &c.
(signed) W. J. Herschel, Officiating Magistrate.

Appendix, No. 13.

PETITION from the Merchants of Calcutta, dated — 1835.

App. No. 13.

To the Honourable Sir Charles Theophilus Metcalfe, Baronet, &c., &c., &c., Governor General of India in Council.

The humble Memorial and Petition of the undersigned Indigo Planters and Persons concerned and interested in the production of Indigo within the Presidency of Bengal.

Showeth,

THAT your memorialists deeply interested in the cultivation of indigo, venture most earnestly to represent to your Honor in Council the alarm and distress with which they regard the proposal for rescinding sections 2 and 3, of Regulation V. of 1830, at the first meeting of the Legislative Council in August next.

Your Honor is fully aware of the importance of the indigo trade to the present prosperity of India, and of the immense extent of land and capital to which it affords employment. Your memorialists need only point to this circumstance in suggesting to the consideration of your Honor the imminent danger and the magnitude of the evil which might result from a too sudden adoption of any course of policy tending to the destruction of one vast branch of industry, even could it be hoped ultimately to divert into some other speculative or ideal direction so enormous and valuable a mass of wealth and labour as is dependent upon the present continuance and success of the indigo cultivation and trade. The objections that most peculiarly attach to such views or to the too ready recourse to theoretical or experimental legislation in a country so situated as India, cannot have been overlooked by your Honor and the Legislative Council in determining upon the measure against which your memorialists now appeal.

But your memorialists are deeply impressed with a conviction that the contemplated rescission of the protective clauses of Regulation V. of 1830, will virtually and inevitably have the most injurious effects of a course of policy so much to be deprecated; and will entail eventual ruin upon that branch of trade in which your memorialists are engaged, without opening any other equally extended resource either to their own exertions or to the sore necessities of those ryots for whose immediate benefit, it is presumed, the proposed enactment is intended.

Your memorialists, aided by their accession to the published Minutes of Proceedings in Council at the period of framing the Regulation now proscribed, feel assured that there are many obvious arguments in relation to the present question which it is unnecessary prominently to insist upon in remonstrating against an immediate and implicit compliance with the orders of the Honourable Court of Directors, in obedience to which it would appear that the present proposal is entertained. The less perfect information possessed by the Honourable Court of Directors, and the impossibility of their referring to any result of immediate and positive observation, sufficiently explain those views which have guided their decision upon a subject even of the importance of which it is humbly suggested they may not have been aware, but in that Honourable Council which your memorialists approach, your memorialists, with the greatest confidence, address themselves to a present preponderance of the same liberal and enlightened direction to which the Regulation referred to owed its existence. To your Honor in Council, it becomes, therefore, unnecessary to offer any suggestion even of the extraordinary disadvantages under which the cultivation of indigo is still carried on; or to dwell upon the extremely imperfect remedy which, even as it now exists, the law supplies to those disadvantages, and generally to the risks and dishonesty to which your memorialists are exposed.

While adverting, however, to the instructions of the Honourable Court of Directors on this subject, your memorialists may be permitted to observe that the orders of the Honourable Court bear a date so much anterior to the renewal of that charter under which your memorialists have ever hoped for the introduction of a more perfect and liberal form of Government, that your memorialists can scarcely yield without some hesitation to the belief that the orders of the Honourable Court were indeed intended to apply peremptorily to the present circumstances of the administration of India, nor can your memorialists omit bringing to the notice of your Honor in Council that the Regulation which is now partly to be rescinded had then so recently come into operation, that its actual effects, whether injurious or otherwise, could not possibly have been known to the Honourable Court of Directors when their instructions were forwarded to the Indian Government.

Amongst a peasantry more advanced in civilization and alive to the sense of moral obligation that attaches to a contract, or under the protection of laws more efficient and applicable to the exigencies of so important a branch of industry, and of justice more readily attainable in the civil courts, your memorialists would seek no protective indulgence whatever, that should appear to them any preference in the eye of Government or of the people; even now they do not seek such preference, but appeal against an unprovoked and special withdrawal from themselves alone of such facilities as the Legislature extends to other interests, and which experience of the government must have shown to have been equally politic in their protection of just rights, and inoffensive in their operation upon the very class against whom they appeared to be directed.

App. No. 13.

The sections 2 and 3 of Regulation V. of 1830, formed the most perfect and efficient provisions of the enactment that for several years had tended to ameliorate the condition of the indigo planter, by affording remedies against the fraudulent carelessness or cunning of the ryot, and equally against the machinations of those who too frequently worked upon his weakness and cupidity, and incited him to that dishonesty which, ruinous to the planter, could heretofore only be met by such interposition of violence as, it is believed, would never have been resorted to under a more vigorous administration of justice throughout India.

Notwithstanding the limited period during which this Regulation has been in force, your memorialists with confidence appeal to the immediate observation of your Honor and the Members of your Honourable Council and to the testimony of the magistracy of the interior, in support of their humble acknowledgment of its marked beneficial influences, insufficient as were the provisions of Regulation VI. of 1823, extended under Regulation V. of 1824, and imperfect as, under certain views, is even that Regulation which now forms the subject of your memorialists' address. Your memorialists feel assured that the records of the Mofussil courts will fully establish the fact, that even from the date of the first of those Regulations which were framed for the protection of the indigo planter, but most especially and decidedly since the promulgation of sections 2 and 3 of Regulation V. of 1830, such scenes of violence, as too commonly at one time disgraced the country, had become gradually of less frequent occurrence and less dangerous in their nature and consequences. The production of indigo has consequently fallen lighter upon the planter, and partly through that indulgence which tardily but most beneficially has been extended to him, the trade has been enabled to contend with the calamities of the past years, and with the competition that has threatened it from abroad; if against these advantages which a superior protection has afforded, may have to be admitted a somewhat too sanguine pursuit of the trade so encouraged, until it seems at this moment to be threatened with an alarming over-production, how much more carefully should any act be now considered that might add the prospect of utter and irremediable ruin to a trade so valuable, under circumstances of probable though perhaps ultimately beneficial depression.

In pointing to the excellent effects of sections 2 and 3 of Regulation V. of 1830, as securing the general peace of the districts where indigo is most cultivated, it is not attempted to be denied that instances of excesses should nevertheless still occasionally present ample cause for the deepest regret; but when it is remembered over how vast an extent of country the labours of indigo planters have ranged, spreading wealth and cultivation throughout tracts which previously had for the most part been scarcely recovered from the jungle, when it is borne in mind how important are the interests entrusted to their charge, and to be asserted under an administration of law confessedly the most imperfect of any upon which British subjects have ever been dependent, when, too, it is recollected that over an equal extent of territory, even in the best governed countries of Europe, a total protection from liability to occasional outrage has never yet been and probably never can be fully attained; your memorialists feel assured that your Honor in Council will not deny to that class in whose name they appeal, the most liberal consideration that should be extended in favour of a generally well conducted and inoffensive body of men, valuable alike in their character and pursuits to the welfare and the peace of that country with which their own interests have become identified.

Their very respect for the peace of those districts which will most be affected by the proposed enactment is one, not the least urgent, of the motives which compel your memorialists thus earnestly to address your Honor in Council. And your memorialists, while they deeply deprecate the measure itself in every point of view, most specially deplore the apparent inconsiderateness of its introduction, or even that such a purpose should have been suggested by Government at the present most critical stage of the indigo season, when in the ordinary course of cultivation it is obvious that the peace of the country is most endangered, at the particular period when quarrels the most serious and outrages the most violent occur, and when the planter is most immediately dependent upon the efficacious operation of those laws under whose protection he has cultivated the field which is now ripening, but whose crop he can no longer be assured of reaping in peace; when an impending Act of the Supreme Government has already been industriously promulgated to the ignorant ryot and the jealous and cunning zemindar, who will only see in the proposed measure that the hand of Government itself is now lifted suddenly and strongly against the planter in whose protection it has hitherto been so beneficially extended.

It would be foreign alike to the objects of your memorialists, as it might appear presumptuous in them in offering this respectful appeal, to argue against the objection which is urged by the Honourable Court of Directors on the ground of an apparent want of reciprocal provision in the clauses about to be rescinded of Regulation V. of 1830. To any modification of these clauses that may supply the supposed deficiency, your memorialists do not perceive the slightest objection, they would venture merely to suggest that, as they understand the existing provisions of the Regulation, they refer only to cases where the planter has already performed his part of an engagement, and where consequently an equal fulfilment on the part of the ryot is all that the strictest principle of reciprocity can demand. By sections 2 and 3 of Regulation V. of 1830, a punishment is awarded to the fraudulent evasion of or instigation to evade this part of the engagement, and as the ryot's obligation can recommence only upon the previous fulfilment of engagement on the part of the planter, the case does not appear to be one very obviously to admit of the introduction of reciprocal provisions as regards either penalty or punishment.

The opportunities of actual observation and of gathering the most accurate information which are possessed by your Honor, render unnecessary any lengthened reference to the peculiar circumstances under which the indigo cultivation is conducted. The most hazardous of crops upon which an immense mass of people can be dependent, it yet proves itself, under European direction, to be that which has less than any other in existence, exposed the ryot to sudden and absolute ruin from vicissitudes of season or from any one of the many risks whose immediate weight now falls upon the planter alone. The immense amount of balances due from the ryots to the planter throughout the country, is ample evidence of the dangers to which this cultivation is exposed, and the constant and unfailing return of means for further cultivation which yet nevertheless invariably follows the disappointments of even the most disastrous seasons, present a distinguishing feature of permanent advantage to the ryot in the cultivation of this product where even it yields in apparent profit to the returns of other crops. This consideration alone, your memorialists submit, would entitle the indigo planter to the most marked protection of Government against unnecessary exposure to the ryot's dishonesty, which by the mere ordinary course of law it is impossible sufficiently to check. It is almost folly to attempt checking it in the present notoriously inefficient state of the civil courts of justice throughout the country.

of

Your memorialists would estimate the amount of capital permanently sunk in the factories with their balances which are dependent upon this cultivation, at not less than about three crores of rupees, independent of annually recurring outlay upon the immediate production of indigo. It were unnecessary in addressing your Honor in Council to enter into any defence of a system of advances upon which the cultivation has ever been conducted, attended as that system confessedly is with many disadvantages, for which, however, in the present condition of the peasantry of India, it does not seem easy to provide any very immediate or sufficient remedy. Amongst these disadvantages the enormous amount of balances already alluded to, falls equally as an evil upon the planter and the ryot. But your memorialists need only instance the extraordinary losses incurred by Government itself upon its own silk filatures and balances; their utter worthlessness at this moment with reference to the amount standing against them, and the apparent probability almost that their entire value may eventually have to be completely raised from the assets of the Honourable Company, and your memorialists cannot doubt that your Honor will at once admit how incalculable an injury might be inflicted upon the trade by any act that should disturb the hold of the planters over their ryots in respect of their balances, or should tend to annihilate so large a value of fixed capital totally inapplicable to any other branch of industry whatever, by shaking the very foundations upon which that value most immediately rests.

In the production of salt, opium, silk, cotton, sugar, and indeed, of nearly all other staple articles of Indian trade, but little loss comparatively can attend the fraudulent evasions of the ryot beyond that of the amount advanced; to the indigo planter alone this forms the least important loss that can arise from the ryot's faithlessness; for the mere price of the plant rarely amounts to one-third of the sum which the planter must unavoidably lay out in advances for labour, in most expensive buildings and heavy establishments, upon the faith of gathering that crop which the clauses of the Regulation now to be rescinded, only provide for securing to him. His loss therefore, from the misconduct of his ryot, is unmeasurably beyond that which any other cultivation would expose him to, and your memorialists would therefore respectfully contend that the capital that he employs in a trade which has ever been so important to India, is consequently, under this view also, entitled to the preferential regard of the Legislature.

This, however, is not the object of your memorialist's petition; where such protection does not already extend, they would most gladly see the same facilities for the summary punishment of fraud and bad faith afforded to all other classes of labourers equally, whose exertions are, in any way, directed to the benefit of the country in which they are established.

Your memorialists assure themselves that your Honourable Council will confirm their representation, that if the indulgence which it is now in contemplation to withdraw was not in the first instance conferred upon them inconsiderately or undeservedly, in its operation it has proved as innocent to the ryot as it has been valuable to the indigo planter, and gratefully appreciated by the latter, as is evinced in the moderation with which it has been used. So far from having become an instrument of oppression, your memorialists unhesitatingly submit that the provision which seemed only to favour the indigo planter, has in effect proved most friendly and humane to the ryot also, protecting him frequently from the consequences of an artful interference on the part of his unprincipled and tyrannical zemindar, who too often would be ready to see his unfortunate ryot become the victim of his own selfish purposes, while it holds equally over the ryot himself the only motives which he is in general capable of comprehending for resisting his own natural proneness to such conduct as, unchecked, would lead him into certain misery and ruin.

In conclusion, while your memorialists with confidence appeal to the records of the Mofussil courts in substantiation of all that they have submitted to the consideration of your Honor in Council, they beg to assure your Honor that they will pray for no extension of favour to themselves, nor peculiar consideration in the eye of the Legislature for one moment beyond that period in which an amelioration of the general administration of justice in the Mofussil shall render it perfect and effectual for the better protection of property and the advancement of the moral condition of the peasantry and the people of India. Respectfully they venture to hope that to such ends the first attention of your Honor in Council will be directed, and your memorialists will then without a murmur be content to see withdrawn from themselves whatever may appear to be anomalous or objectionable in any degree of protection that has hitherto been accorded to them; until, however, this great desideratum is attained, your memorialists submit that the rescission of sections 2 and 3 of Regulation V. of 1830, without substitution in their place of some other equally efficacious provision for the immediate protection of the indigo planter, would inevitably create much greater evil than any which your memorialists are aware of its being proposed to remedy by the rescission of the clauses in question, and would expose the planter to much greater annoyance and loss than if the Regulation V. of 1830 had never been framed.

The prayer of your memorialists is, that your Honor in Council will be pleased to suspend the rescission of sections 2 and 3 of Regulation V. of 1830, or that, should your Honor still deem it necessary to conform to the orders of the Honourable Court of Directors in this respect, your Honour will be pleased to make previous provision by some new and more perfect enactment for the

App. No. 13.

the general protection of the interests of the indigo planters,

And your memorialists shall ever pray.

(signed) Cockerell & Co.
 Hills, White & Co., per Cockerell & Co.
 W. Clarik, ditto.
 C. Bishop, ditto.
 J. A. Gregg, ditto.
 D. Gibson, ditto.
 Hills, Savi and Hills, ditto.
 Turner Stopford & Co.
 Mullen, Ritchie & Co.
 Harris & Co.
 J. and R. Watson, per Cockerell & Co.
 R. C. Jenkins & Co.
 Dunlop & Co.
 For the proprietor of the Goamalti indigo concern, A. Vans Dunlop.
 Waker, Roussac & Co.
 Gilmore & Co.
 George Meddicott, per Gilmore & Co.
 John Henderson, ditto.
 T. Smith, ditto.
 S. Johnson, ditto.
 J. B. Muirhead, ditto.
 D. R. Crawford, ditto.
 J. B. Crawford, ditto.
 Wm. Cobb Hurry.
 K. S. Brodie, per Gilmore & Co.
 George Smith, ditto.
 John Howell, ditto.
 William Howell, ditto.
 John Mitchell, ditto.
 G. Viret.
 J. H. Cowie & Co.
 P. Drudence, per Cockerell & Co.
 R. Lidiard, ditto.
 M. Razet, ditto.
 Mascarenhas & Glass, ditto.
 J. Motet, ditto.
 E. Macnaghten, for self & Co., Assignees of the estate of Fergusson & Co.
 E. Macnaghten, Assignee to the estate of Colvin & Co.
 William Storm.
 R. De Courcy, per William Storm.
 W. McNeil, per William Storm.
 W. G. Woodhouse, per William Storm.
 J. B. Albert, per William Storm.
 A. MacArthur, per William Storm.
 J. B. Livesay, per William Storm.
 W. F. Schmidt, per William Storm.
 Carr, Tagore & Co.
 J. C. Miller, per Carr, Tagore & Co.
 Jas. Gibbon, ditto.
 Thos. Lloyd, ditto.
 G. Caie, ditto.
 G. Walker, ditto.
 W. Busch & H. Bonnevie, ditto.
 P. MacArthur, ditto.
 R. Reid, ditto.
 D. E. Shuttleworth, ditto.
 Jas. Russell, ditto.
 A. Simson, ditto.
 P. MacDonald, ditto.
 W. G. Rose, ditto.
 G. Barton, ditto.
 J. Baird, ditto.
 S. F. Rice, ditto.
 T. M. Cripps }
 R. MacDonald ditto. }
 T. A. Cripps }
 W. Innes, ditto.
 A. Rogers.
 A. Saupin, per A. Roger.
 Paul Rayson, ditto.
 Geo. Rogers, ditto.
 Jas. Tosh, ditto.
 F. Campbell, ditto.
 C. Deverinne, ditto.
 John Culwers.
 David Andrew, junior.
 H. H. Bell }
 C. Manly } by their at- }
 L. Manly } torney, John }
 C. Imbert } Palmer. }
 H. D'Cruz }
 J. Miller }
 John Palmer.
 J. P. Marcus, by his attorney, John Palmer.
 E. Mackintosh, per Carr, Tagore & Co.
 Adam F. Smith.
 Hamilton & Co.
 John Hastie.
 A. Campbell Dunlop, by his attorney, John Hastie.
 Stewart & Co.
 D. Macintyre, Assignee.
 J. Macintyre & Co.
 R. C. Bell, per J. Stewart.
 Mackillop, Stewart & Co.
 Moore, Hickey & Co.
 Mackenzie, Lyall & Co.
 John Low & Co.
 R. O. Presgrave & Co.

26 July 1835.

(signed)
 George Tayler, per Bagshaw & Co.
 J. W. Yule, per Bagshaw & Co.
 Wilson, Smith & Co.
 L. P. Marcus, per Alexander Fraser.
 Bradshaw & Co.
 T. Holroyd, for self & R. C. Jenkins, assignees of Mackintosh & Co.
 J. C. Abbott, per T. Holroyd.
 William Cobb Hurry & T. Holroyd, assignees of Alexander & Co.
 Colville, Gilmore & Co.
 Gisborne & Co.
 M. J. Lemarchand, per Gisborne & Co.
 Cooke and Mackinnon, per Gillanders, Arbuthnot & Co.
 Adam Scott & Co.
 Shedden & Co.
 James Cossarat, per Carr, Tagore & Co.
 George Kallonas, by his attorney, John Palmer.
 Watson & Co.
 Andrew Anderson, by his attorney, W. T. Gibbon.
 Thomas Gibbon, by his attorney, W. T. Gibbon.
 M. Cook.
 John Gale, per Gilmore & Co.
 H. E. Harding, per ditto.
 J. Smith, per Carr, Tagore & Co.
 G. Chisholm, ditto.
 C. Birch.
 William Limond.
 Richard Wooldridge.
 W. S. Jeffrey.
 William Bruce, Jr., Bruce, Shand & Co.
 George Lamb, per Willis and Earle.
 Henry Martindell, ditto.
 Henry Clarke, ditto.
 Willis and Earle.
 Claude Hamilton, per R. Speir.
 Thomas Wilson, per R. Speir.
 H. E. Hunter, per R. Speir.
 W. Johnson, per R. Speir.
 D. B. Nicol, per Cockerell & Co.
 J. B. Razet, per R. Speir.
 Wm. Woodia, per R. Speir.
 J. Freeman, per R. Speir.
 L. C. Dassis, per R. Speir.
 James. Smith, per R. Speir.
 Hill & Moran, per R. Speir.
 T. Sherman, per R. Speir.
 J. H. Stonehouse, per R. Speir.
 W. R. Leyburn, per R. Speir.
 D. Mackintyre, per E. Mannington, ditto Robert Smith.
 J. Roeson.
 Moran & Hill, per W. C. Hurry.
 A. Mitchell, per Carr, Tagore & Co.
 P. P. Carter, per R. Speir.
 C. R. Richardson, per Cockerell & Co.
 D. MacIntyre, per Milles & Co.
 D. MacIntyre, per Bryce & Co.
 D. MacIntyre, per C. Coenard & Co.
 D. MacIntyre, per R. French.
 D. MacIntyre, per T. B. Rice.
 Henry Garden, by his attorney, John Palmer.
 V. Kimming, ditto.
 Ed. Palmer, ditto.
 Hy. Mackenzie, ditto.
 R. O'Brien, ditto.
 R. Ahmuty, per H. H. Cowie & Co.
 Wm. McDowall & H. Cowie & Co.
 Erskine & Co., per J. & H. Cowie & Co.
 Joseph St. Pourcain.
 J. De Dombal.
 Louis Durup De Dombal, per Joseph St. Pourcain.
 J. M. Durup De Dombal, per J. I. St. Pourcain.
 J. Durup De Dombal, per J. St. Pourcain.
 W. Collard, per J. St. Pourcain.
 E. Dury, per J. St. Pourcain.
 J. M. Driver, per J. St. Pourcain.
 J. W. Lethbridge, per Cockerell & Co.
 D. MacIntyre, per Jas. Maseyk.
 D. MacIntyre, per J. Russel.
 D. MacIntyre, per R. Solano.

Appendix, No. 14.

App. No. 14.

MINUTE BY THE LATE LORD MACAULAY.

I AM sorry to find that our opinions differ widely on the questions submitted to us by Government, and that they differ most widely on the most important of those questions.

That great evils exist, that great injustice is frequently committed, that many ryots have been brought, partly by the operation of the law and partly by acts committed in defiance of the law, into a state not very far removed from that of pre-dial slavery, is, I fear, too certain. But I see no reason to believe that any of the measures respecting which the Government has consulted us would, in any material degree, alleviate these evils.

Some of these measures, indeed, are quite unexceptionable, and would, as far as they went, operate beneficially. I would certainly give to the sudder amins jurisdiction in civil causes in which Europeans or Americans might be concerned. The only objection which has occurred to me is this. At present an Englishman has an appeal to the Supreme

Supreme Court in every case in which a native would have an appeal to the Sudder. Natives have an appeal to the Sudder in causes originally tried before the zillah judge. All causes in which Europeans are concerned in the Mofussil are now tried before the zillah judge. The Englishman, therefore, has a direct appeal to the Supreme Court. If the Government should give to the sudder amins jurisdiction over causes in which Englishmen are parties, our countrymen will be deprived of the right of appeal which they now possess; and possibly some discontent might by this charge be excited among them. But I do not conceive that this discontent would be deep or extensive, particularly if the Government should, in the exercise of its undoubted power, appoint a few intelligent Englishmen to the place of sudder amin in those districts which contain a considerable number of European inhabitants.

The Regulation which gave to the indigo planter who had made advances to a ryot a lien on the indigo crop seems to me highly objectionable in principle; but I do not conceive that by rescinding it the Governor General in Council would give any sensible relief to that class of the population whose interests appear to be peculiarly the objects of his solicitude; the question appears to be a question between the planter and the zemindar; it is not easy to see how it can be of any consequence to the ryot, which of the two may distrain on his crop. I have no reason to believe that the zemindars exercise their power with more justice or humanity than the planters. The zemindar, however, has great reason to complain of the existing Regulation; it transfers to others that undoubted right of distress which he formerly possessed. Two other people, by an agreement between themselves to which he is no party, are allowed to deprive him of what was his due; and in return the law gives him a remedy which is certainly less expeditious and simple than that which he anciently had. Exactly the same extent to which this Regulation is a benefit to the indigo planter it must be considered as robbery of the zemindar. The misfortune is, that when once a Government falls into such an error there is great difficulty in returning to the right path; in the very act of destroying old rights we create new rights, which must be destroyed in their turn, if we revert to the old order of things. The zemindar had great reason to complain when his lien was transferred to the planter. The planter who has invested his capital in the indigo business on the faith of the Regulation of 1823, would have some reason to complain if that lien were now taken from him and given back to the zemindar. On the whole, I should be inclined to recommend that no planter should be entitled, except of course by virtue of a special contract to which the zemindar should be a party, to distrain for any future advances; with respect to advances already made, I would leave him the remedy which he now possesses. I must again repeat, however, that the question is one in which the ryot appears to be very little interested. The law of pounding is in an exceedingly unsettled state all over India. And this want of certainty, doubtless, leads to oppression and injustice everywhere; these evils do not, however, appear to be peculiar to the indigo districts. At a proper time it will be necessary for the Law Commission to take up the whole subject; it is a subject on which it will be impossible to legislate usefully without an extensive inquiry into existing rights and customs.

The plan of rendering invalid all contracts for the delivery of indigo which are not registered seems to me highly objectionable; it would either be useless, or in the highest degree vexatious; if the present mode of registration should continue the proceeding would be a mere mockery; an agent employed by the planter would attend, and would register, without inquiry, all the agreements of the planter with all the ryots; there would be no examination, nobody would ask whether the peasant had made the contract freely or under the fear of personal violence, whether he had made it with a full knowledge of what he was doing or under the influence of deception; if, on the other hand, the registration is to be made really efficient, if the registering officer is to exercise over the labourer the same species of guardianship which, in England, the judges of the court of Common Pleas exercise in certain cases of contract over married women, if the parties are to appear, if the ryot is to be privately interrogated, assured of protection, encouraged to accuse the capitalist, the business would be absolutely interminable; in some districts 30,000 contracts would probably require registration in a year; these contracts, I believe, are generally made at one season of the year; a great number of registrars would be necessary to conduct the examination into all these agreements; and the registrar entrusted with the conduct of such an examination must be no common man; he must be not only a man of sense, but what in this country it is hard to find, a man of independence and integrity, a man who will dare to stand up for a poor native against a rich Englishman; it will be hard to find such functionaries in sufficient numbers; it would be absolutely necessary to pay them well. The charge would be immense; and after all it may well be doubted whether the advantages which the labourers would derive from such a system of guardianship would compensate for the journey, the attendance, the trouble and the loss of time.

There are contracts which it is very desirable to register, contracts which are seldom made, which are made for long terms, which are great events in a man's life, which are likely to affect the rights of third parties, and which are of such a nature that they cannot be made without considerable trouble and great formalities; the purchase of an estate is an instance. The security which registration gives to all the parties concerned in the transaction is highly valuable; the trouble of procuring registration is but a trifle in comparison with the trouble which must attend such an event. But to require that all contracts for all terms between all the capitalists and all the working people of great provinces should be registered, and registered with such safeguards as to make it certain that every contract is freely and deliberately made, would be to dissolve the whole frame of society. The general rule which is followed all over the world is this, that no judicial verification of a contract should take place till it is alleged that the contract has been broken; at present it is probable that not one contract in a thousand is in any country on earth the subject of a law suit. If the immense majority of contracts were not performed without legal investigation and decision the world could not go on for a day; the effect of a system of registration such as that which I have been considering would be, that every contract, without exception, would be the subject of legal investigation and decision before it was made.

The Government have asked whether the Commissioners think that there would be any advantage in declaring invalid all contracts for indigo which shall

App. No. 14. shall be for a term longer than one year; I should greatly disapprove of such a measure. It would evidently be opposed to a great general rule, and it is not made out to my satisfaction, that the circumstances of this particular case form any exception to that general rule.

The general rule is this; that grown men, not idiots or insane, should be suffered to make such contracts as are not injurious to others, and as appear to them to be beneficial to themselves; to say that the ryots of this country are mere children, and ought to be specially protected, is, I conceive, quite incorrect; they are not intellectually inferior to the peasantry of other countries; they are as well acquainted as we are with the difference between an anna and a rupee, or between a month and a year. They are suffered to make the most important contracts; and nobody proposes to deprive them of this power except when indigo is in question. They marry; they govern their families; they are treated by our courts of justice as persons quite capable of comprehending the nature and consequences of their acts. If they are not so, if they are not able to judge for themselves in matters which concern only themselves better than the Government can judge for them, they will require protection, not in this particular case alone, but in ten thousand other cases. I conclude, therefore, that there is nothing in the intellectual state of the ryot which renders it proper that contracts freely made by him should be set aside.

But, it is said, these contracts are not freely made; force and deception are employed; the peasant assents to disadvantageous terms from fear of budgeon-men, or is tricked into signing some paper which he does not understand. I answer, that in all such cases there ought to be a remedy; the law, I apprehend, would even now reach these oppressive and fraudulent practices; if not, the law ought to be altered. In every case of coercion or of deception, the contract should be set aside, and the tyrannical or dishonest capitalist should be punished with exemplary severity. But what is now proposed is, that we should attack, not the evil, but a circumstance in itself wholly indifferent, not tyranny or dishonesty, but a certain term arbitrarily fixed upon, not unfair contracts, but long contracts. The sound rule is this; if a ryot has been intimidated or duped into making an agreement for a month, a day, or an hour, cancel the agreement and punish the wrong-doer: but if, unterrified and undeceived, he has made a contract for two or three seasons, enforce it. A Government cannot be wrong in punishing fraud and force; but it is almost certain to be wrong if, abandoning its legitimate functions, it tells private individuals that it knows their business better than they know it themselves, and is resolved to serve them in their own despite.

The proposition now under consideration belongs to a class of propositions which cannot be regarded with too much suspicion. If there be any one political truth proved by a vast mass of experience, it is this, that the interference of legislators for the purpose of protecting men of sound mind against the inconveniences which may arise from their own miscalculations, or from the natural state of the markets, is certain to produce infinitely more evil than it can avert. It was no doubt a humane feeling which dictated usury laws; laws against forestalling and regrating; laws for raising the wages of labour; laws for lowering the price of commodities; laws for limiting the number of hours during which adults should work, and many other laws of the same kind. But the invariable effect of such laws has been to injure society, and to injure more especially that portion of society which the Government humanely wished to protect. The needy man who could have borrowed at 10 per cent., when cursed with the compassionate aid of the lawgiver, is forced to pay 15 per cent. That which would have been scarcity, if prices had been regulated by the avarice of the corn-dealer, becomes a famine when the prices are regulated by the benevolence of the Government. The measure which we are now considering is a measure of this kind; a ryot consents to bind himself to deliver a certain commodity to the capitalist during several successive seasons; if he has been terrified or deluded into making this agreement, the agreement is of course null; but if he has not been terrified or deluded, on what principle are we to refuse him permission to bring his only commodity, his labour, to market in his own way, and to dispose of it on such terms as, in the state of the market, are the best which he can obtain?

If we cannot prevent the indigo planter from oppressing and cheating the ryots this restriction will evidently be a mere nullity. If we can prevent the planter from oppressing and cheating, then no ryot will make a long contract without what he thinks a quid pro quo. And I conceive that a ryot is infinitely a better judge of what is or what is not a quid pro quo in such a case than any Government, even the most enlightened, can possibly be.

I therefore object to this provision, and to all other provisions of the same kind which have been suggested.

On the whole I am not satisfied that any peculiar system of law is required for the indigo districts. I believe that the evils which exist in those districts differ little either in kind or in degree from those which may be found in almost every part of our Indian empire. There is a bad judicial system; there is a bad police; there is a people accustomed for ages to be plundered and trampled upon, and ready to cringe before every resolute and energetic oppressor. The system of dacoity and the system of thuggee are more malignant evils of the same family. They are evils which never could exist to the extent in which they exist here, in a country where the tribunals and the police were efficient, or in a country peopled by a manly and high-spirited race. To come nearer to the case which we are now considering, we have no reason to believe that the conduct of the zemindars is in any respect better than that of the indigo planters. I suspect that it is commonly worse.

I have no doubt that Government can do very much to remove these evils. When a good system of law and police is established, when justice is administered cheaply and purely, when idle technicalities and unreasonable rules of evidence no longer obstruct the search after truth, a great change for the better may be expected to take place. This is all that we can do directly; but by doing this we shall indirectly produce a great effect on the national character; the people of India will learn to place confidence in the administration of justice; they will find that they can safely stand up for their rights. They will appeal fearlessly to our courts against the tyranny of the rich and powerful.

In a few years we shall have done, I think, what can be done by legislation. That still more important change in the character of the population to which I look forward, must be the work of several generations. In the meantime we deceive ourselves ourselves if we consider the evils which exist in the indigo districts in any other light than as symptoms, and by no means the worst symptoms, of a general disease which requires a general remedy, and which it is idle to think of subduing by local applications. App. No. 14.

17 Oct. 1835.

T. B. Macaulay.

Appendix No. 15.

EXTRACT from Mr. Macleod's Minute.

App. No. 15.

THE opinion that the operation of Regulation VI. of 1823 is injurious to the ryots, does not suppose that indigo planters are unjust and cruel in comparison with zemindars. It is a hard thing to serve two masters at once, though the second be not more severe or rigorous than the first. If the power of distraint is capable of any abuse to the oppression of the ryot, and that it is so cannot be denied, his case is worse when each of two persons hold it than either only one of them does. Besides, the planters stand in a very different position from that of the zemindars. They are of the race and speak the language of the conquerors and rulers of the country. They have peculiar privileges. The magistrates are prevented from acting towards them as they act towards zemindars and other natives, by the dread of prosecutions in the supreme court. This, though few magistrates may like to own it, is a certain and important fact. It reflects not the least discredit on those functionaries. It is a necessary consequence of the existing laws. These and other circumstances give to such planters as are disposed to make an improper use of the power of distraint, facilities in which the zemindars do not participate.

With respect to the suggestion that a special law should be made relative to affrays concerning indigo, and to the maintaining of bands of bludgeon men, I believe we all agree in thinking that it has not been known to be expedient to adopt that course. They who engage in such affrays or employ bludgeon men to commit acts of violence are no doubt liable to punishment under the law as it stands. The difficulty is in bringing them to judicial conviction.

The plan of rendering invalid all contracts for the delivery of indigo which are not registered, I think, would be an excellent measure, if proper instruments could be provided in sufficient number, to carry it into effect according to the views stated by Mr. Cameron. But I fear that this is impracticable, owing to the multiplicity of the dealings between the planters and the ryots, though I cannot but suspect that our president over-estimates the number of contracts that would require registration in any district. As to the objection to this plan, founded on the general rule that a judicial verification of a contract should take place only when it is alleged that the contract has been broken, I think that there is enough in the peculiarities of the indigo business to justify a departure from that rule to the proposed extent, if the means of making an efficient inquiry, to ascertain before registration whether the parties understand the contract and enter into it voluntarily, could be provided.

I am not without hopes that when we come to the consideration of the general question of a new registry law, we may be able to devise rules which will have some effect in checking the iniquities which are practised by means of forged contracts, and of contracts into which the ignorant and weak are inveigled by fraud or forced by violence.

Our opinion is asked on the expediency of limiting to one year the duration of contracts for the growth and supply of indigo plant, or of enabling the contracting cultivator (as I understand this proposal) to get rid of engagements into which he may have entered, beyond what he was to do in consideration of the advance of money he may have actually received, upon his performing all that he was to do in consideration of that advance.

The latter of these measures might, I think, be of some advantage to the ryots; but I apprehend that it could not be of much, except in cases where the same end would be better effected by some rule of the nature of the former of them. It would be liable to be evaded by the wording of the contract. And if it were attempted to prevent this by making the law declare that the contract should be regarded as fulfilled when the stipulations had been performed to an extent justly proportionable to the amount of the advance, though less than what was professedly agreed to be done as in consideration of it, there would be great difficulty in deciding what was a performance to that extent, besides that the rule would be objectionable as carrying the restrictive interference of the law farther than the exigency of the case required, and as discouraging, contrary to sound policy, any departure from the system of advances.

Much advantage, it seems to me, would probably result if a limit were to be set by law to the duration of contracts for the growth and supply of indigo plant. And I must confess that the arguments employed against this measure have not convinced me that it would be productive of any ill effect. What I understand by limiting the duration of the contracts is this. The law should say that if a contract had reference to the cultivation of indigo for any longer time than a period stated by the law, such contract should not be judicially enforced further than for the limited period so fixed. What that period ought to be I cannot say. But it ought to be such as to suffice for the purpose of obtaining a full return for capital laid out on the cultivation of the indigo plant. Different periods might be requisite in different districts. In some I have reason to believe that less than two years would not be sufficient.

It is said that to fix a limit in this manner to the legal duration of contracts for the growth of indigo plant would be to attack not the evil but a circumstance in itself wholly indifferent; not unfair contracts but long contracts. When, however, I reflect how much there is of the character of slavery in an obligation of perpetual servitude to one master, I cannot feel satisfied that the length of a contract is always a circumstance which a legislator ought to regard as even in itself immaterial to the question of the fitness of the contract to be sanctioned by law. But whether the length be or be not itself an indifferent circumstance, it is clear that an unfair contract is the more mischievous when it is long. This, to be

App. No. 15. sure, would be of no consequence to the present question, if the planters could at pleasure, and without the slightest difficulty or risk, procure new unfair contracts as soon and as often as the old ones lapsed. But great as their power of oppression is, I cannot believe but it falls short of this. The restriction therefore, it seems to me, will not be a nullity though it may not be in the power of the Government entirely to prevent indigo planters from oppressing ryots. And the greater the degree in which we expect that the laws and the systems of police and judicature will be improved in the course of the next few years, the more reason have we to look for benefit from limiting the duration of the contracts, fair and unfair together, which may be entered into in the meantime. Besides, it seems probable that of the long contracts a larger proportion would be unfair than of the short; since the longer the duration of the contract can be made, supposing it to be unfair, the greater is the temptation to the planter to employ force or fraud for the purpose of obtaining it.

Reluctantly as it is that I differ in opinion with our honourable president, I yet do not feel myself at liberty to quit this subject without expressing my dissent from his unmeasured condemnation of the present judicial system of every part of our Indian Empire. That system, I believe, greatly needs improvement. I hope to see it improved. But I am sure that in the part of India with which I am best acquainted, it is far from being so bad as the president seems to think it; and I do not believe that it is so bad anywhere, or that to it are justly chargeable the evils which the papers now before us have brought under our view. It is not to that system, the general judicial system, I mean, as it is evident the president does, under which the native inhabitants of the provinces are placed, but mainly to the exemption of the planters from the operation of that system, that those evils are owing. Unfortunately there are circumstances which I am afraid may practically continue some degree of that exemption after the laws shall have been made equal. But at present it is an exemption given by law.

In weighing the objections which are urged against making any peculiar law for the protection of the ryots in the indigo districts, it ought not to be forgotten that there do exist peculiarities of law affecting those ryots, not indeed to their protection, but to their oppression; peculiarities all of them in favour of the strong and against the weak; and that it is not even now proposed to do away immediately with more than a part of those peculiarities.

In the foregoing remarks I have, in conformity with usage, employed the appellation "indigo planters," whenever I have had occasion to speak of the persons usually so called. But they might with more propriety be termed indigo manufacturers; for I believe, they all really are manufacturers of that dye, while by far the greater part of them are really no more planters than the money lenders who supply capital to ryots for the cultivation of rice, sugar cane, or any other sort of produce. I have taken notice of this, because the name seems to me calculated to impress one, to whom the facts are not familiar, with a notion of a rightful connexion of a sort which does not really subsist, between the person on whom it is bestowed and the soil, and thus to give origin or support to erroneous ideas of the rights and obligations of the indigo planters and the ryots towards each other. There are generally current other expressions implying still more objectionable assumptions respecting the rights of the planters, as any person may have observed who has looked into the letters that have lately appeared in the newspapers on the subject of the regulations affecting this trade. The lands are called their lands, and the ryots their ryots, as if they had some sort of property in both. But indeed the course in which affairs were for some time proceeding seems to have been adapted to bring about ultimately a state of things in which those expressions would be tolerably correct.

31 Oct. 1835.

J. M. Macleod.

Appendix, No. 16.

App. No. 16.

LETTER FROM THE COURT OF DIRECTORS.

Judicial Department, (Lower Provinces).

(No. 3 of 1832.)

Our Governor General in Council at Fort William in Bengal.

PARAGRAPH I. WE proceed to reply to the paragraphs of your letters noticed in the margin,* which relate to indigo planters.

2. The two first of these letters are in answer to our orders of the 6th August 1829, requiring you to furnish us with some information respecting the indigo planters, and the last refers to memorials presented to you on their behalf, and the consequent enactment of Regulation V. of 1830.

3. You say it will afford us satisfaction to learn from the reports of the magistrates and commissioners, that the local officers generally entertain a very favourable opinion of the character of the European planters, and that they are represented as kind in their treatment of the natives. Such undoubtedly is the opinion expressed of them by most of the magistrates and commissioners in the papers you have transmitted to us. Yet although we are not disinclined to give credit to those favourable reports of the planters, it is obvious that such accounts must be received with some allowance for the delicacy of the enquiry, and for the disposition which men naturally feel to speak favourably of those with whom they are in habits of familiarity and of social intercourse. "The habits of private intercourse" (says the commissioner for the 5th Division) "existing between the planter and the public officers, is a point of considerable moment, but it is a delicate matter to interfere with. I have known the appearance of intimacy deter the natives from bringing forward their complaints, and I incline to agree with them," (meaning

* Paragraph 5 to 12, letter dated 8 September 1829. Whole letter, dated 1 June 1830. Paragraph 8 to 12, letter, dated 9 November 1830. Indigo planters.

(meaning no doubt the natives with whom he had conversed), "that the idea of throwing aside our habitual private feelings in public business, is, with most of us, more specious than real." This consideration suggests the propriety of separating, as far as may be possible, the opinions of the officers from the facts to which they refer.

4. We do not, however, mean to question, that among the indigo planters there are many peaceable, good and highly respectable persons, who obey the laws, are just in their dealings, and kind to the natives, nor can we doubt that the disappointments and the losses to which they are subject from the frauds and the violence of neighbouring planters and others, who have an interest opposed to theirs, are considerable, while many contracts entered into fairly on their part, may have been broken most dishonestly by ryots.

5. One of the magistrates speaks of indigo planters who had been twenty years in a district without a complaint against them, while on the other hand, we hear of planters who cannot hold a factory a few months without numerous complaints being made against them or their servants. There is too much reason to believe, that the ryots are to a great extent oppressed and defrauded, if not by indigo planters themselves, by agents employed by them, acting in their names and for their advantage; while breaches of the peace attended with violence (often with wounding and sometimes even with murder) are committed; the chief actors in which are hired armed men, engaged by planters for the express purpose of enforcing their claims in defiance of the law. These facts are affirmed even by those who have borne strong testimony to the personal good character of the planters.

6. It was represented to your Government by many of the planters, and by the house of Messrs. Alexander & Co., that under the existing Regulations relative to the cultivation of indigo and the contracts between planter and ryot, a sufficient protection was not afforded to individuals engaged in the business, and they prayed for some legislative interference in their behalf.

7. The memorialists complained that the judicial authorities had put a different construction on the regulation, from that which had been generally acted upon both by ryots and planters; that those parties had understood that the regulation gave the planter a lien on the land for which he had contracted, and imposed on the ryot the obligation of cultivating that land according to the terms of the agreement; but that the Sudder Court had decided that the regulation conferred no such lien until the land had been sown, and left the planter, in case of non-cultivation, to his choice of a summary suit, to recover the advance with interest, or of a regular action for the penalties stipulated in the contract.

8. The objectionable part of the regulation as construed by the Sudder Court, was, according to the planters, that it afforded them no means of enforcing specific performance of the contract entered into by the ryot; that (except through the medium of a regular suit, which was almost out of the question), the regulation professed to afford no assistance to the planter, except in recovering his advance with interest, without any compensation for expense of establishment or for loss on contracts, which he might have made to deliver the dye, and that the poverty of the ryot, and the expense and delay attendant even on a summary suit, rendered the recovery, even of the advance, impossible. We fear that there is too much truth in these allegations.

9. The remedies which the planters proposed for the evil complained of were, that the ryot should be compelled to execute his engagement, not by the civil court, but by the aid of the police; that he should be punished criminally for his default, and that if he failed to sow the ground which he had contracted to cultivate for the produce of indigo, the party with whom he had engaged should be permitted to take possession and cultivate it himself. It will be seen that the former part of this application has been complied with, but not the latter.

10. It seems to be the general practice of the planters to advance money to ryots to cultivate indigo on lands, the boundaries of which are specified in the engagements. The ryot engages to deliver the plant at the factories at a fixed rate, and the planter considers that he has a right to such lands for the term specified in the engagement. The mode in which these contracts are made, is thus described by Mr. G. Smith, assistant magistrate of Jessore, who appears to have had experience in some of the districts where indigo is chiefly cultivated. "They are generally entered into by the gomashta of the factory without any interference on the part of the proprietor, who, provided he has kabulyats for the produce of a certain quantity of land, does not stop to inquire how they were obtained. They are generally, if not always, witnessed by the inferior servants of the factory, who are in most cases dependents of the gomashta, and who, so long as they are allowed to participate in a small degree, in the harvest which the gomashta makes by appropriating a share of the advances to himself, are not particular as to whether the agreements they witness are bonâ fide the voluntary contracts of the ryot, or are extorted by, or forged by, the gomashta.

"The ryot, on the contrary, availing himself of the suspicion which is generally attached to documents of this nature and thus attested, frequently takes advances from two or more manufacturers, and gives agreements to both for the produce of the same piece of ground. The amla of the factory last contracting, of course take care that their agreement shall be antedated, in order that the preference may be given to them, when the different parties come to issue about the cutting of the plant.

"The effect of this mutual want of faith is, that it constantly causes serious affrays, filling the Courts with causes and the jail with prisoners.

"It appeared from the jail darogah's report, that on the 15th May there were 142 persons in jail in indigo cases; but at the season for cutting the plant the number is considerably greater.

11. A copy of a contract in Tirihoat has been given by the magistrate of that district. In other places the engagements may be differently framed.

12. The corrupt and fraudulent proceedings of the gomashtas, and other principal native agents at the factories, are acknowledged by the planters themselves, who describe them as extorting from the ryots, and cheating them as well as the planters.

13. Mr. Turnbull, one of the judges of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, says—"The contract formed with the ryot is sometimes not in writing, is frequently insufficiently defined, and is generally extremely unfavourable to the ryot, rendering him in fact, a slave to the establishment with which he

App. No. 16. has once engaged, and thereby preventing an open and fair competition to all, which would afford the only true and effectual remedy. Too much also, it is said, is entrusted to dewans, naibs, gomashitas, and numerous others employed by the planter, who, I fear, looks but little beyond the quantity of the land procured for him, and does not pay sufficient attention to the means by which it has been obtained. In such a state of things (says Mr. Turnbull) it cannot be much matter of surprise that the ryot who is acknowledged to be in poverty, and has perhaps been labouring in vain for years to work off his old balances, as it is called, should readily yield to the temptation of an offer of money from a rival factory to pay off his old score, and thereby liberate himself from thralldom, as well as engage on more favourable terms." The contracts are said to be generally for two and three, to eight and ten rupees advanced on each, and some of the factories have thousands of such engagements.

14. The greatest of evils of which the ryots complain (says Mr. Walters) "is the almost utter impracticability of being able to free themselves, should they once have the misfortune to receive indigo advances, either by their own free will or compulsion."

15. The Commissioner of Revenue and Circuit in his report, after an inquiry into the disturbances connected with indigo concerns in a neighbouring district, says, "I examined the accounts of the ryots, and though some of the items placed at their debit, appeared to me not strictly just, yet, on inquiry, I found the same custom prevailed throughout the district."

16. It is further said by Mr. Walters, that if a ryot should possess the means of paying off his balances, and desire to emancipate himself from indigo cultivation, there is at present no legal process by which he can compel the planter to settle his account and give him his discharge. "The planter will not receive the money, and the ryot generally finds himself reluctantly compelled to continue the cultivation."

"Other grievances (says Mr. Walters) complained of by the ryots are, their being forced by threats and ill-usage to enter into indigo engagements; their having other or more lands than those contracted for taken from them by the indigo servants, and being thus unable to raise other crops intended for the support of their families; their having entered into engagements, perhaps voluntarily with one factory, and being obliged to execute engagements with another for the same lands, or although they have no concern with any factory, still having their lands forcibly sown without any pretence or colour of right. These (says Mr. Walters) are evils, all of too common occurrence, and which it is not in the power of any magistrate to prevent. They are to be attributed more to the factory servants than to the planters themselves, though the latter do not perhaps trouble themselves much to ascertain how things are carried on, so long as a certain quantity of lands is sown, and a certain produce is to be expected."

"As magistrate of Nuddea (says Mr. Turnbull) I had some opportunity of witnessing the scenes of contention and strife, ensuing from the various and conflicting interests to which that competition gave rise. The disorders which then prevailed in that and the neighbouring indigo districts, have, I believe, nothing abated to the present day, and they are certainly such as to call for the serious interposition of Government. From the moment of ploughing the land and sowing the seed, to the season of reaping the crop, the whole district is thrown into a state of ferment. The most daring breaches of the peace are committed in the face of our police officers, and even of the magistrate himself. In utter defiance of all law and authority, large bodies of armed men are avowedly entertained for the express purpose of taking or retaining forcible possession of lands or crops. Violent affrays, or rather regular pitched battles ensue, attended with bloodshed and homicide. Our police establishments are corrupted, and the darogahs are said notoriously to be in the pay of the planters, European or native, to secure their good offices. Private assassinations occasionally occur, and forgery and perjury have their full sway; in short every species of crime is committed, and in the list I should not omit false charges of murder, arson, &c., which are very common, and are the most harassing of all to the accused as well as to the magistrate."

17. This statement is confirmed by Mr. Walters, who says, "I will not here put on record acts which have come to my knowledge of open, daring violence, directed to the destruction of rival factories, but will ask, where is the instance in this part of the country of the native zemindar, who, unaided by European partners or influence, has erected indigo factories, and successfully carried on the speculation, without being in the end either entirely ruined, or obliged to admit his more powerful neighbour to a share in his concern, or being himself perhaps cast into jail for standing up in defence of his own rights?"

18. The practice of indigo planters maintaining large bodies of armed men, is noticed by other Judges of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, as well as by Mr. Turnbull. Mr. Ross says, they are kept to enforce the ryots' contracts, and Mr. Sealy speaks of "the number of affrays that now annually take place for indigo lands, which are invariably attended with severe wounding, and frequently with loss of life, in consequence of the planters entertaining bodies of fighting men for the express purpose of fighting their battles on those occasions."

19. Mr. Walters refers to the custom of entertaining at European and native indigo factories a number of persons of various descriptions, sometimes proclaimed offenders, escaped convicts, or persons discharged from jails. "These people (he says) find a secure asylum in indigo factories, from whence they issue under cover of the night, and are guilty of heinous offences; dacoities, thefts and even murders, have been brought home to such factory retainers." The police officers, he says, are afraid to enter an indigo factory, the planters in general not being ready to assist the police, especially when suspicion falls on their own servants. It appears from a statement accompanying Mr. Walters' report, that one of the indigo planters in his district has in his service 240 persons under the denomination of amins and khalassis.

20. The affrays in which the planters engage, and their open violation of the laws, are freely admitted by the planters themselves. Addressing the Governor General in Council, "your memorialists" (they say) "are far from wishing to conceal from your Lordship, that disputes in regard to these lands, and the rights possessed over them by the planters have frequently arisen, both between the neighbouring planters and between the planter and zemindar, talookdars and other natives, having having, or pretending to have, a right in the land, and are willing to admit that occasional instances have occurred of violence and oppression on the part of the planter, which they are far from justifying." In another place they refer to the sources under the existing system, from which originate "too many of the scenes of violence and even bloodshed, with which your Lordship in Council cannot be unacquainted." And speaking of the good effects, which they think would follow from the adoption of their suggestions, they say "many of the evils now so prevalent will speedily disappear, and the peace of the indigo districts be at once restored and preserved with comparative facility, where hitherto lawless violence and force have too frequently prevailed, as your memorialists would earnestly press on your Lordship's attention, because force and violence alone have been found able to protect private property from spoliation and ruin. Nor is this violence confined to the native agents of the planter, the notorious corruption of these persons having been noticed, the memorialists add that the planter is too often compelled to overlook, or sanction proceedings, necessary to the protection of his property, but which unavoidably lead to broils and quarrels."

21. Mr. Prinsep, the secretary in the General Department, to whom some of the papers connected with this subject were referred, made the following remarks: "It is where in the eagerness to extend cultivation the manufacturer presses money upon a half unwilling ryot, or on one of several joint ryots, or on ryots who have no right to change their cultivation without the zemindar's permission, or on ryots not in possession, in all which, and in 500 similar cases that might be cited, the manufacturer has not the land measured out to him and specified, but relies on the ryot's word as to the possession and as to the land's fitness for the plant, confirmed perhaps by a dishonest gomashita. Mr. Prinsep says, the Courts are not strong enough to prevent people from thriving by violence, and the manufacturers trust at present to their lattials (bludgeon men) to supply the deficiency of their contracts; Mr. Prinsep adds, "the stronger party benefits always by the looseness of an engagement; and while this is the case, that is, while, through the inefficiency of the existing law to protect the weaker, the manufacturers can bear down the ryots by hired ruffians, it may be part of their policy to cry out against the system, as compelling them to resort to such means of righting themselves; but Government will not readily be persuaded that they are the oppressed class, who require to have their hands strengthened by further legislative provisions."

22. Mr. Walter says, that false complaints are made, and witnesses are suborned, but that the planter's name does not appear, though the case is brought forward by his servants, and at his expense, he himself, most probably, knowing nothing of its truth or falsehood. "Many a planter (says Mr. Walters) has confessed to me that he has been an accessory to acts, of which he would have felt himself ashamed in his own country, acts which he was driven to permit, or to lose the capital he had embarked." He remarks, that the European planters holding lands in the name of their servants, are subject to no tangible responsibility. They may direct brigands to be entertained; they may plan and order attacks to be made, but if not personally present as principals, it is difficult to bring them to justice. "Instances have occurred," says Mr. Walters, "in which the mere warning a European planter against being accessory to the breach of the peace on the information of a police officer, that armed men on his part were collected, has called forth a threat of prosecution in the Supreme Court, so that magistrates are really afraid to act against British subjects, except on the strongest grounds."

23. We desire to be informed, whether you have any reason to believe that the fear of prosecution in the Supreme Court operates to prevent magistrates from executing their duties in respect to British subjects. At this distance we have not the means of forming a correct judgment on such a point; the importance of it, however, is obvious; and if Mr. Walters' imputation is well founded, an effectual remedy for so intolerable an evil should be sought without delay.

24. The memorialists represented to Government that in consequence of the influence exercised by the zemindars, talookdars and others, their dependants were often compelled to rise in a body, and arm themselves against the servants of an obnoxious planter, who were thus prevented from ploughing, sowing, or otherwise working the land. After describing the pernicious influence of the munib (meaning no doubt the zemindar) over the ryots, they say his object is to extort bribes from the planter; "where this bribe is refused (they add) and the interference of the munib prevents the sowing of the lands, the planter is then reduced to the necessity of taking forcible possession with his own people, or contemplating the loss of his advances, and his time, the blighting of the hopes of profit he indulged, and perhaps the prospect of utter ruin. When he is driven to the former course (and your memorialists feel assured it will excite no surprise if he should sometimes betake himself to it) and is resisted, as frequently happens, your Lordship in Council will be at no loss to discover the cause of scenes of occasional violence and disturbance, which the regulation now solicited would, in the humble opinion of your memorialists, so effectually prevent."

25. The planters complain of the native zemindars, talookdars and others, as ever ready to prompt their ryots to a breach of contract, and they declare to the Government, that they consider legislative interference necessary for the protection of their interests against the machinations of those persons, and even for the prevention of their utter ruin. In the representation of Messrs. Alexander & Co, it is stated, that a native interfering with an indigo planter in Dacca Jelalpoore, had persuaded the ryots not to sow their lands; that the factories were shut up, and that the expense and trouble of instituting a suit against every individual contractor, with the certainty that nothing could be recovered from a population so wretchedly poor as the ryots of Bengal, made it a hopeless case for the indigo planter to seek redress by suits against them in the court. This unfair competition is represented as the cause of those disputes, from which affrays, breaches of the peace, and often murder arise; and it is proposed, that the party interfering with contracts, instead of the miserable ryots, should be punished by summary process.

26. In one of the memorials from Jessore it is proposed, that the police officers should be required to give immediate assistance in arresting a servant or labourer refusing to work under his contract; that it should be declared criminal in zemindars, talookdars or others to shield or protect him, and

App. No. 16. that for so doing they shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment. It is further proposed, that lands which can be proved to have belonged to a factory for a number of years, the planters shall not be dispossessed of "by virtue of any species of tenure whatever," this the memorialists call "an equalization of rights." They object to the consent of the zemindar being required for a lease from the ryot to the planter, and they propose that the planter should satisfy himself of the ryot's right to grant such lease, other parties having, or pretending to have, an interest, being left to make good their claims by ordinary process in the zillah courts; thus, say the memorialists, the zemindars would have "all the protection to which in fairness and justice they are entitled."

27. These propositions seem very extraordinary from persons who admit that farms are extensively held by the European planters, in the name, and through the agency of natives, generally their principal factory servants or gomashas, a set of men whose fraud and oppression they acknowledge to be notorious, although they often overlook or sanction their proceedings, who declare they conscientiously believe that almost all the grievances of which they complain, and almost all the disorders which have so long prevailed in the indigo districts, have arisen out of the defective state of the law, and the notorious corruption of its subordinate agents, who avow that the planters bribe the amla of the courts, as the only means of securing a fair representation of their cases, and that force and violence alone can protect their private property from spoliation and ruin.

28. Mr. Walters says, that the European planter, if zemindars refuse to accede to his offer, frequently obtains a pottah or ijara for their lands, from some claimant or sharer, real or fictitious, not in possession, perhaps from some unauthorised gomashas; and on that plea, if he cannot succeed in turning them out, at least deprives them of their rent. The planter, on such occasions, takes on himself all the expense of the litigation to which his ally may be exposed, and the zemindar finds himself involved in a lawsuit, or is perhaps driven to commit a breach of the peace, or to look for a protector in some more powerful indigo planter; at all events the peace of the district is most generally broken, and serious consequences not unfrequently occur. "This (says Mr. Walters) is a common practice."

29. The extent to which these disturbances go, may be well understood from the report of the Commissioner who inquired into the troubles in Dacca Jelalpoore in 1829, occasioned by disputes between a European indigo planter and a native zemindar. The European collected 500 men to sow his indigo seed, and the villagers had 1,000 to oppose him. Whenever the police officers appeared, the people assembled in bodies of 2,000 or 3,000, they were summoned together by regular signal guns. On one occasion the police officers, who were attacked by a body of 2,000 men, were beaten and taken prisoners, and the magistrate thought it necessary to apply for military force to assist him.

30. Mr. Ross very justly remarked, that to refer a ryot, who has to support himself and family by his labour, to a tribunal at a distance from the place of his abode for redress, when an act of injustice had been done him, was in effect to deny him redress. The zillah courts, from their distance, and their being so few in number, were inaccessible to the ryots; and from their accumulation of business, of little avail to the manufacturer. The want of provision for administering the law, was in Mr. Ross's opinion, sufficient in itself to account for the disorder prevailing in the indigo districts, and although Mr. Ross proposed some alteration in the law, he insisted on the necessity of having adequate local courts of judicature, without which no amendment of the law would be of any advantage. In Mr. Turnbull's minute we find the following passage: "Let us consider the vast interests that are involved in the matter under discussion, not merely in the lacs of rupees that are annually at stake, but as variously affecting the greater part of a large and populous district, and consider at the same moment the means we at present possess of affording prompt and effectual redress in the countless disputes which cannot but arise from such a state of things. A single factory may have formed upwards of a thousand contracts; the parties may be distant from the only courts now open to them, from fifty to a hundred miles; those courts are already overwhelmed. The matters in dispute press for decision, and cannot wait the ordinary course, for delay would render the decision nugatory and worse, as the parties would have been needlessly subjected to annoyance and expense; what then is the remedy?—I confess I am at a loss to propose any other than the appointment of a respectable sudder amin in each Thanna division, with a salary or authorised emoluments, such as would incite him to a faithful and honest discharge of the important trust which must necessarily be confided to him." The appointment of local sudder amins was also recommended by Mr. Prinsep.

31. These suggestions, however, you did not think proper to adopt, for you were of opinion the native local officers were not yet fit to be trusted with the arbitrement of disputes between European planters and the native cultivators, neither did you approve the plan of establishing a registry for contracts between the ryots and planters, which had been strongly recommended by some of the public officers, and objected to by others.

32. In Regulation VI. of 1823, it was stated, that the delay and difficulty of obtaining redress by a regular action in the civil courts in regard to the enforcement of engagements made by indigo planters with ryots, had, not unfrequently, led to acts of violence and even to serious affrays, and the main object of that regulation was to authorise the institution of summary suits to enforce such engagements. Now it is said that the rules adopted have been found, in a great measure, ineffectual, and regulation V., of 1830, has been enacted, "for amending the provisions of the former regulation, and for providing more effectually for enforcing the execution of contracts relating to the cultivation and delivery of indigo plant."

33. It is first provided that he who instigates, or induces a ryot to evade the performance of his contract with the planter, shall be held, jointly with the ryot, answerable for the full amount of the penalty specified in the original agreement of the ryots, together with all costs and expenses of the suit; but no provision is made for inflicting penalties, costs and expenses on him who instigates, or induces the planter to evade the performance of his contract with the ryot, notwithstanding it may so happen (in the case for instance, of a disputed right of occupancy); that the ryot is properly and legally advised, that the party interfering has a perfect right to interfere, and that on the planter's side there is nothing but injustice. Although it may be true that the planter is much less likely than the ryot to attempt to evade the contract; it would still have been right to apply the clause to both.

34. By the next provision of the regulation, a ryot who has entered into a contract under certain specific penalties to sow and cultivate for an indigo planter, is made liable for a breach of his part of the engagement, not only to the payment of the prescribed penalty, but also to punishment as a criminal. He may, in the first instance, be imprisoned by the magistrate for a month. The magistrate or joint magistrate may also require him to sow or cultivate, and any subsequent convictions of wilful neglect, or refusal to comply with such requisition are punishable by a further imprisonment not exceeding two months. This is the case of a contract for the mutual benefit of two parties, voluntarily entered into with specific penalty, to which both have agreed. We are not aware of any principle, on which, in such a case, the law, instead of recognizing the terms of the agreement and the equality of the parties, should make a distinction between them. If for non-performance of an engagement, one party should be punishable by imprisonment for one, two or three months, or perhaps (under repeated convictions) for a longer time, it is not very obvious why the other party, however fraudulently or unjustly he may have acted should go free, nor do we perceive why such a rule, if in itself just, should be confined to indigo, or any particular species of cultivation. We feel also a strong objection to this clause, because it attaches punishment on those who appear by the statements scarcely to be free agents. The ryot from poverty, abjectness of spirit, intimidation or bribery, is the victim of others far more guilty than himself; it may not be easy to visit those persons with a corresponding infliction, but it is hard that he alone should be singled out for punishment.

35. By another provision, persons wilfully damaging or causing to be damaged indigo plant, "by allowing cattle to trespass thereon," or by any other means, "are punishable to the extent of a fine of 200 rupees, or one year's imprisonment." We cannot help fearing that the infliction of penalties of such severity, when considered with reference to the means of the parties on whom alone they are likely to be imposed, may be productive of much oppression and injustice.

36. It appears by the preamble of the regulation, that ryots who may be unwilling to renew their contracts with indigo planters, require the assistance of the courts to obtain a release from their engagements. What the consequence would be to a ryot, the period of whose contract was expired, if he refused to renew his engagements, is not stated; but some protection it seems was thought necessary; for this purpose he may apply to the judge, who will settle the account by a summary process; but after all, if the planter does not agree to the judge's decision, no release can be given to the ryot, and the parties are referred to the civil court, that place of delay and difficulty, where attempts to obtain redress are so ineffectual; for the possible case of a balance being due from the indigo planter to the ryot, on a settlement of accounts, no provision is made.

37. It seems to us, that the effect of this regulation is to give advantages to the indigo planters in their dealings with the ryots, by dispensing in their favour, with the ordinary course of the law, to which all other persons in the state are subject.

We are not insensible to the difficulties of this subject. The planter who has already sunk a large capital in his works, and who is obliged to maintain an establishment of servants at a considerable expense, must be ruined if those with whom he contracts fail in the performance of their engagements, while the ryots having, as is customary, received advances of money from the planter, have nothing to lose but that on which we fear in such transactions they set no great value, character, but on the contrary enjoy a present advantage, by selling the plant to some other person than him for whom it was originally intended. We cannot, however, sanction any legislative measure which appears, like Regulation V., of 1830, not to extend equal protection to all; it seems to us, that the subject ought to have been more thoroughly sifted before you enacted this regulation. An inquiry should have been made by one or more Commissioners specially appointed for the purpose of investigating and reporting upon the matter, examining all parties interested, and all who were cognizant of facts, or likely to offer useful suggestions, and carefully distinguishing facts from inferences; and accurately tracing the authority of every statement.

38. It is further obvious that the same rules cannot, as a matter of course, be assumed as applicable alike to persons standing in positions so different from each other as those of Behar and Bengal; and again, as any of these from the inhabitants of the Western provinces.

39. The detail into which we have entered, though embracing many important particulars, and especially the opinions of many gentlemen to whose sentiments much weight must be attached, leaves, it is obvious, many points unexplained, which it is very desirable to have fully developed, with a view to a clear comprehension of the actual and relative condition of the parties interested.

40. We should wish you therefore to consider the means by which the circumstances of this important branch of trade, in so far as they are likely to bear upon judicial or territorial arrangements, may be thoroughly investigated and reported upon the different parts of the country, in which different plans of management are understood to be followed, being distinctly considered; all classes of persons interested having a full opportunity of stating what they may desire to urge, and the matters reported being given with a specific reference to the documentary or oral evidence on which they rest.

41. Without, however, deciding how far the views and statements given in the papers now under consideration, are to be admitted or disputed, we can have no hesitation in concluding, that they do not afford sufficient grounds for enforcing the engagements of the indigo ryot by a special penal regulation; so far from it indeed, the facts before us suggest strong doubts of the policy and justice of the measure.

42. We therefore direct that you rescind the second and third clauses of Regulation V. of 1830, and that you will revise the other clauses with reference to the remarks which we have made on them in a preceding part of this letter.

43. We cannot conclude without impressing on you the expediency of applying some remedy to the evils disclosed in the reports to which we have referred.

44. In this despatch we have dwelt mainly on the dark side of the case, because it is from such an exhibition that the necessity of some immediate interposition on the part of Government becomes apparent

App. No. 16. apparent. We feel that the prevalence of such flagrant misdoings, in any part of the country, is a reproach to our administration; we doubt not that you have seriously considered the means by which they can be finally suppressed.

45. On our part, our best attention is given to the various suggestions of the gentlemen whose opinions you have transmitted to us. One great desideratum unquestionably is, a facility of access to courts of justice; when we advert to the power now exercised by the sudder amins, and the general high character of that class of persons, we cannot but feel surprised that you should have hesitated to intrust them with the authority which was suggested.

46. It is much to be lamented that it is so common for Europeans to hold land in other names than their own. The planters allege that this practice is in some measure owing to the forms and restrictions enjoyed by your resolution of May 1824, on Europeans desirous to take leases of land; if this should appear to you to be the case, we authorise you to relax, though with proper caution, such of the securities prescribed in that resolution, as in your opinion may be safely dispensed with.

47. We desire you will take into consideration the expediency of establishing a complete registry of all lands held by Europeans in each district, either in their own names, or in the names of others, and of taking the necessary steps to prevent, as far as may be practicable, their occupying any unregistered lands.

48. We have only to add, that all Europeans who are permitted to remain in the interior, must be taught practically, that obedience to the laws is an indispensable condition of their license to reside there.

We are, &c.

(signed)

Robert Campbell.
John G. Ravenshaw.
W. Wigram.
H. Lindsay.
John Morris.
W. Young.
H. Alexander.
John Loch.

George Lyall.
H. Shank.
John C. Forbes.
J. R. Carnac.
J. Stuart.
N. B. Edmonstone.
H. St. G. Tucker.

London,
10 April 1832.

Appendix, No. 17.

STATEMENT of the Out-turn of Indigo between 1849 and 1859 in the Bengal Presidency, furnished by Messrs. R. Thomas & Co.

	1849-50.	1850-51.	1851-52.	1852-53.	1853-54.	1854-55.	1855-56.	1856-57.	1857-58.	1858-59.
Delhi - - -	687	762	954	616	933	694	840
Bareilly and Agra - -	440	616	782	913	536	688	469
Futtehghur - - -	6,235	6,338	10,018	11,257	9,780	7,344	12,813	3,500	5,980	10,987
Cawnpore - - -	655	1,409	1,460	1,284	1,836	1,002	1,516
Allahabad - - -	904	1,643	1,422	1,674	2,099	1,320	1,610	370	708	1,179
Benares and Mirzapore - -	3,080	2,915	2,728	3,715	4,609	3,126	3,035	1,088	2,755	3,057
Juanpore - - -	3,033	2,519	2,357	3,764	4,716	3,160	2,521	586	3,278	3,797
Azimghur and Ghazeepore - -	1,318	1,875	2,044	2,865	3,247	2,128	1,421	816	1,087	1,586
Goruckpore - - -	796	1,037	873	1,091	1,718	1,300	866	557	713	1,036
Patna and Shahabad - -	3,035	3,151	3,796	3,681	3,765	2,677	1,820	238	632	1,635
Chuprah - - -	807	1,613	866	1,046	965	1,961	1,262	2,356	930	2,072
Tirhoot - - -	19,945	29,181	13,516	20,868	16,277	29,378	15,029	21,510	17,589	23,874
Monghyr - - -	492	890	557	884	643	1,482	1,064	1,747	994	1,888
Bhagulpore - - -	3,302	2,917	3,275	3,998	2,396	4,112	3,108	3,200	1,230	3,230
Purnea - - -	5,130	5,390	3,872	4,810	2,960	4,283	4,496	4,366	3,491	4,763
Malda - - -	2,418	1,742	1,845	1,291	1,025	2,445	2,037	2,313	1,557	2,777
Moorsheadabad - -	6,061	4,499	4,201	2,551	3,054	6,516	4,037	7,061	5,222	4,912
Rajeshye, &c. - -	3,285	3,629	2,840	2,851	2,302	5,272	2,497	4,841	3,531	3,512
Runpore - - -	682	403	623	677	1,315	689	500	765	250	466
Kishnaghur - - -	13,702	18,718	15,528	10,276	11,377	11,650	10,362	10,205	13,084	8,028
Burdwan - - -	4,052	5,781	3,076	3,153	3,870	2,914	2,925	3,277	2,783	2,186
Hooghly, 24-Per- gunnahs and Barraset - - -	1,147	992	630	568	994	631	322	428	602	357
Midnapore - - -	902	1,263	952	1,721	1,407	1,049	1,167	1,246	1,167	893
Jessore - - -	16,818	15,955	9,572	9,654	7,811	12,305	6,585	10,227	10,353	8,635
Furreehpore - - -	1,763	1,368	1,627	2,780	815	2,048	1,414	1,587	937	1,488
Mymensing - - -	1,030	1,108	815	1,814	1,229	1,743	1,129	1,403	677	978
Dacca - - -	2,654	2,512	2,338	2,484	1,423	2,252	2,069	2,400	716	1,773
Doab Native - - -	229	183	350	162	190	1,452	122	above	3,400	5,000
Benares, &c. - - -	309	254	734	1,872	3,225	2,467	2,874	1,454	800	2,682
Bengal, &c. - - -	7,724	10,803	7,136	3,784	5,614	5,497	3,578	4,791	4,000	3,300
Total - - -	112,595	131,666	100,787	108,104	102,131	123,585	93,488	92,332	88,477	106,087
Fogs and Trash - -	1,850	715	1,767	922	190	3,707	4,730
	114,445	132,381	102,554	109,026	102,321	127,292	98,218	92,332	88,477	106,087

The above figures are True Extracts from our Books, made up each season, &c.

Appendix, No. 18.

STATEMENT furnished by Mr. Forlong.

App. No. 18.

Ryot's Name, *Kannai Mundal of Kannaidanga.—Season 1857–58. Christian For 16½ Beegahs of Land.

	C Rs. a. p.
Balance due on account of last year - - - - -	11 6 11
Advanced to him - - - - -	25 2 -
Stamp paper - - - - -	- 4 -
Indigo seed, at 4 annas per beegah - - - - -	4 2 -
Cart-hire for bringing plants charged only at Rs. 1. 4. to the ryots per 100 bundles -	2 15 -
TOTAL - - -	43 13 11
Received 233 bundles of plants, price at 4 bundles per rupee - - - - -	58 4 -
Balance in favour of the ryot - - - Co.'s Rs.	15 9 -

	C. Rs. a. p.
From the above lands, also, the ryot had a crop of indigo seed from the second cutting, of 16½ maunds, of which I paid him 66 rupees as its price, and 5 rupees as a present; total - - - - -	71 - -
The plough was also run through the indigo seed plant at a cost to the ryot of about 2 annas per beegah, and a Kalai crop sown among the seed plant, which gave a clear gain of 1 rupee per beegah, or - - - - -	16 - -
Total for Seed and Kalai - - -	87 - -
Indigo plant crop brought down Co.'s Rs. 58. 4.; less charges for seed Rs. 4. 2., for cart hire Rs. 2. 15., stamp 4 annas; total Rs. 7. 5., leaving for the indigo plant -	50 15 -
TOTAL - - - Co.'s Rs.	137 15 -

Showing a return from the 16½ beegahs to the ryot of Rs. 8. 5. per beegah.

* This man and his father have had an account with the factory for the past 30 years, and there has been a very small balance at any time against either father or son.

Appendix, No. 19.

SENTENCE on Mr. Forde, dated 19 August 1848.

AFTER a full perusal of the entire record and mature consideration, I find that the plaintiff or deponent in the first instance is Tiluck Chunder Chowdari, who complained to the superintendent of police that his brother, Kishen Chunder Chowdari, had been seized by Mr. Forde's lattials, which happened in the following manner:—He, the said prosecutor, having complained previously to the superintendent of police, and that complaint having been made over to the deputy magistrate of Marnickgunge, for inquiry and investigation, it came to Mr. Forde's ears, who deputed his lattials here and there to intercept and seize the prosecutor, through fear of which he was obliged to keep in concealment, during which his brother Kishen Chunder Chowdari was necessitated to go

App. No. 19. to Dacca to pay in his rents, for which purpose he set out in company with Kashi Chand Paik and Ramdoss Bandir, &c.; that he was then seized by certain factory lattials and others in the employment of Mr. Forde; to wit, Tapa Bukshi, Kokaram, Nubu, Harun, Nobin Kurmakar, Udar Khan, Durpuram, as appears from the depositions of his brother, from which I have extracted these names. It appears from the said depositions that he applied to Mr. Forde at various times for his release, that those imprisoned with him were speedily released, but Mr. Forde made the release of Kishen Chunder Chowdry conditional on his brother's giving in a nolle prosequi; that he was removed out of the way when some gentlemen from Dacca came to Mr. Forde's to shoot, and on their departure he was again brought back to his former quarters at Phoolbarea. It further appears that Mr. Forde and Mr. Wise agreed together to discontinue all the oppression of which complainant had originally complained to the superintendent of police, provided he would give up the case, and a note signed by Mr. Forde is appended to the record addressed to the different manjhis, belonging to plaintiff's julkur, to pay their rents as usual to plaintiff, thereby showing that Mr. Forde had been interfering in the manner complained of, and oppressing the people within the limits of the prosecutor's julkur or fishery.

The confinement of Kishen Chunder is fully proved, first by his own evidence, and by those who were carried off by the factory lattials and imprisoned with him at Phoolbarea, and also by the evidence of other parties who saw him in confinement. In this the deputy magistrate came to the same conclusion that I do, but not on such a full investigation. Apart from the direct evidence, there is more of a circumstantial nature; for instance, Mr. Forde's note. To the fact of abduction there is also sufficient evidence. That this practice of forcible abduction and imprisonment prevails in Mr. Wise's factories, also appears in the deposition of Huro Chunder, a mooktiar of the Furreedpore court, who deposes on oath that on his complaining against Mr. Wise, he was seized and imprisoned by Mr. Forde, and kept in confinement at his factories for some three months, and only escaped by giving a lease of his two anna share in his talook to the factory. Another victim of Mr. Forde's oppression is Jugo Mohun Hazra, a person stated to have been imprisoned 15 months, who denied everything at first, but, being unable to explain away the mark left by the irons, he reluctantly acknowledged the fact of his having been imprisoned some five times, and that he was even then a prisoner, and to protect him it was necessary to send him to Dacca under escort.

It will be seen, then, that this habit is usual and customary; other cases, not herein set forth, similar in kind, of gross violence and outrage, are equally well known in the management of Mr. Wise's factory; so that this is not a case standing per se, and highly improbable, but one just such as might be expected, and a mere customary act.

Mr. Forde meets this case with a general denial. He impugns the evidence, and would strike out the evidence of the fellow prisoner, and thereby get rid of the evidence to the imprisonment, and brings evidence to show that he is not guilty of the offence laid to his charge. A specimen of this is the evidence of one witness who was collecting some dues of a certain shopkeeper, last December, who states that Kishen Chunder then came into the shop to purchase, and that he asked the shopkeeper who he was. How did this particular information come to Mr. Forde's knowledge that he should be named for evidence? If this is not false evidence, it does look most like it.

In this case I note further, that since the institution of this case no less than four cases have been instituted by the factory people against plaintiff, three in the court of the deputy magistrate at Manikgunge and one in that of the magistrate at Dacca, all which plaintiff says are got up for the special purpose of annoying him, and that they are all false. These cases I have had under consideration, and they appear of that nature; the object being to compel plaintiff to withdraw his case, at least so he states; and my impression is that these cases were all vexatiously instituted, and that they are false cases, be the promoters who they may.

Looking at the direct and indirect evidence, and acts of this description being habitual and customary on the part of Mr. Wise's servants, European and native, I convict Mr. Forde of keeping in wrongful confinement, at Phoolbarea and elsewhere, Kishen Chunder Chowdari, he the said Kishen Chunder Chowdari having been violently seized and carried off by his, Mr. Forde's, factory employees, lattials and others; and under section 105, chapter 155, 53 Geo. 3, I sentence him to pay a fine of 500 rupees, realisable by distress, and in the event of the said fine not being realised, that Mr. Forde be imprisoned in the gaol at Furreedpore, for the period of one month from the date of the non-realisation of the said fine being reported by my nazir.

(signed) E. Lautour,
Joint Magistrate.

EXTRACT of Abstract Statement of Prisoners punished without reference to the Nizamut Adawlut by the Sessions Judge of Zillah Dacca, at the Gaol Delivery of Furreedpore, for the Month of October 1848.

1. Number of Case, and the Month in which it was committed.	2. The Number of the Prisoners.	3. Number of corresponding Statement No. 2.	4. Names of Prisoners.	5. Sex.	6. Age.	7. Religion and Caste.	8. Profession.	9. Crime charged : Name of Committing Officer, and Date of Commitment.	10. Crime Established.	11. Convicted on Violent Presumption, or on full Legal Proof.	12. Sentence of the Session Judge, and when it was passed.	13. SENTENCE.
11 August 1848	2	40	Mr. J. Tis- sendie.	Male	32	Christian	Indigo Planter.	1st Count. Ille- gally confining three wounded men named Me- gu, Phellu, and Kullimuddin. 2d Count. Privy to the same. 18 April 1848. Committed 12 Au- gust 1848. Mr. E. Lantour, joint magistrate of Furreedpore.	Privy to the ille- gal con- finement of three wounded men, Me- gu, Phel- lu and Kullum- uddin.	Violent presump- tion (zu- nigation- le).	To pay a fine of five hun- dred rupees (500 rupees) on or before the 20th November 1848, or in default of payment the fine to be commuted to imprison- ment for six (6) months. 31 October 1848.	Sheik Meghu, Phellu, and Kulli- muddin, were wounded in the affray in which Mr. Pinto was engaged on the 18th April 1848; they were missing till the 6th May, when they were found liberated on a chur . They had been, according to their own account, illegally confined a day at Balia Kandi factory, a day at Sonapore factory, 10 or 12 days in a zemindar's place, a day at Mouzah Chaunee, and were eventually set at liberty on Laounni chur , alluvion of the Chundunna river, not far from Gara Kola factory, in the division of Furreedpore. The above factories are under the control of Mr. Tissendie. The proof of Mr. Tissendie's privy rests chiefly on the evidence of the nazir of the joint magistrate's court, named Bharut Chunder Roy, circumstantial witness, No. 16. He had been deputed to investigate the case. He was at Jamalpore when Mr. Tissendie, who was travelling in a palanquin about to cross the Chundunna at Jamalpore ferry, sent for him, and told him if in a day or two they looked in the neighbourhood of Gara Kola, they would find the missing men. The nazir, in his deposition in the sessions court, could not state on what date Mr. Tissendie made this communication. Mr. Tissendie denies having made it, and alleges his interview with the nazir was on the 6th May, subsequent to the missing men being found, and that they were in the darogah's custody at that time.

This is only cleared up by reference to the joint magistrate's nutee. The joint magistrate called on his darogah for a report of the proceedings. The darogah furnished his report under date the 23d May; in it he states he went to Moodacolly on the 5th May, and on the eve of that day the nazir informed him of Mr. Tissendie's communication. Neither the nazir nor the darogah appear to have been influenced in their search for the missing men by what Mr. Tissendie had stated, but in the expectation of finding them in the neighbourhood of some place in the direction of Garakola, two burkundazes were sent on the night of the 5th of May, and on the 6th, not far from that factory, they met the men on the chur aforesaid.

Three persons, Ramsunker, Baidyonath, Agur Mahommed, witnesses No. 18, 19 and 10, were present at the interview of the nazir with Mr. Tissendie, and they verify the nazir's statement. The veracity of these witnesses might have been doubted, because one said Mr. Tissendie had only four bearers, another said he had 10 or 12, had not the darogah's report corroborated this their statement and that of the nazir.

It is impossible to conceive that three wounded men should be moved from factory to factory, and illegally confined for 15 or 16 days within the circle of country under Mr. Tissendie's control, he being on the property, without his being privy thereto.

Mr. Tissendie, aged 32, is a Frenchman, son of Antoine Tissendie, born at Montauban, in the department of Tarn et Garonne, in France, now resident as an indigo planter at Baliakandi, in the division of Pubna.

Appendix, No. 21.

App. No. 21.

LIST of serious Cases arising from the Indigo Planting System, filed by Mr. Eden.

1830: (1.) A CASE of dispute between two planters, Yong and Dick. Yong went with a party, and murdered Dick, alias Aimes. Yong was assisted by a foreigner named Pierre Aller. The foreigner and natives were tried at the Local Courts, and Pierre Aller imprisoned for life, the natives for fourteen and seventeen years. Yong, the principal, was tried at the Supreme Court on the same evidence, and acquitted.

(2.) Mr. Broderick wanted the lands of a zemindar named Akbar Alli. Instead of purchasing the zemindaree he sent men who felled the zemindar to the ground, plundered the house, kidnapped him and his brother, who were made to sign their names to two pieces of blank paper; one of them was then carried round from factory to factory for two months.

The native accomplices were imprisoned for five years; the European-principal was fined 50*l*.

(3.) A party from Mr. Wooden's factory in Furreedpore attacked and plundered the village of Gouldangi, and kidnapped two men named Sidu and Dinu, because they would not sow indigo. The men were never again heard of. The native servants were imprisoned for twelve years and seven years respectively. The European was not tried.

1843:

(4.)

Disturbances in Pergunnah Bhunbhoom in Zillah Midnapore.

Three attacks upon Watson's factories in 1843.

1847:

(5.)

Case of abduction and imprisonment proved against the factory servants of Messrs. Wise and Glass, of Dacca.

One Gour Chunder Chuckerbutty refused to grant a lease to Wise and Glass; he was kidnapped. On passing through Dacca in a boat to the place of banishment, he saw an European in a boat; he broke from his guards and jumped into the river, and was picked up by the European, who turned out to be the collector. The native servants were imprisoned for two years each, the guards to one year's imprisonment. The European assistant who directed the violence was not tried.

(6.)

Case of attempt of the servants of Mr. Yong, of Ashgurra, to forcibly sow with indigo the lands of native cultivators; the owner of the land was murdered with a spear by a factory lattial; one factory servant was hanged, another transported for life, the rest imprisoned for seven years.

(7.)

Case of abduction and imprisonment against Mr. Forde, an assistant to Mr. Wise.

Kishto Chunder and others complained to the superintendent of police of the oppressions of Messrs Wise and Glass. In revenge, Mr. Forde, their assistant, had him seized and confined, and he was only released on signing a compromise of his previous complaint.

(8.)

Mr. Brevois had a dispute with a native, the native was waylaid by a band of factory servants and murdered, notwithstanding that he had been allowed a police officer to escort him. One factory servant was hanged, one transported for life, 10 imprisoned for 14 years. Mr. Brevois was not tried.

1851:

(9.)

Robbery, attended with homicide, committed by the servants of Mr. Brice, of the Khalipsore factory. Case of Doorga Prosad Dutt and others.

Mr. Brice, of Khalispore, had a quarrel with Nayan Chunder Mozumdar. He sent out 40 or 50 men, headed by his naib; they plundered the house and murdered one of the inmates.

Sentenced to five years' imprisonment, which the Nizamut considered too lenient.

European not tried.

(10.)

Nizamut Reports, Vol. 1, page 287 to 293.

Kidnapping of Kawaz Sheik, and plundering of the houses of the Sundial family.

In this case, the Sundial family threw up a farm which they held from the Hizlabut factory. Three houses were plundered, one man kidnapped and never again heard of; a factory servant punished.

European not tried.

(11.)

Affray between Mr. Tripp, of the Nonor-gunge factory, and a zemindar, Brindabun Sircar.

Case of Karamulla Shah and others. Nizamut Reports, Vol. 1, pages 1054 to 1062.

Attempt to sow lands forcibly with indigo; lattials employed; one man killed by the factory jemadar of lattials, two other men severely wounded; prisoners sentenced to seven years' imprisonment.

- (12.)
Case of Mr. Solano and Mr. Guillot. { The ryots were rack-rented, and goaded into attacking Mr. Solano and his assistant. The ryots were stated in the official report to be "exasperated and despairing of redress." They were imprisoned for various terms of five, four, and three years. App. No. 21.
- (13.)
Attack on a party of men in the service of Mr. Lyons, of the Beniagram factory, and a party of men in the employ of Mr. Masyck of the Nimtolla factory.
Case of Manickchand Biswas and others.
Nizamut Report, Vol. 1, pages 1699 to 1711. { This was a dispute between Messrs. Lyons and Masyek about a chur. Two men were said to be missing after an affray. During the trial, one of the men turned up alive and well in another district.
- (14.)
Case of Mr. Cameron's dispute with the Narhi ryots. { Mr. Cameron proceeded to sow with violence the lands of certain villagers, under the pretence that they had contracted to sow indigo. Ryots defended their lands and wounded three of the factory people. The ryots were punished.
- (15.)
Violent seizure of ryots of the village of Choppapota, and homicide by people of the Dullimolla factory.
Case of Ramsing and another.
Nizamut Report, pages 558 to 564, Vol. 1, for 1852. { A party of men were sent out by Mr. P. Smith for the purpose of seizing ryots who would not take advances for indigo. The police watchman endeavoured to rescue the villagers, and was killed. The murderer told Mr. Smith that same day what had happened, yet Mr. S. permitted another man to be capitally sentenced for the crime. Before the execution, the real culprit committed a second murder, and then Mr. Smith was induced to inform the magistrate, that the person already sentenced wrongly was only an accomplice. (Vide oral evidence of Mr. Eden.)
- (16.)
Dispute between Mr. Gilmore and Dost Mahomed Chowdari at Pubna. { Mr. Gilmore sent some men to cultivate with indigo certain lands, which by the decision of a competent court he had no right to enter on. The owners of the land resisted; one man was killed. The trespassers were not punished; those who were acting in self-defence were imprisoned; some for five years, some for three.
- (17.)
Seizure of cattle, attended with homicide, by an armed body of men from the factory of Dhurmdah.
Case of Setabuddin Shaik and others.
Nizamut Report, Vol. 2, for 1852, part 2, pages 1 to 157. { This was an homicide committed by the same man who was engaged in case No. 15. The cases were very similar. Cattle carried off to force the ryots to take advances. The ryots resist, and death ensues. The defendant was found concealed in Mr. Smith's godown.
- (18.)
Riot and plunder of houses in the villages of Ryepore and Commbaug, by the people of Mr. Kenny, of the Salgurmudia factory.
Case of Ram Soondur Dutt and others.
Nizamut Report, Vol. 2, pages 184 to 189. { This was a most gross outrage committed in open defiance of the police; 34 ryots complained of the outrage and the plunder of their houses; 10 ryots ran away from the district and were afraid to complain. Twelve native factory servants were imprisoned for terms varying from five to three years. The Europeans were not punished.
- (19.)
In July 1852 Gobra Sheik was sentenced to five years imprisonment for having murdered one Ram Chunder Bagdee, who endeavoured to rescue his cattle which were being driven off to the factory.
- (20.)
On 12th January 1852, Komal Dass, a servant of Mr. Solano, was convicted of killing a native at the factory, by beating, kicking and trampling on him and forcing in his breast-bone, the cause being that this ryot had dared to complain to the police of the factory oppression. Seven years' imprisonment.
- (21.)
Attack on the village of Gopinathpore by the factory servants of the Nokanda and Paikadanga factories. Case of Ramsoonder Biswas and others.
Nizamut Report, Vol. for 1852, part 2, pages 896 to 898. { This village was attacked, plundered and burned, because the ryots would not sow indigo for Mr. G. French; the attack was made in the presence and in defiance of the police. Twenty or thirty of Mr. French's servants were imprisoned for five years; Mr. French was not tried.
- (22.)
A quarrel between Mr. Wise and Bishwanath Sen about the Lelutgunge Bazar. Sheik Hazara murdered Sheik Harau, and was imprisoned for 14 years.

App. No. 21.

- (23.) On the 4th September, Sheik Hadoo, a servant of the Hizlabut indigo factory, was imprisoned for 2½ years, and fined 100 rupees for carrying off the cattle of cultivators.
- (24.) On 10th August 1852, a number of servants of Mr. Beddy, of the Naraingunge indigo factory, were convicted of murdering a boatman who resisted an attempt made by them to seize his boat for the use of the factory.
- (25.) In July 1852 the servants of a Mr. Forbes, in Purneah, were imprisoned for going armed into a village and committing an affray, in which one of the opposite side was murdered. Mr. Forbes was not tried.
- (26.) Attack on private houses and property by the people of the Hizlabut factory. Case of Brojonath Sircar and another. Nizamut Report, Vol. 2, part 1, pages 494 to 496. Same as No. 10.
- (27.) On the 16th February 1853 six persons were imprisoned by the Judge of Rajshye for being concerned in an affray between Watson & Co. and the zemindar of Chodur; one man was killed and six wounded.
- (28.) 1853. Ditto. Ditto. Case of Habizulla Kazeer and others. Nizamut Report, Vol. 3, part 2, pages 334 to 335. Same as No. 10.
- (29.) Attack of a boat, and the carrying off and imprisonment of certain persons by people of Mr. French's factory at Kasseearree. Case of Gobind Chunder Sircar and others. Nizamut Report, Vol. 3, of 1853, part 1, pages 625 to 629. This was a case of dacoity committed by Mr. French's servants; a boat was attacked and property of the value of Rs. 3,104. 6. was plundered; the passengers and boatmen were kidnapped and kept in close confinement. The owner of the property had a dispute with Mr. French about land which was then under decision in the magistrate's court. Mr. French was not tried. The native servants were imprisoned for various terms, some of them for five years.
- (30.) Culpable homicide committed by certain men of Mr. Laruletta's factory at Kasseehdangah. Case of Gobind Ghose and another. Nizamut Report, Vol. 3, part 2, pages 684 to 691. The deceased in this case was a servant of Mr. Laruletta, and he was in the habit of levying fines upon the villagers for cattle trespass, real or imaginary. Mr. Laruletta discovered that he did not pay the full fines into the factory; he was murdered by factory servants; the natives were imprisoned for 10 years. Mr. Laruletta was not tried.
- (31.) Affray, with homicide, between the people of Messrs. Taylor and Morton of the Nurpore factory, and those of the zemindar of Noorpoor. Case of Peerbux Nabadeep and others. Nizamut Report, Vol. 3, of 1853, part 2, pages 947 to 951. The factory servants seized and drove off a number of cattle engaged in ploughing for the zemindar; the zemindar's servants endeavoured to rescue them. One man, Kaimkhan, on the part of the zemindar, was killed by several spear wounds; the cattle were found in Mr. Taylor's factories on the opposite side of the Ganges. One of the servants was sentenced to 14 years' imprisonment, and the rest to five years. Mr. Taylor was not tried.
- (32.) In July 1853 ten convictions were had against Mr. Tripp, of Salgurmudia, and Mr. Beaufort fined him 500 rupees.
- 1854:
- (33.) Riot, with homicide and wounding, originating in an attempt on the part of Mr. G. Collis, of the Balra factory, to cultivate indigo by force. Nizamut Report, Vol. 4, of 1854, part 1, pages 637 to 643. There was a dispute between the shareholders of Mouzah Jungour, in Tirhoot. Collis gained a case of a one-eighth share against the wishes of the proprietors of the other seven-eighths. He sent out a large party to sow lands forcibly. The villagers collected and resisted, and wounded three factory servants; they were imprisoned, some for seven years, some for five and three years.
- (34.) Riotous attack on the village of Moharajpore by men connected with Mr. Smith's factory, Bansberiah. Case of Raghob Turufdar and others. Nizamut Report, Vol. 4 of 1854, part 2, pages 1 to 5. The factory had a dispute with Mr. P. Smith about the village of Maharajpore; Mr. Smith sent out a party of several hundred men, who attacked the village, felled the police jemadar to the ground, and carried off a man named Meghai, apparently dead, on an elephant. The houses of the villagers were gutted and the cattle driven away. The Sudder acquitted the parties, because the body of Meghai was not forthcoming.

1855 :

(35.)

Affray with homicide, originating in an attempt on the part of Mr. Deverinne to raise the rents of the village of Parka.

Case of Lall Mohummud Biswas and others.

Nizamut Report, Vol. 5 of 1855, part 2, pages 177 to 179.

Mr. Deverinne tried to raise the rents of a talook; the villagers opposed him; an affray ensued in which one man was killed, 3 wounded, 3 kidnapped, one of whom never appeared again. The Sessions convicted; the Nizamut considered the affray clearly established, but doubted the identity of the persons then before them.

(36.)

A man was confined in the godown of the Shanpore factory in Messrs. Watson's concerns; he died, and his body was thrown into a large lake with a bag full of stones round the waist. The Nizamut acquitted, on the grounds that there was nothing to show the "particular treatment" which had caused death. This man was confined on a suspicion of theft, on a charge preferred by a merchant.

(37.)

Riot with homicide, originating in an attempt to force the cultivation of indigo.

Case of Gorai Mundul and others.

Nizamut Report, Vol. 5, part 2, pages 767 to 770. Jessore.

The planter endeavoured to force the cultivation of indigo. The villages resisted, and one of the factory servants was killed. The Nizamut released the villagers, "giving them credit for having only asserted the natural right of defence of their own property, which the aggressive acts of their assailants had encroached upon."

(38.)

There was a dispute in Purneah between one Doorjun Sing and a Ranee about an estate. Doorjun Sing was in possession by order of the Court. After being in possession for four years, Mr. Palmer persuaded the Ranee to give him a lease of her rights, and, in 1855, 150 armed men forcibly went to eject Doorjun Sing; they killed one and wounded four of Doorjun Sing's servants. Mr. Palmer's servants were imprisoned for three and four years; he was not punished.

1856 :

(39.)

Riot with homicide, originating in an attempt made by Mr. W. Collis, of the Chak factory, to get hold of land for indigo cultivation.

Case of Churrun Sing and others.

Nizamut Report, Vol. 6 of 1856, part 1, pages 807 to 808.

Musammat Maliss preferred a claim to a share of the estate of Chak which was declared by the collector to be "false and unfounded." She followed the usual practice of giving a farm of her rights to a planter named Collis, who collected a number of men and drove herds of cattle on to Chak lands, with a view of driving out the tenants. The villagers protected themselves without violence, on which the factory people attacked them and killed one of them on the spot. The servants were imprisoned; some for seven years, others for shorter terms. Mr. W. Collis, who was admitted by the Judge to have given the order, was not put on trial.

(40.)

Attack on the village of Hatdoil and Kokphoo by the retainers of Messrs. J. and R. Watson, of the Bansberiah factory.

Case of Chunder Seekur Sircar and others.

Nizamut Report, Vol. 6 of 1856, part 2, pages 6 to 29.

The villagers of three villages Hatdoil, Khamarpore, and Kokphoo would not sow indigo. A party of 150 armed men, headed by mounted sowars, was sent out of a factory presided over by a European manager, to coerce them. The three villages were gutted, three cultivators were murdered and six wounded. The Europeans were not punished or tried; European counsel was retained to defend the natives at an enormous expense.

1857 :

(41.)

Disputes between indigo planters, Messrs. Laruletta and Herklotts, and assault on Mr. Herschel, assistant magistrate of Aurungabad.

Case of Bhairub Sing.

Nizamut Report, Vol. 7, part 1, pages 339 to 341.

Dispute about a chur; armed lattials collected by two contending planters. The assistant magistrate came to apprehend them, and was severely assaulted and wounded in the head.

(42.)

Mutual affray between the people of Mr. Wise's factory, at Judoo chur, and certain villages at Himayutpore.

Case of Chedam Chang and others.

Nizamut Report, Vol. 7, part 2, pages 183 to 187.

Mr. Wise had a dispute with Moulvee Abdool Ali about some lands. Wise sent out a party to sow the lands with indigo. Gopal was killed and the body was carried off. Both parties claimed the body. The defendants were imprisoned, some for ten years, some for seven years, others for five years; European not tried.

App. No. 21.

(43.)

Affray between the retainers of Mr. McArthur, of the Meergunge factory, and the villagers of Jyparrah.

Case of Pubbun Meah and others.

Nizamut Report, January 1858, pages 34 to 37.

Mr. McArthur sent out a party of armed men to sow the lands of the village. The factory party were declared to be the aggressors in an affray, in which one man was killed and one wounded. The villages were described as a rather refractory set, refusing to pay rent to Mr. McArthur or to sow indigo. Both sides were punished with seven years and five years' imprisonment.

(44.)

Conviction of Mr. Tripp, of the Bamundi factory, of plundering wood, and the abduction and imprisonment of one of the men in charge of the timber.

This was a case of plundering wood and kidnapping the complainant, and sending him off to another district; Tripp was fined.

(45.)

Affray between the servants of the Ruton factory, belonging to Messrs. Hills & Co., and the people of Bhubyparra.

Dispute about a putni; whilst it was under the investigation of the court Messrs. Hills tried to get forcible possession; an affray took place, in which one man was said to have been killed, but the magistrate doubted the murder, and merely convicted of the affray.

1859:

(46.)

Three cases of illegal imprisonment proved against Mr. McArthur of the Meergunge factory.

Mr. Bainbridge, on going to dine with Mr. McArthur, found in the factory godowns three men, confined because they would not cultivate indigo; he released them, and fined McArthur.

(47.)

Attack on some of the villages of Gobgachia by the servants of Mr. Cockburn, of the Challa factory.

Mr. Cockburn wanted the ryots' ploughs; the ryots refused to give them; his men attacked the villagers, killed one, wounded two; plundered houses and carried off cattle; ryots were not under advances.

(48.)

Mr. Laidley, Mr. Wise's manager, confined his naib, Nobo Coomar, for two months in a godown.

Mr. Lance, the magistrate, personally released him, and imprisoned Laidley. Sentence, in appeal, commuted to a fine.

(49.)

Case in which the magistrate of Baraset punished the servants of the Hobra factory for going forcibly, with men and ploughs, and ploughing up 125 beegahs of land belonging to ryots, destroying the rice, and sowing indigo on it.

Appendix, No. 22.

App. No. 22.

From the Honourable A. Eden, Officiating Collector of Cuttack, to the President of the Indigo Commission, Calcutta, dated the 16th August 1860.

EXTRACT.

WHEN giving my evidence before your Commission, I omitted to state a fact, which shows, perhaps more forcibly than anything else, the great abhorrence in which the native peasantry hold the cultivation of indigo; further proofs of this are, perhaps, unnecessary after the voluminous evidence to this effect which the Commission has already taken. But, at the same time, if the Commission have no objection, I should feel obliged by their permitting the following statement to be attached as an addendum to my evidence.

2. When Baboo Prannath Chowdari, of Satkheera, purchased Pergunnah Balinda in the Baraset district, the ryots agreed to pay him a cess of 2 rupees per plough, on the condition that the indigo factories were kept closed; this cess came, in the aggregate, to 5,000 rupees per annum, and has been regularly paid, until the ryots discovered that the cultivation of indigo was optional, and they then withheld payment, being indifferent as to the factories remaining closed. On their refusing payment, an attempt was made to collect the tax by force, and I imprisoned the baboo's servants; the record will be found in the Baraset court. I have heard that the baboo has now sued the ryots for arrears of payment. On this point, however, the collector of Baraset will be able to furnish full information. If a few ryots will pay 5,000 rupees merely for the sake of escaping the liability of having to deal in raw produce with the manufacturers of indigo dye, the Commission will be able, at once, to understand the absurdity of the statement that the unprofitable nature of the crop is covered by "collateral advantages," such as medicine and schools; advantages, moreover, which are furnished by Government to every district, without the condition of having to grow an unpopular crop.

ESTIMATE of relative Cost and Return of Indigo and Tobacco, filed by the Honourable Ashley Eden.

App. No. 22.

Cost of growing Indigo on Tobacco Land:

	Rs.	a.	p.
Rent - - - - -	3	-	-
Eight months' ploughing, at two ploughs per week - - -	8	-	-
Manure - - - - -	1	-	-
Cost of seed - - - - -	-	10	-
Weeding - - - - -	-	4	-
Cutting - - - - -	-	8	-
Total - - - Rs.	13	6	-
Proceeds, 20 bundles at 5 per rupee	4	-	-
Loss to ryot on indigo - Rs.	9	6	-

Cost of growing Tobacco on the same Lands, as per Major Smyth's Report:

	Rs.	a.	p.
Ploughing - - - - -	8	-	-
Seedlings - - - - -	1	-	-
Planting (6 coolies) - - -	-	9	-
Weeding, breaking off tops and suckers (64 coolies) - - -	6	-	-
Collecting leaves, drying and tying into bundles - - - - -	-	15	-
Manure - - - - -	1	-	-
Rent - - - - -	3	-	-
Packing, at 5 annas per maund -	2	8	-
Total - - - Rs.	23	-	-
To which I would add watering -	1	-	-
Total - - - Rs.	24	-	-
Proceeds, 7 maunds at 5 rupees -	35	-	-
Deduct - - - - -	24	-	-
Rs.	11	-	-

The profit which the ryot would have obtained from the free use of his tobacco land added to the direct loss on indigo, gives a loss of Rs. 20. 6. But in 1858, tobacco was selling at 18 rupees per maund; this would give the ryot a profit on his tobacco crop of Rs. 101. 14.

My estimate of the produce of a beegah of tobacco is nearly half of Major Smyth's, who put it at 13 maunds per beegah instead of seven.

The comparative produce of rice and indigo I give as follows:—

INDIGO:

	Rs.	a.	p.
Rent - - - - -	1	-	-
Seed - - - - -	-	10	-
Ploughing - - - - -	1	-	-
Stamp - - - - -	-	2	-
Harrowing - - - - -	-	2	-
Weeding - - - - -	-	4	-
Cutting - - - - -	-	8	-
Dusturi - - - - -	-	4	-
Rs.	3	14	-
Ten bundles, at 5 per rupees -	2	-	-
Loss to ryot - - - - - Rs.	1	14	-

RICE:

	Rs.	a.	p.
Rent - - - - -	1	-	-
Seed - - - - -	-	12	-
Ploughing - - - - -	1	-	-
Weeding - - - - -	-	9	-
Cutting - - - - -	-	8	-
Harrowing - - - - -	-	4	-
Rs.	4	1	-
Ten maunds rice, at Rs. 1. 4. -	13	8	-
One rupee of straw - - - -	1	-	-
Rs.	14	8	-
Deduct expenses - - - - -	4	1	-
Rs.	10	7	-

Appendix, No. 23.

LETTER from Mr. G. R. Clarke, of Khalbolia.

App. No. 23.

W. S. Seton-Karr, Esq., President of the Indigo Commission.

Sir,

WILL you kindly allow me to place upon record a correction of a portion of the evidence of "Mr. A. T. Maclean, ex-joint magistrate of Dumurhuda," wherein he states that myself or my assistant, Mr. Harvey, prosecuted two ryots of Hurryhurnagur village, who, upon investigation through the police, turned out to have been dead for the past 18 years.

This is a mistake, as I only prosecuted five ryots in that village, against each of whom I obtained and executed decrees, as the files of the Damurhuda court can show. By filing this as supplement to my evidence you will oblige,

Yours, &c.

G. R. Clarke.

Khalbolia, 24 July 1860.

Appendix, No. 24.

To W. S. Seton-Karr, Esq., President of the Indigo Commission, Kishnaghur.

App. No. 24. Sir, Choukidanga, 12 July 1860.
I WAS sorry to observe, a short time ago, a statement made upon oath by an European witness, before your Commission, to the effect that Ameer Mullick, of Khanpoor, Pergunna Halda, Zillah Nuddea, was or is a notorious bad character, and that, obtaining my support, he did not hesitate to practice all kinds of oppressions, &c. This statement is incorrect. I knew Ameer Mullick in 1842-43-44, when I was managing partner at Katgarra, and again in 1852-53-54-55 (in all seven years), when I was manager for the Bengal Indigo Company, and had Ameer Mullick been the character described by Mr. Larmour, I must have known the fact. I most solemnly declare that I never heard any ryot or other person ascribe bad practices to Ameer Mullick during all the years I was manager of the Katgarra concern. I believe him to be entirely innocent of all the charges brought against him. I hear that Ameer Mullick and two of his sons are now in Kishnaghur, and are to be heard of at the house of Umesh Mookerjee, Mr. John White's head gomastah, who know Ameer Mullick and his antecedents thoroughly; I hope, therefore, your Commission will be pleased to give Ameer Mullick an opportunity of proving that he is not, and never was, the bad subject denounced by Mr. Larmour.

I remain, &c.

R. P. Sage.

P.S.—25th August. Ameer Mullick's residence consisted partly of pucka and partly of cutch dwellings. It was in one of the pucka compartments that Ameer Mullick, his brother Kanjee Mullick, and two others, were baptised in my presence by the Rev. John Joseph Foy. I appeared before the Commission on the 4th instant to swear to the truth of all I have herein stated, but indispensable business prevented my waiting till the taking of Mr. C. Chapman's evidence should be finished.

R. P. Sage.

Appendix, No. 25.

To A. R. Young, Esq., Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

App. No. 25. Sir,
I HAVE the honour, by direction of the Committee of the British Indian Association, to request the favour of your laying before his Honor the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal the following remarks, which the Committee consider it their duty to submit in connexion with the appointments noted in the margin.*

The Committee presume that the gentlemen named are to have no remuneration for the performance of their magisterial duties, but are to be permitted to carry on business for their own profit in the localities where they are to exercise those functions.

The Committee deem it superfluous to state that, personally, to the gentlemen invested with the important powers described they have no objection whatever to make, but that the appointments involve some most important principles, which circumstance alone elicits this representation from them.

The Committee beg, in the first place, to remark that the question as to the propriety of investing Mofussil residents of any class with the powers of magistrates is not a new one.

It has been discussed for many years, and was most elaborately considered a few months ago, when very extensive inquiries were instituted to ascertain the views of the community upon the subject. If previous discussions left the question doubtful, the last inquiry placed the fact beyond controversy, that the vast majority of intelligent people in the Mofussil were averse to the measure of investing indigo planters and their assistants with the authority and powers of magistrate, and upon grounds which it was impossible wholly to invalidate.

The Committee do not pretend to deny that the country magistracy needs to be strengthened in point of numbers. This has long been the case, as well when the discussions referred to above were carried on as now. But they fail to perceive that any new circumstances have arisen or conditions supervened which at once alter the nature of this question or its bearings. The Committee beg to refer to the published sentiments of his Honor the Lieutenant Governor upon this very question, not in a spirit of cavil, but with a view to state that they are aware of no new circumstances which could alter the tenor or force of those sentiments.

In the administration of British India, no principle has been enforced with greater care, or been productive of better results, than that no public servant, whatever be the nature of his functions, should carry on business for profit while holding office. In the case of officers holding judicial authority, it has been declared that, coming under any sort of pecuniary engagements with persons within their jurisdiction, shall incapacitate them for office. These stringent provisions have been enforced by Government with the utmost rigour, and the consequence has been that the portion of the public service under the immediate supervision of the Government, whatever may be its other faults, is distinguished for purity of character.

The Committee of the British Indian Association

* The 1st August 1857. The following gentlemen to be assistant magistrates and to exercise the powers of a covenanted assistant to a magistrate under Regulation XIII. of 1797, and IX. of 1867, and Section XII. Act X. of 1854, in the district of Nuddea and Moorshedabad respectively, viz., Messrs. R. F. Larmour, J. Forlong, and I. Burrell, in Nuddea; Messrs. H. Deverell, G. M. Jackson, and J. Watson & Co., in Moorshedabad.

tion take leave to doubt whether this principle can be infringed in any case without hazarding great and valuable interests. It is not fair to the people (the Committee respectfully submit) to place them under the magisterial authority of persons who have more than ordinary temptations to abuse that authority; it is not fair to those who are thereby placed under such temptation; it is not fair to the Government itself, the character of which is estimated by the conduct of its agents.

The Committee, moreover, doubt the legality of the measure now adopted. They cannot bring themselves to believe that the Executive has authority to found such an institution as an unpaid magistracy without the previous sanction of the Legislature. The law (in terms) prohibits public servants in civil employment from engaging in trade, agriculture, and other pursuits, for the sake of profit. The measure under consideration as effectually militates against this law as if it modified in so many words the relative statute. There appears, too, to the Committee, a technical objection to these appointments. The Committee are aware of but three classes of persons who can be appointed to magisterial offices in the Regulation Provinces, viz., persons under covenant to the East India Company; uncovenanted judicial officers, ex-officio, or by nomination; and persons nominated under Act XV. of 1843. The gentlemen appointed Assistant Magistrates in Nuddea and Moorshedabad belong to neither of these classes.

The Committee further beg to state that in canvassing the merits of this measure, they have found it impossible to avoid remarking the invidiousness of confining the appointments to one particular section of the community, a section separated by many circumstances from the body of the population; and in justice to the character which the association assumes to itself as representing the opinions and sentiments of the majority of the natives of the country, the Committee cannot but express their regret that the measure (since it has been adopted) was not less partial and exclusive than it is.

Not that the Committee would hereby be understood that they consider it expedient at the present time to invest persons of any class of the community with the office of honorary magistrate; they urge the objection contained in the foregoing paragraph as one which, in their opinion, enhances the force of the other objections enumerated against the measure.

The Committee of the British Indian Association submit these remarks for the consideration of his Honor the Lieutenant Governor, in the hope that his Honor will see fit, if he should decide upon maintaining the appointments already made, to direct the introduction of a Bill into the Legislative Council for enabling the local governments to vest persons of property and station in the Mofussil with the powers, but without the emolument of magistrates, and making provision for their removal in cases of misconduct. Such a course would bring the merits of the measure into fair discussion, and procure to a long disputed question a satisfactory settlement.

I have, &c.
(signed) Issur Chunder Singh,
Honorary Secretary.

British Indian Association Rooms,
No. 3, Cossitollah,
29 August 1857.

Appendix, No. 26.

From the Officiating Under Secretary to the Government of the North Western Provinces, to the President of the Indigo Commission Calcutta, (No. 1019), dated Nynee Tal, 15 August 1860.

(Revenue.)

Sir,

I AM directed by the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor to forward the accompanying copy of a letter No. 60, dated the 30th ultimo, from the Commissioner of Allahabad, with its enclosures, relative to indigo planting in this province, and to intimate that further information which is expected from the districts of the Agra, Meerut, and Benares divisions will be shortly forwarded.

I have, &c.
(signed) J. D. Sandford, Offg. Under Secy. to the Govt. of the N. W. Provinces.

From the Officiating Commissioner, 4th Division, Allahabad, to the Officiating Under Secretary to the Government, North Western Provinces, (No. 60), dated Allahabad, 30 July 1860.

(Revenue.)

Sir,

IN reply to your letter No. 811A of 1860, of 14th instant, I have the honour to forward the reports from the several collectors of this division on the subject of indigo planting, and the system pursued at the different factories. There appear to be only two factories in Allahabad; one in Cawnpore, and none in Futteh-pore or Banda.

2. A favourable opinion is held by both Messrs. Court and Lance, of the relations between our up-country planters and their cultivators; and from my experience, especially in the district of Budaon, where I was for some years, I can also bear testimony to the high estimation in which the Messrs. Donalds were held by their native neighbours in general, as well as by the cultivators of indigo in particular.

I have, &c.
(signed) A. Cocks,
Officiating Commissioner.

Allahabad, Commissioner's Office,
30 July 1860.

App. No. 26. From the Collector of Allahabad to the Officiating Commissioner of Allahabad Division, dated 19 July 1860.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your docket, No. 58, dated 18th instant, with its enclosures.

2. I have not seen Mr. Saunders' evidence, but in the Allahabad District, and in other districts where I have had experience, the following system, I believe, prevails between indigo factors and cultivators of lands for the supply of indigo plants.

1st. The cultivator grows it without advances, and brings his produce to the factory, where it is weighed and paid for. This is, however, not common, but only pursued where the cultivator is in such circumstances as to be able to grow the plant without assistance from the factor. This was the case in some villages in Budaon.

2d. The factor enters into an agreement with the cultivator for the supply of a certain quantity of plant. The latter takes an advance, and gives a document, pledging himself to grow and deliver the stipulated quantity of plant, or be liable for three times the value of the deficiency.

3d. Where the factor is also zemindar and proprietor of the land, he advances seed to tenants, realizes his rent and seed advance from the produce, and pays for the value of surplus plant delivered.

3. I have never known any case of violent affray consequent on these transactions, and I believe the cultivation is sufficiently popular with the people to enable the factor to procure the quantity of plant he requires. I am certain that this is the case where the factor is strict and honest in his dealings, and gives allowance for failure through calamity of season or other cause not involving fraud on the part of the cultivator.

I have, &c.

(signed) M. H. Court,
Collector.

From the Officiating Collector of Futtehpore to the Officiating Commissioner of the 4th Division, Allahabad, No. 238, dated 19 July 1860.

Sir,

IN reply to Mr. Secretary Sandford's letter, No. 811 A, dated 14th July, forwarded to me for report, I have the honour to inform you, that indigo is not cultivated in this district by either Europeans or natives.

I have, &c.

(signed) J. W. Power,
Officiating Collector.

From the Collector of Banda to the Officiating Commissioner, 4th Division, Allahabad, No. 1216, dated Banda, 21 July 1860.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your circular docket, No. 58, dated the 18th instant, and in reply to say that indigo cultivation in this district is on so small a scale, even if it may be said to exist at all, that I am unable to give any information on the points specified by the Indigo Commission; I am not aware whether this arises from the soil not being suited to the nature of the plant, or from the depth of water in wells precluding all surface irrigation. The latter I should say was the principal obstacle to the successful cultivation of indigo.

I have, &c.

(signed) H. W. Dashwood,
Collector.

From the Magistrate of Cawnpore to the Officiating Commissioner, 4th Division, Allahabad, No. 346, dated 22 July 1860.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to furnish the report called for in your circular, No. 58, of 18th instant.

2. Most of the indigo factories in this district are held by the Messrs. Maxwells. They do not manufacture direct from the plant as in Bengal, but purchase a native manufactured article called "gàd," which they re-manufacture according to the usual method.

3. They have three modes of obtaining this raw manufacture.

1st. By a system of contracts, called "Budni."

2d. By purchasing in the open market, called "Khush Khurid."

3d. From their own ryots, called "Zemindary."

4. The Budni contracts are made with any one applying for them. He usually contracts for a certain quantity of "gàd" at a fixed rate, for which payment is made in advance. If the budnidar delivers a larger amount than he has contracted for, he receives for the surplus the market or "Khush Khurid" price. If he delivers less, he is charged for the deficiency at the same rate. Unlike the system in Bengal, a budnidar, from having once received advances is not obliged to sow indigo from year to year, but his accounts are made up and settled at the time of delivery. For the ensuing year it is quite optional for him to take advances or not, or even to take advances from another manufacture. If he does not pay the sum charged for the deficiency, he is liable to be sued in the Civil Court, but so thoroughly bonâ fide are the engagements, that I am assured it is but seldom necessary to resort to this measure.

5. The "Khush Khurid" method explains itself. There the ryots, either connected with the factory zemindaree or not, grow indigo for their own profit as they would any other crop, manufacture it into "gàd," and take it to any factory they prefer, and sell it in the bazaar, where it is purchased by the factor's agents.

6. The zemindary method of course only applies to those who possess land independent of their factories. Those ryots that agree to grow indigo receive a remission of rent, usually one-fourth, which is carried to their debit as an indigo advance. They, like the others, manufacture the plant into "gàd," and bring it to the factory of their zemindary; a contract rate is fixed each year, and their accounts are made up annually, and they can at any time decline the remission, and refuse to cultivate.

7. In no instance does the manufacturer supply seed. Four seers of seed usually go to one beegah, which yields from 15 to 30 maunds of plant, and from 15 to 20 seers of "gàd." One beegah beegah will yield besides about one maund of seed, and the zemindary ryots contract to supply it at eight annas below the bazaar rate. The rent of the zemindary beegah is two rupees; seed varies in price from three to nine rupees per maund; and "gāud" from 1850 to 1851 averages as below per maund, according to the Messrs. Maxwell's books:—

		Budni.	Khush Khurid.	Zemindary.
1850-51	- -	6 15 6	8 7 4	7 1 4
1851-52	- -	6 7 9	8 12 7	6 10 10
1852-53	- -	6 8 5	8 13 10	6 7 9
1853-54	- -	6 8 -	10 - 3	6 5 6
1854-55	- -	6 9 8	6 - -	6 8 6
1858	- - -	- - -	12 - -	-

In cutting plant for manufacture some always is left for seed. In these provinces it is perennial, and will occasionally last to the third year. It is then inclined to run to wood.

8. This system, which is in practice also in the Futtehghurh and Mynpooree Districts in common with the manufacture from the plant, gives no trouble either to the civil revenue or criminal authorities from the voluntary nature of the bargains; the most convincing proof that the trade is healthy and unfettered is, that natives of the Baniah caste in this district adopt this system of manufacture without possessing a beegah of land to give them local influence.

I have, &c.
(signed) G. E. Lance,
Collector and Magistrate.

Cawnpore, Collector's Office,
22 July 1860.

From the Commissioner, 5th Division, to G. Couper, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of North-Western Provinces (No. 18), Allahabad.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Mr. Sandford's letter (No. 811A), under date the 14th ultimo, with enclosure from the President of the Calcutta Indigo Commission, calling for reports from the collectors of districts on the two points mooted in Mr. Seton-Karr's communication, and on the system generally pursued at the indigo factories of the division.

2. In reply, I beg to submit an abstract of the reports furnished me by my district officers, and to offer the following remarks on the subject:—

3. The planters of this division are, almost without an exception, an unoppressive, honest, and hard-working set of men, who form a great contrast to the same class of persons in Bengal. The reasons for this are twofold. First, that in Bengal the districts are so large, and the executive so weak, that the planters, though commencing by mere self-defence, have gradually been drawn on to take up the position of public oppressors. Secondly, that the character of the ryot of Bengal is far below that of the peasant of these provinces. In Bengal, the ryot scarcely ever thinks of complaining against his landlord or superior, while in Benares the certainty of immediate redress, and the independence of the peasantry, induce them at once to lay a complaint in court, should they deem themselves aggrieved.

4. The indigo planter of this division leases the land that he requires, with the full consent of the lessor, and takes all the risk of the crop on himself. He has the ploughing, sowing, and weeding of his fields done by contract, and superintended by overseers, called zillahdars, who are inhabitants of the villages included in the tract of country which is supposed to be attached to his factory. Each zillahdar superintends the cultivation which progresses within his circle of three or four villages.

5. The planters are almost invariably a blessing to the surrounding country. If a landed proprietor is pressed for money, he gets a loan from the planter, and in return gives him a good deal of land to cultivate indigo upon. If a poor tenant is being squeezed by an oppressive landlord, and is in danger of forfeiting his tenant right, he takes an advance from the planter to free himself from his difficulties, and gives him half his fields to sow indigo in.

6. I have known this division for 11 years, and have never heard of any oppression on the part of the planters, whom I have, on the contrary, always found to be firm supporters of the law, and ever ready to assist in looking after the peace of the district, and in caring for the roads and public thoroughfares in their neighbourhoods.

7. There is but one portion of the indigo system, as followed in this division, which I have to condemn, and it is that of the lessor's signature to the shattas being almost invariably attached to a piece of plain stamped paper, which is left to be filled up at their leisure by the factory amla. The leisure is of course never found, and the document remains blank, and liable to be filled in with any thing but what was intended by the lessor. I must, however, confess that I have never yet heard of any dishonourable advantage being taken by the planters of this carelessness on the part of the lessors.

I have, &c.
(signed) F. Gubbins,
Commissioner.

Benares,
14 August 1860.

ABSTRACT of the Reports furnished by the Collectors of the Benares Division, on the system of Indigo Cultivation that holds good in their respective Zillahs.

AZIMGURH.

The Collector states, with reference to Mr. Seton-Karr's 3d para., that zemindars and ryots are perfectly ready to give their lands for the cultivation of indigo, which is not unpopular; that there have been no violent affrays or troublesome litigation within the last ten years; that the systems of cultivation pursued in his district are as follows:—

Cash advances of two sorts are made by the planters, either to the cultivators of land or to the landholders themselves. Under one system the cultivator binds himself to deliver so many maunds of plant at a specified rate to the factory, while, under the other system, he or the zemindar

Y Y 3

bind

App. No. 26. bind themselves to make over certain lands to the factory at certain rates: that in the latter case the factory cultivates the land with its own servants and hired labourers: that both zemindars and ryots know that they can get money from Europeans on cheaper terms than from natives, and that on being pressed for money on account of the Government jumma which they have to pay, or on account of the expenses to be incurred in a marriage, they come to the planter and take the advances above alluded to: but that when the time comes for the fulfilment of the contract between the parties, the native often attempts to evade it, and foists off bad land upon the planter, or it then appears that advances had been taken upon lands to which the lessor had no right: that the system of purchasing plant from the cultivators on advances made them, is found to be a losing one, and is therefore now but little resorted to, but that were the ryots honest and laborious, he would make cent. per cent. profit at the rates current in the district: that the superintendence of the lands cultivated by a factory is entrusted to a class of men called zillahdars, who, each of them, looks after a circle, the centre of which is his own village, and that 20 or 30 zilladars may be employed in each factory: that these zilladars are great rascals; that they do not have the lands half enough ploughed or sufficiently watered, thus doing the planter much mischief; that they extort money from the planter, and if their demands for advances are not responded to stop all the works; that many planters are ruined by these means: that the planter is likewise the victim of rascality on the part of the cart-men and buffalo-men who carry in his plant: that the remedy for all the evils thus borne by the planter would be, to vest magistrates with powers of summary jurisdiction for breach of contracts, as was the case in Lord William Bentinck's time, and to allow him to compel daily labourers, cart-men, and buffalo-men to a fair day's work for a fair day's wages.

JUANPOOR.

The Collector reports that all the planters inform him that as long as zemindars and assamis can obtain advances from them on easy terms, so long the cultivation of indigo will be popular; that the Tehseeldars report that the zemindars and assamis only give up their lands to factories when hard pressed for payment of revenue, and that they even then do so greedily; that the cultivation of indigo is attended with neither difficulties nor disturbances; that it is neither popular nor unpopular; that litigation of course goes on in the courts, but that even this would cease were a bye-law enacted for the Juanpoor District, forbidding new factories being established at a less distance than eight or ten miles from the old ones. Submits statements from Messrs. Mathews & Saunders, explaining the system followed by them in cultivating indigo.

MIRZAPOOR.

The Collector states that the indigo planters of his district take lands on fresh lease every year from the zemindars or tenants, the said lease being always on stamp paper and usually written; that the whole cultivation, from first to last, is carried on by factory servants, and that the zemindars or tenants take no part in it; that the cultivation is by no means unpopular, and that cases of litigation are rare; that he has never known of a complaint being made against a planter for oppression; the factories put each of them into circulation, free of interest, sums of about 70,000 rupees per annum, exclusive of pay of establishment, and that both landlords and tenants find the lease of a portion of their lands a convenient mode of realising ready money when required. That the leases run for 14 months, during which (viz., from Jeth to Koar) the lessor would only have been able to raise one rubbi crop, and that were the money borrowed elsewhere, 36 per cent. interest would have to be paid, and the mortgaged land would be recovered with great difficulty.

BENARES.

The Collector states that the planters of his district do not cultivate through the owners of fields but with their own factory servants and ploughs, taking all the risk of the crop on themselves, thus encouraging the assamis, when pressed for money, to lease their lands to them; that the system in vogue is so manifestly beneficial to the natives that it could not possibly lead to the results now unfortunately existing in Bengal. The planter here takes the place of the village mahajun, but without charging the enormous interest that the latter would. The planters are all honourable and upright men, and gain the esteem and respect of the surrounding agricultural community; they are a blessing to the district, and a great assistance to the magistrate. There have been no violent affrays or disturbances within the last 10 years about indigo cultivation, and the criminal suits instituted are almost invariably connected with the disputed possession of fields.

GHAZEPORE.

The Collector reports that there have been no serious affrays or excessive litigation, within the last 10 years, connected with the cultivation of indigo. That the planter takes all the risk of the season upon himself; leasing the land from the zemindar or ryot for one year as an under-tenant, and cultivating it himself; that the planter advances two or three rupees per beegah when the shatta is written out, charging interest at the rate of 12 per cent., the accounts being settled when the kists are due, and that it is the want of money for present purposes that induces the lessors to give their lands; that the best lands of a village are never given to the factory, as this cultivation exhausts them; that disputes are caused by the want of precaution in planters when taking their lands, in not ascertaining to whom they really belong; that the only chance for a planter to succeed is for him to make himself popular, and that all the old planters get on admirably without having any disputes, whereas the young and rash ones are always in hot water; that the increase in the price of grain has enhanced the rates paid for land, to which the planters have been obliged to succumb.

(signed) F. Gubbins,
Commissioner.

From Alexander Ross, Esq., Officiating Commissioner, Agra Division, to G. E. W. Couper, Esq., C.B., Secretary to Government, North Western Provinces, Nynce Tal (No. 94 of 1860), dated Agra, 27 August 1860.

Sir,

I HAVE now the honour to submit the report on the cultivation of indigo in this division called for in your letter, No. 811 A., dated 14th July.

2. Indigo is cultivated more or less in all the districts of this division, but more especially in Furruckabad, where it has long been cultivated on a large scale by European and native firms.

3. The Collectors of this division are unanimous in the expression of their opinions on the several points relating to this species of cultivation, embraced in Mr. Seton-Karr's letter enclosed in yours under acknowledgment.

4. First; the cultivation of indigo appears to be highly popular, both with the zemindars and the cultivators. Second; affrays arising out of the cultivation of indigo are unknown in this division, and litigation is comparatively rare. Third; the system of cultivation pursued is unattended with trouble or annoyance either to the executive or judicial authorities.

5. I subjoin a brief abstract of the replies received from the several Collectors of this division on the subject of indigo cultivation.

Etawah, 19 July 1860.

6. Mr. Hume, the Collector of Etawah, reports that there are no European indigo factories in his district, and that indigo is cultivated to a very small extent by the zemindars. The cultivation is unpopular with no class, and has not at any time been productive of violent affrays, or been the cause of trouble to the executive or judicial authorities.

7. The same remarks are applicable, Mr. Hume says, and in a much greater degree, to the Allypore district in which he served during the years 1852, 53, and 54. This result Mr. Hume attributes to the fact that the European indigo planters in that district paid well, were scrupulously honest in their dealings, and treated the people well and kindly.

Agra, 19 July 1860.

8. Mr. Phillips, the Collector of Agra, reports that, with the exception of one concern, the cultivation of indigo in his district is confined to the ordinary zemindars. He states that the cultivation of the indigo plant is popular, and that the system pursued has never been productive of affrays or trouble to the judicial or executive authorities of his district.

Muttra, 24 July 1860.

9. Mr. Best, the Collector of Muttra, reports on the several points embraced in the inquiry as follows:—

10. First; the profits realised by European planters have induced zemindars and mahajans to follow their example, but as a rule, the former are not favourable to their ryots cultivating indigo on account of Europeans. Second; nevertheless, cultivators sow indigo or not, as they like. The want of summary remedy against the cultivator induces European planters to treat the latter with consideration.

11. Third; the accuracy of the revenue survey and settlement records, and the strong establishments in the North Western Provinces' Tuhseel, all aid the district authorities in exercising a pressure not found in Bengal; which prevents lawless attempts to take possession of land by force. Hence affrays are almost unknown.

Etah, 14 August 1860.

12. The Deputy Collector of Etah, Mr. Thornhill, reports as follows, on the cultivation of indigo in his district.

13. First; the cultivation of indigo is decidedly popular, and the cultivators take contracts with eagerness. Second; Mr. Thornhill is unaware of a single instance in which indigo cultivation has led to affrays.

14. The brief description given by Mr. Thornhill of the system pursued by European planters in cultivating indigo is identical in its main features with that given by the Collector of Furruckabad, to which reference will be made further on. It need not, therefore, be detailed in this place.

Mynpoory, 15 August 1860.

15. Mr. Chase, Officiating Collector of Mynpoory, reports much to the same effect as the other Collectors of the division. He states that the cultivation is carried on in his district to a considerable extent, both by European and native planters. He represents the cultivation of indigo as highly popular, both with the zemindars and ryots, and as being unattended, either with breaches of the peace, or with trouble and annoyance either to the European planters themselves, or to the judicial or executive authorities of the district.

16. This Mr. Chase ascribes in great measure to the value set, and the use made of the indigo advances for paying the rubbee instalments of the revenue.

Furruckabad, 18 August 1860.

17. Mr. Lindsay, the Collector of Furruckabad, concurs generally with the opinions expressed by the other Collectors of the division, describing the cultivation of indigo as popular in his district, and unattended with affrays, and comparatively so with litigation.

18. Mr. Lindsay has furnished a detailed and interesting description of the system pursued in the cultivation of indigo in this part of the North Western Provinces, which I think it better to submit in original, than to attempt to make an abstract of. Mr. Lindsay's enclosure, No. 1, Letter No. 498, dated 18th instant, is therefore submitted.

I have, &c.

(signed) A. Ross,
Officiating Commissioner.

Commissioner's Office, Agra Division,
27 August 1860.

App. No. 26.

Enclosure.

No. 1. From Collector, Furruckabad, No. 498, dated 18 August, reporting on Indigo Cultivation in his District.

From C. R. Lindsay, Esq., Collector of Furruckabad, to Alexander Ross, Esq., Commissioner, Agra Division. (No. 498 of 1860). Furruckabad Collectorate, 18 August 1860.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge your circular letter, No. 56, dated 18 July last, forwarding Government Letter, No. 811A, dated 14th instant, calling for a report on the indigo cultivation of the North Western Provinces.

2. Indigo is cultivated to a great extent in this district. It is exported in large quantities to Calcutta, both the seed and the dye, and to the Punjab, Rajpootana, and Central India; to the latter places the partly manufactured dye called gàud, is sent in immense quantities, whilst to Calcutta the manufacturers only send the finest dye and seed.

3. The price generally realised for "gàud" fit for exportation, at this station is about 87 rupees per maund; and for the fully manufactured indigo, 125 rupees per maund. The expenses may be reckoned to date of sale at 60 rupees and 80 rupees per maund respectively.

4. There are probably 50 different concerns in this district, numbering, perhaps, 150 factories. Each factory is generally connected with 25 or 30 villages and hamlets, and on an average turns out 60 maunds of manufactured indigo, that is indigo dye; the highest out-turn may be 70, the lowest 50 maunds per factory.

5. From 300 maunds of the "plant" one maund of indigo dye is extracted, consequently there is on an average about 18,000 kucha beegahs (a kucha beegah is equal to about one fifth of an acre) of land under indigo cultivation connected with each factory. In some villages as much as 4,000 beegahs of land are under indigo cultivation, in others again the quantity does not exceed a few beegahs.

6. The system in force for the cultivation of indigo in this district is as follows:—

In the month of January, advances are made by purchasers of the plant, seed, or gàud to the zemindars and to the ryots, but more generally to the former for security sake.

The advance is made with reference to the position or generally known character of the zemindar and ryot.

The intending purchaser ascertains the extent and quality of the land to be sown with indigo, and the number of ploughs the contractor employs; having satisfied himself on this head, he calculates that with one pair of bullocks a contractor can cultivate ten kucha beegahs of indigo, and no more. The produce from that land in a fair average year will be from 15 to 20 maunds of the plant and one maund of seed per beegah.

7. A contract, or as it is termed in the vernacular of the country, a sattah, is now drawn up in the presence of witnesses, generally the servants attached to the factory, by the gomastah or head-servant of the factory, to which the illiterate contractor affixes a mark, or he touches the pen with which the deed was written, otherwise he signs his name to it. The contract sets forth the extent of land to be cultivated, the quantity of plant seed or gàud to be delivered by the contractor, and the rate to be given, which for the plant is generally from 18 rupees to 20 rupees per 100 maunds, for seed 4 rupees to 6 rupees, and for gàud 20 rupees to 12 rupees per maund. One hundred maunds of the plant will generally produce 2½ maunds of gàud, and when gàud is contracted for, it must be delivered at such a consistency that 2½ seers, or about 6 lbs., be taken up with the hand at one time.

8. It is customary to pay the contractor in advance the full value of the indigo plant or gàud which he has promised to deliver, though the contrary system is also in force. In the latter case the contractor would receive one-half in advance, one quarter after the first irrigation, and the remaining portion after the first weeding. Indigo fields are generally irrigated thrice before the setting in of the rains, and twice weeded before the produce arrives at maturity.

9. If the contract is made with the zemindar instead of with the ryot, which is generally the case, a higher rate of about 22 rupees per 100 maunds is given by the purchaser to the contractor. If the contract is made with a ryot, he brings forward as his surety the zemindar of his village. As strict supervision is exercised over the zemindar as is exercised over the ryot; the same forms are gone through.

10. Having received his advance in January, and paid one per cent. on the amount to the gomastah, which is technically called suttah, even the contractor does what he pleases with the money, but he must sow from Bysakh to Asar, i. e. from April to June, in which months are the first and the last sowings of indigo.

11. To each factory are attached probably eight peons, or as they are termed sipahies; these servants look after the welfare of their master, keep the contractor to his engagement, see that the ryots water and irrigate the indigo fields, and otherwise exercise a strict supervision over the zemindar and ryot. Without this strict supervision the engagement would not be properly fulfilled, and the purchaser would be a loser. In the event of idleness on the part of the contractor, he is brought up to the factory and admonished, or he may receive warning through the sipahies. These sipahies do not receive any dustoori, but they invariably live at the expense of the contractor when they visit his indigo fields.

12. The purchaser of indigo does not lay much stress on the description of soil for indigo cultivation, but it is generally found on lands of an average quality; the rich lands producing too much stalk, the leaves being sparse. This, though an advantage to the contractor, is loss to the purchaser, whose object is to obtain as much leaf as possible from which the dye is extracted. Land fit for sugar-cane and cotton is well adapted for indigo.

13. In the event of a ryot, who has contracted with the purchaser of indigo, not paying his rent to to the zemindar or proprietor of the village lands, the standing crop of indigo is liable to be attached for the rent. In such a case the purchaser always pays the rent due, and realises it from the ryot or cultivator afterwards. The zemindar seldom or ever gives annoyance in such a case; he is satisfied with having obtained his rent. The payment of rent by the purchaser is, however, never one of the conditions of the "Suttah;" such an occurrence, too, is very unfrequent.

14. The indigo harvest commences in a good year in the month of Bhadoon, a portion of the plant being reserved for seed which ripens in Kartik or November. The cutting continues probably a couple of months. The accounts are made up at the factory in Kartik.

15. During the interval the cultivator has delivered, from time to time, the plant at the factory. Each load, when delivered, is weighed in the scales by the weight which may be in use at the place where the factory is situate for weighing corn, for each delivery of indigo a receipt drawn up by the gomashta or other person authorised to grant receipts, is given to the contractor. If the purchaser obtains three-fourths of the indigo contracted for, i.e. if he obtains indigo to the value of 15 rupees out of the 20 rupees, which he generally gives for 100 maunds of the plants, he considers he has made a good bargain, and that the contractor is an honest man. The remaining five rupees are realised by degrees; perhaps they are paid in seed, perhaps from the produce of the sale of seed; very frequently the balance goes on to the account for next year, in which case, instead of advancing 20 rupees for 100 maunds of plant, the purchaser only gives 15 rupees, and thus squares his account with the contractor.

16. A ryot contracting to produce indigo is supposed to realise on an average a profit of one rupee per kucha beegah; but if the higher standard is given, viz. 20 rupees per 100 maunds, his profits would be greater, say the rent of the 10 kucha beegahs is

	-	-	-	Rs. 10	-	-
Watering	-	-	-	10	-	-
Weeding	-	-	-	2	8	-
Seed at 1 or 1½ seer per kucha
beegah	-	-	-	1	8	-
Total Cost	-	-	-	Rs. 24	-	-

Thus he has realised rather more than Rs. 1. 8.

per beegah, small enough when it is taken into account that he has to support his family, buy and feed his cattle, &c.

17. The ryot has, however, other sources of income; he has paid the year's rent for his indigo fields, and he makes the best use of the land. After the indigo is cut, and in the event of the stumps not being left to produce both plant and seed the following year (which if left on the ground they would produce in good quantity and quality if the year be favourable), the cultivator prepares the land for a spring crop; that is the rubbee crop. Very generally he sows potatoes, a very lucrative crop, which comes to perfection in January; these in their turn are dug up and melons sown, at whose roots, ere the vegetable is quite matured, indigo seed is again sown. Thus the cultivator obtains three crops off the indigo land during the year.

18. During the past year potato growers realised from 15 rupees to 25 rupees profit on each kucha beegah planted with potatoes; the average profit is from 8 rupees to 120 rupees per beegah.

19. That indigo cultivation is not remunerative; in fact, that it is the least remunerative of the various kinds of cultivation, is quite certain. The reason why it is followed is, that the advance offered in January by the purchasers of indigo is a temptation not to be resisted—it is so much ready money in the ryot's pocket; he is a rich man for the hour, and is happy; moreover he has assets to meet the demand for the rubbee rents, which will shortly be made. Once entangled in debt, once having signed the sattah, it is difficult for the cultivator to free himself from the web which he has quietly wound round himself. Nevertheless, the suits for breaches of indigo contracts in the civil courts are but few, perhaps not four per cent. of the cases in which contracts have been entered into, and affrays regarding indigo cultivation are unknown. In some parts of this district there are ryots who cultivate indigo without receiving advances, but the system is exceptional. Kachees Koormees, Kisons generally cultivate indigo, and now and then Thakoors, Bramins, and Mohamedans.

I have, &c.

(signed) C. R. Lindsay, Collector.

Furruckabad Collectorate,
18 August 1860.

APPENDIX, PART II.

App. Part II.

No. 1.

PAPERS RELATING TO THE INCREASE IN THE PRICE PAID FOR OPIUM.

From E. T. Trevor, Esq., Secretary to the Board of Revenue, to the President of the Indigo Commission (No. 187), dated Fort William, 25 May 1860.

Sir,

Opium.
H. Stainforth,
Esq.

In compliance with the application made in your letter No. 1, of the 15th instant, I am directed by the Board of Revenue to transmit a copy of the correspondence (as per margin)* that has lately taken place on the subject of the increase in the price paid for opium to the cultivators of the poppy in the Behar and Benares agencies.

I have, &c.

(signed) E. T. Trevor, Secretary.

From R. N. Farquharson, Esq., Opium Agent of Behar, to the Officiating Junier Secretary to the Board of Revenue, Lower Provinces, Fort William (No. 116), dated 8 August 1859.

Sir,

In reply to the 3d and following paragraphs of your letter to my address, No. 267, of the 30th ultimo, relative to increasing the price now paid by Government to the Assamees for their opium, and requiring me to prove the absolute necessity for such increase, by causing a searching inquiry to be made in every district of this agency, regarding the relative prices of agricultural produce, labour, and lands in 1855, and at the present time, I have the honour at once to submit a short statement prepared during my tour through the districts in December, January, and February last. A further and more complete Return will be called for in hearing again from the Board in reply to this letter.

2. The subject is indeed a very difficult one, and I would not be thought to urge the extra expenditure in opposition to those who view the whole matter more dispassionately from a distance, as well as more advantageously, from the facilities Calcutta would afford for ascertaining the probable requirements of the foreign markets.

3. It appears to me that the question to be first considered, is, at what quantity is it desirable to maintain the cultivation and provision; and this will, I imagine, depend very much on the point of supply at which the present high prices may be expected to retrograde.

1853-54 - 4,50,129 beegahs.

1858-59 - 3,41,502 beegahs.

4. The present cultivation, though much less than that of 1853-54, will suffice in ordinary seasons for a supply of 20,000 chests, or even if reduced to three lakhs of beegahs, would give more than 18,000 chests. If this is considered sufficient, there is no immediate necessity for increase.

5. The great access of cultivation since 1835-36, is owing to the influx of other than the old established poppy cultivators, who are chiefly of the Koeree caste, and owing to their habits of industry, and, being able to bring their whole families, including women and children, into use, are able to get more out of their land, and produce opium much cheaper than the Rajpoots, Brahmins, and others, who, from their women not being used to field labour, must hire labourers for the purpose; and these, often when most wanted, as at the gathering season, are not to be procured. The mass of the Koerees will probably adhere to the poppy cultivation even at three-fourths per seer, as long as the present advance system continues, because with their resources they can get as much by it out of a small portion of land, as they could with other crops from a larger area, and are able to utilise the whole amount of labour at their command, part of which would otherwise be idle to their detriment. But the generality of the other classes will secede until circumstances again reduce very much the profits from ordinary crops, and make the cultivation of the poppy by hired labour

* From Opium Agent of Behar, No. 116, dated 8 August 1859.
From Opium Agent of Benares, No. 83, dated 27 August, with Enclosure.
To Secretary to the Government of Bengal, No. 364, dated 21 September 1859.
From Secretary to the Government of Bengal, No. 2720, dated 2 November 1859.
To Opium Agents of Behar and Benares, No. 401, dated 11 November 1859.
From Opium Agent of Behar, No. , dated 11 February 1860.
From Opium Agent, Benares, No. 11, dated 30 January 1860.
To Secretary to the Government of Bengal, No. 76, dated 1 March 1860.
From Opium Agent of Behar, No. 55, dated 9 April 1860.
To Secretary to the Government of Bengal, No. 128, dated 13 April 1860.
From Under Secretary to the Government of Bengal, No. 987, dated 7 May 1860.

labour cheaper to them than it is at present. The cultivation of cereals by hired labour has the advantage over that of poppy by the same, owing to the wages of the former being paid in kind.

6. I do not, in fact, contemplate any much greater falling-off in the poppy cultivation, unless the prices of cereals and oil seeds rise still higher, but if it is deemed desirable to maintain our provision at the average supply of the last 10 years,* or to bring it again up to the standard of 1853-54, and the few following years,† some greater inducement must be held out to all classes to cultivate the poppy than the present price of three rupees four annas per seer offers.

7. I am averse to call for general information from the districts without absolute necessity. There is no keeping such calls secret, and their spread always does harm in exciting hope or encouraging vain expectation. There can be no doubt in the mind of any one of the fact my simple statement conveys, every sort of country produce being now nearly double what it was three years ago, and labour proportionately high. To elaborate these facts will add nothing to the facility of deciding the question at issue, and only lose time, which, if a large provision is aimed at for 1859-60, can ill be spared at the present juncture. I will, at all events, do nothing till I hear again from the Board on the subject, when, if desired, full information shall be sought throughout the agency.

8. My own view of the case is, that as far as mere profit goes, it is of little importance whether we provide 20,000 or 30,000 chests of opium. It seems an even chance that the smaller quantity will be as productive as the larger, perhaps more so; but still it seems politic to be prepared for a possibly increasing market, and to this end I advise the endeavour to regain our lost cultivation by an increased payment of four annas per seer to the cultivator.

9. I willingly concede the plea of past bad season being in itself no ground for increasing the price paid for opium, but it must necessarily be allowed as a make-weight, when it is considered that the entire loss of such seasons has always been borne by the cultivators, some small sums only having been lately remitted by Government for total loss of crops by hail, drought, and excessive moisture. Violent storms of wind and hail have from time to time devastated the opium fields without any loss to Government from their ravages. In former years, with other produce ranging at small rates, and labour cheaper and plentiful, the opium ryots could and did stand all these losses, and still profited largely by the trade, but now things are altered to such an extent that the gain by opium is not commensurate with the extra risk, trouble, and expense of the cultivation except under particular circumstances of caste and custom, a reliance on which alone must necessarily cramp and curtail our operations.

10. The reduction from three rupees eight annas to three rupees four annas per seer, was doubtless a well-considered and proper measure at the time it was introduced, and I have no doubt but that if the three rupees eight annas had been retained throughout, the present cry would have been for a return to the former rate, three rupees ten annas; yet weighing all the circumstances, I feel confident not only that the interests of Government will be best served by the present concession of the extra four annas per seer, but that the boon was in a measure owing to the people for their admirable conduct under the difficulties of the late bad seasons and throughout the troubles of 1857-58. I allude chiefly to the clear balance sheet of many years, and the almost entire immunity of Government from loss by seasons and rebellions, though the first have been indifferent for three years, and the last was rife throughout all these districts for two.

11. Opium will be produced and brought to us in considerable quantities even at the present rate, but it will be no longer the popular cultivation it has been, and much coaxing and management will be required to keep up the growth of poppy to anything like the present low standard.

12. The people are perfectly aware of the large profits their labour brings to Government, and naturally expect to be in some slight measure benefited by the same. There has been no outcry or attempt to strike or in any way improper demonstration, but there is an unmistakeable murmur throughout the land, with manifest signs of falling-off, which I think the Government will be very unwise to ignore or neglect. The concession may now be made gracefully as an almost unsolicited boon. It will not exceed six lakhs of rupees, probably not be more than four lakhs; and though it is of importance that the notification be immediate, the extra payment will not be required till July 1860.

13. Should this extra charge be out of the question at present, would it be asking too much to crave the promise of it for the following year? Such a promise widely promulgated would have the best effect, and be the next best measure to an immediate grant of increase.

I have, &c.

(signed) R. N. Farquharson, Opium Agent.

From H. C. Hamilton, Esq., Benares Opium Agent, to the Junior Secretary to the Board of Revenue, Lower Provinces, Fort William, No. 83, dated Ghazepore, 27 August 1859.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge receipt of your letter, No. 280, of the 3d instant, with copy of one addressed by the Board of Revenue to the Behar Opium Agent, No. 267, of the 30th ultimo, "relative to a return to the price of three rupees eight annas per seer for opium to be paid to the assamees, and requesting my opinion on the subject as respects this agency. The Board at the same time

* Average, including abkaree, from 1847-48 to 1856-57 inclusive, 29,092 chests.

† 1853-54	-	-	-	4,50,129	1855-56	-	-	-	4,29,353
1854-55	-	-	-	4,41,747	1856-57	-	-	-	4,13,991

App. Part II. time are pleased to direct me to obtain the opinions of the most experienced sub-deputy agents in this division, taking care to agitate the matter with caution, and not to allow it to be made public."

2. The Board have now, by your letter, No. 312, of the 20th instant, requested me to hasten my reply, consequently I am unable to supply some tables of the prices of food (whether for man or beast), and of the rates of labour and prices of land, which I had in contemplation to submit, as they will take more time to prepare than is just now available, whilst the subject under discussion is being settled.

3. The several officers noted in the margin,* all thoroughly experienced and intelligent European gentlemen, and on whose judgment every confidence can with perfect safety be placed, are unanimously and strongly in favour of a return to the former price of three rupees eight annas per seer for opium, in the hope that it may induce cultivators to resume their poppy cultivation, and that it may to some extent check the falling-off which is continuously going on from one cause or another in the settlements of their respective divisions.

4. Mr. A. H. Turnbull, however, now sub-deputy agent of Cawnpore (one of the transferred sub-deputies from the Behar agency, and who has always advocated no increase from notions, I presume, imbibed in the Behar Province), is the only officer who still abides by his former opinion, but he has not supplied the information I called for, nor given any sound data for his opinion. In fact, he assumes that a beegah of land will, on an average, yield eight seers of opium, whereas in 1854-55 it was only five seers one quarter chittack, and in 1858-59, four seers five and three quarter chittacks. Mr. Turnbull does not think it would "be prudent to raise the price to three rupees eight annas per seer, for it cannot," he remarks,† "be expected that as the price of grain rises or falls, the price to be paid for opium is to be regulated thereby,"

"We shall most probably have the usual decrease both in cultivation and produce consequent on the profits at present derived from grain cultivation, but as soon as the cultivators meet with one reverse, we shall have them taking to the opium again. The advances are our great stand-by, and so long as they are freely distributed, I do not think we need fear for the present at least any great loss."

although he admits that the cultivators are deriving larger profits at present from grain than from opium. Mr. Turnbull, moreover, looks to a contingency which I should be sorry to see realised, for if the cultivators were to meet with another reverse, nothing but downright famine would follow, and then it would be all over with grain, and poppy too.

5. I confess I place no reliance on Mr. Turnbull's opinion or views in this matter, and I can only add that his gomashas in a body entreated me, if the opium cultivation was to be kept up at all, to agitate the case and the hardships of the cultivators, with a view to affording them relief by increasing the price given them for their opium, or in some other way.

6. The real point for serious consideration, as stated by the Board, is to prove that the price of three rupees four annas per seer for opium, which was fixed in 1854-55, though it may have been liberal enough then has now ceased to be so, and if this fact be established, then it becomes clear that relief must be given, or else the cultivators will relinquish their cultivation; and if they should once generally and systematically do so throughout the agency, there would be a very momentous decrease in the revenue; but this might, I conceive, to some extent be averted by a small expenditure of from four to six lakhs of rupees being now promptly and judiciously distributed throughout the North Western Provinces during the next six months in small sums, and I doubt not the increase to the revenue, which must follow, would confirm the wisdom of the measure, and keep and carry with it the good-will of a very large and respectable section of the agricultural community.

7. The tables given in the margin, will I trust, prove that the prices of every agricultural production have increased very considerably since 1855, and with respect to the rules paid for the hire of day labourers, or common coolies, they have, I beg to observe, equally increased within the Ghazee-pore and Benares Divisions. The hire of a common labourer has been raised from one-and-a-half annas to two annas per diem, while in Goruck-pore, where labourers were to be had in 1855, at from four to six pice per man, and two-and-a-half to three and four pice for women and children, per diem, they are now only procurable, and that with difficulty, at—men, for two annas per diem, and women and children in proportion. With respect to the rents paid for land sown with poppy, I am sorry I cannot give any reliable information.

Within the Goruckpore Division, the rates vary from three rupees upwards per beegah, and as the district is just now about to undergo re-settlement, it is expected that there will be a considerable increase made upon opium lands. There

Description of Produce.	Ghazee-pore and Benares.		Selimpore Division in Goruckpore.		Goruckpore.
	1855.	1859.	1855.	1859.	1855.	1859.
	Per Rupee.	Per Rupee.	Pr. Re.	Pr. Re.	Per Rupee.	Pr. Re.
Wheat - - -	23 to 25 Srs.	16 Srs.	22 Srs.	13½ Srs.	40 Srs.	24½ Srs.
Barley - - -	30 to 33 "	16 to 20 "	32 "	20 "	57 "	36 "
Rice - - -	14 to 16 "	10 to 11 "	20 "	12 "	32 "	20 "
Dhan - - -	35 "	16 to 17 "	—	—	—	—
Sutree (Kussaree) -	40 to 45 "	23 to 24 "	—	—	—	—
Indian Corn - -	30 to 35 "	26 to 28 "	—	—	—	—
Bujrah - - -	29 and 30 "	17 and 18 "	—	—	—	—
Gram - - -	25 to 27 "	18 and 19 "	25 "	17 "	45 to 50 "	30 "
Oorood - - -	22 to 24 "	16 to 18 "	18 "	10 "	32 "	18 "
Peas - - -	35 "	20 to 22 "	—	—	—	—
Urhar - - -	30 "	22 "	21 "	12 "	38 "	25 "
Dal, Urhar - -	25 and 26 "	16 to 18 "	—	—	—	—
Wheat (Flour) -	16 "	12 "	—	—	30 "	16 "
Oil - - -	About one-third dearer in price.		—	—	—	—
Ghee - - -	2 and 2½ srs.	1 and 1½ srs.	—	—	—	—
Bhoosa - - -	2½ and 3 mds.	1 and 1½ mds.	—	—	—	—
Kharie - - -	30 srs.	20 srs.	—	—	—	—
Choonee - - -	1 and 2 mds.	1 md.	—	—	—	—

rates vary from three rupees upwards per beegah, and as the district is just now about to undergo re-settlement, it is expected that there will be a considerable increase made upon opium lands.

* Mr. G. Osborne, Sub-Deputy Agent of Goruckpore, and 29 years' Government service.

Mr. T. Wilson, Sub-Deputy Agent of Goruckpore, and 26 years' Government service.

Mr. R. Nicholson, Selimpore, and 16 years' Government service.

† See copy of his letter No. 211, dated 17 August 1859, accompanying.

There seems to me to be a disposition generally to enhance the rent, as the Azimghur cultivators have been complaining and so have their Ghazeepore brethren. App. Part II.

8. When it is known there that these exorbitant prices and rates are now and have been for the past three years prevailing in these provinces without any prospect of improvement, and that people who could afford to eat twice a day are reduced, in consequence of the dearness of provisions, to one meal, while many can with difficulty supply themselves and families with even one hot meal per diem, is it to be wondered at that the opium cultivators who have not received any increase in the price of their opium during these hard years, and have had to suffer from the effects of the rebellion, the unusual vicissitudes of seasons, and other discouraging measures, should be gradually relinquishing their poppy cultivation, and cultivating their lands with other crops which are sure to yield them a higher return, and prove much more remunerative in every way? The fact speaks for itself, and I only hope the extra four annas per seer may be granted, otherwise the consequences must be serious.

9. Nobody who has been resident in these provinces since 1855 doubts the enormous increase which has taken place in the prices of every description of food, in all articles the common produce of the country, in the rates of common labourers, menials and artizans of all classes; in short, in all the common necessities of life, not omitting materials for building and repairing huts, houses, &c. The districts are fast being drained, owing to the great and necessary influx of British soldiers, the requirements of the railways, and the enormous demands in consequence of the Commissariat and Public Works Departments. These following upon and during two years of mutiny and capricious seasons completely subverted the common order of things, which it will take years of industry and good management to restore to their proper and usual equilibrium; while, however, other commodities have been commanding higher prices in every way, our opium unfortunately has remained stationary in price, and no wonder the cultivators are abandoning the cultivation.

10. It is not for me to question the expediency of the last reduction which was made in the price of opium, but it does not appear to have been advocated by any of the experienced officers of this agency, as they have all along been convinced that it could not stand if revenue was required from opium. The measure was of course carried out, but it has always been most distasteful, and it has engendered great discontent as well as has another rule which has been recently set in force in this agency, whereby premium is no longer given for opium of a higher consistence than the agency standard of $\frac{7}{10}$ %, although batta is levied upon all opium delivered below it. I really question whether this measure is in the long run economical, and as the rule does not apply to the Behar agency, and it has proved very inconvenient in carrying on our factory operations, I wish I could venture to hope it might be abrogated. We find from experience that the delay which occurs at the Factory from having recourse to various measures to bring up low opium to a caking consistence, whilst heavy establishments are kept up all the time, not omitting the risk and inconvenience we incur from receiving such low opium from assamees who no longer take any interest in preparing and raising it, completely counterbalance much of, if not all, the gain which might have been expected from the introduction of the measure. In fact, if I were a merchant, I would willingly pay the premium for the sake and in the hope of getting better opium, and take this opportunity of mentioning the matter, as it is in a measure connected with the increase of prices, and it is sure to be sooner or later forced again upon the attention of the Board.

11. I will now content myself with giving on the margin two instances of the falling-off of the cultivation since 1855, in two of the Divisions; and I regret to think I could, if time were allowed me, produce a similar return for every one of the divisions of this agency; the fact speaks for itself. The loss in consequence to Government is potent, and I am thoroughly convinced that only liberal measures will restore confidence among our opium cultivators, and cause them to return to their cultivation.

Division.	Lands relinquished since 1855.	Cultivators thrown up Cultivation since 1855.	Opium decreased in conse- quence of the foregoing Relinquishments since 1855.
	Beegahs.	Number.	Maunds.
Benares	7,519	3,327	740
Goruckpore	20,537	33,144	1,725

12. Copies of four letters as per margin* accompany, and I beg attention to those of Messrs. Wilson & Osborne.

I have, &c.
(signed) H. C. Hamilton, Agent.

From Thomas Wilson, Esq., Sub-Deputy Agent, to H. C. Hamilton, Esq., Benares Opium Agent, Ghazeepore (No. 60), dated 19 August 1859.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 28, dated the 8th instant, with a copy of an extract of a letter from the Junior Secretary to the Board of Revenue, Lower Provinces, to the opium agent at Behar, in which the grounds of a strong recommendation from that officer for raising

* No. 193, dated 23 August 1859, from Sub-Deputy Agent, Goruckpore.
No. 60, dated 19 August 1859, from Sub-Deputy Agent, Benares.
No. 169, dated 18 August 1859, from Sub-Deputy Agent, Selimpore.
No. 211, dated 17th August 1859, from Sub-Deputy Agent, Cawnpore.

App. Part II. raising the price paid to cultivators for opium from Rs. 3. 4. to Rs. 3. 8. per seer, has been discussed, and fuller information is called for in support of a measure which would involve an increased expenditure to the extent of from four to six lakhs of rupees annually.

2. This question has come under consideration at the present time in consequence of a representation made by two of the sub-deputy opium agents of the Behar Division, who have discovered an increasing unwillingness on the part of the agricultural population to engage in the cultivation of the poppy plants, which is attributed to losses sustained from unfavourable seasons, the superior profit derivable from other crops, and the increased cost of labour and of all agricultural products.

3. With regard to the first of these allegations, the Board remark that the effect of vicissitudes of seasons was probably fully considered when the measure for reducing the price to its present rate of Rs. 3. 4. per seer was under discussion; but, with perfect submission of judgment, I would respectfully beg permission to dissent from this supposition.

4. I understand that the determination to reduce the price from Rs. 3. 8. to Rs. 3. 4. was grounded on an opinion very plainly expressed by some of the most experienced officers in the Behar Division that the smaller price would prove abundantly remunerative to the growers, and would not materially deter them from continuing in, or even from extending the cultivation. This opinion in support of a measure that was to result in the immediate diminution of the public expenditure to a very large extent was too much in accordance with the views of the Government for its foundation to be very closely examined.

5. Up to the period referred to there is no doubt but that the cultivation of the poppy was highly popular from other causes besides the remunerative price; the employment of European agency in superintending the payments and conducting the weighments, and in the general management of the subordinate divisions, had naturally confirmed the reliance of the growers in the good intentions of the Government towards them, and they readily followed an occupation from which they derived so many benefits.

6. This well-grounded confidence was destroyed by the reduction of the price from three rupees ten annas to three rupees eight annas, and subsequently to its present limit of three rupees four annas per seer. An ignorant and indiscriminating class of people were not likely to inquire into the strict justice of a measure by which the humble profits of their labour was considerably diminished; they felt themselves to be injured by it, and they could not foresee to what extent reduction might be in future enforced, and consequently those who had to depend on hired labour for the culture of their fields, and collection of the produce, began to relinquish a cultivation that no longer offered the inducements and advantages it had hitherto done.

7. This inevitable effect of depressing the energies of a numerous and hard-working class of people whose interests were closely bound up with those of the Government, by depriving them of a portion of the fruits of their labour, was probably lost sight of by the advocates for reduction of price in the exaggerated estimate which they had formed of the profits of the crop; and from overlooking the fluctuations to which it was liable from natural and uncontrollable causes, they evidently over-estimated the advantages which the opium cultivator derived from his connexion with Government, and concluded that they would immeasurably counterbalance the apparently trifling loss of price; but the consequences have fully proved the unsoundness of their conclusions, and the result has been disastrous alike to the growers and the State. An error of such magnitude in a financial scheme should assuredly be rectified by speedily removing the cause of discontent.

STATEMENT showing the price of Grain of every description in 1855, and succeeding Seasons.

Description of Produce.	1855.	1856.	1857.	1858.	1859.	Remarks.
Wheat - - -	23 to 25	19 and 20	10 and 11	14 and 15	16	These prices are the averages of the rates declining during the twelve months of each year.
Barley - - -	30 to 33	24 to 26	14 and 15	16 and 17	16 to 20
Rice - - -	14 to 16	10 to 16	11 and 12	10 to 15	10 and 11
Dhan - - -	35	40 to 42	32 to 36	17 and 18	16 and 17
Sutrie - - -	40 to 45	40 to 45	16 and 17	17 to 23	23 and 24
Indian Corn - -	30 to 35	24 and 25	28 and 29	26 to 28	26 to 28	The quantity of grain given by zemindars to their labourers continued the same, notwithstanding the increased value, the usual allowance being two seers per diem.
Bujra - - -	29 and 30	22 to 25	20 to 22	19 to 21	17 and 18
Gram - - -	25 to 27	20 to 25	19 and 20	18 and 19	18 and 19
Orrood - - -	22 to 24	19 and 20	20	11 and 12	16 to 18
Peas - - -	35	35 and 36	32 and 33	20 to 22	20 to 22
Urbur - - -	30	21 and 22	20 and 21	21	22	The quantity of grain given by zemindars to their labourers continued the same, notwithstanding the increased value, the usual allowance being two seers per diem.
Dholl, Urbur - -	25 and 26	19 and 20	15 and 16	16	16 to 18
Daily hire of labourer -	1½ ans.	1½ ans.	1½ ans.	2	2
Monthly Wages -	2-8	2-8	2-8	4	4

distressing effects of rebellion have raised the prices of grain of every description so greatly, that it is with difficulty a labouring man receiving the ordinary rate of hire, can satisfy the wants of himself and his family; he therefore leaves his home and his fields, and seeks for remunerative employment at a distance.

9. Moreover, the demand for labour on the Railway and in the Public Works Departments, and as followers to the numerous regiments of English soldiers has naturally raised the rate of wages, and withdrawn from the villages great numbers of the labouring class on whom the zemindars and others who employ hired labour used to depend for the culture of their fields; this also is a hindrance which cannot readily be overcome, and when in addition to it the people are suffering severe privation from the effects of repeated seasons of scarcity, it cannot excite surprise that this class of cultivators, who pay for hired labour in kind, or in grain and not in money, should have abandoned a cultivation attended with so many difficulties and inconveniences.

10. Since the price of opium was reduced in 1855, and other discouraging measures have been brought into operation, the number of cultivators who readily entered into engagements under more favourable

8. The other reasons adduced in support of the proposition to grant a larger price to the cultivator, viz., the increased cost of labour, and of every article of agricultural produce, and which are alleged to have been the cause of many persons having relinquished the cultivation, are difficulties which certainly do exist, although, individually, I do not think they would be sufficient to account for the growing disinclination to engage in the cultivation. The consequence of unfruitful season and the favourable circumstances, but who have now entirely abandoned the cultivation in the subdivision, amounts to 3,327, the land relinquished extends to beegahs 7,519. 9, and the produce lost to maunds 740. 22. 12, and this has not been replaced, except in a few unimportant instances, by any new cultivation. App. Part II.

STATEMENT of Number of Persons, Quantity of Land, and Amount of Opium abandoned in the Benares and Mirzapore Sub-Deputy Opium Agency, in consequence of reduction of Price of Opium.

Name of Sub-Divisions.	Number of Persons who have relinquished Cultivation.				Quantity of Land withdrawn from Opium Cultivation.				Quantity of Opium lost.				Total Number of Persons.	Total Quantity of Land.	Total Quantity of Opium.
	1855-56.	1856-57.	1857-58.	1858-59.	1855-56.	1856-57.	1857-58.	1858-59.	1855-56.	1856-57.	1857-58.	1858-59.
Zemareah -	61	52	74	51	148 16	100 8	371 5	127 8	20 21 7 $\frac{1}{2}$	14 1 15	26 37 7	19 5 4 $\frac{1}{2}$	238	747 17	80 26 2 $\frac{1}{2}$
Chunar -	137	143	149	30	275 2	348 16	374 3	30 8	23 32 14 $\frac{1}{2}$	29 27 14 $\frac{3}{4}$	32 37 2 $\frac{3}{4}$	1 36 14 $\frac{3}{4}$	459	1,028 9	88 14 15
Dildarnughur	67	27	84	59	172 16	43 5	154 16	75 17	16 4 15	4 34 10 $\frac{3}{4}$	8 35 13	6 27 4 $\frac{1}{2}$	237	446 14	36 22 11 $\frac{1}{2}$
Chewbepore	79	45	91	98	190 5	51 6	299 8	192 8	19 17 4	6 36 0 $\frac{3}{4}$	24 23 0 $\frac{1}{2}$	12 32 4	313	737 7	61 28 9
Syedpore -	77	43	133	89	135 19	65 10	624 10	138 10	20 23 1	8 12 0	58 27 3	10 38 10	342	964 9	98 20 14
Meygah -	108	138	148	65	165 0	191 6	277 3	83 3	15 37 5	17 27 4	27 14 15	4 9 15	459	716 12	65 9 14
Kylee -	203	125	257	144	414 1	261 18	700 19	197 1	65 2 0	31 23 15	53 12 5	20 11 11	729	1,573 19	170 9 15
Mahateh -	124	114	222	90	254 3	154 10	782 8	113 2	32 3 18 $\frac{1}{2}$	21 11 14 $\frac{1}{2}$	70 35 14 $\frac{1}{2}$	14 38 1 $\frac{1}{2}$	550	1,304 3	139 9 11
													3,327	7,519 9	740 22 12

11. This evidently is not a state of things which, if left to itself, will work its own remedy. It is to be feared that the evil is a growing one, and I feel a strong conviction that the counteracting measures which have been recommended by the opium agent of Behar cannot be adopted too soon.

I have, &c.
(signed) Thos. Wilson, Sub-Deputy Agent.

From A. H. Turnbull, Esq., Sub-Deputy Opium Agent, Cawnpore, to the Benares Opium Agent, Ghazee pore (No. 211), dated 17 August 1859.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge receipt of your letter No. 53, dated the 8th instant, giving cover to extract from a letter, No. 267, dated the 30th ultimo, from the Secretary, Board of Revenue, Lower Provinces, to the opium agent of Patna, on the question of raising the price paid for opium from three rupees four annas to three rupees eight annas, and requesting to be furnished with my views on the subject.

2. In reply, I beg to inform you that the cultivators are deriving larger profits at present from grain than from opium, vide statement annexed. The sudden rise in price I attribute chiefly to indifferent seasons, and am of opinion that the present rates cannot be maintained much longer. One good, or even a fair average season, would soon reduce the prices considerably. I, therefore, think it would not be prudent to raise the price to Rs. 3. 8., for it cannot be expected that as the price of grain rises or falls, the price to be paid for opium is to be regulated thereby. It would also establish a mischievous precedent, and would probably cause no inconsiderable inconvenience and loss to Government hereafter.

3. We shall most probably have the usual decrease both in the cultivation and produce, consequent on the profits at present derived from grain cultivation; but as soon as the cultivators meet with one reverse, we shall have them taking to the opium again. The advances are our great stand-by, and so long as they are freely distributed, I do not think we need fear for the present at least any great loss.

I have, &c.
(signed) A. H. Turnbull,
Sub-Deputy Opium Agent.

MEMORANDUM.

Names of Articles.	Produce of One Beegah.	Value in 1855-56.	Total Value.	Estimated Expenses incurred with Interest.	Profit in 1855-56.	Value in 1855-56.	Total Value.	Estimated Expense in 1859-60.	Estimated Profit in 1859-60.
				On one Beegah, in 1855-56.				Estimated Expense in 1859-60.	Estimated Profit in 1859-60.
		Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs.	Rs. a. p.	Rs.	Rs. a. p.
Wheat - -	12 mds. at 25	19 3 2	- - -	- - -	- - -	a' 24 seers 20
Bhoosah - -	18 do. at 4½	4 8 -	- - -	- - -	- - -	a' 2 mds. 9
Mustard seed -	- - -	3 - -	26 11 2	7 - -	19 11 2	- - 4	33 - -	8	25 - -
Opium - -	8 srs.	26 - -		Estimated Expense incurred in one Beegah.
Leaves - -	12 „	2 8 -
Poppy seed -	3 mds. 20 „	6 - -	34 8 -
Add Interest sanctioned by Government advances - - -			- 5 3
			34 13 3	9 - -	25 13 3	- - -	34 13 3	11	23 13 3

(signed) A. H. Turnbull,
Sub-Deputy Opium Agent.

From R. Nicholson, Esq., Sub-Deputy Opium Agent, to H. C. Hamilton, Esq., Benares, Opium Agent, Ghazee-pore (No. 169,) dated Goruck-pore, 18 August 1859.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 43, dated the 8th instant, with extracts from a letter, No. 267, dated 30th ultimo, from the Board of Revenue, Calcutta, to the opium agent of Behar, and calling on me for my views on the subject discussed in it.

2. That there is a great and growing disinclination on the part of the opium cultivators to continue the cultivation of poppy is evident: many small cultivators have already ceased, and several of the more influential ones have declared their intention of doing so. The reason assigned is, that the cultivation of poppy at the present price of opium does not remunerate them so well as the other crops, now that the price of labour and all agricultural product has so much increased. I would respectfully beg to recommend that the price of opium be raised to Rs. 3. 8. per seer, on the grounds of the great increase in the price of labour and all agricultural produce that has taken place since 1855, when the price of opium was fixed at Rs. 3. 4. per seer.

3. The following statement shows the increase of price that has taken place on produce and labour since 1855. I have merely enumerated a few articles, but a corresponding increase of price has taken place in all others.

Articles.	Price in 1855.	Price in 1859.
Coarse Rice -	20 Goruckpore seers per rupee.	12 Goruckpore seers per rupee.
Wheat - -	22 - ditto - -	13½ - ditto.
Grain - -	25 - ditto - -	17 - ditto.
Urhur - -	21 - ditto - -	12 - ditto.
Ooreed - -	18 - ditto - -	10 - ditto.
Barley - -	32 - ditto - -	20 - ditto.
Wheat Flour -	19 - ditto - -	13 - ditto.
Sugar - -	5 - ditto - -	2½ - ditto.

4. The price of labour in 1855, was, for men, from four to five pice per day, women and children from two and a half to three pice; now, men are with difficulty procured for two annas a day, and women and children in proportion.

5. The average rate of land rent for poppy cultivation in this division is from five to eight rupees per beegah, but as the new settlement is about to take place, an increase of land rent is expected.

I have, &c.
(signed) R. Nicholson,
Sub-Deputy Opium Agent.

From George Osborne, Esq., Sub-Deputy Opium Agent of Goruckpore, to H. C. Hamilton, Esq., Benares Opium Agent, Ghazeepore, No. 193, dated Goruckpore, 23 August 1859.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 48, dated the 8th instant, with enclosure, being extract of a letter from the Board of Revenue, Lower Provinces, No. 267, dated the 30th ultimo, requesting my views as to the expediency of altering the present rate of Rs. 3. 4. per seer now allowed for standard opium to Rs. 3. 8., in consequence of the present rise in price of almost every article of consumption, as well as of manual labour in this and other poppy-producing districts.

2. In reply, and with all due deference, I beg leave to observe that I fear the surmises of an increasing unwillingness on the part of opium assamees to cultivate poppy under existing terms and rates, to be but too well founded. Since the rate was reduced in 1855, from Rs. 3. 8. to Rs. 3. 4. per seer, both the extent of cultivated area and the usual out-turn therefrom, in this sub-agency, have steadily declined, even prior to the disturbances, which commenced after the produce of 1856-57 had all been realised. In explanation of the above, I beg to append the following Abstract Statement of the result of the operations of this agency for three seasons, beginning with 1854-55 :

Years.	Price allowed per Seer.	Cultivation in Agency Beegahs.	Opium produced.	Average per Beegah.	Value of Opium Produce per Beegah.
1.	2.	3.	4.	5.	6.
1854-55	Rs. a. 3 8	76,295	Ms. srs. chs. 6,755 24 - $\frac{1}{2}$	Srs. chs. 3 8 $\frac{1}{2}$	Rs. a. p. 12 6 4
1855-56	3 4	68,457	6,521 3 4	3 12 $\frac{3}{4}$	12 6 1 $\frac{1}{2}$
1856-57	3 4	55,658	5,030 2 6 $\frac{1}{2}$	3 9 $\frac{1}{2}$	11 11 11 $\frac{1}{2}$
1857-58 } 1858-59 }	Years of disturbance and confusion.

3. From the preceding statement a steady rate of decrease, both in the extent of land cultivated and realised produce, will be apparent on comparing Columns 3 and 4; whilst the money value of the opium produced, as shown in Column 6, leaves but a small margin of profit at present rates, and were it not for the poppy leaves and the seeds, the latter being the right of the cultivators, realising together at present rates about four rupees per beegah, there would not remain much encouragement to the cultivators, whose outlay is not generally less than about 14 rupees per beegah, as shown from the following Abstract Statement only just forwarded to me by the officers of the agency, viz. :

Present Cost of cultivating one Agency Beegah of Land in Poppy.

	Rs.	a.	p.
Ploughing, harrowing, sowing, &c.	5	3	-
Watering and terracing	-	2	-
Weeding, four times	-	1	-
Seeds, two seers	-	-	3
Collecting (variable according to season)	-	2	-
Preparing and collecting petal leaves	-	-	5
Land rent (minimum) in 1858-59	3	-	-

Rupees - - - 14 - -

PROCEEDS.

	Rs.	a.	p.
Opium, 4 seers per beegah (being in excess of the preceding statement), at $\frac{3}{4}$ per seer	-	13	-
Poppy seed, one and a half maunds, at 2 rupees per maund	-	3	-
Poppy leaves sent to agency, about	1	-	-
	17	-	-

Profit of cultivators - - 3 - -

From similar reports, I perceive that other kinds of produce yield at present rates an annual profit to the grower of about as follows :—

	Rs.	a.	p.
Tobacco, profit per beegah	-	7	-
Sugar ditto „ ditto	-	11	-
Dhan or rice, ditto ditto	-	2	4

Respecting grain and cereals, there seems so much discrepancy in the statements received, that I refrain from quoting them, but their profits, generally speaking, do not appear to equal those derivable from poppy.

4. The land rent in the preceding statement is put down at three rupees per beegah only, in many cases, however, in this district, it is in excess of that sum, but under the new assessment expected to commence immediately, this item is susceptible of considerable increase in the present and future seasons, and would tell heavily on the poppy cultivator at present rates.

5. There has been an undoubted rise in prices of every description of the actual necessities of life since the disturbances began in 1857-58, and they now are in most instances fifty per cent. or more over the prices of 1856-57. I beg to subjoin a comparative statement of the same, reduced however to the Calcutta seer of 80 tolah weight, as our Goruckpore seers vary from 36 to 22 gundahs, there being besides local weights and measures of different denominations, known only to the dealers of this district, and some kinds of goods are sold by only one weight, and some by the others.

ARTICLES.	1855-56, Per Rupee, Calcutta Weight.	1858-59, Per Rupee, Calcutta Weight.	REMARKS.
	Average.	Average.
Wheat - - -	40 seers.	24 $\frac{1}{2}$ seers.*
Barley - - -	57 $\frac{1}{2}$ „	38 „
Flour - - -	30 $\frac{1}{2}$ „	16 „
Coarse rice - - -	32 „	20 „
Urhur - - -	38 „	25 $\frac{1}{2}$ „
Gram - - -	50 to 45 „	30 $\frac{1}{2}$ „
Coreed - - -	32 „	18 „
Sugar - - -	8 „	4 $\frac{1}{2}$ „
Mustard oil - - -	6 $\frac{1}{2}$ „	5 „
	Per Diem.	Per Diem.
A man cooly - - -	6 pice.	8 pice.	or 2 annas.
A female - - -	4 „	5 „	1 $\frac{1}{2}$ „
A child - - -	3 „	4 „	1 „
A bildar - - -	2 annas.	3 annas.
A bearer - - -	5 „	5 „
A hackery and bullocks	8 „	10 to 12 „

* The prices in this column are as near as possible those of the current month, but are subject to constant change, varying according to the prospects of the season, &c. &c.

Appendix,
Part II.

6. With reference to the tabular statement a paragraph 2, I beg to subjoin a similar one, showing the results of the sub-agency from 1849-50, when the price was reduced from Rs. 3. 10. to Rs. 3. 8. per seer.

I.	2.	3.	4.	5.	6.
YEAR.	Price allowed per Seer.	Cultivation in Agency Beegahs.	Opium produced.	Average per Beegah.	Value of the Opium Produce per Beegah.
	Rs. a.		Mds. srs. chs.	Srs. chs.	Rs. a. p.
1849-50 -	3 10	32,650	5,674 22 3 $\frac{1}{2}$	6 15 $\frac{1}{2}$	25 3 2 $\frac{1}{2}$
1850-51 -	3 10	37,659	5,379 15 1 $\frac{1}{2}$	5 11 $\frac{1}{4}$	20 11 1
1851-52 -	3 8	48,590	6,926 38 11 $\frac{3}{4}$	5 11 $\frac{1}{4}$	19 5 4
1852-53 -	3 8	66,295	8,687 24 11	5 - $\frac{1}{4}$	18 5 6 $\frac{1}{2}$
1853-54 -	3 8	77,796	9,780 22 14	5 - $\frac{1}{2}$	17 9 7 $\frac{1}{2}$

7. The above shows that the rate of Rs. 3. 8. per seer was considered amply remunerative, and occasioned an increase of more than double the area cultivated, in four years from 1849-50 to 1852-53; and which accounts in some measure for the falling off in the general average of produce per beegah, as new lands seldom or ever produce so abundantly the first year or two as they do after they have been cared for and manured, on finding them so well repay the cost and trouble incurred. The number of cultivators also increased from 55,307 in this sub-agency in 1850-51, to 82,546 in 1854-55, but in 1858-59 they decreased down to 49,402.

8. On mature consideration, therefore, of the present state of affairs at a time when prices of all descriptions are so much in excess of those of former years, with the prospect before us of increased land rent consequent on the new assessment about to commence, and bearing in mind the unfavourable results from recent continued bad seasons and other causes, I would beg leave, with all due deference, to recommend for your most favourable consideration the advisability at the present juncture of affording to the cultivators the encouragement which just now they need so much, by raising the price of opium from Rs. 3. 4. to Rs. 3. 8. per seer in the ensuing and following seasons; such a concession will, no doubt, at once occasion an immediate and considerable increase in the land arrangements of this sub-agency, which will continue to increase so long as it may suit the views of Government to sanction its extension.

I have, &c.,
(signed) G. Osborne,
Sub-Deputy Opium Agent,
Goruckpore.

From Honourable A. Eden, Officiating Junior Secretary to the Board of Revenue, to the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, No. 364, dated Fort William, 21 September 1859.

Sir,

In forwarding for the early consideration and orders of his Honor the Lieutenant Governor, the accompanying reports, with their enclosures, from the opium agents of Behar and Benares,* impressing upon the Board the urgent necessity for at once increasing the price paid to the poppy cultivator for his produce, from the present rate of Rs. 3. 4. per seer, to Rs. 3. 8., the rate ruling previous to 1855, I am directed to submit the following remarks.

2. In the year 1838, the price paid to the cultivator in Behar was raised to and fixed at Rs. 3. 10. per seer of 80 tolahs; and in 1846 the price in the home districts of the Benares agency was raised to an equality with that prevailing throughout Behar, viz., Rs. 3. 10. In the districts of Cawnpore and Futtehpore, however, the cultivators continue to receive Rs. 3. 12. per seer.

3. The main arguments by which on each occasion the proposal to increase the price was supported, was the assumed importance of extending indefinitely the produce of the drug, by applying further stimulus to induce the ryots to engage in the cultivation of the poppy.

4. In the year 1848, under what was subsequently believed to be a misapprehension that the enormous extension of cultivation resulting from this remunerative price had had the effect of overstocking the Eastern market to such an extent that the increase in the gross returns of the drugs ceased to be accompanied by a corresponding increase in the net revenue, the Government restricted the cultivation of the poppy to an extent necessary to secure an annual provision of 36,000 chests.

5. In 1850 it became apparent that the rates paid for opium afforded the cultivator a remunerative profit far in excess of that yielded by any other product, the effect of which was to give an artificial value to the lands upon which the poppy was grown; inasmuch as the zemindars, taking advantage of the liberality of the Government towards the cultivators, increased the rent of poppy land 300 or 400 per cent. in excess of that paid for land producing ordinary crops, and thus the landholders became the greatest gainers by this extra price, and not the ryots who produced the crops. To prevent this, therefore, it was determined to reduce the price paid for opium to a scale more in accordance with the real value of land and labour, and, by thus diminishing the expenses of manufacture, to increase the stability of the opium revenue. In Mr. Secretary Grant's letter, No. 224, dated 20th June 1850, the restriction upon the cultivation of the poppy was accordingly withdrawn, and the price to be paid to the cultivator was reduced from Rs. 3. 10. and Rs. 3. 12. to an equalised rate of Rs. 3. 8.; and it was intimated at the same time that, in the opinion of Government, the rate was capable of being eventually further reduced to three rupees.

6. In

* From Opium Agent of Behar, No. 81, dated 27th May 1859, with enclosures. From Opium Agent of Behar, No. 90, dated 11th June 1859, with enclosures. From Opium Agent of Behar, No. 116, dated 8th August 1859. From Opium Agent of Benares, No. 83, dated 27th August 1859, with enclosures.

6. In consequence of a suggestion contained in a Despatch from the Honourable the Court of Directors, dated 15th June 1853, the Supreme Government directed the Board of Revenue to resume the consideration of the expediency of establishing further agency for the extension of the cultivation of the poppy in new districts. The Board, in their letter, No. 507, dated 26th October 1853, showed cause for pausing in the extension of this cultivation; and on a consideration of their Report, the Supreme Government, in a letter in the Financial Department, No. 2127, dated 19th June 1854, strictly prohibited the future extension of the poppy cultivation, and suggested for further consideration "whether a way of checking and preventing this extension might not be found by making a moderate reduction in the price paid to the cultivators."

7. In reply to this communication, the Board, in their letter No. 153, dated 14th March 1855, treating the question entirely in its general and financial bearing, and not with reference to the particular object indicated in the letter of Government in the Financial Department; viz., the check to an extension of the cultivation, recommended that, notwithstanding the measure was deprecated by the opium agents of both agencies and some of the local subordinate officers, the price paid to the cultivator should be decreased from Rs. 3. 8. to Rs. 3. 4.

8. The Board, in making this recommendation, remarked, that the small reduction of price made in 1850 had had no effect whatever in checking cultivation, but that, on the contrary, being accompanied with the removal of a previous restriction, the cultivation had since increased more rapidly than at any former period; at the same time it appeared, the Board observed, to be open to considerable doubt whether the reduction in price of 1850 had actually had the anticipated effect of moderating the artificial rent of poppy land; they considered that although (supposing the cultivation to be persisted in, notwithstanding the reduced prices), the zemindar would doubtless eventually have to sustain a corresponding reduction of rent, still that the first pressure of reduction must fall upon the ryot, and the result would be an intermediate struggle in which many cultivators would be ruined, and much land thrown out of cultivation.

9. Upon a consideration of this report, the Supreme Government, in a letter in the Financial Department, No. 2039, dated 4th June, authorised an immediate reduction in both agencies from Rs. 3. 8. to Rs. 3. 4.

10. From the reports and statements now submitted, it will be perceived that between 1844-50, the opium cultivation in the two agencies (supposing the amount of provision to represent the amount of cultivation) nearly doubled itself. This increase continued, under the first reduction in 1850, from Rs. 3. 10. to Rs. 3. 8. per seer; but directly the second reduction of 1855 took place, the cultivation began to decrease, and is still steadily decreasing. In the Behar Agency the cultivation was 4,50,129 beegahs, in the year 1853-54; the reduction in price took place in the following year, and the cultivation at once fell to 4,13,991 beegahs; and in the last two years it has fallen off at the rate of 31,000 beegahs per annum, the estimated cultivation for 1858-59 being only 3,41,502 beegahs. The average provision of this agency for the 10 years ending 1856-57 was 27,745 chests, while for the next year there are only 15,245 chests of Behar opium to bring forward.

11. Although the returns from Benares are not so complete on account of the urgency of the call for the Report, yet it is clearly shown that in two divisions alone of that agency there has been a decrease of cultivation since 1855, amounting to 28,056 beegahs; and that 36,471 cultivators have thrown up the poppy cultivation, causing a decrease of 2,465 maunds in the annual out-turn.

12. It appears to the Board that this decrease, if allowed to continue, will inevitably cause a most serious diminution in the opium revenue. The disinclination to continue the cultivation of the poppy is attributed to several causes: first, that the decrease in the price paid to the cultivator, and the great demand and high prices given for cereals, oil-seeds, and other products, which are raised with far less labour, trouble, and uncertainty than the poppy, have induced many of those who used to cultivate this plant to turn their attention to other crops; secondly, that the decrease in the price continued with a simultaneous rise in the wages of labour, and a great demand for labourers has prevented those classes who did not employ their own families in the tedious process of incising the capsules and collecting the juice, from having recourse to hired labour for those purposes, and that consequently these classes of cultivators, principally Brahmins and Rajpoots, have been compelled to relinquish the cultivation of the poppy, and to attend to the production of other crops, which appear from the reports of the local officers to be equally, if not more remunerative.

13. In the opinion of the Board, the causes to which the growing disinclination to cultivate the poppy, in preference to other crops, is attributed, are the true ones; the high prices of cereals and oil-seeds and wages of labour said to obtain in the Behar and Benares agencies, are found to prevail equally in the districts in the vicinity of Calcutta. At the time of the reduction in 1855, it was anticipated that its effect would be to decrease the cultivation of the poppy on the inferior qualities of soil, a result which was then considered desirable; but from the altered state of the country at the present time, the demand for labour, the rise in the price of provisions and of all articles of agricultural produce, which seems at present likely to continue, the effect has naturally been to reduce the poppy cultivation to an extent which threatens a serious diminution of the opium revenue.

14. The Behar agent, it is true, says that he does not contemplate any much greater falling-off, and promises 20,000 chests from the present cultivation, should the season be favourable; the abandonment of the cultivation is, he thinks, only on the part of the new cultivators who were attracted by the profits under the former high prices which ruled up to 1850. He considers that the old class of cultivators will stand by us; but, in the opinion of the Board, a provision of 20,000 chests from Behar will not be sufficient. The fluctuation in sale proceeds of the provisions here, though they show that quantity to a certain extent helps to govern market rates, show also that increased quantity, as a general rule, produces increased revenue; for although it is true that 43,000 chests of 1857 realised 86 lakhs more than did the 53,000 chests of 1855, and although, in a similar manner, 32,000 chests of last year realised as much as 43,000 chests of the previous year, yet the gross revenue continued steadily to increase from 1844 to 1855, when the annual provision reached its maximum.

Appendix,
Part II.

15. This year's provision consists of 27,000 chests, and if the present high rates hold for the next three sales, the revenue realised will fall only 25 lakhs short of last year's revenue; but for next year there are only 21,366 chests to bring forward, and there is every probability of the market rates falling.

16. If even the present rates were to be obtained for next year, their continuance cannot be depended upon for any lengthened period; they do not allow sufficient margin for remuneration to the merchants, whilst they necessarily involve a greater risk of loss. The prospect of renewed disturbances in China, and the supposed yearly increase in the indigenous cultivation of that country, are strong grounds for hesitating to rely upon a continued rise in price proportionate to the diminished provision of the Government agencies.

17. But in the opinion of the Board the present high prices, should they last, must eventually act as a strong stimulus to the extension of indigenous cultivation in China.

18. The Board consider that the opium provision should never be allowed to fall short of 36,000 chests, viz., 26,000 for the Behar and 10,000 for the Benares agency; any amount short of this must eventually lead to a considerable loss of revenue. It does not appear to the Board that there is any method of raising the provision to that amount, except by recurring to the former rate of Rs. 3. 8 per seer, and they therefore most strongly recommend that this measure may be sanctioned with as little delay as possible. The first advances are made in this month, and it is highly desirable, they think, that it should be announced in time to exercise its influence on the cultivation of 1859-60.

19. This increase of price, it is true, involves a considerable additional expenditure, estimated at about six lakhs for Behar; but it will be rather of the nature of an advance, which will be amply repaid by the increases of provision which it will secure.

I have, &c.
(signed) A. Eden,
Officiating Junior Secretary.

P. S.—The return of the enclosures is requested when no longer required.

so as to permit the advantages of the increased rate to have an influence over the extent of opium cultivation for the present season.

2. In giving his sanction to this proposed increase, the Lieutenant Governor desires me to observe, that it does not at all follow that the decrease which was directed to be made in 1850 in the price of the drug was incorrect or an injudicious measure. On the contrary, subsequent occurrences seem to show that those sub-deputy opium agents were right, who thought on that occasion that the price might be eventually reduced to as low as three rupees per seer. But even assuming that three rupees would have been a proper price in 1854, the Lieutenant Governor feels very doubtful about Rs. 3. 8. being a sufficient price now, for it is clearly made out that in this interval the price of agricultural produce has increased one-third, and as wages have risen in a similar proportion, it may be fairly regarded that the rise in the price of agricultural produce is not of a temporary or ephemeral character, or that things are likely to fall back again to their former low prices. Such being the case, it appears to the Lieutenant Governor to be quite necessary to put the profits on the cultivation of opium on a par with the cultivation of other products of the soil, and that in order to do this it may even be expedient eventually to raise the rates as high as four rupees a seer.

3. The Board are accordingly requested to give their best and most serious attention to this subject, taking particularly into their consideration the great importance of not restricting artificially at the present time the production of the drug, as such a course would inevitably give an artificial impulse to Turkey and other foreign opium which might be brought into the China market, and also to the cultivation of opium in China, which has lately been reported to be rapidly progressing.

4. The Lieutenant Governor will accordingly await the Report of the Board on the propriety of any additional increase upon Rs. 3. 8. for the price of opium for the season of 1860-61.

5. The enclosures of your letter are returned herewith, a copy having been retained for record in this office.

I have, &c.
(signed) H. U. Browne,
Under Secretary, for the Officiating Secretary, Government of Bengal.

(MISCELLANEOUS REVENUE.—Opium.)

From E. H. Lushington, Esq., Officiating Secretary to the Government of Bengal, to the Honourable A. Eden, Officiating Junior Secretary to the Board of Revenue, Fort William, No. 2720, dated 2 November 1859.

Sir,
I AM directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 364, dated the 21st September last, and in reply to state that the proposed recommendation for increasing the produce of opium by raising the price from Rs. 3. 4. to Rs. 3. 8. per seer was demi-officially sanctioned some time ago,

From the Honourable A. Eden, Officiating Junior Secretary to the Board of Revenue, to the Opium Agents of Benares and Behar, No. 401, dated Fort William, 11 November 1859.

Sir,
I AM directed to forward for your information and further consideration, a copy of the Secretary to Government's letter No. 2720, of 2d November, sanctioning an increase of four annas per seer in the price to be paid to the cultivators for their opium, and impressing upon the Board the necessity of putting the profits in the cultivation of opium on a par with the cultivation of other products of the soil, and suggesting that, in order to do this, it may ever be eventually Opium.

W. Dampier,
H. Stainforth,
and W. J. Allen, Esquires.

tually expedient to raise the rates as high as four rupees per seer. I at the same time forward a copy of my letter No. 364, dated 21st September, to which it is a reply.

2. The Board request that, without giving any avoidable publicity to the subject, you will favour them with your opinion as to the probable necessity of still further increasing the rate paid to the cultivators. In so doing you are requested to look especially to the prospect of any future relaxation in the present wages of labour and prices of agricultural produce, bearing prominently in mind the absolute necessity of keeping up our provision of the drug to the average of previous years.

3. The Board are inclined to think a further advance will be necessary, though not perhaps at present, to the full extent of four rupees per seer. They trust that the subject will meet with your early and serious attention.

I have, &c.
(signed) A. Eden,
Officiating Junior Secretary.

From R. N. Farquharson, Esq., Opium Agent of Behar, to the Honourable A. Eden, Junior Secretary, Board of Revenue, Fort William, dated Camp Bettiah, 11 February 1860.

Sir,

THE Board's letter, No. 401, of the 11th November 1859, and its annexure,* on the subject of a still further increase in the price paid to the poppy cultivators for their opium, has my most serious attention, aided by the opinion of those among my subordinates best able to afford the necessary information.

2. My correspondence on this subject has been demi-official, as best adapted to avoid publicity, in accordance with the second paragraph of the Board's letter under reply, and with my own wishes on a question which, if now freely circulated, might have led to undue expectations on part of the district officers and poppy growers. I would refer the Board on this point to Mr. King's statement that the present increase of four annas per seer is not yet generally believed, is owing to the zealous but mistaken efforts of the subordinate executive for the last year or two to keep up the cultivation by holding out hopes on increased price, which were only indulged in to be disappointed.

3. The general opinion among my subordinates is that, owing to the late unproductive seasons, added to the circumstances already discussed by the Board, it is absolutely necessary that we should still further increase the stimulus to poppy cultivation by an addition of either eight, four, or two annas, to the present price.

4. Mr. Hollings thinks that the price of agricultural produce and wages of labour will continue to have an upward tendency, and may necessitate an eventual advance to even more than four rupees per seer for opium. He thinks that we should announce, as soon as possible, an increase to

Rs. 3. 12. for 1860-61, and 4 rupees for the future, making it, however, a condition that extra care in growth and manipulation be exercised by the ryots in the current season.

5. Mr. King thinks that much depends on the out-turn of the present season, and that if it is favourable, there need be no great advance to ensure a full provision of 26,000 chests. He recommends, however, at all events, an immediate return to the rate of Rs. 3. 10. per seer, the highest ever yet given in these districts.

6. Mr. Field thinks that Rs. 3. 8. is not sufficient. He considers the rise in amount of wages and value of produce likely to be continuous, and would increase the price of opium to Rs. 3. 12. for 1860-61, and be prepared to go as far as 4 rupees for the future.

7. Mr. Pughe says that the price of cereals has considerably decreased of late, and he thinks will fall still more. He does not see any immediate necessity for announcing an increase above Rs. 3. 8. per seer, but is of opinion that much depends on the out-turn of the present season.

8. I myself am of opinion that very much depends on the out-turn of this season. If only moderately favourable, that is, if we realise the average per beegah for the last 10 years over the whole agency,† or even say five seers per beegah, an addition of 2 annas per seer, raising the price to Rs. 3. 10., will be ample to secure a steady increase in the cultivation to an amount equal to our wants and wishes. If the season is especially unproductive, that is, if the average fall, as in the past year, to three seers nine chittacks per beegah or under, a much larger increase, even up to the full 4 rupees per seer, may be requisite to prevent still further falling off in the poppy lands. The value of produce and wages of labour will both, I think, decline in some degree from the present rates, but never again probably be so low as they were prior to 1855.

9. It is impossible at this time to predict what the produce of the season is likely to be. The early part of it was unfortunate through the great sickness prevailing over most of these districts, throwing back early sowings, and here and there preventing any sowing at all. The weather has hitherto been favourable as far as the irrigated lands go, but there was no Christmas rain, and the unirrigated crops are scant and backward; a good average, however, mainly depends on the weather at the end of February and first half of March. Last year a magnificent prospect was ruined by three day's rain early in March, and an average, which up to the down-pour might have been safely calculated of six seers per beegah, fell in fact to three seers nine chittacks, and a provision which would have certainly amounted to 28,000 chests was reduced in consequence to 15,000.

10. May or June will be quite time enough to decide on the rate of increase for next year's opium, so that it may be fully known to the cultivating classes by August. The Government should at any rate be prepared to sanction an addition of 2 annas per seer, raising the price to Rs. 3. 10., the highest ever reached in these districts. Beyond this I am not prepared to go, unless

* Board to Government of Bengal, No. 364, 21st September 1859. Government of Bengal to Board, No. 2720, 2d November 1859.

† Five seers and seven and a quarter chittacks.

Appendix,
Part II.

unless things turn out worse than need be yet anticipated.

11. I annex copies of the letters I have received on this subject from Messrs. Hollings, King, Field, and Pughe, as also a statement of average yield per beegah for the last 10 years throughout this agency.

I have, &c.
(signed) R. N. Farquharson,
Opium Agent.

Demi-official Letter from Mr. Hollings, Sub-Deputy Opium Agent of Gya, dated Gya, 21 November 1859.

I HAVE considered the question proposed in your note of the 13th instant as attentively as I could, and quite subscribe to the opinion expressed by the Lieutenant Governor, that reduction in the price paid for opium was advisable in 1850, and that increase even beyond Rs. 3. 8. the seer is now most expedient; perhaps, I ought rather to say, necessary.

The general rise in prices and in the cost of labour is, I think, to be attributed to permanent causes, and their effect will therefore be permanent. These causes I take to be the opening of new markets, foreign and domestic, for our field produce, the prosecution of extensive public works, and emigration, to which has to be added the temporary one of the war. But I believe, notwithstanding the return of peace, that exportation will go on increasing for a long time; that new railways and other public works upon a larger scale than heretofore may be anticipated, and that the extension of emigration will only be stopped by affording to industry at home better remuneration than it now enjoys; and if prices do not rise, as I confidently expect they will continue to do, that a great many of our agricultural labourers will be tempted away to the sugar plantations abroad. The result is a conviction in my mind, that the combined effects of the three permanent causes enumerated, tending to raise the markets, will much more than counterbalance the effect of reduced public expenditure in time of peace, and that prices will continue to have an upward tendency, in which case the Government may have to bid still higher than 4 rupees, if they wish to keep a firm hold upon the cultivation and to be prepared for the increasing demand for opium, which, after a short check, may be looked for in China. I think the increase might be gradual, say Rs. 3. 12. in 1860-61, and 4 rupees in the year following; and if it were intended to give it, I would announce it beforehand, with a condition that the extra price would be given, in event of great care being taken in the cultivation of the poppy and manipulation of their opium, by the ryots during the current season. If you do not care to issue conditional orders, I think the sub-deputy opium agents might be strengthened in their influence upon the opium producers, if they were allowed to give out that good results in the present season would enable them to ask for a higher rate in future.

(signed) C. Hollings.

Demi-official Letter from Mr. King, Sub-Deputy Opium Agent of Patna, dated 6 January 1860.

I HAVE now the pleasure to reply to your demi-official note of the 19th November last, regarding a further increase in the price of opium beyond the 4 annas per seer lately sanctioned.

I have delayed, as you are aware, from giving any opinion upon this subject till I could see what the effect of the increase up to the old price of Rs. 3. 8. per seer being made known to the cultivator had been, for you may remember that my settlements were over before this announcement could be made by myself to them at the Sudder station. I however took every means in my power to give it the widest publicity. All the intelligent assamees have perfect faith in my notices on the subject, but the mass of people, who have been hoping for this increase for the last two or three years, do not thoroughly believe that they will get it.

I attribute this feeling on their part to the reports about the coming increase, which I find the Mofussil amla, more especially the zillahdars, have been giving out for the last two years or so, where they found the assamees relinquishing the cultivation of the poppy. These reports have of course proved false, and hence the hesitation of the masses to believe that what is now officially announced to them will actually take place; though, on being questioned, the people at once admit that what is stated under my hand and seal must be true.

But the fact of there being an increase of 1,237 beegahs in the measurements on a settlement of 27,634 beegahs, shows how the news of the extra price has been received. This increase, I have every reason to believe, would have been much greater but for the unusual sickness and mortality among the people that have so long prevailed, and which have prevented them in several instances from fulfilling their engagements to the Government. The total decrease from this and other causes amounts to 692 beegahs, thus leaving a net increase on the settlements under very unfavourable circumstances of 545 beegahs. This quality in itself is nothing remarkable, further than being an indication of the better feeling with which the cultivators now look on the poppy. Having stated the effect which the announcement of the increased price has already had on the people, I will proceed to offer my opinion on the question of still further increasing the price. But it is not to be forgotten that a poor season again this year may render a modification of my opinion necessary, for should we be so unlucky as not to have a fair average season this year, a great many assamees among those who have to employ hired labour, will, I much fear, throw the poppy up, except the price should at once be raised beyond what I have to recommend its being done.

The increase from Rs. 3. 4., to Rs. 3. 8. per seer for opium, is not at all proportionate to the increase in prices obtainable for oil-seeds and cereals, now compared with those prevailing in 1855, when the price of the drug was reduced to Rs. 3. 4. per seer. But if Rs. 3. 8. per seer suffices to produce the quantity of opium required by the Government, I can see no good reason for giving a higher price for it. Judging from my own district, I am of opinion that the price of Rs. 3. 8. per seer will, provided only we have a fair season this year, bring the cultivation next year up to what what will always produce 26,000 chests. But looking to the continued high wages of labour, particularly along the line of the railway, and the probability of these rates lasting for some time to come, I am disposed to urge that the price be increased next year to the original former price of Rs. 3. 10. per seer. I fix on this particular sum because the cultivators having been paid it once before, I think that a recurrence to it will not lead on the part of the zemindars to an increase in the present rates for poppy lands, and that it will suffice to bring the cultivation up to what it was in former years. If, however, the Government should require unlimited supply of opium, the price will of course have to be raised in proportion. But to do so now beyond Rs. 3. 10. per seer would, in my opinion, be only putting money into the zemindars' pockets, for they would not fail to raise the rents of poppy lands beyond their present rates when they found the Government were paying the cultivators a price that they had never before received. When the price was decreased from Rs. 3. 10. to Rs. 3. 8., and subsequently to Rs. 3. 4., the zemindars made no diminution in the rates of rent that they were in the habit of charging for poppy lands, and it is for this reason that I am of opinion that if the old rate of Rs. 3. 10. be recurred to, the cultivators will not only not look for any further increase, but that they will reap the whole of the benefit arising from the increased price.

I have therefore to recommend that the price for opium in 1860-61 be increased, without any reference to the out-turn of 1859-60, to the old price of Rs. 3. 10. per seer. Adverting to the doubts which I have mentioned the mass of the people as entertaining, on the point of their really getting the increased price of Rs. 3. 8. this year, I have strongly to urge that the district officers be directed to pay at the time of the weighment as high an advance as they think they can do with safety. Now that all opium sent in as "good" is to be paid for as such opium of the first sort, say 70° to 72° consistence, may safely be paid for at the rate of Rs. 3. 4. per seer at the time of weighments, thus leaving 4 annas to 6 annas per seer due at the farkhuttee. Other sorts can be paid for in proportion: this will do more to convince the people of the increased price being an actual fact than anything else. Indeed many of them have remarked to me, that though they did not doubt what I told them, still that they could not well believe it till they actually got the increased price on the delivery of their opium.

(signed) R. King.

Demi-official Letter from Mr. Field, Sub-Deputy Opium Agent of Shahabad, dated Arrah, 20 November 1859.

I HAVE given the subject of your demi-official note, of the 24th instant, my best consideration, and I am decidedly of opinion that Rs. 3. 8. per seer is not sufficient to keep up our provision to the average of previous years. The wages of labour in this district have more than doubled, and the price of agricultural produce has increased from 30 to 100 per cent. since 1854, and that this rise in the wages of labour and price of agricultural produce is not of a temporary or ephemeral character I am convinced, nor is there any probability of their falling back again to their former standard. In order to secure a provision of 26,000 chests, we ought, I think, to advance the price paid to the cultivators to Rs. 3. 12. for 1860-61, and be prepared to go as far as 4 rupees for the year following. Unless the price of opium advance in the same ratio as that of other agricultural produce, its cultivation must inevitably give way to that of other products that pay better; this result is already apparent. Where so much of the cultivation is carried on by hired labour (as is the case when Rajpoots, Brahmins, and others whose families cannot assist in the labours of the field engage in it), the great increase in the wages of labour, unless made by a corresponding rise in the prices of the drug must materially reduce it. The cultivation in this district has already decreased a fifth since 1853-54, and nothing but the stimulus of increased prices will restore it.

(signed) George Field.

Demi-official Letter from Mr. Pughe, Sub-Deputy Opium Agent of Sewan, dated Camp Gopalgunge, 21 November 1859.

IN accordance with the request conveyed in your demi-official communication of the 15th instant, I beg to submit the following remarks on the question now under consideration, relative to further increasing the price of opium to four rupees per seer, for the year 1860-61.

2. There is one other circumstance beside those stated in the Officiating Junior Secretary to Board's letter to Government, No. 364, of 21st September last, which may be assigned as a cause of the falling-off in the opium cultivation, I allude to the bad seasons of 1857 and 1859; in those years many of the assamees lost the whole of their crop from blight, disappointment overtaking them just at the period when they expected to reap the reward of their labours. This untoward event, occurring as it did in such severity two years out of three, has naturally disheartened many, and induced them to throw up the cultivation, and I think that very much depends upon the result of the present season's operations as to how far it will be necessary to hold out any further inducement. Certain it is that what used to be considered in the light of the most severe punishment, viz., the stopping of a man's cultivation, has of late years been regarded by many of the assamees with indifference, and thousands and thousands of them have been retained in the cultivation by the advantages derivable from the system of advances alone.

3. It appears from the Junior Secretary's letter to Government before alluded to, that the Behar cultivation has fallen from 4,50,129 beegahs in 1853-54 to 3,41,502 beegahs in 1858-59, the settlements for 1859-60 probably showing a further decline of some 15,000 or 20,000 beegahs. In paragraph 18, the Board remark, that the Behar provision should not be allowed to fall short of 26,000 chests; these figures, I conceive, must therefore form the basis of our consideration.

Appendix,
Part II.

4. What the average yield per beegah of the whole agency amounts to, I am unfortunately ignorant of. The average of ten years, I should imagine to be about five seers, but as we have recently sustained two unusually bad seasons, it may possibly not be so high for the last five years; that of the present year, 1859, fell short of three seers per beegah. I believe, assuming it, however, at five seers for the ensuing year, and the cultivation at 3,20,000, we may expect an out-turn of 26,000 chests. Should this estimate be correct, there will be little or no margin left for accidents, and it might, perhaps, be advisable, in order to meet further falling-off in the cultivation, and to ensure a steady average out-turn of the above quantity, to increase the settlements of the agency by some 50,000 or 60,000 beegahs. The sum may appear large, but assuming that the land which has of late years been lost by us will be the first to be reclaimed, the fact must not be overlooked that very much of the land consists of the poorer class of soil which, as prices of other crops rose, became unremunerative to the grower of opium. At the same time there is doubtless a large quantity of superior lands which has also been thrown up by Brahmins and Rajpoots on account of cost of labour. I doubt, however, whether 50,000 beegahs would yield us more than 3,000 chests, but my information regarding other districts is so very limited, that I may be incorrect in my supposition.

5. The next question for consideration is the probability or otherwise of any further decline in the poppy cultivation at present rates. Speaking for my own district alone, at Rs. 3. 8. per seer, with a favourable season, I do not anticipate any falling off in lands worth retaining next year; but what may content the assamees in Allygunge and Gya, situated as they are in land away from the influence of large marts, and in many parts without means of water-carriage, may prove insufficient inducement in the Tirhoot, Hajee-poor, Chuprah, and Patna agencies. I doubt very much whether any great quantity of the land thrown up in the Chuprah division during the last five years will be recovered even in the present increased rate of Rs. 3. 8. per seer, though under an ordinary season this year I should not anticipate any further decrease at the next settlements.

6. Not having sufficient data regarding the other districts of this agency, in reference to past and present quantity of land in cultivation, average yield per beegah, also to the quantity of land required by the agency to ensure an average out-turn of 26,000 chests, I feel incompetent to offer any decided opinion as to the necessity of further increasing the price to four rupees for the year 1860-61. I think, moreover, that any conclusion now arrived at would be premature; circumstances are just now more favourable than they have been for some years past; the price of the drug has been raised to Rs. 3. 8., and the season is so far propitious, and, what is of equal importance, prices of cereals have of late considerably declined; and, if present prospects are realised, they will fall still lower. Should such be the case, and, at the same time, should the assamees realise a profitable out-turn of opium, I hardly think it will be necessary to interfere with the prices recently sanctioned, unless a considerable increase of cultivation is required; at any rate, all these contingencies will have been disposed of by the conclusion of the season's deliveries in April next, when I should imagine ample time would remain for a further consideration of the subject.

(signed) J. G. Pughe.

STATEMENT showing the Average Produce per Beegah in each District, and of the entire Agency for the last Ten Years.

SEASON.	Tirhoot.	Chupra.	Allee- gunge.	Motee- baree.	Bettiah.	Shaha- bad.	Gya.	Tetiah.	Patna.	Bhau- gulpore.	Monghyr.	Hajee- pore.	Entire Agency.
	S. c.	S. c.	S. c.	S. c.	S. c.	S. c.	S. c.	S. c.	S. c.	S. c.	S. c.	S. c.	S. c.
1849-50 - -	4 1½	6 12	6 1½	6 6½	6 2	6 14½	8 4	8 ½	7 8	5 1½	6 6½	- -	6 1½
1850-51 - -	4 1½	6 14½	6 1½	5 5½	6 -	6 5½	6 10	7 6½	6 7½	4 5½	5 5½	- -	5 9½
1851-52 - -	4 8½	8 3	5 5	2 14	5 ½	7 10½	8 -	8 4	7 8	4 15	5 15	- -	5 6½
1852-53 - -	4 12	8 ½	6 8	5 12	5 15½	8 3½	8 -	7 9½	7 13½	4 6½	5 4½	- -	6 8½
1853-54 - -	4 13	8 5½	6 11½	6 1	6 6½	7 5½	7 -	6 6	6 10½	4 8½	5 12½	- -	6 5½
1854-55 - -	4 6½	6 7½	5 4½	4 10½	5 ½	7 3½	6 9	7 3	6 14½	3 10½	4 9	- -	5 10½
1855-56 - -	3 12½	6 10½	5 4½	4 5	3 13½	7 6½	6 13	6 10	6 15½	3 11½	5 8	- -	5 8½
1856-57 - -	2 15	5 9½	3 15½	3 14½	3 2½	5 12½	5 4	5 11½	5 6½	2 14½	4 5	- -	4 5½
1857-58 - -	2 14½	6 10½	5 9	5 1½	4 12½	7 4	5 12	6 11½	6 13	4 6½	5 4	- -	5 8
1858-59 - -	1 12½	3 9	3 7½	2 15½	2 5½	4 3½	4 12½	5 -	4 5½	- -	4 3½	2 7½	3 9
GENERAL AVERAGE for last Ten Years - - -													5 7½

From H. C. Hamilton, Esq., Benares Opium Agent, to the Junior Secretary to the Board of Revenue, Lower Provinces, Fort William, No. 11, dated Ghazepore, 30 January 1860.

Appendix,
Part II.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge receipt of your letter, No. 35, of the 27th instant, and in reply to refer the Board of Revenue to the 25th and 28th paragraphs of my annual report, No. 6 of the 19th idem, stating my views on the subject of further increasing the price paid for opium to poppy cultivators.

2. I take the present opportunity of noting on the margin a rough statement showing the quantities of the various qualities of opium which were received at the Sudder factory during the past season, as a further argument in favour of returning to the old system of granting premium for opium delivered above the standard agency rate of $\frac{10}{100}$ as advocated in paragraphs 11 and 27 of my annual report. I had mislaid the statement, or it would have appeared on the margin of my 11th paragraph in support of my views.

Class or Quality.				Full Nauds.	Incomplete Nauds.	Estimated quantity of Opium at 15 Nauds per Naud.	Grand Total of actual Opium received at the Sudder Factory during the season.
						Maunds.	Maunds.
IIIX -	-	79	80	81	-	-	-
IIX -	-	76	77	78	-	-	-
X -	-	73	74	75	-	-	-
I -	-	70	71	72	131	14	2,030
II -	-	67	68	69	164	20	2,600
III -	-	64	65	66	210	16	3,240
IV -	-	61	62	63	135	16	2,100
V -	-	58	59	60	27	4	420
VI -	-	55	56	57	3	3	50
VII -	-	52	53	54	-	3	10
Sewah -	-	-	-	-	35	15	440
Pussewah -	-	-	-	-	2	2	35
Samples -	-	-	-	-	7	2	110
TOTAL - - -				714	95	11,035	11,020

3. A reference to the statement above given shows that we only received about 2,000 maunds of standard and above-standard opium during this season; but I venture to assert that if considerably in excess of that quantity had been delivered at the factory, we should have been far better able to manufacture our cakes at a greater degree of uniformity, as well as at much less expense.

I have, &c.
(signed) H. C. Hamilton, Agent.

From the Honourable A. Eden, Officiating Junior Secretary to the Board of Revenue to the Officiating Secretary to the Government of Bengal, No. 76, dated Fort William, 1 March 1860.

Sir,

WITH reference to the correspondence marginally noted,* on the subject of a still further increase of the price paid to the cultivators of opium at both agencies, I am desired to submit the accompanying report of the Behar agent, and extracts, paragraphs 25 to 28, of the Benares agent's annual report, with the following remarks:—

2. From my letter, No. 364, dated 21st September, the Lieutenant Governor will have perceived that the board were fully aware of the necessity of making the cultivation of the poppy as profitable to those engaged in its growth as the cultivation of any other crop. In consequence of the representation then made, his Honor sanctioned an advance of price from Rs. 3. 4. to Rs. 3. 8. per seer, and in communicating that sanction, the Board were requested to consider the great importance of "not restricting artificially at the present time the production of the drug," and to report upon the propriety of a still further increase for the year 1860-61. The Board have accordingly given their best and most serious attention to the subject, and they are most decidedly of opinion, that the late increase, or rather return to the old price, does not hold out to the growers of the poppy a sufficient inducement to enlarge the cultivation of this uncertain and precarious crop.

3. It is impossible at present to say what effect the increase in the price of opium already sanctioned may have on the provision of the season. With the exception of the Patna division in the Behar agency, it does not appear to have had any perceptible effect in extending the cultivation, but the increase was announced so very late in the season, that the cultivators had in all probability prepared their lands, and perhaps taken advances for other crops before being made acquainted with the change, and any great extension was therefore hardly to be anticipated, but it is probable that it will have some effect in increasing the care taken to collect and prepare the drug, and it may also be supposed that it has acted as an inducement to many wavering assamees to continue their cultivation.

4. The wages of labour and the price of food and other necessary articles have increased, as before shown, since 1855, by at least one-third, and

* To Government, No. 364, dated 21st September 1859. From Government, No. 2720, dated 2d November 1859. From Government, No. 369, dated 14th February 1860. From Government, No. 325, dated 24th February 1860.

Appendix,
Part II.

and although a slight re-action may be expected, it is by no means probable that prices will revert to their former status. The demand for foreign markets and the presence of a large European force, both tend to foster the cultivation of oil seeds, cereals, potatoes, &c., which are more certain than, and almost equally remunerative with, the poppy. It is the system of regular advances without interest, prompt cash payments for the produce, and in a certain degree to prestige which attaches to the contractor for a crop for Government, which have prevented a much greater falling-off in the cultivation than has already occurred. It cannot, however, be expected that these causes will retain their influence for one moment after they are discovered to be attended with actual pecuniary loss, and indeed they are already gradually wearing out.

5. If the price of the opium was to be raised to an exact level with the present price of other crops, it would be necessary at once to offer 4 rupees per seer; but taking into consideration the incidental benefits the assamees derive from their connexion with Government, the Board believe that Rs. 3. 12. per seer will be sufficient to induce the people of the opium-producing provinces to extend the cultivation of the poppy, and this is the lowest offer which they think could be made with any prospect of success; and this sum accordingly they would recommend to be given from the next season, and they would also suggest that a guarantee should at the same time be given to the effect that no reduction in that price should be made during the ensuing four years at least.

6. If experience shows ultimately that this advance does not afford a sufficient stimulus to the extension of the cultivation (which, however, the Board think there is little reason to apprehend), an advance to four rupees will be necessitated, and it will be advisable for Government to be prepared eventually to sanction that price.

7. It is true that the agents consider an advance to Rs. 3. 10. per seer sufficient, but this, in the opinion of the Board, is a mere compromise between what the agents supposed to be the interest of Government and the fair and just price which the cultivator has a right to demand. This small advance of 2 annas per seer might check grumbling, and the further falling off of the cultivation for the present, but it would not give that general satisfaction which will alone induce an extension of cultivation to the extent that is requisite to place our opium revenue on a secure basis. The cultivators must be treated fairly and liberally, and the Board do not hesitate to say that it would not be a very short-sighted policy to demur to increase the price to the full extent of Rs. 3. 12. for the purpose of effecting a saving in no way commensurate with the risks it would involve; for it must be borne in mind, that if we cannot increase the amount of provision to such an extent as to secure a very considerable decrease in the price of the opium at the monthly sales, the opium revenue will, in all probability, not last for three years.

8. The Board regret to have to add, that the reports of the state of this year's crops are by no means promising.

I have, &c.
(signed) A. Eden,
Officiating Junior Secretary.

P.S.—The return of the original enclosure is solicited when no longer required.

From R. N. Farquharson, Esq., Opium Agent of Behar, to E. H. Lushington, Esq., Junior Secretary to the Board of Revenue, Lower Provinces, Fort William, No. 55, dated 9 April 1860.

Sir,

With reference to my letter without No., dated the 11th February 1860, relative to the future encouragement of poppy cultivation and the means requisite to promote its increase, I am now in a position to speak positively as to the very unproductive result of this season's operations. There can be no doubt but that the out-turn is far below the average, and that if we wish to induce the people to go on with and increase their poppy cultivation, we must resort to extraordinary offers for the drug they may produce. Mr. Barnes, writing from Chaprah on the 5th instant, reports that his actual weighments, commenced on the 2d instant show a falling off of nearly 20 per cent. below the estimates, which were thought to be very moderate. He goes on to say, "This unfortunate result will, I fear, be felt by the department when the advances for next season come to be made. Large bodies of cultivators have expressed their determination not to accept further advances: they say, the last two seasons have ruined them, and poppy has become of late years so ticklish and uncertain a crop, that it does not pay them half so well as potatoes, sugar cane, maize, &c."

Mr. Hollings, from Gya, reports that hundreds of beegahs of old poppy lands are now being sown with sugar cane, and will not be replaced unless our offers are large and prompt. Under these circumstances, I must request the Board to urge on the Government the absolute necessity of promising either Rs. 3. 12. or 4 rupees per seer, for the opium of 1860-61, as also, with reference to my letter No. 39 of the 21st ultimo, that they will permit me to advance certain sums for the furtherance of irrigation where most needed, for the profitable growth of poppy. Both these points should be disposed of with as little delay as possible, to enable the district officers to make known the prospects for the following season widely among the people, and in time to prevent the entertainment of other engagements.

I have, &c.
(signed) R. N. Farquharson,
Opium Agent.

From E. H. Lushington, Esq., Junior Secretary to the Board of Revenue, to the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, No. 128, dated Fort William, 13 April 1860.

Sir,

In continuation of the Board's letter noted on the margin,* I am directed to submit the accompanying copy of a letter, No. 55, of the 9th instant, from the opium agent of Behar, strongly urging the necessity of increasing the price paid for opium to the poppy cultivators of his agency, to Rs. 3. 12. or 4 rupees per seer, and repeating his request to be allowed to advance money for the purpose of sinking wells in localities where irrigation is insufficient.

2. The

2. The Board, I am to state, have already on both these matters expressed their opinions strongly to the Government, and they can only add that the present communication from the agent clearly evinces the necessity of immediate orders, and they trust they may shortly receive them.

I have, &c.
(signed) E. H. Lushington,
Junior Secretary.

From C. H. Lushington, Esq., Secretary to the Government of India in the Financial Department, to the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, No. 3532, dated 30 April 1860.

Sir,

I AM directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 740, dated the 16th instant, forwarding a copy of a further correspondence with the Board of Revenue and the Home Department, regarding the falling off in the quantity of opium to be brought to sale in the current year, and on the subject of the decrease in the opium cultivation.

2. In reply, I am desired to observe that not only does an immediate advance in the price of opium appear needful; but that some assurance should also be given that the price will be kept up at any new rate, to be fixed for a certain period at least.

3. This Government is accordingly pleased to authorise the immediate advance of the price of opium to 4 rupees the seer, accompanied with an assurance that it will not be reduced below that rate for at least the next three seasons.

4. Assuming this advance to prove sufficient for the object in view; this Government desires that at the end of two years the subject be prospectively reconsidered, and that the enhanced rates now mentioned be, if necessary, continued for a further period of three years, with the view of preventing uncertainty in the last of the three first years.

5. If for any reason now known, or hereafter coming to the knowledge of the Lieutenant Governor, this price should appear inadequate for the purpose, he is requested to bring the same to the attention of this Government.

I have, &c.
(signed) C. H. Lushington,
Secretary to the Government of India.

(No. 987.)

COPY forwarded to the Board of Revenue, Lower Provinces, for information and guidance, with reference to their Junior Secretary's letters, Nos. 86 and 128, dated respectively the 13th March and 13th April last.

By order, &c.
(signed) H. Bell,
Under Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

No. 2.

REPLIES FROM THE AGENTS TO THE LETTER OF THE COMMISSION.

From R. N. Farquharson, Esq., Opium Agent of Behar, to W. S. Seton-Karr, Esq., President of the Indigo Commission, Fort William, No. 147, dated the 27th June 1860.

Sir,

WITH reference to your letter, No. 18 of the 17th ultimo, requesting me to furnish the Indigo Commission with clear and specific details on certain given points, I have the honour to subjoin two selected reports, one from Mr. R. King, sub-deputy opium agent of Patna, the other from Mr. J. G. Pughe, sub-deputy opium agent of Alleegunge, in the Chuprah district, which contain such full and accurate information on the whole subject under inquiry, that my own remarks, after answering the specific questions put by the Commission, may be confined to a few general observations on the similitude supposed to exist between the systems of indigo culture and management in the Lower Province of Bengal and the opium monopoly, as conducted in the province of Behar.

2. The contracts to cultivate poppy are called license and ikrarnamah. The former granted by the sub-deputy opium agent to the head man (called "khattadar") of a small body of cultivators (called a "khatta"); the latter received from the khattadar in his own name and in behalf of the individuals composing his khatta. They are executed annually for one year only, are signed and agreed to by both parties, sub-deputy agent and khattadar, and attested by two disinterested witnesses.

3. The collectors of districts are ex officio deputy opium agents; their authority is merely nominal. The sub-deputy agents, all of considerable departmental experience, are the working and responsible officers. There are in this agency 11 of this grade, with three European assistants, located in the larger districts, learning their duty, with a view to have men experienced in the department to fill vacancies.

4. The system of advances renders it imperative on the district officer to supervise the cultivation and crop. To assist him in this he has gomashias, mohurrirs, mutasuddees, and zilladars. A district is divided into kothees, each having a gomashia, or superintendent, with mohurrirs, and subordinate mutasuddees to keep the accounts, and zilladars to supervise the cultivation. A kothee is divided into zillahs, each under a zilladar, who is responsible for the well-being of his zillah, and for reporting every circumstance connected with the cultivators who have received advances, and their poppy crops, to the gomashia, or sub-deputy agent. These men are supervised immediately by the gomashia and mohurrirs, and the whole constantly visited and superintended by the sub-deputy agent, who marches about among them from November to March; and is periodically, when making advances, in actual contact with them and the khattadars. The advances are distributed by the sub-deputy agent in person to the khattadars, who are brought in by zillahs, as summoned by their zilladars. The sub-deputy agent reports fortnightly to the agent all that occurs worthy of notice in his district.

Appendix,
Part II.

5. This amount of supervision, which is never allowed to encroach on the general cultivation or concerns of the people, is found to be by no means harassing or vexatious; and I believe that the large proportion of trustworthy European superintendence given solely to this one duty prevents any oppression that is not immediately brought to notice and punished.

6. By a close and searching examination of each individual cultivator's produce by the district officer in person, and certain punishment, proportioned to the extent of adulteration, when the adulteration suspected by the district officer is confirmed and certified by the chemical and microscopical tests of the Sudder factory. Each parcel of opium produced by cultivators, however small, is separately examined, weighed, recorded, and paid

3. How is the produce secured from adulteration, and in whose presence is the amount which each cultivator may bring to the factory weighed and entered in the books, and are receipts given for the same, and, if so, by whom?

for at delivery by the sub-deputy agent in person, a trifling margin only being retained for final adjustment, after accurate ascertainment of quality and consistence by analysis, and on the steam tables of the Sudder factory at Patna.

7. The district officer is assisted by his sherishtadar (here called native assistant), by his gomashtas, and by other experienced judges of opium in his employ, is provided with iodine as a test for doubtful opium, and has other mechanical aids which, combined with experience of touch and smell, enable him in most instances to detect impurities. He has no power to punish for these himself, but sets aside all doubtful opium for after examination in the Sudder factory, where the amount of mulct or fine is finally decided on rules framed for that purpose.

8. The final adjustment is made in July, at the close of the season, at the Sudder weighment station of each district, and is regulated by receipts issued from the Sudder factory, all which pass through the agent's office, where they are carefully examined and checked prior to issue to the districts.

4. At the conclusion of the season's operations, how and where are the cultivators paid? and do the authorities take any means to prevent the lawful gains of the contractors from being misappropriated by the underlings of the various offices?

9. Every possible precaution is taken to prevent the lawful gains of the cultivators from being misappropriated by the underlings of the various offices. The ryots are individually told, when bringing in their opium for weighment, that they have nothing to pay to any one. Placards to the same effect are posted all over the cutcherries and weighment houses, and accounts open to and comprehensible by all are always in the hands of each khattadar, showing what each man's opium leaves and trash have been valued at, and what he has to receive from Government on that account.

10. But where gains are great, and the receiving parties grossly ignorant and wilful, no warning or advice will induce a departure from following in the accustomed grooves of hereditary speculation. That a portion of the money paid by Government for opium goes to fee the different grades of native officers employed in the management is undoubted, but that the cultivator in ordinary seasons retains a full and adequate remuneration for his land and labour is equally clear and undisputable. The money spent in these fees is deducted by the khattadars in their accounts with the individual cultivators, under the denomination of khurcha, or expenses, and distributed by them among the district amlas. The ryot has nothing to do with the matter beyond submitting to the deduction in his accounts, which he generally does most patiently. In the rare instances where complaint is made, the amount deducted is refunded to the complainant, and the parties implicated in the extortion promptly punished.

11. Defaulters who evade payment to their khattadars are sold up by the sub-deputy agent, with sanction of the agent, under Section XVI., Act XIII. of 1857. But time is always given for accidental default, and the law very seldom, indeed, put in force against a defaulter. The khattawaree system of mutual aid and security works perfectly and most beneficially for all parties concerned. The ryot is very rarely harassed for debt incurred through his opium venture, and the Government has no outstanding balance to confuse its accounts or obstruct its operations.

12. I forward two statements, I. and II., as required in your 7th para., exhibiting the results of operations with the contractors and cultivators in each sub-agency for the years 1856-57, 1857-58, and 1858-59. These years do not by any means afford the best criterion of results, but have been selected in preference to those suggested by the Commission, because they are continuous, because the records of some districts prior to 1856-57 were destroyed during the mutinies, and because I wish to show that the operations of the agency were not materially disarranged by the disturbances of 1857 and 1858; than which I may here mention, there could be no stronger proof of the cultivation of the poppy and preparation of opium being entirely voluntary, not to say popular, among the peasantry of Behar, 500,000 of whom attended as usual on their district officers in the Aprils of both years, bringing their opium for weighment, and each taking his own due only, without the slightest attempt to claim more or offer the least insult, or in any way annoy those they came in contact with. The people lost no opium and the Government no money during the entire period of disturbance, though some of the largest districts were in open rebellion nearly the whole time.

13. There are no suits, properly so called, for recovery of balances, but I furnish a statement No. III., showing the number of defaulters whose property has been distrained under Section XVI, Act XIII. of 1857, since its introduction. Prior to this Act no suits were ever instituted, nor have balances ever occurred. Recently only, when losses have been total, or very heavy

5. What system is pursued with defaulting ryots, or with ryots whose crop is insufficient to clear off their advances?

6. Calling for statements Nos. I. and II., showing the results as to profits and losses by the cultivators generally?

7. Calling for statement No. III., showing the number of ryots who had defaulted, and the number of suits instituted for the recovery of balances.

in entire khattas, through blight, or hail-storms, report is made to Government for entire remission, which is never refused. Where the injury has been less severe, time is given, generally till the next season's adjustments, by which the balances are invariably made good. Outstanding or accumulated balances have been unknown in the department since the introduction of the present system by the appointment of experienced sub-deputy opium agents of high character in 1836.

14. There would be no difficulty in winding up the affairs of this agency and squaring all its accounts without the loss of a rupee, within three months from the close of any season, with one year's notice of such being desirable.

19. The opium advances are made on a fair calculation of the expense the ryot is put to from time to time throughout the season, in paying his rent and preparing his poppy cultivation. It is made per beegah of a fixed immutable measurement,* and allowed for in the final account at a fixed rate † per seer of 80 sicca weight.

20. A ryot cultivating a beegah of poppy receives as a first advance for seed and ploughing, three rupees, in September probably. In October, he prepares his field and sows his seed. In December, if his seed comes up, he receives another advance of four rupees per beegah towards his rent, and weeding and watering. In February again, if his field is thriving, a further sum of four rupees per beegah for the same purposes; making 11 rupees per beegah.‡ In April he brings, say five seers of opium (which is a fair average yield throughout this agency), for which Government will pay him, at Rs. 3. 8. per seer, from Rs. 17. 8. to 20 rupees, according to the quality of the drug, to be decided entirely by European agency far removed from all party or one-sided influence. On delivery of this he receives from the sub-deputy agent a receipt for the amount of opium by weight and another five rupees probably in cash, leaving from Rs. 1. 8. to 4 rupees to be paid on final adjustment in July. In addition to this, he probably makes four rupees extra from his beegah by the sale to Government of leaves and trash, and to the oilman for oil-seed and fuel from the poppy stalks, besides what he can make if, at the probable expense of a richer crop of poppy, he chooses to overwork his land with rain crops of indigo, indian corn, and rye, which are all off the ground before the poppy season comes round again.

21. If this poppy crop fail him altogether he has still his other harvest to fall back on, and has received, perhaps, two advances amounting to six or seven rupees for his beegah, without interest, towards his rent and expenses. This sum, if the worst come to the worst, he can borrow from his mahajun to repay the sub-deputy agent in July, and does occasionally so borrow and repay, thus undergoing in July an operation which, without the monopoly advance, he would probably have had to submit to in the previous September, with one anna per rupee per mensem interest accumulating on the same.

22. Opium advances again are free to all, compulsory to none. The zemindar doubtless influences his ryots to engage in opium cultivation for a small portion of their land as security for his rents, but Government compulsion or influence with the ryot there is none whatever; in proof of which can be adduced the falling off in the poppy cultivation of one-fourth between the years 1854 and 1858, by which time, owing to several bad seasons, the low price paid by Government for opium and the great increase in price of other products, the cultivation had reduced itself from four lacs to three lacs of beegahs. The Government seeing this, and wishing to increase their provision of opium, at once raised their bid from Rs. 3. 4. to Rs. 3. 8. per seer, and now again to four rupees, which, with a good season or two, will soon raise the poppy cultivation to any extent desired.

23. The newspapers were at one time full of stories of the compulsory and oppressive nature of the opium cultivation. Gentlemen travelling dâk heard from their bearers stories of money being thrown, as opium advances, into ryots' houses, and the ryots thereby bound to cultivate countless fields of poppy at a ruinous loss to themselves; and that on refusal or remonstrance, they were seized and carried off to the opium cutcherries, and confined and beaten till their recusance was overcome.

24. These and other tales of the same tendency had but a short run, and have now entirely disappeared from the public journals. I need not say that they were false or that the traveller had been imposed on, probably by some disappointed bearer, who owing to bad character or previous default had applied in vain for a license and advance.

25. In support of my assertion that the Government system of advance and settlement of account is highly appreciated by the zemindars and freely accepted by the people, I annex a short correspondence I had with Mr. Louis Kalberer, an excellent missionary of these parts, himself extremely averse to the opium monopoly, but, who knows the people and their likes and dislikes thoroughly. As also a letter from Mr. Drummond, an indigo planter of Shahabad, written on the occasion of a complaint made against him by the sub-deputy agent of Shahabad, for absorbing poppy lands into his indigo cultivation.

26. I could produce letters from all the chief zemindars of Behar decrying the abolition of the opium monopoly and the cessation of money advances, which, conducted on an equitable system, can be as beneficial as, when used as a means of coercion, they can be oppressive and odious.

27. In conclusion, I would refer you for further information regarding the details of management of this agency to the rules for the guidance of sub-deputy agents in the distribution of advances and management of the poppy cultivation issued by Mr. C. Bury, opium agent, on the 12th July 1851; to "the rules for the guidance of the sub-deputy opium agents relative to receiving, sorting, weighing, and challaning opium," circulated by Mr. William Dent, opium agent, on the 15th of March 1841, No. 6, and followed up by a further letter, No. 26 of the 2d June 1841, with forms and minute instructions for

* Five and-a-half haths to the luggi, equal to 27,225 feet to the beegah. Vide Behar Opium Agency Circular of the 10th July 1835.

† Fixed for a certain standard, but fluctuating according to quality.

‡ Twelve rupees is the extreme limit allowed.

Appendix,
Part II.

for their guidance; to an elaborate memorandum by Mr. Oldfield, dated the 29th October 1845; to selections from the Records of the Bengal Government, No. I. on the Poppy Cultivation, by W. C. B. Eatwell, M. D., 1851; and No. XXV., Notes on the Patna Opium Agency, by Dr. R. Lyell, page 77.

28. I would also call your attention to a correspondence of 1836, between Messrs. A. and J. Trotter, opium agents of Behar and Benares, the Board of Customs, Salt and Opium, and the Supreme Government, relative to a complaint by some of the Tirhoot indigo planters against the Opium Department, alleging forced cultivation of the poppy to the detriment of indigo cultivation.

29. The whole of these papers will be found in the Calcutta Board of Revenue Office.

I have, &c.
(signed) R. N. Farquharson, Opium Agent.

ANNEXURES.

From R. King, Esq., Sub-deputy Opium Agent of Patna, to R. N. Farquharson, Esq., Opium Agent, Behar, No. 37, dated Patna, 12 June 1860.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your circular letter, No. 17 of the 2d instant, forwarding a copy of a letter to your address from the President of the Indigo Commission, No. 18 of the 17th ultimo; and in compliance with the requisition of that gentleman, I beg to supply you with the information he has called for in regard to the system under which the cultivation of the poppy is carried on in this district.

Khatawaree system.

2. Before doing so, however, I think it would be advisable to explain, for the information of the Indigo Commission, the exact nature of the khatawaree system of advances which prevails in this agency, as also to show its practical working, which I believe to be much the same in all the districts of the agency.

Synonymes for the term khattadar.

3. The terms khattadar, lumberdar, bundiswar, muhto, and khuttait are synonymous, and are all used to designate the middleman who engages directly with the Government for the cultivation of the poppy. As in this district this individual is known by the name of khattadar, I shall speak of him only under that appellation.

Nature and duties of the office of khattadar.

4. The khattadar, then, is the agent and representative of the cultivators, by whom he is elected, and all money transactions between them and the Government pass through his hands. But, sometimes he is chosen by the department, with the consent, however, of the assamees. In all possible cases I prefer there being two men to each khatta; as in the event of one being ill, absent, or dead, the other can carry on the work; besides, with two men in a khatta, balances are more easily realised should they accrue. The men selected for this office are, in all possible cases, taken from among the most respectable parties in the village. But no one who is either a servant of the zemindar or ticcadar of the village, or closely connected with either party, is, except in special cases, considered eligible; as such individuals are sure to play into the hands of the zemindar or ticcadar in respect to the advances which they would periodically receive from the Government, and the cultivators would not always dare to complain of their misconduct. Each khattadar gives security in the person of another khattadar, who is personally responsible for all balances, however accruing, due by his principal.

Khattadar's security.

Periodical payments with rate and dates of same.

5. In this district there are five payments made to the khattadars in the course of the year. The first is generally made in September, when an advance of four rupees per beegah* is given.

The second is usually paid in the end of December and beginning of January, and it is regulated by the appearance of the crop, and never exceeds three rupees and eight annas per beegah.

The third is issued in the latter part of March, and is regulated by the taidad or estimate that has been just then made of the expected produce. This advance does not exceed three rupees per beegah.

The fourth takes place on the delivery of the opium in April, and is regulated by the quantity of the drug delivered, the cultivators being paid up to within a few annas per seer of the full value of their opium.

And the fifth† and last is made generally about July, or as soon as the accounts can be prepared for the final adjustment. At this payment the khattadars receive the balance due to them, and they are at the same time furnished with a memorandum in Nagree, signed by me, to enable them to settle with each of their assamees.

A translation of one of these accounts is given on the following page: and it will be seen that the poorest cultivator has thus the means of ascertaining the exact amount that his khattadar has to account to him for.

Record of payments.

6. The details of the first payment are entered on the back of the agreement (an original one is herewith annexed), and show the name of each individual cultivator, the land engaged for by the khattadar on his behalf, and the amount of the first advance received thereon. But the subsequent payments show only the date, the amount paid, together with the khattadar's signature and that of his witnesses.‡ In each

* The standard beegah an area of 27,225 square feet.

† The final payment for one year and the first payment for another are sometimes made simultaneously, but only under an express permission to do so.

‡ The final payment is an exception to the latter part of this rule; as on that occasion the signatures of the khattadar and his witnesses will be found in the farkhutti, or release given by the khattadar at the final adjustment of his account.

each and every case, however, the whole of the money is paid to the khattadar; but any one of his assamees can have his individual share of such money paid to him, in my presence, if he so wish, and a verbal request to that effect is all that is necessary to have this done.

Appendix,
Part II.

7. Although every individual cultivator's opium, leaves, &c., are separately weighed and recorded, and the price for the same separately made out; yet, in settling with the khattadar for the entire deliveries of his khatta, the balance is struck in a lump, and the amount of such balance either paid to, or taken from him, as the case may be. In the case of the khatta mentioned above, there is a net balance of five rupees seven annas and three pie due the khattadar, which would be paid to him. But if it so happened that two of his assamees owed him, say the sum of six rupees, he would obviously be short, by that amount, of the sum he had to pay his remaining four cultivators. In such a case, if he were a man of substance, he would at once make good this sum out of his own pocket, charging the defaulters; perhaps, interest, according to the custom of the village, till they repaid him; or he might borrow the money, when he would of course charge the defaulters with whatever interest he might himself have to pay.

Mode of balancing accounts with khattadar.

Mode of khattadars settling with his assamees.

MEMORANDUM of ACCOUNT of Chuckowree Koonjah Khattadar, No. 16, of Mouza Russulpoor, Pergunnah Azimabad, for 1858-59, or 1266 F. S. Kotee Phoolwarry.

1.	2.	3.	4.	5.	6.	7.	8.	9.	10.	11.	12.	13.	14.
Number of Jar.	Names of Assamees.	Weight of Opium, as per Kotee Weight Book.	Rate per Seer payable, as per Column 23 of Adjustment Table.	Value of Opium in Column 3.	Leaves, as per Columns 3, 4, 5, 7, 8, and 9, of Adjustment Account.			Value of Leaves, as per Column 10 of Adjustment Account.	Trash at Four Annas per Maund, as per Column 3 of Adjustment Account.	Value of Trash, as per Column 5 of Adjustment Account.	Total Value of Opium Leaves and Trash in Columns 5, 9, and 11.	Signature of Assamees.	Signature of Witness.
		Mds. s. c.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Mds. s. c.	Mds. s. c.	Mds. s. c.	Rs. a. p.	Mds. s. c.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.
92	Bundhoo -	0 0 11	3 11 8	2 9 -	- -	0 0 2	- -	- - 4	- -	- -	2 9 4
	Milun Singh	0 1 1	ditto -	3 15 5	0 0 4	- -	- -	- 1 -	- -	- -	4 - 5
	Balbhudder	0 1 2	ditto -	4 3 1	- -	0 0 4	- -	- - 8	- -	- -	4 3 9
	Luchmun -	0 1 2	ditto -	6 8 5	- -	0 0 6	- -	- 1 1	- -	- -	6 9 6
91	Chuckowree	0 2 7	3 9 3	8 11 7	0 1 8	- -	- -	- 6 -	- -	- -	9 1 7
84	Gopi Passi -	0 0 12	3 7 7	2 9 8	- -	0 0 2	- -	- - 4	- -	- -	2 10 -
148	Khoorchun -	0 0 3	3 8 11	- 10 8	- -	- -	- -	- -	- -	- -	- 10 8
		0 7 6	14 10 3	29 9 6	0 1 12	0 0 14	- -	- 12 3	- -	- -	30 7 3
Auruth - - -											- 3 6
Deduct advances made - - -											30 - 9
Balances due to Khattada - - -											25 - -
											5 7 3

(signed) R. King,
Sub-Deputy Opium Agent.

8. But if, on the other hand, he were not well off, if, too, the season had been a bad one, both as regards the poppy and other crops, and he could not get any credit in his village, he would then have no alternative left him but to collect his dues from his defaulting assamees (in doing which he would have the aid of the department), and to pay off the claims of his remaining assamees as he did so. These last would meanwhile be kept without their money, though they get it eventually. This liability of the assamees to be kept for a time out of their dues, as also a similar liability in the case of the balance due by any khattadar being recovered from the money due to the khatta of his surety,* is the extent of the mutual responsibility existing under the khattawaree system among the cultivators of any one khatta.

Extent of mutual responsibility among the assamees of any one khatta.

9. With

* Vide para. 19 and note.

Appendix,
Part II.

Liability of khattadar for bad balances.
Protection of the Government against balances.

Remuneration of khattadar.

Nature of cess called khurcha, and how levied.

Light in which it is viewed by the people.

Difficulty of preventing its exaction.

Further per-quisite of khattadar.

Risks regarding balances.

Opinion as to the practical working of the khattawaree system.

Reason for superiority of khattawaree over assameewar
system.

Advantages to the cultivators of the Government system of advances.

9. With regard to balances accruing by the death or absconding of assamees, it is the practice for the khattadar, agreeably to the terms of his engagement, to bear them himself, though sometimes this loss is ratably shared among the cultivators of the khatta. On this point, however, the department does not interfere, except it be to protect a complaining assamee. But the Government is protected against all* risk, except in the extreme case of an utter failure of the entire cultivation of a khatta, as well as that of the khatta of its surety.

10. The only remuneration that the khattadar draws from the Government for all his trouble, risk, and the expenses consequent on his periodical visit to the station, is a commission, or arhut, as it is termed, of 1 rupee per maund on the opium delivered by him. This sum is manifestly insufficient to indemnify the khattadar for the time expended by him in visiting the station five times a year on the business of his khatta, and for the expenses he is put to while there. I imagine, therefore, that when this sum was first fixed it was intended to be looked upon rather as a recognition of the appointment than as an equivalent for the services expected of it; for the office is one that is much coveted by many of the cultivators, to whom it gives a status and influence in their village that, without it, they would not possess, and to some of whom it is also a source of considerable profit, as I will now proceed to show.

11. A cess, known by the name of khurcha, has long been prevalent in every district of this agency. It is levied by the khattadar from his assamees, generally at the final adjustment with them of the year's accounts. In some districts this cess is calculated on the quantity of opium produced,† but in most on the quantity of land cultivated with the poppy; and it varies from eight annas to one rupee eight annas and two rupees, and sometimes to even two rupees eight annas per beegah, according to the good or bad qualities of the khattadar, and the readiness of his assamees to give in to, or to resist his exactions.

12. This cess is not, of course, recognised by the department, but it is of such long standing, and it so completely falls in with the genius and habits of the people, as also their ways of thinking, that it has come to be looked upon as an institution of the country. So much so, indeed, is this the case, that a cultivator will never complain against his khattadar for levying it, except he have a serious quarrel with him, and even then he does not complain because he thinks himself ill-used on this particular point (on which he feels certain of redress from me), but rather because he imagines that the doing so will assist him in obtaining redress for the real grievance he may have against his khattadar.

13. I have in vain tried to put a stop to this exaction by telling the assamees not to give their khattadar credit for it, further than to reimburse him for the fair and proper expenses of the khatta, but they still go on paying it; so long, however, as it is not excessive, and the amount levied only reimburses the khattadar for the expenses he is actually put to, as also for the risks to which the nature of his office renders him liable, no reasonable objection can well be urged against it. But in most, if not all the districts of this agency, this cess has assumed dimensions that allow of those large douceurs being paid out of it to the amla, which the customs of the country, and the habits of the people, render it next to impossible to prevent. Besides this cess, the khattadars appropriate, with the consent in most cases, however, of their assamees, the value of the “khoorchun”;‡ but this item has not, during the last few years, averaged more than Rs. 2. 8. per khatta in this district.

14. In ordinary seasons there is never any fear of, or difficulty about, balances, for the rates § of advances render the accruing of balances almost an impossibility except in cases of ryots absconding or dying. But even then, more especially if the land should happen to have been sown, men are almost always to be found ready to take up the field of the deceased or absconded cultivator, with all its liabilities. In bad seasons, however, such as the two last have been, the case is somewhat different, for no amount of precaution will guard against the consequences of blight and unseasonable weather.

15. Such, then, is the practical working of the khattawaree system. Whatever objections may be urged against the system, I would state it as my opinion, formed after an experience of 22 years' service in this department, that no other system could be devised that would work nearly so well for all parties concerned as the khattawaree system has done, and still does. By the present system I have to deal with about 2,400 separate accounts at each periodical payment, while by the assameewar method this number would, on the present extent of cultivation, be increased to about 33,000. Not only would the work never be got through, but if the assameewar system were to be adopted, the immediate effect would be that all the smaller, and many of the larger, cultivators living at any distance from the Sudder station would throw up the cultivation of the poppy, as each man could not possibly afford to come in to the station several times a year for his individual advances, which to the cultivator is one of the great attractions of our system. The subjoined extract from my letter No. 48, of the 10th September 1867, will show what an important element these advances form in the success || that has, for a long series of years, attended the operations of the opium department. “In this district there is an almost universal understanding between the zemindar and the poppy ryot, that the latter shall pay as rent to the former all the money he receives periodically from the Government as advances; while the zemindar shall let him house his crops, instead of forcing him to sell them to pay up his rent, and often at ruinous rates. This mutually accommodating arrangement exists, I believe, though perhaps in a more or less modified

* I believe that a proposal recently made by me for all bad and irrecoverable balances being borne by the Government instead of by the khattadar as heretofore, is under the consideration of the authorities.

† This is the least oppressive plan, as in a bad season the amount levied is proportionately less.

‡ Opium obtained from the scrapings of the opium pans.

§ Vide para. 5; also column 9 of Statement C.

|| Vide Statement C.

modified form throughout the Behar agency, and so admirably have I found it to work, with proper looking after, for the benefit of the assamees, that in this district the periodical advances are purposely so timed as to fall in with the quarterly rent days. No sooner is an advance paid, than the khattadar, with the full assent of his assamees, makes it over to his zemindar for rent, and he again, within 24 hours, pays this money in as revenue to the Government."

16. I now proceed to reply to the queries contained in Mr. Seton-Karr's letter, in the order in which they are put.

17. Contracts for the cultivation of the poppy are entered into annually, and generally about the month of September, with the khattadars or middle-men, and a khatta may consist of one or any number of ryots; but khattas of 15 to 20 beegahs are found to be of the most convenient size. As, however, the poppy crop is off the ground in all March, the department does not exercise any control over a ryot's field after that month, and he is free to sow it with any other crop that he likes. The majority of the cultivators sow Indian corn; but some few sow indigo,* which crop being irrigated, will, under favourable circumstances, give them two good cuttings between April and October (when the poppy is sown); others sow cheena, a crop which ripens in about eight weeks; while the minority who may be said to be the more substantial ryots, give their lands a fallow, and keep ploughing them incessantly during the rains. It is such lands which generally yield the highest rates of produce.

Nature of
khattadar's
contract.

18. A translation of the agreement entered into by the khattadar, as also by his surety, is annexed to this letter. In this document the khattadar acknowledges the amount of the advance paid him, and binds himself to cultivate properly the land he has engaged for in his own and his assamees' names; also that he will sow no other crop with his poppy; and that he will deliver in a pure state, at a certain price, and by a given date, whatever opium may be produced; that he will be personally responsible for all monies paid him as advances, as also for all balances that may accrue; that he will in no way act contrary to the provisions of Act XIII. of 1857; and that he will supply leaves† according to indent.

Nature of
khattadar's
agreement.

19. The surety, who is invariably a khattadar, makes himself personally responsible for all his principal's balances, arising from whatever cause; and he gives the sub-deputy opium agent the power of selling his property to make good such balances. This officer has, however, the power, but which is very rarely exercised, of recovering the balance from any money that may be due, collectively, to the khatta of the surety‡; but in such cases the surety binds himself to make good the sum thus deducted, to his shikmee assamees.

Nature of surety's agreement.

20. A license, corresponding to the terms of the agreement, is given to each khattadar on the execution of his engagement; but this license contains an additional clause, to the effect that if the khattadar should not be satisfied with the classification the sub-deputy opium agent may make of his opium, he will be at liberty to take it to the Sudder factory, and have it classified there. The license also contains a list of the cultivators, the amount of land to be cultivated by each, and the amount of the first advance payable to each individual. Each subsequent advance is noted on the license, but not in detail.

Nature of license given to khattadar.

21. With regard to the execution of the khattadar's agreement and the security bond at its foot, I would observe that these documents are lithographed on unstamped paper. The amla are responsible for their being correctly filled up, as also for the signatures of both principals and witnesses being properly executed, but a Government servant is never allowed to be a witness. All the agreements executed each day are brought to me at the time of attesting the payments, and I then put my initials on them to prevent their being tampered with. But I do not ask the parties if they have executed these documents, as my attestation of the payments is virtually an attestation of the agreement, which document, according to the practice of the department, is not binding upon the khattadar until he has been actually paid his money, and acknowledged before me to having received it. I then enter in English figures, in the vernacular rokur§ or cash book, opposite the khattadar's name, and invariably with my own hand, the amount that the man may have acknowledged to have received. The transaction is then complete, and the sub-deputy opium agent is then in a position to state, on oath if necessary, that so-and-so was paid such a sum on a certain date.

Formalities
under which khattadar's and surety's agreements are executed, and all payments made.

22. The deputy-agent has nothing whatever to do with the management of the district, which rests entirely with the sub-deputy agent. The latter officer should personally inspect the whole of the cultivation of his district, if possible, during the cold season, that is, from the 15th October to the 15th March following. If he were not to do so, there would no doubt be a great deal of what used to be known in former years as "paper cultivation," for no where will the cultivator get money on such easy terms as he does from the Government. While making his tour the sub-deputy agent forms his opinion of the crop, thereby checking the report he receives periodically from his subordinates. He also tests, here and there, the measurements, with a view of ascertaining their general accuracy. He likewise sees that the cultivation is properly attended|| to; though he has but rarely, at least in this district, to find fault on this head, as the great majority of the assamees cultivate their poppy fields as we do our gardens. And, lastly, he has the opportunity of unrestricted intercourse with the people at their

Duties of Sub-deputy Opium Agent while on his tours.

* This crop is called Jummowa, and the planter gives an advance of six rupees per beegah (27,225 square feet) on such lands, which in both cuttings yield 40, 60, 100, and sometimes even 150 bundles. The value of this produce at six bundles per rupee is from Rs. 6. 10. 8. to twenty-five rupees. The bundle is measured with a chain of five and a half cubits. But the extent of Jummowa indigo in this district does not exceed 500 beegahs.

† These are their cakes, like chupatties, made from the petals of the flower; and they form the shell of the opium cake. The prices paid for leaves are ten, eight, and five rupees per maund for the first, second, and third sorts respectively. A beegah can yield from two seers to fifteen seers, according to the industry of the cultivators.

‡ A proposal recently made by me to do away with this power is now, I believe, under the consideration of the authorities.

§ The final payment only is not attested on the rokur, but on the adjustment statement.

|| The earlier the poppy is sown the more productive and the less liable to blight it is. In seasons where there is but slight moisture in the soil, and the cultivators are behind hand with their rubdee sowings, I generally experience some difficulty in getting the poppy sown as early as I wish.

Appendix,
Part II.

their homes, and of letting them see that he is ready to hear anything that they might have been afraid to tell him during their visits to the station.

Exactions by the native subordinates.

23. So long, however, as the mass of the people remain as ignorant as they now are, and look upon the amla as beings whom it is their duty to propitiate whenever they may visit their villages, so long will it be impossible to protect the cultivators altogether from undue exactions on the part of the native subordinates. The measurements, which take place in November and December, and the taidad or estimate of the produce, which is made in February and March, neither of which operations can be dispensed with, are the two great occasions on which the people are most liable to be harassed by the native amla, from the gomashia down to the zillahdar. If these people do not get the customary offerings, they then frighten the cultivators by telling them, either that their cultivation is short, and they will have to be sent in to the station, or that their crop has been estimated at 8 seers or 10 seers per beegah, when it ought strictly to have been put down, and perhaps in reality has been, at a much lower rate.

24. With the timid and ignorant this kind of language has the desired effect; but the more intelligent and independent khattadars do not heed it. All, however, supply the amla with food so long as they remain at their villages; and they would feel themselves slighted, if such entertainment, as their means enabled them to offer, were rejected.

Further exactions by native subordinates.

25. Another source of annoyance to the people used to be their sowing safflower, cumin seed, garlic, and other herbs, with their poppy. All this likewise gave the amla an excellent handle for threatening to report the offending parties. But, in this district, this practice has quite gone out,* as the people find it so much more to their benefit, in every way, to keep their fields as clean as possible, and to sow their little patches of herbs separately.

Remedy against exactions.

26. The only remedy that the cultivator has against such vexatious interference is to sow his full quantity of land, to keep his field clean, to prepare his opium and leaves properly, and then to let the amla do their worst. I have constantly inculcated upon the assamees that they have nothing to fear so long as they only act up to their engagements. But I also hold the zillahdar responsible for any oppression that may be practised by any one within his division, that he does not either try to prevent, or does not tell me of. These men get four rupees per month; but they have much in their power as regards the good treatment of the ryot. Where they behave well and kindly to the ryots, their perquisites are even then very handsome, consequently the appointment is much coveted; and I keep these men in check by removing them to a burkundazeship on four rupees or five rupees a month—but where they will get no perquisites—when I have reason to know that they have been misbehaving, or allowing others to do so, but where I may not have proof sufficient to warrant my dismissing them.

Checks upon adulteration of opium by cultivators.

27. With regard to the checks we possess against the adulteration of the opium, the sub-deputy agent must trust mainly to his own vigilance and knowledge of the drug; for if the cultivators find out that he can be easily imposed upon, they will make it worth the while of the purkhees or native examiners, who are employed at the weighments, to run the risk of passing their bad opium as good; and they will adulterate their opium extensively, as the opium once taken from the cultivator as good is now paid for at full price, even though it should be subsequently deemed liable to mulct, or confiscation even, at the Sudder factory.

Liability of even good judges of opium to be deceived.

28. But if, on the other hand, the cultivators see that the sub-deputy agent has a good knowledge of opium, and that he is determined to put down adulteration by every means in his power, such as by stopping the cultivation, withholding advances, and the like, they will be very careful in tampering with their produce, still, some few will adulterate it, but in such a manner as to deceive sometimes the most experienced judge of the drug. The most experienced examiner of opium known in India was, I have reason to believe, Dr. J. Corbet, formerly the principal assistant of this agency; and I have repeatedly heard that gentleman allow that, as far as flavour, colour, and grain could be considered a criterion—and this is all that the district officer has in most cases to go by—he might very easily be deceived by a sample of opium that had been carefully, and not over-adulterated.

Narrative of opium weigh-ments.

29. In order to furnish the Indigo Commission with the information required by the latter part of paragraph 4 of Mr. Seton-Karr's letter, in regard to the weighment of the cultivator's opium, its entry on the books, and receipt for the same, it is necessary to give a narrative, which I will endeavour to condense as much as possible, of our system of weighments. The rules under which these most important operations are carried out, are laid down in Mr. Dent's Circular, No. 6, of the 15th March 1841; and I believe that I express but the opinion of every officer who is familiar with those rules, when I state it as my conviction that they have been found to answer admirably every purpose for which they were framed.

Summoning cultivators by zillahs.

30. The date for commencing the weighments having been fixed, as many zillahdars as there are to be scales at work† are directed to have their assamees in attendance on the day before. The furthest zillahs are, as a general rule, those first weighed off. The quantity expected from each zillahdar's division being ascertained from the taidad, and a certain amount allowed for each day's weighment, it is thus ascertained on what dates each remaining zillahdar will be required to attend with the opium of his division; and he is warned, and then arranges accordingly. By this plan the detention of the cultivators at the Sudder station, for the weighment of their opium, is reduced to a minimum.

31. As

* The red sag alone is allowed to be sown; its leaves form a shade for the tender poppy plant from the heat of the sun, and as it is all rooted up for their own use by the weathers, its being sown does good rather than harm.

† In this district twelve scales are used at one time, and the weighments occupy on an average twenty-five days.

31. As the khattadars attend on their being summoned, so are their names entered in the "attendance book," and their opium is weighed in the order in which their names are recorded in this book; but a khattadar attending out of his turn would have to wait till it came. The order of the "attendance book" is, however, sometimes broken, but only for special and strong reasons, such as a death or sickness, in the khatta, or a fire in the village.

32. From 15 to 35 maunds can be weighed at each scale daily, according as the several parcels of opium are small or large: Bearing this in mind, the gomashtha tells off to each zillahdar a certain number of khattas for the morrow's weighment. In the afternoon, the opium of these khattas is brought by their assamees within the weighing premises*; and once in there, it is not allowed to pass out again without a special order from me. The purkhia then turns over and leisurely examines the opium in each plate, immediately reporting to me any that he considers adulterated; such opium is either then and there disposed of by myself, or placed under the sentry's care for the night, its owner retaining charge of it. The gomashtha supervises the purkhia's operations as far as his other duties will admit of his doing so; but neither he nor the purkhia sorts the different plates, all of which remain for the night within the weighing enclosure; such of their owners, however, as choose, staying with them, and others going outside.

33. At day-light next morning every man whose opium (already examined by the purkhia) is to be weighed the same day, stands by his plate, and from two given points, about 40 feet apart, 12 zillahdars arrange, in as many diverging lines, the assamees and opium of the 12 khattas first for the day's weighment. At each of these two points a chair is placed for myself, from each side of which three lines of men and plates diverge. On taking my seat, all the people are made to sit down, the khattadars at the head of each line, and nearest to me; and the examination and classification of the opium by myself then begins. The jemadar of the guard and the chuprassies maintain order among the people all the time.

34. A zillahdar then takes up a portion of the opium in the nearest plate, and I examine it. I then call out, loud enough to be heard by all who are interested, the sort† in which I class it; and a chuprassy, who is seated immediately in front of me, marks with an iron style the assamee's plate accordingly. The marks used by me consist of horizontal, vertical, or slanting lines, any one of which can be made with great rapidity; and the particular combination of these lines, which has been adopted for distinguishing the different sorts, puts it out of the power of the cultivator to add to or alter any of the marks, except to his own detriment.

35. The plate of opium which has just been examined and classed by me is then passed down by the assamees to the end of the line (except I consider it adulterated, when it is sent at once and direct to the scale, weighed, and sealed up separately), and another one brought forward in its place. This process is repeated till the whole khatta is finished, when the assamees take away their plates to a spot where a ticca mohurrir immediately makes a record of the number of plates of each kind in the khatta. This is intended as a further check against the cultivators altering the purrukh marks. A copy of this record, on a slip of paper, is then given to the khattadar, and that forms his pass to the scale, where he has to account for the exact number of plates of each sort, as specified in the pass.

36. But as I can examine and class the different plates of opium much faster than they can be passed up and down the line of assames of a single khatta, I examine always the opium of three khattas at a time, taking a plate of each in succession. This is done without there being the slightest confusion. As a khatta is finished, so is its place supplied by another; every fresh khattadar learning from his zillahdar where to arrange his opium. In this way I move from one chair to the other, till the whole of the opium intended for that day's weighment is examined; and this duty takes me from three to five hours daily, according to circumstances.

37. While examining and classing the opium, my attention is devoted exclusively to that duty. Meanwhile the opium that has been passed by me is being weighed, and the sheristadar, or native assistant, as he is termed in this department, together with the several gomashthas supervise, until I have leisure to do so myself, these operations, which are conducted in the following manner.

38. For each scale the following establishment is allowed, and it is supervised by the gomashtha:

One mohurrir (who must be a permanent servant), to write the weighment book, which is the record of the weighments.

One muttasuddi (who is a temporary servant), to write the jar and ticket book, as it is called. The object of this book is to prevent more than the regulated quantity of one maund being put into each jar, as also to have an immediate means of discovering the owners of the opium in every individual jar; it is also of great use in preparing the details of the memorandum which is given to the khattadar at the final adjustment of his account. (Vide para. 5.)

One muttasuddi (who is also a temporary servant) to write the receipt for his opium, that is given to the khattadar, and which is signed only by the gomashtha.

One weighman.

Three karkhunias, or coolies, to fill the jar.

One purkhia.

For each sort there is a separate jar. All jars are previously weighed by a responsible officer, who writes their weight on them, and as they are used, this weight is tested by the weighman of the scale at which they may severally happen to be used, and the jar then gets its number, by which it is distinguished in all subsequent operations.

39. When

Appendix, Part II.

Attendance book and its objects.

Preparatory examination of opium by Purkhia.

Preparations for the Purrukh by the Sub-deputy Opium Agent.

Purrukh by Sub-deputy Opium Agent.

Object of the particular marks used.

Record of the different sorts, and object thereof.

Khattadar's pass ticket.

Number of khattas examined together.

Native assistant's duty while Sub-deputy Opium Agent is engaged.

Establishment for each scale, with their duties.

* A low wall encloses these premises, and sentries are placed at every door. The lookers-on outside the enclosure wall can see all that is going on within it.

† It would only add unnecessarily to the length of this report, if I were here to enter into any details as to the principles on which this classification is made. They will be found laid down in Circular No. 6, of 15 March 1841.

Appendix,
Part II.

Mode of weighing.

39. When every one has taken his appointed place, the khattadar gives his pass ticket (paragraph 35) to the moharrir, who weighs his lowest sort first. The lid of the jar of that sort is then opened, all the rest remaining closed, to prevent the opium of one sort being put into the jar of another sort; still such accidents will sometimes occur. One of the three karkhunias having then put the assamee's opium in the weighing* pan, passes it to the weighman, who weighs it. After adjusting the weight, the weighman takes both his hands off the scales to let the assamees, who are seated immediately in front of him, see that all is fair, and then, in a loud voice, he calls out the weight, which the three amlu at the scale simultaneously enter in their respective books and receipt, and then immediately compare with each other.† The kharkhunias at the same moment calls out the sort, and the opium is then put by the other two kharkhunias into the jar of that sort. In this manner all the plates of the khatta are in their turn disposed of. They are then scraped by their owners, and the joint produce of this scraping, which is very small, is weighed under the name of khoorchun in the khattadar's name only.

Use of jar or ticket book exemplified.

40. When a jar is nearly full, the muttasuddi, who writes the jar or ticket book, tells the weighman the exact quantity required to make up the maund. Supposing this quantity to be three seers, and that the next parcel of opium to be weighed is eight seers, then three seers of it will be put into the jar about to be filled, and the remaining five seers into a fresh jar, the entries in the books and papers being made in corresponding manner. The moment that a jar is filled, it is removed to the large testing scale, any trifling excess over, or deficiency‡ of the maund that it ought to contain, being noted in the testing register. But if the testing scale shows that there has been some error in the detail weighments, then the matter is inquired into by me, and disposed of according to the circumstances of the case. But if the detail weighments prove all correct, then the jar is immediately closed and sealed, and despatched in due course (generally 100 at a time), to the sudder factory for the final examination there. After a jar is once closed, it is never opened again, except for special reasons, and then even only in my presence.

Advantages of the system pursued to the cultivators.

41. From the foregoing details it will be seen that every cultivator knows the date when he is required to attend with his opium, and the turn in which his khatta will be weighed; that the various operations of examining, classing, and weighing his opium, as also of testing and closing the jar containing it, are carried on in his presence, and in that of the hundreds of other cultivators who are in attendance at the same time; that the classing of the opium has been made my own special duty; that all the plates are marked in my presence; and, consequently, that the amplest justice can be secured to the humblest cultivator in every one of these operations, without his having to propitiate a single individual among the amlu or underlings of the office, if he does not choose to do so. Indeed, notices are posted in various parts of the weighing premises strictly prohibiting the people from coming inside them with money on their persons. A search is also made at the doors when the cultivators come inside, and any money found on them is taken away and kept in deposit till their khatta has been weighed. The weighmen, however, are apt to play tricks; but the assamees, who are seated immediately in front of them, are enjoined to look well after their own interests. Every man having weighed his opium at his home, knows exactly how much it ought to weigh at our scales; and he has the power, allowed him by me, of stopping the scale the moment he may have any doubts of the accuracy of the declared weight of his opium. However unreasonable such doubts might ultimately prove to have been, no amlu, from the native assistant downwards, would dare to refuse stopping the scale, if any assamee required it to be done.

Precautions against cultivators tampering with establishment.

Privilege of any cultivator to stop the scales.

Khattadar's receipt for his opium.

42. The moment that the opium of a khatta has been weighed, the assamees leave for their homes; but the khattadar waits to receive his money,§ which he generally does within a day or two afterwards, when the receipt for his opium, signed by the gomashta, is also given to him. I do not sign this receipt myself, because I sign the weightment book, which corresponds with it. Moreover, I should not have time to sign more papers than I already do, for the totals, in English figures, have to be written by my own hand, under the totals (in the vernacular) of every khatta before I leave office; and this I am rarely able to do before 6.30 P.M., so long as the weightments last. During this time the office hours are from 5½ A.M. to 6½ P.M., with an interval of two hours for meals.

Frauds practised at the weighments.

43. Having given a summary of the system under which the weighments are conducted, it would, I imagine, be foreign to the object of the Indigo Commission's inquiries, were I to go into any details as to the frauds usually practised. A full account, however, of these frauds and their checks may be found in paras. 35 to 46 of a paper dated 15th August 1845, and submitted by me to your predecessor, Mr. Oldfield. I would, however, make a few general remarks on this subject, with a view of showing what is done to protect the cultivators, as much as possible, against the knavery of the underlings of the department.

Checks against frauds.

44. Changing the entire establishment at each scale daily is an effectual check against anything like systematic collusion. The weighmen and purkhias are changed daily, or oftener if necessary; and the karkhunias also. None of these men are ever allowed to pass out of the weighing house, on the plea of thirst, or having to obey a call of nature, but in reality to play tricks, without first obtaining permission to do so. Suddenly stopping the weighments, and then comparing the contents of the open jars with the books, is a very good check upon the weighment; for certain frauds can only be detected in this manner, and not always even then. But no check is equal to a rigid superintendence by the sub-deputy

* Three copper weighing pans of uniform weight are used at each scale.

† If, as it will sometimes happen, a mistake be made, its correction must be attested by the Sub-deputy Opium Agent. This rule applies to all corrections.

‡ If the deficiency exceeds four chittacks, I often make the weighman pay for it out of his bonus.

§ Its payment is attested by me in the manner described in para. 21.

deputy agent himself of all matters. If to this be added a conviction on the part of his subordinates, that he is thoroughly familiar with all details, and that he intuitively, as it were, knows where to look for the source of any fraud that may be committed, there will be then left very little, if any, cause for complaint.

45. With regard to the adjustment of the cultivators' accounts at the end of the season, and the means taken to prevent their being deprived by any one of any portion of their just dues, I would beg to refer the Commission for all particulars on these points to paras. 5, 6, and 21 of this Report. The statement of his account, given to each khattadar at the final payment, puts it out of his, or any one's power to withhold from a single assamee a fraction of his dues, and although the payments are invariably made to the khattadar himself, yet, if an assamee does not trust him, he will accompany him to the station, and verbally ask me to let him receive his share in my presence, which is invariably done. All payments are made at the station, and attested by me in the manner described in para. 21 of this letter. The system, in accordance with which the cultivators' accounts are made out and adjusted, is laid down in Mr. Dent's Circular, No. 26, of the 2d June 1841. And I think I may here safely state, that it is to the manner in which the district officers have given effect to the rules laid down in this circular, as well as to those in the Weighment Circular, No. 6, of the 15th March 1841, previously mentioned, the great success* that has attended the operations of this agency for a series of years past may be mainly attributed.

Appendix,
Part II.

Final balances how paid, and the dues of cultivators secured to them.

System of accounts laid down in Circular No. 26, of 2d June 1841.

46. By the khattawaree system a khattadar only can become a defaulter to the Government, and then chiefly owing to some of his assamees being defaulters to him. If default has occurred through any misfortune, I always allow the parties a little time, within which they almost invariably discharge the claim against them. If they cannot do so before the close of the year, then the outstanding balance is realised generally from the produce of the next year. But balances are not allowed to be transferred from one year to another, and thus, perhaps, perpetuated. In eight† cases only, as far as I can discover, have balances ever been recovered from the surety; and in these even, the amount was eventually made good to the surety. If the khattadars apply for aid, they are assisted by the department in the collection of the balances due to them by their assamees; but if the defaulting assamee leaves his village and settles in another district, and this he does only on account of his zemindar's oppressio, then the sub-deputy opium agent of that district, is applied to for his assistance in the matter. It is, however, only in such calamitous seasons as the two‡ last have been, that the khattadars ever have any difficulty about recovering the balances due to them: for they know the position and means of every man, and will take security before giving an advance to a doubtful cultivator.

Defaulters how dealt with.

47. The two Statements A. and B. called for by you are annexed to this report, and they correspond as closely as the nature of the khattawaree system and our records will admit of, with the Statements Nos. I. and II. respectively, suggested in the 7th paragraph of Mr. Seton-Karr's letter. With regard to Statement No. III. required by that gentleman, on the subject of defaulting ryots, I would beg leave to explain that no khattadar has ever been prosecuted for a balance due by him to the Government, and that our records do not enable me to state what number of ryots may have become defaulters to their khattadars. Not a single suit has, however, ever been instituted against a ryot, by either the department or the khattadar, for the recovery of any balance due by him.

Statements A. and B. for the years 1856-57, 1857-58, and 1859.

Government suit for balances never preferred.

48. But there were 11 suits preferred in 1858 in this district, under Section X. Act XIII. of 1857, for short cultivation. These are the only suits of the kind ever instituted. In each case the party punished was the khattadar§ himself, for whom there was no excuse; and it was found to be absolutely necessary to make a few examples, as a very bad feeling was being displayed by some of the people, who seemed to think, owing probably to the then disturbed state of the times, that they could do as they liked about meeting their engagements. Then, again, the inquiries that had to be made in 1859, in reference to Sir R. Hamilton's proposal of giving up the monopoly, and introducing the Malwa system, gave rise to the most exaggerated rumours, as also to some trouble. There is never any means of satisfactorily accounting for the way in which such rumours get abroad; but generally, the more absurd they are, the more readily are they believed. As an illustration of this remark, I might mention that some of the people here already think, that the object for which the Indigo Commission has been appointed is to organise the cultivation of that plant on account of the Government.

Suits for short cultivation.

49. Having now replied to the several points noticed in the letter from the President of the Indigo Commission, I would beg to be allowed, in conclusion, to say a few words in regard to the voluntary nature of the poppy cultivation. I am aware that a great many people are not disposed to allow that such is actually the case, but I am not surprised at their disbelief, as they are wholly ignorant of the actual working of the department. The two last bad seasons have certainly done much to dishearten many of the cultivators; but the return from Rs. 3. 4. to the old price of Rs. 3. 8. per seer for this year (1859-60), and the increase to the rate of four rupees per seer from the ensuing season (which is no more than the increase of late years in the prices of every kind of grain fully demands), will, I doubt not, make the people keep up their old and long standing attachment to the cultivation.

Voluntary nature of poppy cultivation.

50. I have stated (paragraph 22) that the majority of the poppy lands are cultivated like gardens. This could not possibly be the case were the cultivation not perfectly voluntary; nor would the actual cultivation exceed|| the amount of the khattadar's engagements, as for a long series of years it has steadily done. Besides every assamee knows that the zemindar will immediately charge him two rupees

Proofs in support.

* Vide Statement C.

† One hundred and one rupees, six annas, eleven pies.

‡ 1858-59 and 1859-60.

§ The total amount of penalty levied was Rs. 176. 11., which sum the khattadars, most probably divided among the assamees whose cultivation was also short, but who had not been included in the suits.

|| Vide columns 2 and 3 of Statement C. In 1854-55 this was not the case, owing to the stringent orders to reduce the cultivation as much as possible.

Appendix,
Part II.

rupees or three rupees per beegah extra,* and perhaps, eventually, even four rupees or five rupees, for sowing poppy in lands formerly used for other crops. It is true that there has always been a law against such an exaction, but the people have not availed themselves of it, nor will they; for except in rare cases, an assamee who might complain against his zemindar, on a point too on which the latter thinks he has an exclusive right to do just as he likes, would, most assuredly, sooner or later, be ruined. His zemindar would give him no peace till he had, by one false complaint or another, utterly ruined him, or driven him from his village; and this I could not prevent.

51. I think, then, that any unprejudiced person must allow, that the fact of a ryot incurring and submitting to this exaction voluntarily, as also paying the cess which, like every one, he would have to pay his khattadar, is strong proof in favour of his cultivating the poppy, whenever he does so, entirely of his own free will and accord. For myself, I can unhesitatingly say that I have never knowingly allowed a man to cultivate, who I thought did so against his will; and that I look upon the example of one forced and therefore bad cultivator as likely to do much more harm than the accession of a hundred willing cultivators could do good to the department. The amla are of course averse to letting a man give up his cultivation, as their perquisites are proportionately lessened. But the

‡ 1853-54	-	-	-	-	-	Beegahs	41,007	9
1858-59	-	-	-	-	-	"	30,944	0
Decrease in five years	-	-	-	-	-	"	10,063	9

A further decrease took place in 1859-60.

decrease‡ in the cultivation of late years shows that the people are allowed to do as they like. The severest punishment I can inflict used to be before the two last bad seasons occurred (and in many parts of the district still it is so), the stoppage of a ryot's cultivation; and to do this effectually, the field had to be marked; otherwise, in most cases, the man would have cultivated it under another man's name. This fact alone is sufficient, I think, to show how far the cultivation of the poppy, in this district at least, is voluntary or otherwise on the part of the ryots.

I have, &c.

(signed) R. King, Sub-Deputy Opium Agent.

TRANSLATION OF KATTADAR'S AGREEMENT.

No.
The writer is khattadar of the village of Pergunna
Kotee Zillah

1. I and my co-cultivators, whose names are entered below, do hereby acknowledge to have received from the Government, through the sub-deputy opium agent of zillah the sum of rupees as an advance to cultivate beegahs of land for the year corresponding with the year A. D.

2. We will prepare the whole of the above land properly, and sow poppy in it; and we will make every effort to sow and irrigate it; also to take every care of it, so that the opium produced may be good and abundant.

3. And we will not, on any account, sow any crop in this land besides poppy.

4. And whatever opium may be produced from the above land shall be duly prepared and delivered to the Government, deprived of its moisture and pussewa, and without adulteration of foreign matter, and each assamee's opium separately, and none of it being embezzled or made away with, within such date as may be fixed for the weighment of the opium. And in case of the whole produce not being delivered to the Government, we shall be liable to the penalties of Section XIX., Act XIII. of 1859.

5. And the price shall be fixed at the rate of rupees per seer of 80 tolahs for pure opium of 70° consistence, and if the consistence be higher or lower, the price shall be rateably higher or lower, according to the Sudder godown receipt, and the average per jar.

6. And whatever amount of advances we may at various times get between the present date and the weighment, we will take without any demur; and I, the khattadar, will divide the same rateably among all the cultivators, according to the extent of their cultivation and produce, and the responsibility for the same attaches to me, the khattadar, and my surety.

7. And if any balance should be due to the Government by this khatta, the responsibility for the same will attach to me, my surety, and his assamees.

8. Nothing contrary to the provisions of Act XIII. of 1857 shall be done, directly or indirectly.

9. And whatever leaves of first, second, and third sorts and trash shall be produced in our fields, shall be delivered according to the requirements of the Government.

(signed) A. B.

TRANSLATION OF SECURITY BOND.

Security Bond.
The writer is khattadar No. of the village of pergunna attached to Kotee zillah

WHEREAS I, of my own free will and accord, have become the surety of the above khattadar, I do hereby bind myself, in the event of any balances accruing in the above khatta during the year, owing to the short produce of opium, or confiscation of produce, or the death or absconding of the khattadar or his assamees, or misconduct, or embezzlement of the advances, or making away with the produce, or any other cause whatever,—to cause the above khattadar to make good the same immediately. Failing to do so, I will do so myself. But if I fail to do so, the sub-deputy opium agent hereby has the power to sell my own individual property, and to make good the balance. If the amount of balance be recovered from the money due on my khatta, in that case I will make good to my own assamees the amount that may be due them. To this, neither myself nor my heirs, nor my assamees shall have any objection to urge.

(signed) A. B.

* There can be no doubt but that this practice checks the increase of the poppy cultivation materially in some parts of the district.

STATEMENT (A.)

Required by Opium Agent's Circular, No. 17, of the 2d June 1860.

1.	2.	3.	4.	5.	6.	7.	8.	9.	10.	11.
NOTE.	Number of Beegahs Cultivated.	Number of Cultivators.	Average Cultivation per Man.	Average Opium Produce per Beegah.	Total Value of Opium, Leaves, and Trash.	Portion of Amount advanced prior to Delivery of Opium.	Amount Payments at Delivery of Opium and Final Adjustment.	Average per Cultivator on Amount in Column 8.	Highest Amount paid to any one Cultivator in Column 8.	REMARKS.
1856-57:
Phoolwarry	4,387 2 0	5,042	0 17 8	0 5 6	80,459 3 2	39,985 - -	40,826 5 11	8 1 6	95 13 1	The three years selected for comparison may be classed thus: 1856-57, below the average; 1857-58, about the average; and 1858-59, bad and the worst ever known.
Bulliah	6,562 8 0	8,964	0 14 13	0 4 11 $\frac{3}{4}$	1,02,570 14 5	51,352 - -	52,142 7 4	5 13 1	91 10 10
North Munnare	4,227 11 0	4,120	1 0 10	0 5 3	73,651 14 5	34,514 - -	33,542 8 4	9 9 6	113 9 3
South Munnare	4,246 4 0	4,878	0 17 8	0 5 13	82,684 4 5	35,612 - -	47,504 10 6	9 11 9	123 - -
Mussowrah	7,121 15 0	6,776	1 1 0	0 5 8 $\frac{3}{4}$	1,30,317 1 9	55,486 - -	75,409 10 5	11 2 1	129 6 11
Tilareh	6,233 17 0	9,300	0 13 8	0 5 11 $\frac{1}{4}$	1,17,888 15 7	46,490 - -	72,068 1 4	7 11 11	80 8 8
	32,778 17 0	39,080	0 16 16	0 5 6 $\frac{1}{4}$	5,87,572 5 9	2,63,439 - -	3,27,493 11 10	8 6 1	105 10 9	The quantities of land mentioned on the left of these remarks indicate the extent of the cultivation of those assamees who had the highest amount of balance in their favour, and who are entered in Column 10. But I have reason to suspect, that as regards the Bulliakotee, more than was the actual produce of the lands cultivated in 1857-58 and 1858-59 was weighed in the name of the most successful assamee .
1857-58:
Phoolwarry	4,230 1 0	4,969	0 17 1	0 7 12 $\frac{3}{4}$	1,12,077 11 7	40,239 - -	71,912 - 11	14 7 6	227 8 9
Bulliah	6,212 16 0	6,549	0 18 13	0 6 3 $\frac{3}{4}$	1,28,083 9 1	49,976 - -	78,362 - 8	11 15 5	186 9 -
North Munnare	4,180 10 0	4,023	1 0 15	0 7 5 $\frac{1}{2}$	1,03,030 7 -	36,557 - -	66,630 10 4	16 8 11	118 12 7
South Munnare	4,101 2 0	4,528	0 18 2	0 7 5 $\frac{1}{2}$	1,00,980 13 9	37,350 - -	63,730 14 7	14 1 2	159 5 3
Mussowrah	6,721 0 0	6,712	1 0 0	0 6 11	1,48,730 0 8	54,877 - -	94,136 12 1	14 - 4	124 8 5
Tilareh	6,402 18 0	6,687	0 19 3	0 6 2	1,29,160 14 7	48,736 - -	81,118 12 -	12 2 1	128 15 7
	31,848 7 0	33,468	0 18 19	0 6 13	7,22,063 8 8	2,67,735 - -	4,55,891 2 7	13 9 11	140 15 3	It is to be remembered that, exclusive of what the poppy yields the assamee in the shape of opium, leaves, and trash, the seed averages from four rupees to ten rupees per beegah. Besides this, most, if not nearly all, the poppy lands are sown with another crop during the rains, and yield returns according to the season.
1858-59:
Phoolwarry	4,116 9 0	4,741	0 17 7	0 4 9 $\frac{3}{4}$	64,611 4 6	37,639 - -	27,399 8 -	5 12 5	43 1 8
Bulliah	6,049 7 0	6,884	0 18 0	0 4 0 $\frac{1}{4}$	80,621 3 4	48,439 - -	33,199 3 4	5 - 8	151 4 4
North Munnare	4,121 4 0	3,738	1 2 1	0 4 1 $\frac{1}{4}$	56,768 14 8	33,772 - -	21,371 15 9	5 11 5	35 - 11
South Munnare	4,039 12 0	4,504	0 17 18	0 4 4 $\frac{3}{4}$	59,417 15 3	35,984 - -	23,939 9 4	5 5 -	105 3 9
Mussowrah	6,779 6 0	5,313	1 5 10	0 4 7 $\frac{1}{4}$	99,376 10 2	56,104 - -	43,996 12 6	8 4 5	81 10 7
Tilareh	5,838 2 0	7,474	0 15 12	0 5 0 $\frac{1}{4}$	86,482 4 9	43,401 - -	43,916 14 6	5 14 -	84 1 -
	30,944 0 0	32,354	0 19 2	0 4 1 $\frac{1}{2}$	4,47,273 4 8	2,57,339 - -	1,93,823 15 5	5 15 10	83 6 4	In this district the rents for poppy lands range from five rupees to twelve rupees per beegah.

Patna, Office of Sub-deputy Opium Agent, }
12 June 1860.R. King,
Sub-Deputy Opium Agent.

STATEMENT (B.)

Required by Opium Agent's Circular, No. 17, of the 2d June 1860.

1.	2.	3.	4.	5.	6.	7.	8.	9.	10.	11.	12.	13.
K O T E E.	Number of Khattas.	Average number of Assamees per Khatta.	Average cultivation per Khatta.	Total Value of Opium, Leaves, and Trash.	Portion of Amount in Column 5, being balance due to Khattas by Government on delivery of Opium.		Balance due to Government by Khattas on delivery of Opium.		Highest Amount of Balance due by any one Khatta.		REMARKS.
					Number of Khattas.	Average per Khatta.	Number of Khattas.	Amount.	Average per Khatta.	Amount.
1856-57.
Phoolwarry -	328	15	13 7 10	Rs. 80,459 3 2	Rs. 40,826 5 11	Rs. 133 13 8	23	Rs. 352 2 9	Rs. 15 5 -	49 -	The three years se-
Bullia -	523	17	12 10 19	1,02,570 14 5	52,142 7 4	112 6 -	59	923 8 11	15 10 5	43 -	lected for compari-
North Munnare -	314	13	13 9 5	73,651 14 5	39,542 8 4	739 11 7	31	404 9 11	13 - 10	29 -	son may be classed
South Munnare -	310	16	13 13 18	82,684 4 5	47,504 10 6	165 8 4	23	432 6 1	18 12 9	44 -	thus: 1856-57, be-
Mussowrah -	460	15	15 9 13	1,30,317 1 9	75,409 10 5	174 15 5	29	578 8 8	19 15 2	28 3 -	low the average;
Telareh -	502	19	12 8 7	1,17,888 15 7	72,068 1 4	152 5 9	29	669 1 9	23 1 1	100 -	1857-58, about the
	2,437	16	13 9 -	5,87,572 5 9	3,27,893 11 10	146 - 6	194	3,360 6 1	17 5 2	48 13 10	average; and 1858
1857-58.											-59, bad, and the
Phoolwarry -	319	16	13 6 9	Rs. 1,12,077 11 7	Rs. 71,912 - 11	230 7 9	7	73 5 4	10 7 7	15 -	worst ever known.
Bullia -	494	13	12 11 1	1,28,083 9 1	78,362 - 8	162 9 2	12	254 7 7	21 3 3	35 2 6
North Munnare -	299	13	13 19 12	1,03,030 7 -	66,630 10 4	228 2 11	7	157 3 4	22 7 4	26 9 5
South Munnare -	299	15	13 14 6	1,00,980 13 9	63,730 14 7	215 4 10	13	100 - 10	33 5 7	69 -
Mussowrah -	452	15	14 17 7	1,48,730 - 8	94,136 12 1	213 15 1	12	283 11 5	23 10 3	58 -
Telareh -	485	14	13 4 1	1,29,160 14 7	81,118 12 -	176 5 6	25	693 13 5	27 12 -	84 -
	2,348	14	13 11 5	7,22,063 8 8	4,55,891 2 7	206 10 7	66	1,562 9 11	23 10 10	56 9 11
1858-59.
Phoolwarry -	304	16	13 10 16	Rs. 64,611 4 6	Rs. 27,399 8 -	100 11 8	32	427 3 6	13 5 7	35 -
Bullea -	483	14	12 10 9	80,621 3 4	33,199 3 4	80 15 7	73	1,017 - -	13 13 3	59 -
North Munnare -	293	13	14 1 6	56,768 14 8	21,371 15 9	81 4 11	30	375 1 1	12 8 -	30 -
South Munnare -	296	15	13 12 18	59,417 15 3	23,939 9 4	90 10 10	32	505 10 1	15 12 9	38 -
Mussowrah -	454	12	14 19 1	99,376 10 2	43,996 12 6	105 12 2	38	724 2 4	19 - 10	80 -
Telhareh -	464	16	12 11 12	86,482 4 9	43,916 14 6	108 6 11	59	835 9 9	14 2 7	52 -
	2,294	14	13 9 15	4,47,278 4 8	1,93,823 15 5	95 7 8	264	3,884 10 9	14 11 5	49 -

R. King,
Sub-Deputy Opium Agent.Patna,
Office of Sub-deputy Opium Agent,
12 June 1860.

STATEMENT (C.)

Showing the fluctuations in the Poppy Cultivation and Opium Produce, with its Value and Amount of Balances, during a period of 20 Years, viz., from 1839-40 to 1858-59, both inclusive.

1. Y E A R.	2. Quantity of Land engaged for.	3. Quantity of Land cultivated.	4. Total Quantity of Opium produced.	5. Average produce per Beegah.	6. Price of Opium per Seer, at 70 consi- terence.	7. Total value of Opium, Leaves, and Trash.	8. Cash refunds during the Year.	9. Balance due to Government at final adjustment.	10. Total of Columns 8 and 9.	11. R E M A R K S.
	B. C. D.	B. C. D.	Mds. s. c.	Mds. s. c.	Rs. as. p.	Rs. as. p.	Rs. as. p.	Rs. as. p.	Rs. as. p.
1839-40	14,161 0 0	14,350 3 4	2,910 13 10½	0 8 13½	3,51,518 14 8	673 4 2	- - -	- - -	673 4 2	The balances in the years 1844-45, 1845-46, 1858-54, and 1857-58 accrued through hail storms. Those of 1857-58 were remitted.
1840-41	14,273 1 0	14,829 7 6	2,752 31 9½	0 7 6½	4,01,521 8 -	293 4 2	- - -	- - -	293 4 2	In 1844-45 damage was done by the hail in 108 villages, comprising a cultivation of beegahs 2,587-8. Of this quantity beegahs 949 were wholly destroyed, beegahs 456-14 considerably injured, and beegahs 665-4 slightly damaged, leaving only beegahs 516-10 that had not suffered. The cultivators sowed the poppy in 1845-46, without any advance; and when the plant was safe and beyond danger then advances were made on it. On the delivery of the produce for 1845-46, the whole of the preceding year's balance was recovered, without a single harsh measure having been resorted to in order to recover these balances.
1841-42	14,071 2 0	14,561 6 7	2,311 12 6½	0 6 5½	3,36,270 5 4	829 5 -	27 3 10	14 7 7	856 8 10
1842-43	15,444 8 0	15,561 6 7	2,164 19 13½	0 5 9	3,17,665 13 11	3,045 2 -	- - -	- - -	3,059 9 7
1843-44	15,113 14 0	15,581 3 0	3,063 15 9½	0 7 13½	4,49,406 9 2	2,150 3 6	- - -	- - -	2,150 3 6
1844-45	16,693 10 0	16,487 19 0	2,975 17 0½	0 7 3½	4,39,157 6 11	964 13 6	5,206 8 -	- - -	6,171 5 6
1845-46	18,880 16 0	19,806 17 0	3,679 6 6½	0 7 6½	5,46,293 11 4	992 13 5	188 2 2	- - -	1,180 15 7
1846-47	20,366 8 0	21,298 19 0	4,972 29 14½	0 9 5½	7,32,354 9 10	385 14 -	- - -	- - -	385 14 -
1847-48	23,413 15 0	25,091 15 0	5,420 19 10½	0 8 10½	7,99,628 4 10	270 9 9	- - -	- - -	270 9 9
1848-49	25,238 8 0	25,707 9 0	4,945 12 5½	0 7 11	7,32,104 12 1	811 7 6	- - -	- - -	811 7 6
1849-50	25,128 1 0	26,044 4 0	4,883 6 1	0 7 8	7,23,121 6 8	633 4 7	- - -	- - -	633 4 7
1850-51	27,225 13 0	28,747 18 0	4,642 20 8½	0 6 7½	6,80,254 5 7	636 4 1	- - -	- - -	636 4 1
1851-52	30,027 14 0	32,208 0 0	6,044 26 8½	0 7 8	8,64,814 11 6	575 - - -	- - -	- - -	575 - - -	The cash refunds within the year (col. 8), have been given in order to show the extent of refunds that ordinarily take place, prior to the final adjustment of the assamee's accounts.
1852-53	33,157 6 0	35,482 13 0	6,755 9 6½	0 7 13½	9,58,918 - 3	514 1 5	- - -	- - -	514 1 5	There are 66 zillahs, each zillahdar having an average of 34 khattas , containing 490 cultivators, and beegahs 471 of cultivation. Each of the six kotees has a gomashita , a mohurra , and one or two mutasudees (according to the size of the kotee) with burkundaazees , and this is the extent of the Mofussil establishment.
1853-54	38,448 11 0	41,007 9 0	6,845 17 0½	0 6 10½	9,74,283 - 5	583 - 10	365 6 2	- - -	948 7 -
1854-55	36,740 3 0	36,476 0 0	6,310 35 15	0 6 14½	9,00,423 11 2	1,647 - 5	- - -	- - -	1,647 - 5
1855-56	34,939 16 0	36,058 15 0	6,271 21 6	0 6 15½	8,34,596 15 5	1,089 12 3	- - -	- - -	1,089 12 3
1856-57	32,195 1 0	32,778 17 0	4,418 14 3½	0 5 6½	5,87,572 5 9	3,322 4 1	37 15 6	- - -	3,360 3 7
1857-58	32,371 17 0	31,848 7 0	5,430 26 12½	0 6 13	7,22,063 8 8	1,313 11 10	248 14 1	- - -	1,562 9 11
1858-59	30,076 13 0	30,944 0 0	3,364 6 1½	0 4 1½	4,47,278 4 8	3,737 10 2	147 - 7	- - -	3,884 10 9

Patna, Office of Sub-Deputy Opium Agent, }
12 June 1860.

(signed) R. King,
Sub-Deputy Opium Agent.

Appendix,
Part II.

From J. G. Pughe, Esq., Officiating Sub-Deputy Opium Agent of Alleegunge, Sewan, to R. N. Farquharson, Esq., Opium Agent of Behar, No. 31, dated 12 June 1860.

Sir,

No. 18 of 18th May 1860. I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your circular, No. 17, of 2d instant, annexing copy of a letter from the President of the Indigo Commission, requiring information on certain matters connected with the system of opium cultivation, in reply to which I beg to state as follows:—

2. The contracts entered into with the cultivators are limited to a period of one year, the settlements being usually made during the month of September, on which occasion an ikrarnama, with surety bond appended, is given in by each khattadar, attested by two witnesses, and finally signed by myself. Translations of these documents are annexed to this letter.

3. It constitutes a part of the duty of a sub-agent during the cold season, to investigate all disputes between the assamees, as also to inspect and to test the measurements of the cultivation generally, with a view of ascertaining that the interests of Government have not been neglected, but the zillahdar (under whose supervision some 20 or 30 villages are placed) is the officer who is alone able personally to ascertain that the whole of the sowings, weeding, irrigation, &c., are timely and efficiently carried out. As a general rule, however, the cultivators (more especially the Koeree caste) will be found sufficiently alive to their own interests as to render unnecessary the exercise on the part of the Department of any interference of an irksome or burdensome nature; here and there the characteristic indolence and inherent spirit of procrastination of the people is apparent, and shows itself to be even stronger than their natural love of gain; in such cases it is his duty to stir up the idle to exertion, and to bring to my notice any cases of gross negligence in the preparation of their fields. I cannot call to mind any serious instances of vexatious interference on the part of the zillahdars with the other agricultural occupation of the cultivators; and I may say the same with respect to their being in the habit of instituting minute and harassing inquiries, which might tend to render the cultivation distasteful to the ryot. I can moreover assert with confidence, that, under proper supervision on the part of the sub-agent, such practices could never exist undetected in any district. The average engagement for poppy land in this agency, now barely exceeds 13 cottahs per man; it is impossible therefore to suppose that the amount of labour required for the cultivation of so small an area can either be felt burdensome or prove interruptive to other agricultural pursuits; the complaint indeed of any is rather on the other side, owing to the fact of the zillahdar being usually on more intimate terms with the ryot than is consistent with his duty. It is rarely the case that I find the people dissatisfied with the zillahdar, though it frequently happens that I am necessitated to punish the latter for negligent supervision.

4. In regard to the measures taken to prevent undue exactions alluded to in paragraphs 3 and 5, I would remark that, impressed as I am with the assurance of the non-existence of extortion in this sub-agency, it would, nevertheless, I apprehend, be deemed the height of incredulity in me to suppose that little irregularities did not at times occur between the ryots and the subordinates of the Department; to maintain the contrary either with reference to this or any other Department in which the Asiatic element obtains, would be nothing less than to assume the existence of a degree of administrative purity as unintelligible to the former as it would be irreconcilable with the tenure of office of the latter: Native subordinates do not generally accept service in consideration of its authorised emoluments alone, whilst on the other hand, amongst the uneducated classes more particularly, the occasional tender of a conciliatory "douceur" is as consistent with, and agreeable to, their general ideas, as the equally prevalent, though more open practice of taking "dustoree;" nevertheless I would not wish to be misunderstood that whilst deprecating the exercise of too great an excess of inquisitorial severity on the one hand as practically conducing to the encouragement of false complaints, as well as operating prejudicially on all healthy competition amongst respectable parties for the lower grades of the public service; so on the other hand do I conceive that a reprehensible degree of laxity would as surely be attended by a general system of corruption equally injurious to the interests of the state and people. Under this view of the question therefore, I conceive that an active and general supervision which summarily punishes malpractices when fully proved, and satisfies the ryots that they cannot be oppressed with impunity, will best answer all purposes, and I need hardly add that in the management of this sub-agency my endeavours are directed accordingly.

5. At the time of delivery of the drug in April, every cultivator brings in his own opium with the rest of the assamees of the zillah to which he belongs; the examination of every plate separately is then conducted by myself personally, and is then and there classified according to its own merits; all plates of opium of like mark are then sorted together, and put into jars bearing a corresponding mark.* These jars on arrival at the factory undergo a second scrutiny, and I apprehend that to these measures the purity of the Behar produce for the most part is attributable; petty adulteration is scarcely worth the risk it involves, whilst, if attempted on a large scale, it should never under a practised eye escape detection. Every plate of opium is weighed separately in my presence in the weighing house of this sub-agency, and the owner's name entered in the books; no less than three separate entries of the transaction are made by different mohurrirs employed for the purpose; and apart from this check, the cultivators themselves are made to appoint two umpires, the first one to supervise the entries in the weightment register, and the other to overlook the weighman at the scale; other checks are also in operation, which it is unnecessary to detail here, though I may add that no means are neglected whereby the perpetration of fraud may be detected, and justice insured to the cultivator; the receipts signed by me for opium delivered are granted to the parties concerned, immediately after the weightment of each khatta.

6. The

* Adulterated parcels being chellaned separately in pots, and mulcted at the factory, according to their deserts.

6. The khattadars are all paid at the conclusion of the season's operations in the same manner as they are paid their advances at different periods during the year: for instance, an advance of four rupees per beegah is made at the time of the settlements in September and October, the lands are sown throughout November, and measured in December, at the conclusion of which operation a second advance of three rupees per beegah is made according to the results of the measurement; at the weighments in April, every man delivering good opium is paid up to within four annas a seer of the whole amount which may be due to him, according to the district weighment; and on the arrival of the Sudder Factory receipts the final accounts are prepared, and in July the balance, whatever it may amount to as per that receipt, is then disbursed; every rupee is paid away in my presence, and every recipient comes before me and verbally acknowledges the amount received by him, which is then checked off by me in the payment register.

Appendix,
Part II.Answer to Para. 5.

7. The khattadar, as well as his assamees and sureties, are responsible for a defaulting ryot, the former usually squaring accounts with him before the close of the year; occasionally the former has to make good a loss which he does not subsequently recover, but on the whole he does not lose by his office.

Answer to par. 6.

8. I beg to annex Statements A. and B., as required in the 2d paragraph of your Circular under acknowledgment, but lest you might possibly be misled in regard to the profits of the cultivation in this sub-agency by the three years' returns exhibited therein, two of which were unusually unfortunate seasons, I have taken the liberty to forward two additional Statements marked C. and D., representing the average results of this division, calculated on the last twelve years, or since its separation from Chuprah, wherefrom the average outlay per beegah made by the Government according to Statement C., Column 11, will be seen to amount to nearly Rs. 19 3. or Rs. 5 1½. in excess of the sum expended during the three years above quoted.

9. As the Statement III., required by the President of the Commission, cannot be prepared with facility, and as all requisite information under the head of default is furnished in Columns 9, 10, and 11 of Statement B., no legal proceedings, moreover, having been instituted during these three years against the assamees for default, I have therefore thought it needless to trouble you with a blank statement.

10. From the above replies, and from an examination of the Statements hereto annexed, it will be perceived that the features of resemblance between the system pursued in regard to the growth of indigo in Bengal, and of opium in Behar, consist only in the fact of advances being given in both cases for the performance of a contract entered into with the ryot for the cultivation of a certain portion of land on his own responsibility in respect to results. The points of dissemblance are very material I conceive, and seem to be, firstly, in the difference in the amount of outlay per beegah, which (from recent evidence taken before the Commission appears to) runs from two rupees to three rupees per beegah in the one case, and according to Column 11, of accompanying Statement D. amounts to nearly Rs. 19 3. in the other; and secondly, to the fact of the average cultivation of each opium ryot being too insignificant to occasion any vexatious interference with his other agricultural or domestic arrangements.

11. I would beg the favour of your referring to the results exhibited in Column 11 of Statement C., from which you will perceive that the average outlay per beegah during the last 12 years on account deliveries of opium leaves and trash in this agency fell a little short of 20 rupees, supposing, however, that the price paid under this head had been four rupees per seer* (the rate now sanctioned), the average receipts by the cultivator would have increased to 22 rupees per beegah, and this income they may reasonably expect in future. In the districts south of the Ganges, where the average yield of produce runs higher by about two seers per beegah, the outlay on the part of Government thereon will, of course, be proportionately greater.

12. In conclusion, I may add that poppy lands are not restricted to the production of opium alone during the year. The poppy is only a rubbee, and consequently a six anna crop. As soon, therefore, as the drug is extracted and the plant removed, the lands are free for the cultivation of cheena, or subsequently for the buddhy or rainy season crops, such as juneera (Indian corn) and murrowah. The accompanying returns thus exhibit only a portion of the profits derived by the cultivator on his year's operations.

I have, &c.

(signed) J. G. Pughe,
Officiating Sub-Deputy Opium Agent.

* The price paid for the drug varying from three rupees ten annas to three rupees four annas as per Government Order.

(A).

1.	2.	3.	4.	5.	6.	7.	8.	9.	10.	11.
K O T E E.	Number of Beegahs Cultivated.	Number of Cultivators.	Average Cultivation per Man.	Average Opium produce per Beegah.	Total Value of Opium, Leaves, and Trash.	Portion of Amount in Column 6, advanced prior to Delivery of Opium.	Amount Payments at delivery of Opium and final adjustment.	Average per Cultivator on Amount in Column 8.	Highest Amount paid to any one Cultivator in Column 8.	REMARKS.
	Bs. c. d.		Bs. c. d.	Md. s. c.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.
1856-57.
Gopalgunge -	13,536 0 0	21,447	0 12 12	0 3 2 $\frac{1}{2}$	1,42,335 9 2	84,519 12 -	61,888 - -	2 14 2	95 1 11
Suroel -	10,250 13 0	14,862	0 13 16	0 4 1 $\frac{1}{2}$	1,99,563 12 -	63,558 12 -	76,588 13 7	5 2 5	88 8 5	The Damdeta Weight of Opium for this year amounted to Mds. 2,993. 36. 10.
Jhejwah -	9,832 10 0	14,600	0 13 7	0 3 8 $\frac{1}{2}$	1,14,930 5 11	60,352 3 -	55,435 4 3	3 12 9	126 7 6
TOTAL -	33,619 3 0	50,909	*0 13 5	0 3 9	3,96,829 11 1	2,08,430 11 -	1,93,912 1 10	*3 12 11	-	*Or Rs. 5. 1. 5. per beegah.
1857-58.
Gopalgunge -	12,633 13 0	21,025	0 12 0	0 5 0 $\frac{1}{2}$	2,10,922 14 6	75,794 7 -	1,35,329 - 10	6 6 11	130 7 -
Suroel -	9,811 8 0	14,156	0 13 17	0 5 11 $\frac{1}{2}$	1,85,433 5 2	58,844 13 -	1,26,650 7 2	8 15 1	100 13 1	The Damdeta for this year Mds. 4,049. 8. 8 $\frac{1}{4}$.
Jhejwah -	8,687 5 0	14,477	0 12 0	0 4 13	1,38,010 4 7	55,551 6 -	82,599 2 4	5 11 3	132 4 6
TOTAL -	31,132 6 0	49,658	*0 12 10	0 5 3 $\frac{1}{4}$	5,34,366 8 3	1,90,190 10 -	3,44,578 10 4	*6 15 -	-	*Or Rs. 10. 8. 7. per beegah.
1858-59.
Gopalgunge -	13,089 18 0	19,594	0 13 7	0 3 5 $\frac{1}{4}$	1,46,103 11 1	91,717 6 -	56,313 2 4	2 13 11	89 6 8
Suroel -	9,804 2 0	13,878	0 14 3	0 3 10 $\frac{1}{4}$	1,18,471 9 3	68,738 6 -	50,883 9 10	3 10 7	105 8 3	The Damdeta amounting to Mds. 2,601. 20. 13 $\frac{1}{4}$.
Jhejwah -	9,191 16 0	14,280	0 12 17	0 2 11 $\frac{1}{4}$	82,891 1 10	62,394 7 -	22,951 2 9	1 9 8	58 4 -
TOTAL -	32,085 16 -	47,752	*0 13 8	0 3 3 $\frac{1}{4}$	3,47,466 6 2	2,22,850 3 -	1,30,147 14 11	*2 11 7	-	*Or Rs. 3. 9. 9. per beegah.

Three years' average outlay per beegah on the part of Government, Rs. 13. 3. 4.Allegunge, Sub-Deputy Opium Agency, }
12 June 1860.(signed) J. G. Pughie,
Officiating Sub-Deputy Opium Agent.

(B.)

1.	2.	3.	4.	5.	6.	7.	8.	9.	10.	11.	12.	13.
KOTEE.	Number of Khattas.	Average Number of Assamies per Khatta.	Average Cultivation per Khatta.	Total Value of Opium, Leaves, and Trash.	being Balance due to Khattas by Government on delivery of Opium.	Portion of Amount in Column 5, being Balance due to Khattas by Government on delivery of Opium.	Average per Khatta.	Number of Khattas.	Amount.	Balance due to Government by Khattas on delivery of Opium.	Highest Amount of Balance due by any one Khatta.	REMARKS.
					Number of Khattas.	Amount.				Average per Khatta.
1856-57:
Gopalgunge	871	24	Bs. c. d. 16 2 5	Rs. a. p. 1,42,335 9 2	680	Rs. a. p. 61,888 - -	91 - 2	191	Rs. a. p. 4,072 2 10	Rs. a. p. 21 5 1	Rs. a. p. 93 - 1
Suroel	758	20	13 10 9	1,39,563 12 -	724	76,588 13 7	105 12 6	34	583 13 7	17 2 9	32 4 10
Jhejwah	541	27	18 3 9	1,14,930 5 11	511	55,435 4 3	108 7 8	30	857 1 4	28 9 1	89 6 4
TOTAL	2,170	23	15 9 17	3,96,829 11 1	1,915	1,93,912 1 10	101 4 1	255	5,573 1 9	21 9 11	- -	{ Opium pd. for mds. 2,993. 36. 10.
1857-58:
Gopalgunge	763	27	17 1 3	2,10,922 14 6	747	1,35,329 - 10	181 2 7	16	200 9 4	12 8 7	30 10 1
Suroel	683	21	14 7 6	1,85,433 5 2	678	1,26,650 7 2	186 12 9	5	61 15 -	12 6 2	22 7 4
Jhejwah	475	30	18 5 -	1,98,010 4 7	465	82,599 2 4	177 10 1	11	140 3 9	12 11 11	16 9 8
TOTAL	1,922	25	16 14 12	5,34,366 8 3	1,890	3,44,578 10 4	182 5 -	32	402 12 1	12 9 3	- -	Ditto - ditto 4,049. 8. 8½.
1858-59:
Gopalgunge	759	26	17 4 18	1,46,103 11 1	675	56,313 2 4	83 6 9	84	1,926 13 3	22 15 -	99 8 7
Suroel	680	20	14 8 7	1,18,471 9 3	611	50,883 9 10	83 4 5	69	1,150 6 7	16 10 9	61 3 7
Jhejwah	476	30	19 6 4	82,891 1 10	373	22,951 2 9	61 8 6	103	2,454 7 11	23 13 3	83 10 9
TOTAL	1,915	24	16 15 2	3,47,466 6 2	1,659	1,30,147 14 11	78 7 2	256	5,531 11 9	21 9 8	- -	Ditto - ditto 2,601. 20. 13½.

Allegunge, Sub-Deputy Opium Agency, }
12 June 1860.

(signed) J. G. Pughie,
Officiating Sub-Deputy Opium Agent.

(C.)
STATEMENT exhibiting the Average Results of the POPPY CULTIVATION, calculated on the last Twelve Years, viz., from 1847-48 to 1858-59, in the Three Kotees of the Alleegunge Sub-Agency.

1.	2.	3.	4.	5.	6.	7.	8.	9.	10.	11.	12.	13.
KOTEES.	Average Number of Beegahs Cultivated, calculated on Twelve Years.	Average Number of Cultivators.	Average Cultivation per Man.	Average Opium Produce per Beegah.	Average Value of Opium, Leaves, and Trash.	Average Amount in Column 6, advanced prior to delivery of Opium.	Average Amount Payments at delivery of Opium, and final Adjustment.	Average per Cultivator on Account in Column 8.	Highest Amount paid to any One Cultivator in Column 8.	Average Outlay per Beegah by Govt. during the Twelve Years, as per Columns 2 and 6.	Average Outlay per Beegah, calculating at present Price of Opium, viz., 4 Rupees per Seer.	REMARKS.
Gopalgunge-	12,068	15,818	0 15 5	M. s. c. 0 5 4½	Rs. a. p. 2,26,369 8 4	Rs. a. p. 93,800 - 5	Rs. a. p. 1,33,260 13 1	Rs. a. p. k. 8 6 9 10	-	Rs. a. p. k. 18 12 1 11	-	The price paid per seer for the drug varied in the following years:— Rs. a. From 1847-48 to 1850-51 - 3 10 From 1851-52 to 1854-55 - 3 8 From 1855-56 to 1858-59 - 3 4
Suroel	8,931	11,997	0 14 17	0 5 11½	1,78,906 4 7	69,698 4 3	1,09,565 7 10	9 2 1 9	-	20 - 6 3	-
Jhejwah	8,241	12,359	0 13 7	0 5 5½	1,55,429 12 11	62,920 2 8	93,104 13 -	7 8 6 8	-	18 13 9 4	-
TOTAL	29,240	40,174	* 0 14 11	† 0 5 7	† 5,60,705 9 10	2,26,418 7 4	3,35,931 1 11	* 8 5 9 9	An accurate return would involve much time and labour	19 2 9 15	22 - 8 15	Average Damdeta M. s. c. on the Twelve Years - } 3,979 22 13½

* Or Rs. 10, 10, 6, per Beegah.

N. B.—† I would beg attention to the results shown in Columns 5 and 6 in comparison with the same Columns in Statement A, as also to the two additional Columns in this Statement, Nos. 11 and 12, as compared with average outlay of 1856, 1857, and 1858.

Alleegunge, Sub-Deputy Opium Agency, }
12 June 1860.

(signed) J. G. Pugh,
Officiating Sub-Deputy Opium Agent.

(D.)

STATEMENT exhibiting the Results of the POPPY CULTIVATION to the Cultivators after delivering their Opium, calculated on the Returns of Twelve Years, viz., from 1847-48 to 1858-59, in the Three Kotees of the Alleegunge Sub-Agency.

1.	2.	3.	4.	5.	6.	7.	8.	9.	10.	11.	12.	13.
KOTEES.	Average Number of Khattas, calculated on 12 Years.	Average Number of Assesses per Khatta.	Average Cultivation per Khatta.	Average Value of Opium, Leaves, and Trash.	Average portion of Amount in Column 5, being Balance due to Khattas by Government after delivery of Opium.	Average Number of Khattas.	Average Amount.	Average per Khatta.	Average Balance due to Government after delivery of Opium.	Average per Khatta.	Highest Amount of Balance due by any one Khatta during Twelve Years.	REMARKS.
Gopalgunge	680	23	Rs. c. d. 17 14 19	Rs. a. p. 2,26,369 8 4	648	Rs. a. p. 1,33,260 13 1	Rs. a. p. 205 10 4	32	Rs. a. p. 691 5 2	Rs. a. p. 21 9 8	-
Suroel	624	19	14 6 -	1,78,906 4 7	609	1,09,565 7 10	179 14 6	15	357 7 6	23 13 3	-
Jhejwah	430	28	19 3 -	1,55,429 12 11	410	93,104 13 -	227 1 4	20	595 2 9	29 12 1	-
TOTAL	1,734	23	16 19 4	5,60,705 9 10	1,667	3,35,931 1 11	201 8 3	67	1,643 15 5	24 8 7	-

Alleegunge, Sub-Deputy Opium Agency, }
12 June 1860.
(signed) J. G. Pugh,
Officiating Sub-Deputy Opium Agent.

Hathchitta attached to License.

Number of Khatta.	Name of Kotee.	Name of Mouza and Purgunna.	Name of Khattadar.	Quantity of Land settled.	Date on which License was granted.

License granted for cultivating Poppy and manufacturing Opium.

1. I grant to you and the assamees in your khatta permission to cultivate beegals of poppy for the manufacture of opium, agreeably to the conditions made in the ikrarnama this day delivered by you and your assamees.

2. That it is incumbent on you and your assamees properly to prepare the whole of the land and cultivate poppy in it, and take due care of the cultivation.

3. That you and your assamees shall not sow any other crop with the poppy.

4. That whatever quantity of opium may be produced in the above lands, you and your assamees will properly treat it and deliver the whole of it without dew or pusewa, or the admixture of foreign ingredients, within a certain period to be fixed by me prior to the weighments under the penalty laid down in Section XIX. of Act XIII. of 1857, and have it weighed and purrukhed, each parcel separately, in my presence, and should you have any objection to my purruk, you will be at liberty to take your opium with my certificate to the Sudder Factory to have it purrukhed and weighed there, or can have it sent separately through this office for that purpose.

5. That whatever quantity of opium may prove to be of 70 consistence, the value of that quantity will be paid to you and your assamees at the rate of three rupees four annas per seer of 80 tolahs, and that whatever quantity of opium may be of more or less consistence, the value of that quantity will be paid to you and your assamees at the above rate as per Sudder Godown receipt.

6. That this day _____ rupees have been advanced to you, and from time to time as may appear to me necessary other advances will be paid to you and your assamees for cultivation of the poppy, and you and your assamees shall share the same among yourselves according to your respective dues, but the responsibility of the whole will rest with you, the khattadar. That after getting the receipt from the Sudder Godown, the entire value of the opium as per rates mentioned in the 5th paragraph will be paid to you and your assamees after deducting the sums which may have been advanced to you.

7. That should any balance fall due on your khatta, it will be realised from your own and your surety's property.

8. That you and your assamees will do nothing knowingly or surreptitiously in opposition to Act XIII. of 1857.

9. That from the poppy leaves and poppy trash which may be produced in your fields, you will deliver any quantity that may be indented for upon you, the value of which will be paid to you by Government at the rates noted below:—

POPPY LEAVES.

[illegible]

All the above three sorts of Leaves received at this Sub-Agency after the 31st of May at five rupees per maund.

Poppy Trash - - - - - Rs. - 4 - per maund.

(signed) R. N. Farquharson,
Opium Agent.

From R. N. Farquharson, Esq., Opium Agent of Behar, to the Rev. L. F. Kalberer, dated Patna, 24 April 1859.

My dear Mr. Kalberer,

In a recent pamphlet entitled "God's voice from China," I see a passage about opium which is so utterly untrue, and unfounded, that I feel called on to give it public contradiction, and to this end I beg to crave your assistance. You have been many years in this part of the country, striving earnestly to propagate the blessed truths of the Gospel among all classes, and must be perfectly acquainted with the effects of the opium cultivation on the people of these districts. Kindly let me know your opinion on the following passage:—"Here, where it is manufactured, as might be expected, it is eaten by the miserable ryot or native farmer, who, ground to the earth by fiscal oppression, consumes it to forget, in its delicious visions, his misery, while countless hosts of Government spies and native sub-collectors of opium revenue all fall victims to its deleterious power."

My belief is, that the opium cultivator is neither a miserable ryot, ground in any way by fiscal oppression, nor does he, except in very rare instances, ever indulge in the use of opium. The countless hosts of spies and sub-collectors of opium revenue do not exist, so that there can be no question as to the falsity of this part of the assertion. A line from you, however, regarding the general state of the poppy cultivators, and the conduct of the Government officials employed in the department, will be valuable, and more reliable, probably, than anything I myself might be able to write on the subject.

Appendix,
Part II.

Yours, &c.
(signed) R. N. Farquharson.

From the Rev. L. F. Kalberer to R. N. Farquharson, Esq., Opium Agent of Behar, dated 27 June 1860.

My dear Sir,

I BEG to acknowledge your letter, dated the 24th April, in which you ask my opinion concerning the following paragraph appearing in a pamphlet called "God's Voice from China," namely, "Here, where it (opium) is manufactured, as might be expected, it is eaten by the miserable ryot or native farmer, who, ground to the earth by fiscal oppression, consumes it to forget in its delirious visions his misery, while countless hosts of Government spies and the native sub-collectors of opium revenue all fall victims to its deleterious power." Whether the ryots eat the opium is a matter I and my fellow labourer, Mr. M. Cumby, have often talked about; that we have not found any amongst the cultivators who eat it. To my distinct recollections, I have been preaching the last 18 years at Patna, Gya, and Tehta, alternately to thousands of those who come and bring their opium, but not found any who eat it.

Where the opium is manufactured I have known the last 22 years but one man, whose name I could mention, who was employed in the opium department and addicted to its use; he shortened his life with that and excessive brandy-drinking. None other in that department I have known, either European or native, who used to eat the drug.

As for spies, I never have heard of such a thing, though I have travelled often in these districts; indeed what use would they be. As far as I know, there are zillahdars one to from 10 to 15 villages, and in each village, from one to three khattadars, who keep a certain amount.

There may be spies in the abkaree department in large towns. I have heard of such a thing, but am not certain of the facts, that the ryots should not smuggle it; if there are, notwithstanding it is smuggled, which enables the poorer class to eat it.

I may here be allowed to subjoin some common conversations which we often had with the ryots, as they often have sat with us for hours, and naturally religious conversations are first, but others are also introduced, for instance:—

Why do you sow opium?—Because it enables me to pay my land rent and do other business with the money as we get advance, which is very convenient.

How much is the produce of a good beegah of land by sowing opium?—From between 40 to 60 rupees; but when it fails, we are losers.

Do you sow it willingly?—Because the Government wishes us to do so.

Are you compelled to sow it?—Yes.

By whom?—By the zemindar, and sometimes by the zillahdar.

Why?—He gets his land rent easily, and is profitable to him.

But can you not give it up when you like?—Yes, but I do not like to give it up, because the advances are very convenient, and we have not to pay interest of that money.

What is done to those who mix something with the opium?—It is confiscated, and those ryots will not be allowed in future to sow any opium.

How long are they prohibited to sow again?—This depends on the gentleman; if the ryot goes after a year or two, and begs and prays that his fault might be forgiven, and promises that in future he will not do so again, then he is allowed again to sow it. Others again—

Are you compelled to sow opium?—Yes.

If you were not, would you not sow?—No.

Last February we were at Gya, one of our cartmen's brother became our watchman; often these men praised their zemindar very much for his kindness and care of his ryots,—a very rare thing. Some years ago he ordered all his ryots of about 20 villages to cease opium cultivation; they obeyed his order.

Well, and did the officials interfere with his order?—None whatever.

Similar questions we have put to the people, and such various and conflicting answers we have received. What we have observed is, that the majority would have been very sorry if they had to give up the sowing of it. This year we have seen a greater disposition amongst many to give up the cultivation.

Although the above statement will bear out every investigation, and the Behar ryots have benefited by this drug, I am no advocate for it, having seen in Patna the ill effects of it amongst the Mahomedans; those particularly who smoke it become miserable creatures in no time; they become useless to God and men; their very offspring, if they have any, are known by their miserable appearance that their fathers were opium smokers. Those who eat it and have plenty of antidote at their command, become not soon miserable in their body, but they become drowsy, and whilst you are talking with them, they will nod with their heads, and shut their eyes. It is often painful to talk to such persons; hence having seen their effects, not amongst the ryots who cultivate it, but chiefly amongst the Mahomedans, hence I cannot do otherwise, but give my decided disapprobation.

I have, &c.
(signed) L. F. Kalberer, Missionary.

P. S.—You are at liberty to use this letter or statement as you like.

(signed) L. F. Kalberer.

EXTRACT from a Letter from G. Drummond, Esq., of Nonsagur Factory, Shahabad, to R. N. Farquharson, Esq., Opium Agent, Patna, dated 8 June 1860.

Appendix,
Part II.

FROM the liberality of the Commissioner in his reports to Government, I am about to become a zemindar myself, and you may depend upon it I shall do my utmost to increase the poppy cultivation by digging wells, &c., and this not only in deference to Government, but for my own interest, for whatever may be said to the contrary, to cultivation pays the ryot so well as poppy, and he can therefore afford to pay a higher rent for such land.

Although not actually in possession, I may mention that I have already commenced digging wells for the purpose of increasing the poppy cultivation.

(A true Extract.)

(signed) R. N. Farquharson.
Opium Agent.

STATEMENT showing the Average Produce per Beegah in each District, and of the entire Agency for the last Ten Years.

Seasons.	Tirhoot.	Chuprah.	Allegunge.	Motecharee.	Bettiah.	Shahabad.	Gya.	Tebiah.	Patna.	Bhaugulpore.	Monghyr.	Hajepore.	Entire Agency.
	Srs. Chs.	Srs. Chs.	Srs. Chs.	Srs. Chs.	Srs. Chs.	Srs. Chs.	Srs. Chs.	Srs. Chs.	Srs. Chs.	Srs. Chs.	Srs. Chs.	Srs. Chs.	Srs. Chs.
1849-50 -	4 1 $\frac{1}{2}$	6 12	6 1 $\frac{1}{2}$	6 4 $\frac{1}{2}$	6 2	6 14 $\frac{3}{4}$	8 4	8 0 $\frac{1}{2}$	7 8	5 1 $\frac{1}{2}$	6 6 $\frac{1}{2}$	- -	6 1 $\frac{1}{2}$
1850-51 -	4 1 $\frac{1}{2}$	6 14 $\frac{3}{4}$	6 1 $\frac{1}{2}$	5 5 $\frac{1}{2}$	6 0	6 5 $\frac{1}{2}$	6 10	7 6 $\frac{3}{4}$	6 7 $\frac{1}{2}$	4 5 $\frac{3}{4}$	5 5 $\frac{1}{2}$	- -	5 9 $\frac{1}{2}$
1851-52 -	4 8 $\frac{1}{2}$	8 3	5 5	2 14	5 0 $\frac{3}{4}$	7 10 $\frac{1}{2}$	8 0	8 4	7 8	4 15	5 15	- -	5 6 $\frac{1}{2}$
1852-53 -	4 12	8 0 $\frac{1}{2}$	6 8	5 12	5 15 $\frac{3}{4}$	8 3 $\frac{1}{2}$	8 0	7 9 $\frac{1}{2}$	7 13 $\frac{1}{2}$	4 6 $\frac{1}{2}$	5 4 $\frac{1}{2}$	- -	6 8 $\frac{3}{4}$
1853-54 -	4 13	8 5 $\frac{3}{4}$	6 11 $\frac{1}{2}$	6 1	6 6 $\frac{3}{4}$	7 5 $\frac{1}{2}$	7 0	6 6	6 10 $\frac{3}{4}$	4 8 $\frac{3}{4}$	5 12 $\frac{1}{2}$	- -	6 5 $\frac{1}{2}$
1854-55 -	4 6 $\frac{1}{2}$	6 7 $\frac{3}{4}$	5 4 $\frac{1}{2}$	4 10 $\frac{1}{2}$	5 0 $\frac{1}{2}$	7 3 $\frac{3}{4}$	6 9	7 3	6 14 $\frac{3}{4}$	3 10 $\frac{1}{2}$	4 9	- -	5 10 $\frac{1}{2}$
1855-56 -	3 12 $\frac{1}{2}$	6 10 $\frac{3}{4}$	5 4 $\frac{1}{2}$	4 5	3 13 $\frac{1}{2}$	7 6 $\frac{1}{2}$	6 13	6 10	6 15 $\frac{1}{2}$	3 11 $\frac{1}{2}$	5 8	- -	5 8 $\frac{1}{2}$
1856-57 -	2 15	5 9 $\frac{3}{4}$	3 15 $\frac{1}{2}$	3 14 $\frac{1}{2}$	3 2 $\frac{1}{2}$	5 12 $\frac{1}{2}$	5 4	5 11 $\frac{1}{2}$	5 6 $\frac{1}{2}$	2 14 $\frac{3}{4}$	4 5	- -	4 5 $\frac{3}{4}$
1857-58 -	2 14 $\frac{1}{2}$	6 10 $\frac{3}{4}$	5 9	5 1 $\frac{1}{2}$	4 12 $\frac{1}{2}$	7 4	5 12	6 11 $\frac{3}{4}$	6 13	4 6 $\frac{3}{4}$	5 4	- -	5 8
1858-59 -	1 12 $\frac{1}{2}$	3 9	3 7 $\frac{1}{2}$	2 15 $\frac{1}{2}$	2 5 $\frac{1}{2}$	4 3 $\frac{3}{4}$	4 12 $\frac{3}{4}$	5 0	4 5 $\frac{1}{2}$	- -	4 3 $\frac{3}{4}$	2 7 $\frac{1}{2}$	3 9
GENERAL AVERAGE for last Ten Years - - -													5 7 $\frac{1}{2}$

Behar Opium Agency, Patna, }
27 June 1860.

(signed) R. N. Farquharson,
Opium Agent.

No. 3.

From H. C. Hamilton, Esq., Benares Opium Agent, to W. S. Seton-Karr, Esq., President of the Indigo Commission, Calcutta, No. 237, dated Ghazeeপুর, the 9th July 1860.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letters as per margin, inquiring on behalf of the Members of the Indigo Commission, of which you are President, "what is the practice which prevails in this agency relative to the advances made to the cultivators of the poppy, to the cultivation of the plant, and to the mode in which these advances are adjusted at the close of the season's operations," and requesting to be furnished with clear and specific details on various points.

No. 17, dated 17th May 1860.
Demi-official, dated 26th May 1860.

2. In reply, I will do myself the pleasure of answering every question seriatim.

Answer 1st. As soon as the season is sufficiently advanced, notice is issued by the Kotee or out-factory officers, informing poppy growers that the sub-deputy agent is ready to issue advances for the ensuing season, and to settle with them for their lands: whereupon the lumberdars and their cultivators attend at the sub-deputy's office, or at any other place appointed for the purpose, and express their desire to be allowed to enter into engagements, and in some instances petitions to this effect are presented. The sub-deputy is prepared with a number of lithographed or printed forms, and as each lumberdar comes forward, he fills up and executes one called a kabulyat, by which the lumberdar undertakes to fulfil certain conditions clearly set forth in this document, in virtue of having then and there received an advance from the sub-deputy. The kabulyat being duly attested, the lumberdar receives a hathchitti or license to cultivate poppy, and with this license he proceeds to his home. These printed hathchittis or licenses are issued annually, and are duly signed and sealed by sub-deputy agents, and registered in their offices. In these hathchittis and kabulyats, the lumberdar describes the land he has engaged to cultivate, and specifies the number of under-cultivators who are to be, as it were, in copartnership with him, &c.

Question 1st. For what periods are contracts to cultivate the poppy usually entered into by the ryots: what is the form of the agreement entered into, and under what formalities is it usually signed?

Appendix,
Part II.

3. No poppy can be grown in the North-Western Provinces without these hathchittis or licenses, and opium found without them is confiscated as contraband; or if a field is cultivated without one, it is liable to be ploughed up, and the cultivator to be otherwise dealt with by law.

4. Lumberdars retain possession of these licenses, and on them all their transactions with the department are regularly entered, as will be hereafter explained. I submit eight of these documents for examination.

5. Simultaneously, as already stated, with the issue of the license, the lumberdar obtains an advance, or, as it is technically called, his first advance. The amount, however, varies according to circumstances: for old and new land a different calculation is made; to an old and respectable lumberdar, a higher advance is more often given than to a new cultivator, and so on; but invariably the previous year's produce is carefully taken into account when fixing the amount of advance to be made for the current year.

6. In the Benares division, which includes Mirzapoor, Benares, and parts of Juanpoor, Allahabad, and Ghazeepoor, the advance varies from one to six rupees per beegah; or on land which produced only one seer or less of opium, one rupee only is advanced, and so on, to six rupees the beegah on land which yielded during the previous season six seers or upwards the beegah.

7. In Goruckpoor the advance varies from three rupees to four rupees eight annas the beegah; but the produce is always less in this district, consequently the advance is proportionately smaller. In the other sub-divisions the same rules are observed as in Benares, and the advances are calculated on the same data.

8. Advances are issued twice during the season: the first in September or October, and again in January or February; but this season they will be paid in July and August. Every payment is invariably made in the presence of the sub-deputy agent or his assistant, and occasionally when there is a press of work, by the mohdomim or divisional superintendent. All payments are written and attested by the sub deputy agent in English as well as in the vernacular on the lumberdar's hathchitti, and the money is distributed by the lumberdars among their several under-cultivators, who are all responsible to the department for such advances as may be issued.

9. The first advance, I have observed, is usually regulated on a calculation of the last year's produce, on the position and respectability of the lumberdar, or according to the description of his land, whether it is good or inferior. The second advance depends entirely upon the prospects of the growing crop and the coming season, and if proper care is taken at this period, no lumberdar should receive more than about two-thirds of the value of the opium he is expected to deliver, hence there is little room for outstanding balances, except of course when the weather is fickle, or a field is injured by hail or a succession of wet weather, or any other calamity happens.

Question 2d. Do the deputy and sub-deputy agents find it imperative to satisfy themselves that the contracting cultivator gives the necessary manual labour to the tillage of the ground, to the clearing and weeding of the crop, and so forth; and if they do find it necessary to exercise such a supervision over the ryots during the actual cultivation of the poppy, with a view to the protection of the interests of Government, what measures are taken to prevent undue exactions by native subordinates, vexatious interference with the other agricultural pursuits of the cultivators, and generally such minute or harassing inquiries as might tend to make the cultivation irksome and burdensome to the ryot, and to disgust him with the contract?

Answer 2d. Collectors, who are ex-officio deputy-agents, are not now-a-days called on to help the department, but the sub-deputy agents with their assistants control it. In this agency there are seven sub-divisions, and they are divided into the home and Chullan circles. The cultivators of the home division deliver their opium at the Sudder factory at Ghazeepoor, and their brethren of the Chullan circle deliver it at convenient stations fixed for the purpose of receiving it from them. The sub-deputies of the several Chullan circles or divisions receive, weigh, and examine all opium brought to them by their cultivators, and they chullan or forward it by boats to the Sudder factory, where it is again carefully examined by the opium examiner. The sub-deputies are now held responsible for the genuineness of their drug.

10. The seven sub-divisions of this agency are as follow: the Benares, Ghazeepoor, and Azimghur, forming the home division; the other four, the Chullan divisions.

Division.	Zillahs included in Sub-Deputy Agency.	Number of Assistants.	Number of Mohdomim or Superintendent.	Number of Gomashas and Kotees.		Number of Mohurrirs and Jemadars.		Number of Zilladars.
				G.	K.	M.	J.
Benares - - -	{ Mirzapoor, Benares, and parts of Juanpoor, Allahabad, and Ghazeepoor }	None - -	1 Native -	8	8	10	8	73
Ghazeepoor - -	Ghazeepoor - - - - -	Ditto - -	1 Eurasian -	6	6	15	6	60
Cawnpoor - - -	{ Cawnpoor, Etawah, Furruckabad, Mynpooree, and Shajehanpoor }	1 European -	1 ditto -	6	6	11	6	125
Futtehpoor - -	{ Futtehpoor, Banda, and part of Allahabad }	None - -	1 Native -	4	4	9	4	47
Azimghur - - -	{ Azimghur and parts of Juanpoor and Ghazeepoor }	Ditto - -	1 ditto -	6	6	17	6	54
Selimpoor - - -	Goruckpoor - - - - -	Ditto - -	1 European -	6	6	21	-	38
Goruckpoor - -	Ditto - - - - -	1 European -	1 Native -	10	10	27	-	58

11. Each sub-division is again sub-divided into zillahs over which there is a zillahdar, and now over two or three zillahdars is placed a mohurrir or jemadar, and over all comes the gomashta, the whole forming one kotee. There is a register kept of every cultivator in each zillahdary, the quantity of land he cultivates, its former produce, &c. The jurisdictions of the zillahdars are various, and are usually very extensive, and they are supposed to know everything about their cultivation and cultivators. Except during the period that the kotee officers are required at their respective head quarters to issue their advances, or to weigh off their opium, and to settle their accounts, they are usually supposed to be on supervision duty within their respective circles. During the rains, it is their duty to see that the lands are generally kept fallow and tolerably clean; later in the season, to take care that they are well ploughed, the poppy sown, and the lands irrigated; then they must attend to the weeding and clearing, and after a while, when the flower appears, to the manufacturing of leaves and collection of the juice or opium from the poppy; and, as soon as the collections are over, the kotee officers have to watch the cultivators to prevent their playing tricks with their opium, and to make them attend to it, as they are bound to do for their own interest as well as for that of Government. Intermediately, or as soon as the poppy is well up, the cultivation is measured by the kotee officers, in order that they may be sure the full quantity of land agreed for is duly cultivated.

12. The cultivation is entirely undertaken and continuously carried on by the cultivators at their own risk, and with their own implements, cattle, &c. The department occasionally assists the cultivators with the loan of a few rupees when they are in difficulty; and when considerable benefit is likely to arise, small sums are advanced (all without interest), to enable cultivators to clean, repair, or build new wells for purposes of irrigation.

13. Sub-deputy agents, their assistants, and mohdomims are required to, and they do exercise a general supervision over all the kotee officers, their acts and proceedings; they particularly watch their conduct and inquire into the character of each officer during their periodical tours of inspection, which are carried on every cold season, so as to prevent, as far as possible, exactions and vexatious interference with cultivators. They personally see to the payment of every rupee which is given to cultivators; they are always accessible, and they invariably pay prompt attention to all complaints, under the knowledge that a petition to the agent would immediately call for an explanation if they did not in the first instance listen to the cultivators. Mr. Osborne, Sub-deputy of Goruckpore, an officer of 25 years' experience, writes thus on this matter: "They (the sub-deputies), see also that the subordinates perform their duty; they have to hear and redress all complaints that may arise in the event of undue exactions having been attempted, or anything else that may occur. Complaints of exactions, however, are of rare occurrence in this district, because the cultivators receive their money into their own hands from their presiding European officer without the intervention of the lower subordinates at all; they are therefore tolerably secure from exactions of any kind, and the knowledge of the certain visit of the European officers on circuit, when all complaints respecting interference with the agricultural details would at once be heard and be promptly redressed, secures them from any harassing interference that might tend to make them dissatisfied with the cultivation."

14. Every officer of the department furnishes security according to his responsibility; and judging from five years' experience in this agency, I should say that there is now little or no exaction when compared with what was practised 20 or 30 years' since, and there is now no regular cess collected from the cultivators as formerly. Presents or buzshis are no doubt occasionally given to the kotee amla, but until the customs of the country are changed, this will never be put a stop to in any department of the State. Salaries and emoluments have greatly changed, while ways and means for extorting money no longer exist as in days gone by, when perquisitions into details and grievances were too often and easily passed over. Individuals formerly sought employment in this department to make a fortune in the shortest possible period, and without any compunction; but now-a-days their object is to obtain an appointment and to hold it until they can secure a pension, during which intervening period they hope to secure a competency.

15. No other proof is, I think, necessary to show that the poppy cultivation is popular than the fact that Koeries, a peculiar class of Hindoos, almost exclusively devoted to the growth of poppy, year after year, flock to the sub-deputies to enter into engagements; that during the mutinies in many parts of the country they sowed their lands against all the remonstrances of the disaffected, and amid many other difficulties, and that they declined receiving any advances or payment for their drug, until their villages were safe, and the roads open for them to carry their money home.

16. Only of late years, and since the price paid by Government has been reduced, have our cultivators left us, and they did so with reluctance, as poppy under the rates then given was not profitable, other crops fetching such high prices, and no encouragement being held out by the department. But as soon as the price was again raised, the cultivators commenced returning to us, and I doubt not all our old lands will once more be cultivated with poppy. The ryots have a confidence in Government which they have not in any other speculator or zemindar, and they feel sure they will be paid promptly by Government, which they are always sceptical about with other parties.

17. Another convincing proof that poppy is a popular cultivation may be instanced by the fact that hundreds of cultivators grow it in the province of Oude, and bring the drug to the Sudder factory at Ghazeepeer, a distance often of 150 miles, in preference to selling it to ticcadars and others within their own province. They receive nothing for their produce until they deliver it, and they are crying out for the introduction of our management into their province, so satisfied are they that we deal fairly by them.

Answer 4. In point of fact, there is no way of securing the produce against adulteration. The cultivators are cautioned against adulterating the drug, and if suspicion attaches, the gomashta inspects it; but this is seldom had recourse to. Our great safeguard is the knowledge that the departmental officers possess, and the certainty that adulteration is sure to be detected, and if to this be added the heavy punishment of forfeiture of the whole mass, refund of advances, and often prohibition against regrowing poppy, which is considered a very heavy punishment by ryots, the department is pretty well secured against malpractices.

Question 4. How is the produce secured from adulteration, and in whose presence is the amount which each cultivator may bring to the factory weighed and entered in the books, and are receipts given for the same, and, if so, by whom?

Appendix,
Part II.

18. As regards the delivery, weighment, examination, and appraisement of an assamee's opium and the subsequent adjustment of his account, two systems, though very nearly similar in their results, are in force in this agency. The assamees of the Home Division, as soon as their opium is supposed to be ready for delivery, are warned to attend at the Sudder factory at Ghazepore on a certain day. Each of the sub-deputies has a day allotted to him in rotation. Each cultivator, in company with his lumberdar, brings in his own opium separately to the weighment room, where it is taken out of his earthen vessels, and placed into tin tagars or bowls (which have been previously poised and counterpoised by the factory assistants,) and weighed before him. The weight is then called out by a dandedar or weighman in the presence of the cultivator, and the quantity is written down in English and Persian registers, by writers seated by the scales, and three tickets are prepared for it. The opium is then passed on with these tickets to the check tables, where invalid sergeants or soldiers are employed to check the dandedar's weight on behalf of Government. The weight being correct, the sergeant countersigns, and retains one ticket A., and passes on the tagar, together with the other two tickets, to the examiner's table, at which the opium examiner (a medical man) or one of the experienced sub-deputies (in turn) and the native purkhia or examiner preside. The apparent quality and consistence of the contents of each tagar in succession (and some two or three thousand are examined daily during the busy season,) is here settled by the opium examiner, and written down on both the tickets, B and C, accompanying the tagar. A specimen of the opium is then placed in its corresponding bucket (two rows of these buckets being arranged in front of the examiner's table), and the ticket B is put on the file attached to the bucket. The mass of the opium is then passed on with the other ticket C, into the malikhana or receiving room, where the opium is registered as per form F, and deposited in nands or large boxes numerically arranged for the reception of the various classifications of opium, as they may be specified in the tickets, whether they be of the first, second third, or any other quality above or below $\frac{7}{10}$ degrees, which is the standard consistence of the agency.

19. These proceedings are carried on before all the cultivators of the division, and any one may challenge or object to anything he pleases, as there are European assistants and sub-deputy agents frequently moving about the room to prevent fraud and collusion, and to hear complaints.

20. As soon as the opium has passed from the check table into the malikhana it belongs to Government, but its value is not fixed according to the consistence noted down on the tickets B and C at the examiner's table, but it is regulated by the result of the assay of the various specimens which are placed in the buckets, as soon as they are tested on the steam table, as explained below in paragraph 22.

21. The examination at the table is intended more particularly to ascertain that the opium is pure, and if it is found to be adulterated, or is suspected of being so, it is set aside for subsequent inquiry at the examiner's leisure.

22. As soon as a bucket is filled with specimens, it is passed, together with its file of tickets B, into the laboratory, where the contents are mixed up into one mass. Three specimens, weighing 100

* Assay of Plates No. 1	-	-	70° 25
Assay of Plates No. 2	-	-	70°
Assay of Plates No. 3	-	-	69° 75
		3)	210°

Average consistence - - - 70°
And this is marked on the Assay Ticket or Card.

grains each, are then carefully taken from this mass and dried on plates on steam tables, after which they are weighed by the assay superintendent. The average* of the three specimens settles the assay, and an assay card specifying the result is placed on the top of the file of tickets B, taken from the buckets, so that agreeably thereto every cultivator whose opium has been placed in that bucket may be eventually paid for it at that rate or at $\frac{7}{10}$ consistence.

23. In the evening the weighment registers are closed, the totals cast up, and early on the following morning the consistence, as entered on the assay card D, is written off by one of the European assistants on each cultivator's ticket C, received back from the malikhana for the purpose, and a corresponding entry is simultaneously made by English and Persian writers before the same assistant in the weighment register H, opposite to each cultivator's name; and as soon as this is done, the sub-deputy agent compares the weight and consistence with the weighment ticket and register, and the assay ticket, and then the calculations for payment are commenced by the kotee officers on the one hand, and by the surburakar of the factory and his staff, on the other. In the Pat. saltamam registers (I enclose one† for reference,) the gross weight, the dandeta or net price to be paid for the opium, the premium to be allowed, and deductions to be made, (according as the opium is above or below the agency standard of $\frac{7}{10}$ consistence,) and calculated agreeably to the assay mark, the scraping allowance payable to cultivators for every one of their pots, after they have scraped them to their heart's contents, the barburdari or transit allowance for bringing the opium to the factory, &c., are all calculated and detailed. The lumberdar's hathchittis are examined, the factory accounts transcribed upon them, and on the following day the sub-deputy agent of the division pays in his presence to each lumberdar the balance which by the account prepared, as I have stated above, is found to be due to him. This done, the lumberdars sit down in knots, inside and outside the factory, and adjust their accounts with their under-cultivators, the details on the hathchitti being sufficient for them to explain each individual's accounts to him, every advance including the final payment having been made in the presence of the sub-deputy agent or his assistant, and the weighment of the assamees' opium, in their own presence.

24. Mr. Osborne describes the system which is in force in the Chullan divisions as follows:—

"In the distant agencies the produce is always weighed in the presence of the sub-deputy agent or his European assistant, and the correctness of the weighments is tested by a second weighment before being sealed up and despatched to the Sudder agency, where the produce is again finally weighed, scrutinized, tested, appraised, and on the result being ascertained and forwarded to the district officer from the Sudder agency, the final settlement of accounts and payments of balances due to cultivators is always made in the presence of the sub-deputy agent or his European assistant, and by them registered in English at the time. The money is paid into the hands of the recipient alone. The opium is weighed invariably in the presence of the owners and competent witnesses, who never lose sight sight of the same until the jar is closed and sealed up before them. Receipts for the opium are always given to the owners of the drug at the time of weighment, each receipt being signed by the presiding European officer in charge. The weight of each person's opium is then and there registered into two separate books, prepared for that express purpose; one of which books is in the Urdu and the other in the Hindi character; an attested copy of the same is then given to the proprietor of the opium by way of receipt, as already stated above."

† Marked N.

25. There may be a little variation in the practice at the several sub-agencies, but the main object is carried out by all, viz., every lumberdar is paid his dues by the sub-deputy or his assistant; his opium is invariably weighed, examined, and valued in his own presence, and before the sub-deputy agent, and as soon as it is delivered, he is paid 14 annas out of the rupee, then and there, the other two annas being adjusted on return of the receipts and appraisal papers from the Sudder factory and this office.

Answer 5th. This question has been already disposed of by the answers given to questions 3 and 4. Of course the sub-deputies do their utmost to prevent the money, which is paid in their presence to lumberdars and assamees, being in any way touched by their kotee or Sudder officers, and if any portion should be misappropriated or taken away from them by force (zubordusti), the consequences are well known, and the delinquent would be immediately fined and dismissed the service of Government. I confess I do not think the assamees give away a great deal now-a-days, and if they are hard pressed, they are fully alive to their own interests to apply for redress and represent their grievances either to the sub-deputy or to me, as I am daily at the factory for several hours, and am always accessible.

Question 5th. At the conclusion of the season's operation, how and where are the cultivators paid? And do the authorities take any means to prevent the lawful gains of the contractors from being misappropriated by the underlings of the various offices?

Answer 6th. We have seldom any balances, and our cautious system of issuing advances pretty well protects us against any such misfortune. If hail or storms destroy crops, we often remit the balance; if crops do not yield enough to cover the advance, the lumberdar has to make good the difference, and he almost invariably does so when his account is adjusted; or if there are any peculiar circumstances connected with his case, he is permitted to enter into a kistbundi to pay up the balance within a given period.

Question 6th. What system is pursued with defaulting ryots, or with ryots whose crop is insufficient to clear off the advances?

26. Very few suits have been instituted by sub-deputy agents against defaulters during the five years I have been here, and Mr. Osborne, sub-deputy of Goruckpore, writes: "That in the course of his 22 years' experience in the Goruckpore district, he has never once had occasion to sue a defaulter for arrears of balances in any court of law, although close upon one crore and a quarter of rupees have passed through his hands in his district." We have of course the power of suing under the regulations and Acts of Government, but we can do without it.

Answer 7th. It is found next to impossible to prepare a trustworthy statement showing the gains and losses of opium cultivators during any series of years, and as the entire records of some of the sub-divisions were destroyed during the mutinies, the difficulties in the way of preparing such statements are greatly enhanced, but as you have in your demi-official note of the 26th May modified your call, I have endeavoured to prepare a statement marked (A.) which will, I trust, suffice for your purpose.

Question 7th. In connexion with this part of the subject, the Commission would be glad to have certain statements exhibiting the results of the operations with contractors in each factory of the agency as follows:—

Statement I. showing the gross number of ryots who had gained on the whole season, the average amount of the gains of such ryots, and the highest amount gained by any one ryot in each factory.

Statement II. showing the number of ryots who had lost, with average amount of their losses, and the greatest loss in any one instance in each factory.

Statement III. showing the number of ryots who had defaulted, and the number of suits instituted for the recovery of balances against such defaulters in each sub-division.

27. Our largest division is no doubt Goruckpore, and I subjoin Mr. Osborne's remarks upon the foregoing question, as they are a good deal to the point. He states that "on account of most of the office papers having been destroyed by the rebels in 1857, there is great difficulty, if not an impossibility, in arriving at correct data on the subject required in this paragraph. Again, the extent of actual profit or loss can only be known to the ryots or assamees themselves, and they are never over desirous of speaking out too openly on the subject of their gains, and it is at the same time almost equally impossible to arrive at a correct estimate of the actual cash expenses per beegah for cultivating their lands, because they seldom, if ever, pay in ready cash for agricultural labour. Neighbours and relatives mutually assist each other in most of the manual operations of the season. Land rent is the chief yearly item in their cash payments, and may be estimated at from three to four rupees per agency beegah. Implements must of course be had, but they are of the most primitive nature, and, once prepared, will last for years. The purchase of cattle occasionally occurs, and the cash would have to be spread over many years also. It is much more advantageous to the poppy cultivator to have a large family than a smaller one, as the services of every member of the same, down to those about four or five years of age, are available in every stage of the cultivation; it is only for a few hours daily that their labour in the field is more especially needed in the poppy cultivation. Were a capitalist to engage in such a cultivation, and pay in cash for the labour of each individual so employed, he would most likely find it a losing speculation. Again, the average of produce varies so much with variations of seasons and peculiarities of the soil in different parts of the district, that it is difficult to arrive at a correct average result. In 1849-50 the general average of my entire division was close upon seven seers of standard opium per beegah, the money value of which, including produce of the leaves and seeds, was Rs. 25. 9. 5½ per beegah, which is the highest on record for this sub-division. In other districts it is often much higher. For the last few years the average returns (annual) in this division has not exceeded Rs. 13. 13. 5. per beegah, but as higher prices have been lately sanctioned, I fully expect the prospects will soon mount up to the higher figure gained in former years."

28. Mr. Osborne has, however, prepared three statements, and they will be found marked (B.) (C.) and (D.); although they cannot be relied upon as absolutely correct, "the data," says Mr. Osborne, "given in all the columns, except in No. 8 of statements I. and II., are from official sources. The supposed amount expended in cultivating (column 8) is assumed only by the gomashtas, and possibly over-rated. I think but few cultivators would lay out so much in hard cash for the purpose; their rural transactions being mostly in kind, and the cash value of which it is next to impossible to ascertain with precision."

Appendix,
Part II.

29. Mr. Wilson, whose division extends over several zillahs, observes that "it is not very easy to ascertain with accuracy the profits which the cultivators realise from the poppy cultivation, as there is little money disbursed except for the payment of land rent; but judging from the facts, that few are found willing to relinquish it, although freely allowed to exercise the option of doing so; that unliquidated debts do not exist; and that, notwithstanding the most calamitous circumstances, when the whole of the fields have been destroyed by the visitation of a hail storm, the advances have invariably been honestly returned, law-suits for their recovery being unknown, and the people found ready to enter into renewed engagements, it may fairly be assumed that the advantages derived are not of a very common character; whilst the comfortable dwellings and homesteads, the numerous cattle, the good clothing, and, generally, the easy circumstances of the people who belong to the class which most largely engages in the production of opium, which are everywhere observable, fully testify to the beneficial effects of their connexion with the Government."

30. Mr. Wilson has prepared a statement, and though it does not exactly supply the information called for by you, it may nevertheless be acceptable. A transcript is subjoined.

SEASONS.	Total Land Cultivated.	Total Standard Produce.	Amount of Advances.	Quantity of Land producing less than three Seers per Beegah.	Quantity of Land producing more than three Seers per Beegah.	Amount of unliquidated Advances.	Amount of Final Payments.	REMARKS.
	B. b. d.	M. s. c.	Rs. a. p.	B. b. d.	B. b. d.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.
1853-54 -	17,736 4 -	3,529 - 9	2,32,551 13 5	17,252 18 -	483 6 -	678 8 2	2,73,021 11 6	Balance realised in full. No law-suits for recovery insti- tuted.
1858-59 -	13,561 9 -	1,619 27 7½	1,36,019 8 8	11,351 5 -	2,210 4 -	2,313 5 4	90,654 6 -
1859-60 -	13,205 8 -	1,939 28 9½	1,29,545 14 9	12,347 7 -	858 1 -	227 7 2	1,53,769 14 6
TOTAL -	44,503 1 -	7,088 16 9½	4,98,117 1 10	40,951 10 -	3,551 11 -	3,219 4 8	5,17,465 13 -

33. As requested, I do myself the pleasure of annexing copies of reports as per margin,* from Messrs. Osborne and Wilson, being the two officers who were particularly consulted by me.

I have, &c.
(signed) H. C. Hamilton, Agent.

From Thomas Wilson, Esq., Sub-Deputy Opium Agent, Benares and Mirzapore, to H. C. Hamilton Esq., Benares Opium Agent, Ghazepore, No. 37, dated 6 June 1860.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 26, dated the 21st instant, annexing a copy of a communication from the President of the Commission appointed to inquire into the system of indigo planting in Bengal, and directing me to furnish the information applied for.

In compliance with your instructions, I will endeavour to explain the characteristics of the system which is in operation in the home divisions of the Benares opium agency, i.e., in the districts of Ghazepoor, Azimghur, Jounpoor, Benares and Mirzapore, in the arrangements which are made for the production of the opium provision, and of the relations which exist between the cultivators and the Government.

1st. With regard to advances, it is a strict rule in this department that no person shall be compelled unwillingly to accept advances, or to enter into engagements to cultivate the poppy. It is entirely optional with every individual to renew his agreement or to relinquish the cultivation altogether.

2d. Agreements are made with one or more persons called lumberdars, who execute engagements and accept advances on their own account as well as on behalf of certain other under cultivators, who are their co-partners in the undertaking.

3d. The engagements or kabulyuts set forth clearly the terms and conditions on which the cultivators are permitted to engage in the undertaking; these are executed by the lumberdars on behalf of themselves and their sub-cultivators, whose names are inserted in the document; it provides that a stipulated quantity of land shall be brought under cultivation, the whole of the produce obtained from it be punctually delivered at the opium factory at Ghazepoor, in a pure and unadulterated state of a fixed standard consistence, and a fixed price. It also declares the penalties which attend any default or evasion of the terms of the contract; a counterpart of this document called a hathchitti, signed by an authorised officer, and bearing the official stamp, is given to the lumberdar, who holds it as a license to engage in the poppy cultivation.

4th. The

* From Mr. G. Osborne, sub-deputy agent of Goruckpore, No. 132, dated 31 May 1860.
From T. Wilson, sub-deputy of Benares, No. 37, dated 6th June 1860.

4th. The amount of the advance given to a lumberdar is regulated by a scale which proportions it to the average quantity of opium produced by the land in the previous seasons: thus, on land which produced only one seer or less, one rupee only is advanced, and so on to six rupees per beegah on land which yielded six seers and upwards. On new land an advance to the extent of six rupees per beegah may be given, if circumstances seem to justify the grant. The lands most suitable for growth of poppy are not always changed, but are often cultivated year after year; inferior land requires to be changed and to be allowed to remain fallow during the rainy season. The advances are paid in the presence of the sub-deputy agent twice during the year; the first payment occurs when the agreements are executed, the second in February, when the prospects of the cultivation may be judged of with some approach to accuracy; by this means, the cultivators seldom receive in advance more than two-thirds of the value of the opium which their land may fairly be expected to produce, consequently outstanding balances rarely occur, except when they are the effect of calamity and unusual vicissitudes of weather.

5th. The cultivation is undertaken and carried on entirely by the cultivators themselves, with their own agricultural implements, and at their own risk; supervision is exercised over them through the medium of gomashas and an establishment of zillahdars. It is the duty of the gomasha to measure the land that has been sown, to satisfy himself that it corresponds with the quantity under engagement; he is also expected to watch the progress of operations, and see that irrigation and weeding are carefully attended to, and after the produce has been collected, and whilst it remains in the hands of the cultivator, he must inspect it to form an estimate of the probable quantity of the provision, and to check attempts to adulterate the drug. The sub-deputy agents and their assistants exercise a general supervision over the whole of the operations: they watch the conduct of subordinate officers to prevent vexatious exactions; they personally attest every payment, and see that the cultivator is in every respect fairly dealt with, and they are expected to be readily accessible and to pay immediate attention to every complaint that may be brought before them.

6th. When the opium is found to be ready for delivery at the factory at Ghazeepeer, the cultivators are warned to be in attendance with the produce of their fields for weighment; the quantity belonging to each individual cultivator is separately weighed and valued by the opium examiner, and the result, quantity as well as quality, is entered on the hathchitti, so that each person may readily ascertain what he has earned; the accounts are adjusted without delay, and two days after the opium has been weighed, the cultivators receive their final payments in the presence of the sub-deputy agents. In the home divisions all these operations are completed during the month of May.

7th. It is not very easy to ascertain with accuracy the profits which the cultivators realize from the poppy cultivation, as there is little money disbursed, except for the payment of land rent; but, judging from the facts that few are found willing to relinquish it, although freely allowed to exercise the option of doing so; that unliquidated debts do not exist; and that, notwithstanding the most calamitous circumstances, when the whole of the fields have been destroyed by the visitation of a hail storm, the advances have invariably been honestly returned, law suits for their recovery being unknown, and the people found ready to enter into renewed engagements, it may fairly be assumed that the advantages derived are not of a very common character; whilst the comfortable dwellings and homesteads, the numerous cattle, the good clothing, and, generally, the easy circumstances of the people who belong to the class which most largely engages in the production of opium which are everywhere observable, fully testify to the beneficial effects of their connexion with the Government.

8th. The following statement, prepared for three years, will indicate the general results of the annual operations, and will perhaps enable the Commission to form an opinion of the advantages which cultivators derive for undertaking the cultivation of the poppy.

I have, &c.

(signed) Thomas Wilson,
Sub-Deputy Opium Agent.

SEASON.	Total Land Cultivated.	Total Standard Produce.	Amount of Advances.	Quantity of Land producing more than three Seers per Beegah.	Quantity of Land producing less than three Seers per Beegah.	Amount of unliquidated Advances.	Amount of Final Payment.	REMARKS.
	B. b. d.	M. s. c.	Rs. a. p.	B. b. d.	B. b. d.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.
1853-54 -	17,736 4 -	3,529 - 9	2,32,551 13 5	17,252 18 -	483 6 -	678 8 2	2,73,021 11 6	Balances realised in full. No law-suits for recovery instituted.
1858-59 -	13,561 9 -	1,619 27 7½	1,36,019 5 8	11,351 5 -	2,210 4 -	2,313 5 4	90,654 6 -
1859-60 -	13,205 8 -	1,939 28 9½	1,29,545 14 9	12,347 7 -	858 1 -	227 7 2	1,53,789 11 6
TOTAL -	44,503 1 -	7,088 16 9½	4,93,117 1 10	40,951 10 -	3,551 11 -	3,219 4 8	5,17,465 13 -

STATEMENT (A.)

Showing the Gross Number of Ryots (Assamees) who have gained on the whole Season, the Average Amount of the Gains of such Ryot, and the Highest Amount gained by any one Ryot in each Factory, for the three years 1856-57, 1857-58, and 1858-59.

1. DIVISION.	2. Years.	3. Total Average Produce of the Season.	4. Gross Number of Ryots who have gained the Average Amount in the whole Season.	5. Average Produce of the Season, for Column 4.	6. Highest Produce attained by any one Ryot.	7. Price of the Opium at Rs. 3-4 per Seer of Seed and Leaves of Column 6.	8. Supposed Amounts ex- pended in the Cultivation.	9. Profit gained with reference to Column 6.
		M. s. c.	Cultivators.	M. s. c.	M. s. c.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.
Goruckpoor -	1856-57 -	- 3 9½	130	- 6 13½	- 10 4	40 14 6	13 9 -	27 5 6
Ditto -	1857-58 -	- 4 4½	120	- 6 11½	- 10 -	41 8 -	14 3 -	27 5 -
Ditto -	1858-59 -	- 2 8½	107	- 4 12½	- 7 7	28 2 9	10 12 10	17 5 11

REMARKS.

The amounts in Columns 4 and 6 belong to individual cultivators, both lumberdars or under-assamees. I procured a number of cases from each hotee; from one, 18 cultivators, from another 10, and so on. The aggregate number of lumberdars or other assamees, whose accounts are given, is 130 for 1856-57, &c. &c.

The cultivation in Column 8 is given me from all the 10 gomashtas of my Division as the average of 130 beegahs cultivated by the same number of lumberdars, &c.; and is thus explained, viz. :—

Twenty ploughings* at three annas each	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	Rs. a. p.
Three weedings, by 18 people, at one anna each	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	3 12 -
Four waterings, by 32 people, at one anna each	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	1 2 -
Collection, by 32 people, at one anna each	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	2 - -
Land rent and aries , from three to four rupees	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	4 - -
Seed from two to two and a half seers, at 12 seers per rupee	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	- 3 -
Share of well expenses, preparing leaves, rope, &c. &c.	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	- 8 -
Per Beegah	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	Rs. 13 9 -

The above is the average cost, but the 10 gomashtas vary in their estimates, thus :—

1 Gomashta's estimate, at Rs. 11	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	Rs. a. p.
1 Ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	11 - -
4 Ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	12 - -
2 Ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	52 - -
1 Ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	28 - -
1 Ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	14 8 -
1 Ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	18 - -
Divide by 10	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	135 8 -
Average per beegah	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	13 9 -
But I have given the average	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	3.36

The profit shown in Column 9, of Statement (I.), is that of one individual only; it is all his own, at his own disposal, and not divisible amongst any of his under or other cultivators.

* This includes also sowing, harrowing, terracing, and manuring.

Benares Opium Agency, Ghazepoor, }
9 July 1860.

(signed) H. C. Hamilton, Agent.

STATEMENT (B.)

SHOWING the Number of Ryots (Assamees) who had Lost, with the Average Amount of their Losses and the greatest Loss in any one instance in each Factory, for the Three Years 1856-57, 1857-58, and 1858-59.

1.	2.	3.	4.	5.	6.	7.	8.	9.	10.
Division.	Years.	Total Average Produce of the Season.	Total Number of Ryots who have lost or not recovered Outlay.	Average Produce of the Season for Column 4.	Lowest Produce attained by any one Ryot.	Price of the Opium Seed and Leaves.	Supposed Amount expended in the Cultivation.	Loss to Ryot with reference to Column 6.	REMARKS.
		S. C.	Cultivators.	S. C.	S. C.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.
Goruckpoor-	1856-57	3 9½	86	1 4	0 6	3 2 -	9 8 -	6 6 -	The term Ryot means Lumberdar or Assamee , or both.
Ditto -	1857-58	4 4½	139	0 15	0 8	2 8 3	8 12 -	6 3 9	Rebellion all over the division in this year.
Ditto -	1858-59	2 3½	239	0 14	0 11	3 - 9	8 12 -	5 11 3	Season very unfavourable.

The loss in Column 9 is supposed to be on one beegah. The cultivation charges given by the gomashtas is the average of the number of cases given in Column 4, but they vary also in amount: the lowest being stated at four rupees, the highest at 13 rupees per beegah.

Benares Opium Agency, Ghazeepoor,
9 July 1860.

(signed) H. C. Hamilton, Agent.

STATEMENT (C.)

SHOWING the Number of Ryots who had defaulted, and the Number of Suits instituted for the Recovery of Balances against such Defaulters in each Sub-division, for the years 1856-57, 1857-58 and 1858-59.

1.	2.	3.	4.	5.	6.	7.	8.	9.	10.
Division.	Years.	Lumberdars.	Under Cultivators.	Total Number of Cultivators.	Number of Ryots Defaulters.	Number of Suits instituted.	Amount of Outstanding all recovered each Season.	Total Outlay of the Season for Opium Leaves only.	REMARKS.
							Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.
Goruckpoor	1856-57	3,949	61,322	65,271	369	none	5,290 - 6	6,63,710 9 11
Ditto -	1857-58	1,398	4,627	6,025	54	none	176 1 11	64,157 12 6	Rebellion raging fiercely all over this division.
Ditto -	1858-59	3,285	45,919	49,204	752	none	10,992 7 -	2,49,676 9 7	Season very unfavourable, and district yet much unsettled.

Benares Opium Agency, Ghazeepoor,
9 July 1860.

(signed) H. C. Hamilton, Agent.

No. 4.

ESTIMATED EXPENSE of cultivating One Beegah Poppy, and Value of its Produce. High Culture, irrigated.

EXPENSE.		VALUE OF PRODUCE.
	Rs. a. p.		Rs. a. p.
Rent - - - - -	12 - -	Ten seers opium, at three rupees eight annas - - - - -	35 - -
Ploughing 20 times, at four annas - - -	5 - -	Two and half maunds of poppy seed, at two rupees - - - - -	5 - -
Laying out terraces and sprinkling manure -	8 - -	Net proceeds of eight maunds of marrooa - - -	7 - -
Hoeing and weeding - - - - -	1 8 -	Value of poppy stalks - - - - -	8 - -
Watering 15 times, including a man to work in the terraces - - - - -	4 1 -	Garlic and vegetables removed during cultivation - - - - -	2 - -
Gathering, including the cutting and collecting, 80 labourers at one anna each -	5 - -
Maintenance of khattadars and miscellaneous expenses at time of taking advances, &c. - - - - -	1 8 -
Five seers seed - - - - -	6 - -
Profit, say - - - - -	19 9 -
Total - - - Co.'s Rs.	49 8 -	Total - - - Co.'s Rs.	49 8 -

This estimate does not include any allowance for stock, implements of husbandry, nor other miscellaneous expenses, a share of which should of course be put upon the beegah of poppy land under consideration; nor does it comprise poppy leaves and trash, which are not, however, sufficiently remunerative to affect much the general result as regards profit and loss. Leaves and trash upon the average, I believe, barely pay the labour employed in their production.

(signed) C. Hollings, Sub-Deputy Opium Agent.

ESTIMATED EXPENSE of cultivating One Beegah Poppy, and Value of its Products. Low Culture, irrigated.

EXPENSE.		VALUE OF PRODUCE.
	Rs. a. p.		Rs. a. p.
Rent - - - - -	6 - -	Five seers opium, at three rupees, eight annas - - - - -	17 8 -
Ploughing 12 times - - - - -	3 - -	Two maunds poppy seed at two rupees - - -	4 - -
Terracing and spreading and top dressing -	1 - -	Net proceeds of eight maunds marrooa - - -	6 - -
Watering 10 times - - - - -	2 12 -	Value of poppy stalks - - - - -	6 - -
Gathering, including cutting and collecting, 48 labourers - - - - -	3 - -	Ditto of garlic and vegetables weeded out in the course of cultivation - - -	1 8 -
Maintenance of khattadars and miscellaneous expenses at time of taking advances, &c. - - - - -	1 8 -
Cost of five seers seed - - - - -	6 - -
Profit, say - - - - -	11 12 -
Total - - - Co.'s Rs.	29 6 -	Total - - - Co.'s Rs.	29 6 -

This estimate does not include any allowance for stock, implements of husbandry, nor other miscellaneous expenses, a share of which should of course be put upon the beegah of poppy land under consideration; nor does it comprise poppy leaves and trash, which are not, however, sufficiently remunerative to affect much the general result as regards profit and loss. Leaves and trash upon the average, I believe, barely pay the labour employed in their production.

(signed) C. Hollings, Sub-Deputy Opium Agent.

(A).—GYA ASSAMIWAR.

1.	2.	3.	4.	5.	6.	7.	8.	9.	10.	11.
Year.	Number of Beegahs cultivated.	Number of Cultivators.	Average Cultivation per Man.	Average Opium produce per Beegah.	Total Value of Opium, Leaves, and Trash.	Portion of Amount in Column 6, advanced prior to delivery of Opium.	Amount Payments at delivery of Opium and final Adjustment.	Average per Cultivator on Amount in Column 9.	Highest Amount paid to any one Cultivator in Column 8.	Highest Amount paid to any one Khatta in Column 8.
	Rs. c. d.		Bs. c. d.	Mds. s. c.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.
1856-57	47,221 10 4	71,502	0 13 4	0 4 10	7,11,674 15 11	3,64,592 - -	3,67,473 11 -	5 2 2½	125 8 -	1,213 3 3
1857-58	41,577 17 0	67,752	0 12 5	0 4 14½	6,59,717 5 6	3,41,820 - -	3,38,139 5 6	4 15 10	110 - -	1,387 8 -
1858-59	44,538 15 0	65,912	0 13 10	0 4 3½	6,12,433 7 2	3,78,761 - -	2,57,304 11 4	3 14 5½	103 - -	648 7 6

The number of beegahs mentioned in column 2 includes the whole land engaged for poppy, without deducting the land on which the crop wholly or partially failed.

The highest amount paid to a single cultivator does not mean the amount paid to a khatta. Some khattadars have received more than twelve or thirteen hundred rupees at the weighments and final adjustment, as may be seen from column 11.

Gya, Sub-Deputy Opium Agency,
June 1860.(signed) C. Hollings,
Sub-Deputy Opium Agent.

(B.)—KHATTAWAR.

1.	2.	3.	4.	5.	6.	7.	8.	9.	10.	11.	12.
Year.	Number of Khattas.	Average Number of Assamees per Khatta.	Average Cultivation per Khatta.	Total Value of Opium, Leaves and Trash.	Portion of Amount in Column 5, being Balance due to Khattas by Government on delivery of Opium.			Balance due to Government by Khattas on delivery of Opium.			Highest Amount of Balance due by any one Khatta.
					Number of Khattas.	Amount.	Average per Khatta.	Number of Khattas.	Amount.	Average per Khatta.
			Bs. c. d.	Rs. a. p.		Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.		Rs. a. p.	Rs. a. p.	Rs. . p.
1856-57	- 5,141	14	9 3 14	7,11,674 15 11	4,188	3,67,473 11 -	87 11 14	953	20,390 11 2	21 6 4	274 14 9
1857-58	- 4,800	14	8 13 5	6,59,717 5 6	3,934	3,38,139 5 6	85 15 3	866	20,242 - -	23 6 -	241 5 11
1858-59	- 4,798	14	9 5 13	6,12,433 7 2	3,696	2,57,304 11 4	69 9 10	1,102	23,632 4 2	21 7 -	238 13 9

Gya; Sub-Deputy Opium Agency,
June 1860.

(signed) C. Hollings,
Sub-Deputy Opium Agent.

No. 5.

TRANSLATION of Kabulyat of a Molunghee employed in the Manufacture of Salt on account of Government in the Central Cuttack Salt Agency.

I, the undersigned Choolia, Molunghee of Arung do hereby bind myself to manufacture salt on account of Government under the following conditions:—

That I agree to a taidad of maunds and engage people, on my part, to conduct in the manufacture.

The daily account of salt manufactured to be attested by myself, and that the salt to be adulled,* and remain in my custody until weighed off by bhangah.† In the event of any loss occurring I shall make good of it. In the event of my conniving, and that be proved by the Arung darogah, I agree to be subjected to the existing rules.

I will attend personally, and get my salt weighed off to Government.

In case of my absence, my salt to be weighed in the presence of assessor, and the price of that salt only to be paid to me at the rate six annas per maund.

I will manufacture salt in the place where I may be ordered; in case I manufacture salt against the rules of Government, I agree to be liable by that rule, and further be struck off from Government employ.

The bhangah and the advance money to be noted down by the darogah; the above advance to be adjusted with reference to my coote salt, and in the event of any outstanding balance against me to be made good by me.

In the event of decrease in my coote after bhangah, shall likewise be made good by me at the selling rate of salt. All orders issued on me shall be promptly attended to; the Government claim against me shall be forthwith made good.

In the event of my death, all Government claim against me should be liquidated from the effects both of mine and that of my security.

In the event of my salt being proved to be adulterated, I will not claim the price of that salt from Government.

I will not pay anything to amla; if paid and proved I will undergo any punishment you will pass on me.

TRANSLATION of Molunghee Hath Chittas.

HATHCHITTA granted to Dunye Mullick, Molunghee, on account of the Salt year 1266 S. S.

Dated and Year when Money advanced.	Amount in Company's Rupees.	Signature of the Molunghee.	Total of Bhangah Salt received from Molunghee.
21 October 1859 - -	15
Note.—Advanced on 27 April 1860 - - -	5

* Heaped and stamped.

† Weighment.

No. 6.

RATE per Maund paid to the Molunghees as Prime Cost of Salt. Filed by Mr. Grote.

	1850-51.	1851-52.	1852-53.	1853-54.	1854-55.	1855-56.	1856-57.	1857-58.	1858-59.	1859-60.
	Annas.	Annas.	Annas.	Annas.	Annas.	Annas.	Annas.	Annas.	Annas.	Annas.
Chittagong -	8½	8	- -	7	7	9	9	10½ and 12*	10½ and 12*	10½ and 12*
Hidgellee -	6	6	5 and 5½†	5½ and 5†	5½ and 5†	7 and 6†	7 and 6†	7 and 6†	7 and 6†	7 and 6†
Tumlook§ -	7	7	6 and 6½	6 and 6½	6 and 6½	7 and 7½	7 and 7½	7 and 7½	7½ and 8	7½ and 8
24-Pergunnahs	-	-	- -	- -	- -	8, 9, 10 & 11	8, 9, 10 & 11	-	-	-
ORISSA.
Balasore -	5	5	5	5	5	5 and 8¶	6	6	6	6
Cuttack -	5	5	5	5	5	5 and 8¶	6	6	6	6
POREE:
Chilka Lake -	6	6	6	6	6	6	7	7	7	7
Ustrings -	5	5	5	5	5	5 and 8¶	6	6	6	6
Kurkutch -	2	2	2	2	2	2 and 3½	3	3	3	3

* In Chittagong the higher rate was for Nizampore, a recently opened auring in the north of the district.

† The lower rate obtained in the northern aurgings; the higher in the southern.

‡ The higher rate in all the aurgings except Bograi.

§ In Tumlook a higher rate has always prevailed in the two northern aurgings, because of the scarcity of fuel there.

|| In the 24-Pergunnahs the highest rate obtained only in Auring Tuffal; the lower rates there and in other aurgings.

¶ In the year 1855-56 the principle was tried in the Cuttack Agencies of offering a reward of three annas per maund on salt manufactured in excess of the taidad.

12 June 1860.

(signed) Thos. C. Ledlie.

No. 7.

AVERAGE QUANTITY of Salt manufactured and Price paid to each Molunghee in 1264 S. S., or 1857-58.

Names of Arungs.	Number of Choolees.	Number of Molunghees.	Quantity of Salt Manufactured during the Year.	Value at the Rate of Six Annas per Maund.	Average in favour of each Molunghee.
					Quantity of Salt.	Value of Salt.
			Mds. s. c.	Rs. a. p.	Mds. s. c.	Rs. a. p.
Arung Moondamolung	146	360	41,386 0 0	15,519 2 -	114 37 12	43 1 9
„ Uttar Kanpore	81	578	80,784 10 0	11,544 1 6	53 10 9	19 15 6½
„ Sath Bhya -	65	267	16,641 20 0	6,240 9 -	62 13 0	23 5 11½
„ Dukhin Kanpore	138	1,085	76,086 10 0	28,532 5 6	70 5 0	26 4 9
„ Bakood - -	96	578½	25,603 10 0	9,601 3 6	44 9 0	16 9 6
„ Dukhin Dhobye	239	966	51,793 20 0	20,547 9 -	56 29 0	21 4 4
„ Hurrichpore -	395	866	76,616 20 0	28,731 3 -	88 18 4	33 2 10
TOTAL - - -	1,160	4,700½	3,21,911 10 0	1,20,716 11 6

REMARKS.—In addition to this, each Molunghee receives two seers of salt per mensem, equal in price to one anna seven pie.

No. 7.

AVERAGE QUANTITY of Salt Manufactured and Price paid to each Molunghee in 1265 S. S., or 1858-59.

Names of Arungs.	Number of Choolces.	Number of Molunghees.	Quantity of Salt Manufactured during the Year.	Value at the Rate of Six Annas per Maund.	Average in favour of each Molunghee.
					Quantity of Salt.	Value of Salt.
			Mds. s. c.	Rs. a. p.	Mds. s. c.	Rs. a. p.
Moondamolung -	140	361	39,143 0 0	14,678 10 -	108 17 3	40 10 7
Sath Bhya -	60	228	13,331 20 0	4,999 5 -	58 18 13	21 15 11
Uttar Kanpore -	79	626	30,467 0 0	11,425 2 -	48 26 7½	18 7 11½
Dukhin Kanpore -	111	883½	65,073 10 0	24,402 7 6	73 26 0	27 9 11
Bakood -	105	669	33,060 30 0	12,405 4 6	49 17 15	18 8 10
Dukhin Dhoby -	252	1,010	40,382 0 0	15,143 4 -	39 39 4½	14 15 11½
Hurrichpore -	417	899	68,619 0 0	25,732 2 -	76 13 2	28 10 -
TOTAL -	1,164	4,676½	2,90,096 20 0	1,08,786 3 -

No. 8.

MEMORANDUM of Outstanding Balances against the Molunghees for 1265 S. S., or 1858-59.
Filed by Mr. Eden, 23d July 1860.

Amount of 1st advance -	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	Rs. a. p.
Ditto of 2d - ditto -	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	59,935 - -
Ditto of 3d - ditto, or fazil advance -	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	46,063 - -
										7,350 10 6
										1,13,349 2 6
Deduct,										Rs. a. p.
Refunded by the Molunghees during the year -	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	1,839 - 6
Value of salt produced -	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	1,08,786 3 - 1,10,625 3 6
Balance outstanding against the Molunghees -	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	Rs. 2,723 15 -

This sum was refunded by the Molunghees in the following year.

No. 9.

MEMORANDUM showing the Number of Cases in each of the Five Years preceding 1 August 1859, in which Distraint has been resorted to in the Salt Agency of Cuttack, under the provision of Section XVIII, Act XXIX of 1838. Filed by Mr. Eden.

					Total Number of Cases.
From 1st August 1854 to 31st July 1855	-	-	-	-	3
Ditto ditto 1855 to ditto 1856	-	-	-	-	7
Ditto ditto 1856 to ditto 1857	-	-	-	-	2
Ditto ditto 1857 to ditto 1858	-	-	-	-	1
Ditto ditto 1858 to ditto 1859	-	-	-	-	1

Appendix,
Part II.

No. 10.

COMPARATIVE STATEMENT of the Exports of Rice from Calcutta to all Ports, for Ten Years.

					Maunds.	Tons.
1850-51	-	-	-	-	31,41,022	-
		(Great Britain)	-	-	6,78,097	115,170
1851-52	-	-	-	-	30,91,562	-
		(Great Britain)	-	-	6,61,391	113,357
1852-53	-	-	-	-	32,43,440	-
		(Great Britain)	-	-	8,63,735	118,926
1853-54	-	-	-	-	43,80,903	-
		(Great Britain)	-	-	10,56,053	160,633
1854-55	-	-	-	-	52,73,968	-
		(Great Britain)	-	-	14,79,181	193,375
1855-56	-	-	-	-	91,86,259	-
		(Great Britain)	-	-	30,59,261	336,829
1856-57	-	-	-	-	81,98,646	-
		(Great Britain)	-	-	20,83,673	300,617
1857-58	-	-	-	-	82,46,331	-
		(Great Britain)	-	-	14,75,464	302,617
1858-59	-	-	-	-	48,90,098	-
		(Great Britain)	-	-	4,77,486	179,303
1859-60	-	-	-	-	43,71,310	-
		(Great Britain)	-	-	3,44,513	160,281

22 August 1860.

(signed) F. J. Cockburn,
Offg. Collector of Customs.

Appendix,
Part III.

APPENDIX, PART III.

LETTER from the Rev. A. Duff, D.D., LL.D., to the President of the Commission.

THIS letter from the Rev. Dr. Duff was not received until the report of the Commission had been drawn up and considered; though it is proper to add that of this the author, at the time, was not aware. After touching on some of the main points in the indigo controversy, it proceeds to discuss, in a very broad and comprehensive spirit, the subject of popular education, as the chief remedy for the evils disclosed by the present inquiry. The education of the masses did not naturally suggest itself as an essential part of our inquiry, and though fully alive to its importance, we did not think it incumbent on us to mention it in our report. But looking to the character and position of the writer, it has been deemed very desirable to give circulation to the views embodied in the letter on a subject of such paramount interest to all concerned in the elevation of the ryot.

To W. S. Seton-Karr, Esq., President of the Indigo Commission, &c.

Sir,

As President of the Indigo Commission of Inquiry, you solicited at the outset, information or suggestions in writing, from any parties who might have any to offer.

Reason for not writing earlier

The sphere of my own labours having been all along restricted mainly to Calcutta, I never had it in my power, from personal observation, to become acquainted with the workings of the indigo system. During the last thirty years, however, I have conversed much and frequently with planters, zemindars and other natives thoroughly familiar with it; and have perused many documents by divers parties, favourable and unfavourable, alike in print and manuscript, which treated of the subject in all its varied aspects. In these several ways, I could not fail to acquire a tolerably intimate knowledge of the leading details of the system, both past and present.

Reason for writing now.

Still, owing to my personal inexperience in the matter, I might not have felt myself called on to submit any considerations respecting it, were it not that, among the remedies suggested by witnesses, I do not find any express reference to the supremely important one of the education of the people. Now, feeling keenly that, without this essential ingredient, all other attempted remedies will, to a great extent, prove abortive; and in total ignorance of the conclusion arrived at by the Commissioners, or of the prospective measures to be recommended by them, I beg, though with much diffidence and hesitancy, to offer the following remarks:—

The aspect under which missionaries

I. With the bearings of the indigo system, in a merely political or commercial point of view, I never felt it to be any concern of mine, in any way, to intermeddle. But to its bearings on the moral and social social

social welfare of the people, to the task of whose elevation from the depths of a debasing ignorance my whole life has been consecrated, I have always felt it incumbent to give due heed, whenever circumstances forced it on my attention. And this I take to be the real position of all true-hearted missionaries with regard to it. On various occasions, in different ways, and in sundry localities, the system, in its effects on the tempers and dispositions of the people, has been found crossing their evangelistic course, and presenting impediments to the attainment of their philanthropic ends; somewhat as a jagged ledge of rock or treacherous bank of sand at the mouth of a navigable river, may be found barring all free or safe ingress or egress to the fleets of a peaceful and profitable commerce. In such circumstances, did not faithfulness to their sacred trust bind them to resort to all fair and legitimate means for the abatement or removal of the obstacle which tended so adversely to impede their progress and thwart their benevolent efforts?

II. In common with my missionary brethren of all churches and denominations, who have spoken their mind on the subject, I repudiate, with my whole heart and soul, anything like ill-will to indigo planters or hostility to indigo planting, as such. On the contrary, as regards the planters, some of them have been, and still are, among the number of my personal friends, greatly and deservedly respected; and I should be ashamed of myself were I not, on every proper occasion, to avow my firm persuasion that those of them, thus intimately known to me, have been and are, men of rectitude and honour, who would scorn wilfully to injure, oppress or defraud any of their fellow creatures. And as regards the general body of planters, as such, no sane person can allow himself to entertain causeless prejudices, or feelings of aversion and enmity towards them, any more than towards the cultivators of rice or cotton, the sugar-cane or the mulberry tree. In so far as any of them may have succeeded in introducing a large amount of capital to be expended in promoting the growth of a valuable and easily transportable mercantile commodity, in bringing wastes and jungles into cultivation, and in giving remunerative employment to multitudes of needy labourers, they deserve well of the Government and people of India.

As to indigo itself, even if it had been a foreign plant, transferred to this country like the potato, who could possibly object to it, provided its culture were found profitable to all parties concerned? But indigo, from the earliest ages, has been well known as an indigenous product of India. Brought thence to Europe, as a favourite dye and prized article of commerce, it derived, according to ancient classic authors, its name of Indicum, from the country in which it grew. That indigo, therefore, should continue still to be raised in India, seems to be as much the design of Providence, as that rice or the sugar-cane should be raised in it; and, properly cultivated, it ought, equally with these and other indigenous growths, to contribute in due and fitting proportion to the temporal well being and comfort of its inhabitants. Consequently, the compulsory disappearance of such a product from our Indian fields and markets ought to be viewed in the light of a national calamity.*

III. The real question, then, which is presently agitated, has no reference to the merits of indigo planting in itself, or of indigo as an article of commerce, or of indigo planters, whether viewed in their personal qualities as men, or their relative capacity as capitalists. No! It is simply this:—Whether the indigo system, as hitherto carried on in certain districts of Bengal, has not subjected the ryot to a larger or less degree of injustice, oppression and wrong?

That such has been the case, more or less, is the painful impression left on my own mind, from the varied information obtained, long before the appointment of the recent Commission. Indeed, I had not been long in the country, when I began to hear of secret murmuring and discontent among the ryots in certain quarters on account of the system of indigo planting. About fifteen years ago, the then newly formed "Bengal British India Society" circulated queries relative to the condition of the peasantry, and published varied and elaborate answers from intelligent and respectable natives in the interior. Besides pointing, with commendable fidelity, to the exactions and ill-usage endured by ryots from zemindars, these answers minutely described many of the prevalent wrongs and injuries sustained at the hands of planters, in connexion with the practical working of the indigo system.

But how, it has been asked, did not the alleged dissatisfaction, thereby originated, openly manifest itself at an earlier period, if it really existed? Simply because the labouring population of Bengal have, through all ages, been of an abject and servile spirit. Their own sacred law and institutions have constituted them practically serfs; their rulers, whether Hindu or Mahomedan, have uniformly treated them as virtually serfs. To this practical or virtual serfdom, they had been habituated from birth; and to it they had become resigned from ancient tradition and immemorial usage, alike civil and sacred. Having been thus led to regard their condition as decreed unalterably by fate, they were predisposed patiently to submit to almost any amount of oppression and wrong, on the part of their natural superiors, whether brahmans or zemindars, planters or rulers; though like all other people, they could silently bear much more from oppressors of their own race than from foreigners. Ready, however, to acknowledge all rulers de facto, and regarding in their ignorance the planters as only a portion of the ruling authorities, whom they were bound to obey, they doubtless felt themselves under obligation to submit to much at their hands, which otherwise they might have been prepared sooner openly to resent. During the last thirty years, by the circulation of newspapers, pamphlets and books, and the agency of educated natives scattered up and down through the Mofussil, new ideas have been slowly but surely beginning to glimmer on the darkened understandings of the many. Feelings of discontent under what had begun to loom on their misty minds, though vaguely and indistinctly, as unwarranted or illegal oppressions, became intensified, though still suppressed. But though suppressed as regards outward manifestation, they were only secretly "bottled up," until ready for outburst.

Appendix, Part III.

have to do with the indigo question.

No hostility to indigo or indigo planters.

The real question at issue stated.

Discontent of ryots not recent.

Why so long suppressed.

This

* During the last forty years, the annual value of indigo exports from Bengal has varied from a million and a half to nearly four millions.

Appendix,
Part III.

Famous per-wannah not the cause of the discontent, but only the incidental occasion of its manifestation.

This outburst was apparently occasioned, not caused, by the famous perwannah. It did not create the feelings of discontent; these existed in full force before. It was not, therefore, the cause of the sudden and unexpected uprising against the indigo system; it was only the incidental occasion of developing feelings which had long been pent up, and had become ripe and ready to break out into open acts of resistance and violence. It has ever been so, in all cases of popular insurrections and tumultuary riots, in all countries and through all ages. These have always been preceded by a growing sense of real or imaginary wrongs; though it may have been reserved for some trivial circumstance, some passing accident or undesigned occurrence, to be the immediate occasion of "tapping" the reservoir of accumulated discontent.

If in ordinary circumstances, a common blacksmith should aim a fatal blow with his hammer at an authorised collector of taxes, he would be taken up and condemned with the full approval of a contented and loyal community. But in England, five centuries ago, an odious poll-tax was imposed and exacted with such relentless severity, that the working classes felt themselves grievously oppressed. Consequently, a spirit of irritation and discontent was engendered, which rankled and festered, like a virulent gangrene beneath an apparently smooth outward surface. With combustible materials in such a state of preparedness for explosion, the sudden and unpremeditated stroke of Wat Tyler's hammer proved the signal of one of the most terrible popular outbreaks on record. And the authentic history of all progressive nations could furnish illustrative incidents and events of a similar character. So with the celebrated perwannah. Meant merely to convey a simple declaration of an undoubted right, it would, in ordinary circumstances, have been perfectly innocuous. But issued among a people, in whose secret souls the elements of discontent had, by yearly increments, accumulated to repletion, it fell like a spark on a long prepared train, and proved the occasion of a sudden and wide-spread ignition.

The antecedent existence of discontent from oppression clear from the testimony of witnesses.

That the ryot has been underpaid admitted even by interested parties.
Legitimate inference from this, as to oppression and consequent discontent.

That such discontent, as the natural result of oppression, did exist long previously, is surely the conclusion which every candid and impartial mind must deduce from the tout ensemble of the miscellaneous evidence, given before the Commission, as already published. Without specifying particular items, who, for example, can peruse the various admissions, direct and indirect, even of some of the parties most interested, without being impressed with the conviction that, of late years in particular, the ryots have been more or less under-paid for the produce of their fields? or, that to them the cultivation of indigo has been unremunerative, or far less remunerative than would have been the cultivation of rice, and other products? And who does not perceive that this single and most vital admission does in reality involve in it a settlement of the main question in debate? For, who ever heard of human beings, and least of all Bengalis, voluntarily engaging, year after year, in unremunerative cultivation and labour, and that, too, for the aggrandisement of strangers and foreigners of a different race and a different faith? The thing is utterly incredible. There must, then, have been a system of direct or indirect compulsion of some kind. And how could such a system, usually carried out by greedy, rapacious and unscrupulous native agents, fail to involve a larger or less amount of injustice, oppression and wrong? And how could such injustice, oppression and wrong be continuously practised, year after year, without producing a large amount of disaffection and discontent? Had the admissions and correlative remedial suggestions on this and other topics, recently made by Mr. Forlong in circumstances that redound greatly to his credit for frankness and candour, been spontaneously made and acted on, three or four years ago, by the body of planters generally, these would, in all reasonable probability, have been treated as benefactors by the ryots, and indigo planting might have become as popular as it is now unhappily distasteful.

Call for truce to recrim. na-tory charges and counter charges.

IV. Such being the general conclusion already forced upon independent minds by unimpeachable evidence, should the careful and painstaking inquiry now soon to be brought to a close, be found to issue in demonstrating the existence, to a greater or less extent, of the grievances complained of,—would there not be a moral congruity in the prompt and candid acknowledgment of the fact, by the parties chiefly involved? And would there not be a moral dignity in the acknowledgment, were it accompanied with expressions of regret for the past, and of resolute determination to follow amended courses of action for the future? Would not the very announcement of such regrets and determination—so obviously prompted by sound reason, enlightened policy and a sense of equity—pave the way for a restoration of lost confidence, a renewal of interrupted intercourse, and the establishment of permanent and mutually beneficial relations between the planter and the ryot? And would not another happy result of such a course of procedure be, to put an end to the bootless war of criminating charges and recriminatory counter-charges, hitherto carried on through sundry representative organs of class opinions in the spirit of a fierce and fiery partisanship? Making due allowance for differences resulting from educational bias and race prejudices, as well as for the temporary excitation of irascible passions in proportion as conflicting interests became jeopardised, it cannot but be lamented that the indigo controversy should ever have reached such a height of blind rage and indiscriminate denunciation. The prolonged continuance of such one-sided and implacable combativeness can only tend still farther to exasperate men's feelings; to deepen wounds already sore enough; to widen breaches, already all but irreparable—and ultimately to render Government itself utterly impracticable. A truce, then, to all this angry and tumultuous warfare! And, instead, let all, after making due acknowledgment and amends for the past, according to their respective short-comings, henceforth, in a calm, amicable pacific spirit, unite together in seeking out and devising appropriate remedies for the future.

All parties have some grounds of complaint.

In order to this, let all parties, in the spirit of candour and honesty, cheerfully admit and concede to each other, what the truth and reality of facts may seem to demand. Were the whole story of the past century fully unfolded, there can be little doubt that all would have their several budgets of grievances as well as excuses. The zemindar would have his complaints against the planter, and the planter against the zemindar. The ryot would point, in bitterness, to the multitudinous oppressions and exactions on the part of planters and zemindars, or rather their hard-hearted underling agents; and the planter and zemindar would point, in return, to what they had to endure from the crass ignorance, cunning, lying, deceit, and dishonesty of the ryot. Government officials would complain of the the interminable bickerings and feuds between planters, zamindars and ryots; while all of these might have still more ample ground of complaint against the intolerable corruption of the police, together with the endless and nameless briberies, perjuries and forgeries connected with Mofussil Courts, which too often rendered the administration of law a tragedy or a farce, and the attainment of justice a lottery or an impossibility.

On the other hand, it cannot be doubted that all these parties severally would have much to urge, by way of mitigation or palliation.

The present zemindar might say, that having been denuded of many of those powers, or conceded rights, which his predecessors had exercised, and the exercise of which had given them weight and authority with the people, he has been driven to resort to many expedients not sanctioned by the law.

The present planter might say, that the indigo planting system, as conducted by Europeans, sprung up in the troublous and anarchical times which succeeded our assumption of the Dewanny—that, at the outset, it was fostered by the Government of the East India Company, whose agents were the most voracious and unscrupulous of adventurers—that factories and factory property have, in many cases, descended, as hereditary vested rights, to the present possessors—and that, in working out a previously established system not of their own devising, they have had to contend with the stubborn genius of old conservatism, to grapple with the enormous difficulties arising out of their own anomalous position in the eye of the law, the complicated and inextricable claims of zemindars and ryots, and, above all, the delays and indescribable chicaneries connected with the police and Mofussil Courts.

The present ryot might say, that, being oppressed and trodden down on all hands, by the emissaries of zemindars and planters, the police and the courts, he has, in desperation, been constrained to betake himself to the only weapons which the victims of social and civil tyranny can ever command—cunning, evasion, and deceit.

The present Government might say, that it is not responsible for the organization of the existing police and judicial system—that it was established in times of universal lawlessness, with the honest intention of ministering law and justice to all classes—that many of its imperfections and shortcomings arose from ignorance of the feelings, manners, habits, and requirements of the people—and that, even after time and experience have brought to light its unsuitableness and inadequacy in many respects, the moral debasement and corruption, which have seized like an epidemic on the body politic, have hitherto tended greatly to discourage or thwart every endeavour effectually to rectify it.

Again then, I say, if it must, in fairness and candour, be admitted of all parties, that none of them can arrogate any exclusive claim of being wholly in the right and of denouncing all the others as wholly in the wrong; if it must be admitted that all have been more or less in the right and more or less in the wrong, though far, very far indeed, from being equally so in either;—what remains for right-minded men, keenly alive to their own welfare and honour as inseparable from the prosperity of the country at large, but a straightforward course of mutual concession and general reformation? And, since the present inquiry has been forced on Government by the urgency and pressure of alleged grievances on the part of multitudes of ryots, who had no one of their own number directly to represent them or effectually to plead their cause, and whose very helplessness presented a special claim on the sympathy and justice of the supreme protecting power,—should the judicial findings of the Commissioners be found to tally, in the main, with the impression of independent and disinterested men on the subject, with whom could a discharge of the duty of retrospective acknowledgment and prospective improvement more fittingly begin, than with the body of planters chiefly concerned? This, in fact, would be only to follow out, systematically and universally, the very course which Forlong and others have, in substance, either suggested or recommended. If oppression, to a large extent and in many forms, has been practised on the ryots, it is but fair and equitable that the fact should be regretfully admitted, and some positive guarantee afforded against its repetition in the time to come. This being once satisfactorily done, why should not all parties then resolve to drop all past contentings, which, by violently disturbing the general peace and petrifying every feeling of kindness and goodwill, serve only to keep European and native society in a most unwholesome state of acetous fermentation? And why should they not all next proceed, in the true spirit of a generous and magnanimous policy, to give their whole heart and mind to the patriotic task of devising suitable and adequate remedies for so strangely complex and anomalous a state of things?

V.—What these should be, may well puzzle the genius of highest statesmanship. And were we to wait till some one arose to propound a comprehensive scheme, embracing all details and providing for all wants, we might have to wait for ever. But because such a scheme is hopeless of attainment now, that is no reason why, with a steadfast aim at an ultimate high standard of right in all departments, a series of tentative efforts should not be commenced at once—each right and safe in itself, and tending, by its success, to pave the way for further and decided progress towards the desired goal.

Here, however, it is proper to premise that there are plainly some things which ought not to be done at all. The civil history of England for the last four or five centuries, with its statutes of labourers and sumptuary laws, its charters of monopoly in commerce and exclusive privileges in corporate trades, with all its other officious intermeddling attempts to direct and regulate the channels and profits of capital and the wages of labour, must sufficiently guard the Government against the precipitate adoption of any of those more specific, extreme, or summary measures for which interested parties, on either side, might naturally be disposed to press.

What, then, is to be done?

First. The basis of all true government is the right, the equitable, the just. And the proper function of such government is, the maintenance of right, and the repression of wrong.

As a branch of natural equity, between man and man, all civilised governments from the days of Solomon downwards, have felt it their duty to look sharply after standard weights and measures. Our Government, therefore, might put an end to much injustice and strife, by authoritatively defining and settling the size of the indigo bigah, and the measure or weight of the indigo bundle.

All parties may plead excuses and palliations.

Hence the duty of mutual concession, &c.

The grand object then should be to devise remedies for the future.

No perfect scheme all at once possible.
Begin with what is practicable.

Caution against the adoption of certain specific and extreme measures.

Some things which the Government, as the maintainer of right, might do at once.

Size of indigo bigah: weight or measure of indigo bundle.

Appendix,
Part III.

Define legal and enforceable contract. By proclamation, Perwanah or other authorised form, explain clearly the relation of Government towards indigo and all produce, capitalists and labourers, so as in future to obviate all mistakes.

Reasons why zemindars and other native gentry, as they may be found qualified, should be invested with certain defined powers as honorary justices of the peace, assessors to judges, &c. &c.

Advantages of such a policy.

How a plan for commencement might be prepared.

Necessity for a great reform in our native police and mofussil courts.

Again, as endless doubts have arisen on the subject of indigo contracts, the Government might authoritatively define and settle the nature of a legal and enforceable contract, providing at the same time, not by special enactment, but by long desiderated improvements in the general administration of justice, for the prompt fulfilment of that and every other righteous contract.

Once more, to clear away the absurd fantasies and illusions which are ever apt to prevail among the people of Bengal, Government might in some authorised way notify plainly to all what its proper functions really are; that its business is to uphold the natural and acquired rights and liberties of all classes of men, neither allowing these to be violently interfered with, nor by being abused to interfere with those of others; that, while it has no direct interest in indigo any more than in rice or sugar, plantains or cocoas, neither has it any antipathy to the growth of it any more than to the growth of these or other products; that the rent of the bigah for indigo culture, the price of the bundle, the hire of carts and ploughs, the wages of labour must all be left to be regulated and determined by the unalterable economic law of supply and demand, which cannot be traversed with impunity any more than the ordinary laws of nature; that capital and industry are alike free; that to compel the labourer to labour for less wages in one department than he could earn in another, or to compel the capitalist to employ his capital in any department with less profit or advantage than he might derive from employing it in another, would be a contravention of the best established economic laws; that he who has capital, therefore, whether large or small, in money or in lands, in carts or in ploughs, in bullocks or in goats, may employ or dispose of it freely, according to his own apprehensions of what is most subservient to his own interests; and that he who has no capital but the labour of his hands may also as freely dispose of it to the highest bidder, or the payer of the highest wages; but that a bargain, agreement, or contract being once freely and without compulsion entered into, whether by capitalist or labourer, it is the duty of Government to see to it under the sanction of pains and penalties, that such bargain, agreement, or contract be fairly and honestly fulfilled.

2d. Let zemindars and other native gentry of Bengal, who may exhibit the fitting qualifications, be gradually invested as assessors in certain cases to the zillah judges and magistrates, or as honorary justices of the peace, with a due share in the administration of justice. That in former times the zemindars by law or ancient prescription, did exercise some functions of this description, seems undoubted. When wholly debarred from the exercise of them by the British Government, they must have felt lowered in self-respect, and humiliated in the eyes of their dependents. Deprived of such legitimate and honourable objects of ambition, they were often tempted to remove to cities, and leave the management of their estates to harpy-like middle men, or to resort to illegitimate modes of exercising power, or to drag out an indolent worthless existence in vicious and ruinous excesses. A somewhat similar result was exemplified in the case of many of the feudal chiefs in Europe after the sudden abolition of their long-enjoyed feudal rights and privileges. Of the expediency of adopting some such measure as that now suggested, I have long cherished a strong persuasion. In my evidence on the judicial system before a Committee of the House of Lords, upwards of seven years ago, I was led very explicitly to recommend it.* And I was rejoiced to find the same course admirably urged by Messrs. Forlong & Forbes, in their weighty evidence before the Indigo Commission. From long desuetude, it might not be practicable to find many all at once qualified. I have known native gentlemen, such as the late Raja Rammohun Roy and the late Babu Kalinath Roy Chaudari of Taki, who would have adorned such an honorary office, and have proved an honour to themselves, a blessing to their countrymen, and a tower of strength to the Government. And even now, despite the long period of abeyance, some able, willing, and qualified men might be found. At all events, were the policy once adopted, the certain prospect of such honorary distinction could not fail to act as a powerful stimulant in rousing many from fatal apathy and inaction, and inciting them to secure all the needful qualifications.

The practical advantages of such a policy would soon be experienced. Justice, in countless petty cases, would be rendered prompt, cheap, and accessible to multitudes, leaving the hands of the regular magistracy and judiciary unembarrassed for higher and more arduous work. Planters and other European residents in the interior, whenever practicable, might be associated with native gentlemen, thereby softening race asperities, and inspiring confidence in the rectitude of decisions. A peculiar amalgamation of this sort was successfully effected 50 years ago by the late General Munro, in Travancore, the most thoroughly Brahman-ridden native state in India.

How, or in what way, to what extent, in what cases, on what conditions, with what personal and other qualifications, with what limitations as to jurisdiction or power, such magisterial or judicial rights might be bestowed on zemindars and others, could only be determined by friendly inquiry, time, and experience. An amicable conference of Government officers, non-official European mofussil residents, zemindars, and other native gentry of temperate views and superior intelligence, might soon succeed in concocting a scheme by which the new system could at least be inaugurated. Once begun, experience would suggest any needful modifications, and gradually pave the way for indefinite expansion.

3d. A thorough reform of the demoralizing system of our native police and Mofussil Courts is still imperatively demanded. Without such reform, independent capitalists as well as the masses of the people will, as heretofore, be practically without law and justice; life and property and personal honour will be insecure. With such insecurity, capital cannot materially increase, the resources of the country cannot be adequately developed, the condition of the common ryots and labourers cannot be properly improved; amid fields of superabounding and inexhaustible fertility there will be ignorance and poverty with their teeming brood of fears, jealousies, anxieties, strifes, deceit, violence and wrong. This is no idle declamation; it is no exaggerated picture. It is simply a feeble attempt to embody in words the result of innumerable impressions derived from a vast variety of sources through the long period of 30 years.

But,

* See Blue-Book, pp. 469, 470.

But, in thus strongly condemning the existing system of police and judicial administration, and in loudly calling for thorough reform, I am not imputing blame to those who originated it. Far from it. I am firmly persuaded that their motives were upright and their intentions benevolent. Nor am I ignorant that of late years various improvements of greater or less importance have been introduced, for which every true lover of India must feel grateful. Neither am I unaware of the stupendous difficulties that lie in the way; difficulties of every imaginable kind and degree, difficulties more than enough to appal any ordinary statesman. Still, no amount of difficulties, no untowardness of circumstances, no imperfection of executive instrumentalities ought for a moment to quench the desire for extensive reforms, or paralyse the arm that would steadily and perseveringly grapple with the formidable obstacles that so stoutly resist all progress.

On a subject so vast and complicated, I have purposely refrained from entering into details. Regarding it, a large mass of useful information and pregnant suggestion will be found in the volume of the Lords' Committee, already referred to. And a free conference of non-official men practically conversant with the subject—zeminders and other intelligent native gentlemen, Europeans, alike lay and clerical—could scarcely fail to elicit much valuable matter, which might have wholly escaped Government officers, bred up under the existing system, and moulded in their judgments by its stereotyped routine.

There is, however, one measure which seems capable of immediate adoption, and which, if adopted, would confer incalculable benefits; and that is, the establishment of Small Cause Courts, within reasonable distances, over the whole land. And wherever there is a Small Cause Court there ought to be a branch of the savings bank alongside of it, to help to create and foster salutary habits of economy and forethought. And why might not some stringent law be at once passed to enable judges and magistrates to deal, in a way of summary severity, with some of the more glaring curses of the Mofussil?—Perjury, the systematic manufacture of false testimony, the forging of documents, and the vamping up of fictitious suits, merely to parry and neutralize those that are really genuine? The leniency and comparative impunity with which these villanous practices have hitherto been treated, have tended greatly to multiply them, and to diffuse their venomous influence like the active virus of a raging epidemic through the veins of all society—thereby defeating the ends of justice, demoralising the people, and bringing the Government and its officers into odium and contempt.

Fourth.—The consideration of the enormous difficulties in the way to all improvement, naturally brings me to the last and most important subject of all—the subject to which the foregoing remarks are only preparatory, and on account of which mainly I have ventured to address you—the general education of the people.

I gratefully acknowledge that, in some places in the interior, during the last thirty years, individual native zemindars, individual planters, and other independent European residents, have done a little towards the instruction of native youth, and that the agents of different missionary societies have also done a little more. I likewise gratefully acknowledge that, during the last 40 years, education has, more or less, occupied the attention of Government and its servants. Still, as a whole, no one can pretend to say that it has ever bulked in the mind of Government, or in any of its practical measures, in any degree commensurate with its paramount importance. It may, however, serve so far to mitigate our surprise and regret when we reflect on the tardy steps with which the education of the people has advanced under the older Governments of Europe.

But be this as it may, the fact itself is as lamentable as it is undoubted that, except in a few isolated cases, the work of popular education in Bengal, in any right and proper sense of the expression, has yet to be begun.

That this is no mere surmise or vague imagination, I hope will abundantly appear, from the printed statement which I herewith forward, and to which I respectfully but earnestly crave the best attention of yourself and the other Commissioners. I do so the more readily inasmuch as it was not prepared for the present occasion. It is a statement based on Mr. Adams's invaluable statistical Reports, but including also other items of authentic information in my own possession. It was prepared for the "Calcutta Review," in 1844, and reduced to its present more condensed form upwards of two years ago for transmission to an educational society in England.

There will be found the data on which are founded conclusions of a somewhat startling character.

1st. It is shown* that, taking Bengal and Behar as a whole, the aggregate average of the school-going juvenile population who receive any kind or degree of instruction is no more than 7½ per cent., leaving 92½ out of every 100 of the teachable age wholly destitute of all kinds and degrees of instruction whatsoever.

2nd. The indigenous system of elementary education is described with reference to its subject-matter, its discipline, and its instructive staff.*

Let the details under this head be candidly weighed, and see whether they do not warrant the conclusion, that the education portrayed is not merely, in a negative way, unproductive of any real good, but, in a positive way, prolific of much real evil?—"Under the endless recurrence of a dull, monotonous, mechanical routine, the intellectual soil, light by nature and wholly unmanured by art, soon becomes impoverished altogether. Under the combined influences of an utterly vicious system of discipline, the forced initiation into deceptive and dishonest practices, the habitual inculcation of loose, grovelling, carnalising maxims for the regulation of future conduct, the unceasing repetition of abominably filthy or grossly idolatrous legends, the moral and religious soil is transformed into a fertile nursery of all manner of rank, unprofitable and noxious weeds."

3rd. The indigenous learned education for Musalmans and Hindus is described* in its Persian-Arabic and Sanskrit forms. It is shown how the Persian-Arabic studies tend to generate pride, haughtiness, sensuality, hatred, revenge, intolerance, and other malignant anti-social passions.

Appendix, Part III.

Admissions as to improvements already effected, and the huge difficulties in the way.

Some measures which might be at once adopted, such as Small Cause Courts, summary and severe punishment for perjury, &c. &c.

The education of the people.

Admission as to what has been done.

As a whole, popular education has yet to be begun.

In proof of this, attention earnestly solicited to the statement at the close of this letter.

Small proportion who receive any education.

Elementary education.

Sad results.

Learned education.

And

* See Statement.

Appendix,
Part III.

Sad results.

And do not the delineations of the Sanskrit system amply warrant the conclusion deduced, which is as follows?—"When, to the useless, the frivolous, and the puerile acquisitions of Sanskrit learning, which, instead of truly bracing and invigorating the mental faculties, tend rather to dilute and rarefy them into a vain and subtilizing spirit of error, we add the towering pride thereby engendered, the callousness of feeling, the total insensibility to the wants and miseries of man, together with the defence which it involves and entails of all that is blasphemous in erudite Pantheism, and all that is revolting in the popular idolatry, we surely have a picture in which the semblance of each better light is wholly shrouded and eclipsed by the reality of the darksome shadows."

Education of circumstances.Sad results intellectually.

4th. Once more, of the nine-tenths, or 92½ in 100, who receive no school instruction of any kind, it is shown* how, from earliest infancy, they are encompassed with a social atmosphere—constituting an education of external circumstances—which cannot but operate with deadly effect on their mental and moral being. As to the former, after exhibiting the leading features of the case, it is asked,—“What must be the direct and legitimate influence of such a system on the intellect of its enthusiastic votaries, young and old? What can it be, except a resistless influence in depraving the reason and judgment, in crippling and degrading the cognitive powers, in paralysing the energies of original thought, in fettering or even crushing the spirit of inquiry, in contracting, if not wholly annihilating, the capacity of accurate discriminative discernment;—in a word, in superinducing and perpetuating a state of hopeless childhood and mental imbecility?”

Sad results
morally.

And again, with reference to the still more disastrous influence exerted on the moral nature of the native community, it is remarked,—“Think of all this, with seriousness and sobriety, and then say, whether the unavoidable tendency of the whole be not, to blunt the sense of decency—to extinguish all feeling of delicacy, to replenish the imagination with thoughts of impurity, to pollute the best of the affections, to sear and deaden the conscience and so render it insensible to the distinction between right and wrong, truth and falsehood, to stunt the growth of every nobler and more generous aspiration, to excite into inordinate development every grosser and more prurient inclination of the naturally corrupt heart;—in a word, to habituate to scenes, sentiments, and practices which cannot fail to issue in a depravation of all morals and a deterioration of all manly character. And yet, is not this, with exceptions so few, and modifications so partial and unimportant, as not materially to affect the general estimate; is not this indisputably, in its broad and characteristic lineaments, a painful but faithful portraiture of the actual condition of the great masses of the native population?”

Disclaimer against a superficial view of the case.

Men, whether belonging to the official or non-official classes, who look only at the outward surface of things, and are engrossed with the routine of mere secular business, may regard the whole of these conclusions as too gloomy or exaggerated. I cannot help it. Having endeavoured, for years, to gauge the dimensions of the dark cavern, I believe, and therefore have I written.

Essential bearing of the education question on the indigo question.

Others, again, with superficial or contracted views of the relations of things, may be disposed to ask, “But, granting the accuracy of your statement, what has it to do with the indigo question now in debate?” Much, every way, is my unhesitating reply. Yea, more; it is my firm persuasion that the indigo question has not only much to do with it, but almost everything to do with it.

Indigo question not an isolated or solitary one that can be satisfactorily settled apart, per se.

It is a fatal mistake to treat that question as an isolated and solitary one. It is, in its essential characteristics and perplexities, only one out of many, with which it is inextricably tangled and interwoven. It is only a part of a great whole. It is only a gigantic growth springing up among other gigantic growths in a continent of rottenness. What is the consequence? That you cannot effectually adjust or rectify it, by attempting to deal with it separately by itself! You might as well attempt effectually to cure some ulcerous matter on the surface of the human body, which is known to proceed from no local bruise or topical cause whatever, but from anæmia, or poverty, or corruption of the blood, by mere external local applications. By such applications you may do the work of an empiric; you may partially mitigate the pain, or partially abate the growth; but, by such means, you cannot wholly remove either. No; nothing can, nothing will effectually accomplish that but an inward recuperative process, by which the quality of the blood itself is improved and enriched. And when a current of pure rich blood is made to course through the veins, it will impart a tone and vigour to the whole bodily system that shall gradually cause the noxious excrescence to disappear.

Complaints of indigo planters;
call for police and judicial reforms.

Let us glance at one or two aspects of the case more immediately before us.

Indigo planters complain of the lying, deceit and dishonesty of the ryots, the rascalities of the police, the frightful corruption of the agents of the Mofussil Courts, and the consequent practical denial of all justice, which tempts or constrains them, for the saving of their property, deliberately to take the law into their own hands. Accordingly, the loud and incessant cry is for a reformed police and a reformed administration of justice.

Such reforms, without improved education, shown to be, to a great extent, impracticable.

But does it not strike them, ought it not to strike them, and all other men besides, that if the representation above given of the general condition of the people be even approximately correct, anything like the effective reforms called for, must be utterly impracticable?—that, so long as the present continues to be the normal state of things; so long as the general intelligence remains so low, and the general tone of morality so degraded; so long as the overwhelming majority lie down imbruted by ignorance, superstition, and vitiated habits of feeling and action; improvements, at all commensurate with the requirements of the case, must be far beyond the range and category of the possible?

Let us suppose the desiderated reforms to be gone about in earnest and in good faith; let us suppose some wise and well digested schemes to be agreed upon; where, where are the qualified agents to carry them out?

Improved education necessary to qualify zemindars, &c.

We want zemindars and other independent native gentlemen, not only to enjoy the rights, but to discharge the duties of property, in connexion with the cause of justice, without the certain risk of power being abused, and justice perverted to their own advantage. And if comparatively few be thoroughly thoroughly qualified now, how are they ever to be so qualified, except by means of a sound and liberal education?

We want, not scores or hundreds, but literally thousands of intelligent and well principled native agents of various grades, effectually to carry out the ends and objects of justice through the endless ramifications of the police and judiciary systems. But, where are these to be found now? Where is a tithe of the required number to be found? Or, how can they ever be found, without an improved and elevating education?

We want a people who, instead of, as now, looking askance at, shall be capable of appreciating, the ends and objects of the much needed improvements, a people, prepared to sympathise with the supporters and advocates of all salutary innovations, instead of being filled with doubts and dark suspicions; a people, who, instead of, as too often in times past, heedlessly or indolently conniving at wrong, and actively or passively thwarting the executors of law, shall, from improved intelligence and rectified moral instincts, be ever ready to frown upon the former, and heartily assist the latter. But, where is such a people to be found now? Let the picture, already given of the existing state of things amongst us, furnish the reply. And yet, without a people qualified intelligently to appreciate and approvingly to respond to plans of seasonable and wise reform, what can these achieve for us? What does the history of the world, in all countries and in all ages testify? Is it not, that political institutions however sound, laws however equitable, and civil administrations, however righteous, all, all go for nothing without penetrating intelligence and sustaining virtue on the part of the great body of the people? And whence do these essential qualities spring? Never, assuredly, from the statutes, decrees, or enactments of secular earthly governments. No; no! depend upon it, that the want of wants for Bengal and India generally, the want, without the supply of which all other wants can never be adequately supplied, is a mind-illuminating, heart-purifying, conscience-quickenning education. Without it, all mere legislative measures, improved civil and penal codes, extensive police and judicial reforms, must all prove, to a great extent, successless. Such measures, like a dam or embankment, thrown across a mighty river, may partially arrest and temporarily restrain the rush of waters; but so long as the springs and fountains of corruption are undried up and open, the waters will rise with increasing pressure, and, in the end, either sweep away the resisting mass, or work out for themselves under-ground passages and channels in other directions, where they are sure to burst forth with undiminished devastating force.

Or, look at the ryots and their complaints.

The ryots, on their part, loudly complain that they are defrauded, oppressed, coerced by zemindars and planters, and the myrmidons of abused law; and they are as loudly shouting for redress.

Now, instead of dealing out to them, after the fashion of indiscreet friends or mistaken patriots, wholesale doses of unctuous flattery; instead of cradling them in the fond delusion that they are themselves altogether in the right, and their oppressors altogether in the wrong; would it not be wiser, kinder, and truer in every way, to tell them that while we sincerely sympathise with them as groaning under oppression, and would do all in our power to relieve them, we cannot possibly acquit them of all blame; that much of the evil lies at their own door, and that there is much in their own condition, which, so long as it is cherished, must render the evil irremediable? that, for example, so long as they can neither read nor write, they must, in all matters of pecuniary contract and documentary evidence, be helpless victims at the mercy of any greedy, grasping, designing men who may be more knowing than themselves; that, so long as they remain voluntarily bound in the fetters of besotting ignorance and grovelling superstition, they must unavoidably be mere tools and drudges in the hands of their superiors in caste, in knowledge, in station, and in power; that, so long as they tenaciously cling to the hereditary habits and customs, generated by the civil and spiritual despotism established by their own reputedly divine lawgiver, Manu, and are thereby incapacitated for apprehending or appreciating the privileges which they are entitled to enjoy as British subjects, they do but court and foster the degraded condition of serfdom or practical slavery. And what can open their eyes to the right discernment of all this, ensuring a deliverance from the evil complained of, and an investiture with the opposite good? What, but a sound, quickening, illuminating, moralising education?

As warm-hearted friends of the ryots, let us tell them that we fervently wish them to enjoy all the rights and liberties of free born British subjects; but, as wise and judicious friends of the ryots, let us never shrink from faithfully telling them that there are some of these rights and liberties which at present they are utterly unfitted to exercise or enjoy; that, in order to such exercise and enjoyment, they must take pains to qualify themselves, and that we are willing and even anxious to help them to the uttermost in so doing. Yea, let us never scruple to tell them plainly, what all history proves, that there are even personal rights and liberties which an ignorant people are ill prepared to enjoy or exercise wisely; that such a people, suddenly becoming conscious of personal rights, liberties, and power not possessed, or not supposed to have been possessed before, have ever manifested a decided tendency to abuse their rights, misapply their power, and turn their liberty into licentiousness? And must it not, with sadness, be admitted by the best friends of the ryot that recently there has been, in certain quarters, something beyond mere glimmering symptoms of such misapplication and abuse?

It is true that, in the case of the Bengal ryots, they all along have had rights which no one, in theory at least, ever denied them. But it is equally true that, from feelings generated by hereditary ignorance and practical servitude, they never had distinctly apprehended these rights, as in reality belonging to them, under the liberal provisions of the British constitution. And hence the danger of a sudden disclosure and assertion of such rights, before the popular mind has been fully prepared by education for their proper exercise. Accordingly, while I have stoutly maintained that the famous perwannah did not originate the wide spread discontent which a spark from any quarter might have

Appendix, Part III.

Necessary to secure executive agents.

Necessary to gain the approving cooperation of the people themselves.

Without improved education, legislative measures of reform, to a great extent, successless.

Complaints of the ryots.

Full redress shown to be impossible so long as they remain in a state of profound ignorance.

Without the intelligence which improved education imparts, they cannot properly exercise the rights and liberties of freemen.
Ignorant people always abuse rights and liberties.

Danger of a sudden disclosure and assertion of rights, &c. without education to guide, control, &c. &c.

Appendix,
Part III.

Defect of the famous per-wannah under this view of the case.

Reason for thankfulness, that the recent outbreak was not more disastrous.

This owing, in part at least, to the Christian counsels of the missionaries.

Want a people who can take sound and accurate views of their own temporal and material affairs.

Self-interest not a sufficient guide; unless it be enlightened.

Risks and dangers from ignorance, &c.

put into combustion; that it was not the cause, but only the occasion of the suddenly developed resistance; I am bound to confess that, in view of the lessons of past history, I considered it as defective in explanatory matter and precautionary monition. It announced only a simple truth, that the ryots were really free and fairly entitled to exercise their rights as free men. But it did not sufficiently provide for the contingent result of such an announcement falling suddenly and nakedly from authority on minds, ignorant ill-balanced minds, in an irritable, inflammable, and highly resentful state.

Indeed, all things considered, we have good reason to be thankful that the explosion was not of a more violent and destructive character. For, when a multitude of profoundly ignorant and highly irritated people, labouring under a glowing sense of heavy wrongs to be redressed or avenged, once break out into popular tumult, they are ever apt to be intoxicated by the discovery of their power; partial excess is apt to inflate them into extravagant conceits, projects, and expectations; the original simple object of deliverance from immediate oppression is apt to be soon lost sight of in new schemes and designs which exceed each other in wildness and folly; and their onward pathway and progress is apt to be marked by the ravages of exasperated passions. That, in certain districts at least, we have been saved from so disastrous a course is, I do most solemnly believe, to be attributed mainly to the well-timed counsel of some much abused missionaries! These, from their sympathy with the ryots, as sufferers under oppression, happened to enjoy their confidence, and were the only Europeans in Bengal who did fully enjoy it. These, therefore, as Christian men, as loyal subjects of the British Government, and as friends of the ryots, earnestly importuned and counselled them to keep quiet, to submit to authority, obey the law, be careful to commit no violence, and honestly fulfil every lawfully contracted obligation, in the assurance that the British nation were wise and benevolent, and that the British Government would, in due time, do ample justice to all parties.

Again, all friends of India want a people who can take sound and accurate views of their own temporal and material affairs. But a sottishly ignorant and superstitious people can never possibly do this. Such a people is at the mercy of every whim, every caprice, every accident, ever apt to be moved by senseless predilections and reasonless antipathies. Influenced by the former, they will cling with stubborn tenacity to old social and unthrifty habits; to antiquated modes and implements of labour, whether in tillage or the manufacturing arts, though demonstrably disadvantageous to themselves. Influenced by the latter, they will resist, with stiff and unyielding obstinacy, the introduction of the most obvious improvements, though demonstrably promotive of their own best interests. With them, emphatically, "immemorial usage," in the words of Manu, is "transcendent law." The "tradition of the fathers" is practically more potent than the immutable laws of nature or the evidence of their own senses. Narrow in their conceptions, and unaccustomed to think of anything beyond the mere temporalities of their every day life, they are not only unable to take sound and broad views of even the most salutary legislative measures, but utterly unable to comprehend aright the reciprocal obligations and privileges of regulated freedom, the true relations which ought to subsist between master and servant, landlord and tenant, capital and labour, profits and wages, demand and supply. Unenlightened on subjects like these, so vital in their bearings on the true welfare of society, they are apt to misconceive the best laid plans of philanthropy, as well as the ends and objects of the best devised Government ordinances, to listen with an all-devouring credulity to the most whimsical surmises and the most preposterous rumours; yea, to swallow, wholesale, not only improbabilities but contrarieties, aye, and downright moral and physical impossibilities too! No wonder, though such a people, once awakened to a sudden consciousness of freedom and of power, should, in their darkling ignorance, be ever ready to enter into cabals, conspiracies, and combinations for dictating unreasonable terms to all with whom they may have any dealings, to attempt by threats to intimidate, and by alluring but fallacious prospects and promises, to seduce even the peaceful and contented * to join their ranks, yea, and to proclaim open war against capital itself, as if it were their enemy, instead of their best friend, without which there can be no development of latent resources, no extensive employment of labour, no adequate wages, no augmentation of material comfort, no advancement in intellectual, moral, and social wellbeing.

Once more, then, purposely shutting out of view for the present all loftier spiritual considerations, I ask what can open the eyes of a blinded and ignorant people, like the sunken masses of Bengal, to a due apprehension of their own highest temporal welfare, and a proper use of their rights and liberties as free men, but a wisely adapted and enlightening education?

All this has sometimes been met by the allegation that self-interest alone is enough to regulate people's actions in worldly matters, and to alleviate or arrest the dreadful evils now deprecated.

To which I would reply, "Yes, if there be an enlightened self-interest. But if not, self-interest alone may be blind enough, and therefore utterly misleading."

It is just because there cannot possibly exist an enlightened self-interest among such an ignorant people as those of Bengal, that there is risk and it may be imminent danger in a crisis like the present.

A low, debased and ignorant people has ever been notoriously undiscerning as to what constitutes their own truest and best interest. An earnest, persevering strenuous desire to better their own condition, which is the prolific parent of so many social virtues is not to be found among them. Gross passions and appetites they will gratify at any cost; but having no relish for refined pleasures and enjoyments, no taste for the superior comforts and elegancies of life, in costume or diet, or domestic arrangements, they are not prepared to abandon their old beaten path of sluggish routine, and exert themselves themselves in new and improved ways of steady industry in order to acquire them. They are ever moving on in a region of darkness, shadows and pitfalls, without any knowledge of the right way—ready to resent the offers of safe guidance, and follow every dazzling but deceitful ignis fatuus, into marshes and bogs that may prove fatal to them.

* From a letter in the "Englishman" of August 16th, and other credible sources of information, it is to be feared that machinations of this sort have already been tried in divers places with too much success.

Even in England, some centuries ago, when villenage, serfdom, or compulsory servitude became finally extinct, without the previously conferred intelligence that results from education to guide and regulate the newly-acquired freedom, some of the first effects were deplorable enough. That numbers of them abused their freedom is undoubted; though able, they refused to work; though good wages were offered, they declined to receive them; they preferred to lead idle lives, preying on the fruits of others' industry. They wandered about in parties as "vagrants," "sturdy rogues," "valiant beggars," and "staff-strikers" or "cudgel-players," infesting the kingdom with frequent thefts and robberies. Thus, instead of adding to the national wealth, they only wasted and consumed it. And, by plundering the capitalist and rendering all property insecure, they not only impoverished all ranks and classes, but thereby blindly diminished or exhausted the means of their own support. Hence the necessity of severe legislative measures to save society from utter dissolution. Against these evils, consequent on the transition from villenage to freedom, owing to the want of that intelligence which sound education confers, the English Government had energetically to struggle for upwards of two centuries; and with what severity the statute book, with its endless brandings, whippings, imprisonments, settings in the stocks, and public executions can well testify!

And if such was the critical state of things in England during a transitional period of society, ought the lesson to be lost upon us in India, where society, on a vastly larger scale, under somewhat resembling circumstances, is beginning to emerge into the daylight of a freedom which no other Asiatic realm has ever enjoyed? Forewarned, ought we not to be forearmed? Ought we not to institute the means which alone can render the full assertion of liberty safe and wise and good? And what are these? Knowledge at least, with a capacity of reflection and forethought, habits of providence and frugality. And how are these to be obtained? How but by the extension of a sound education, without which as antecedent and concomitant, the bestowment or enlargement of personal freedom and other rights and privileges may, for a time, prove a curse and not a blessing.

But intelligence alone will not suffice. High intelligence may be allied with the grossest corruption or moral depravity. And if so, it will only hasten on the progress of decay and final ruin. No! there must be moral worth as well as intelligence; the prudential, domestic, social and other virtues, as well as the development of the cognitive faculties. We want the love of truth substituted for the love of lies; we want a sense of honour for abject meanness, of self-respect for contented self-degradation, self-reliance for slavish dependence; we want manliness for sneaking servility, straightforwardness for double-dealing, frank outspokenness for jesuitical concealment and reserve; we want honesty for fraudulence, fair-dealing for trickery and swindling, transparent sincerity for glozing hypocrisy and deceit; we want generosity for covetousness, justice for injury and wrong, benevolence for cruelty; in a word, we want the entire assemblage of the moral virtues or graces; and no education can be really worthy of the name which does not at least aim at the implantation of these ennobling qualities in the minds, hearts and consciences of the young. And such is the minimum of a sound education that is now so clamantly demanded by the dire necessities of the teeming millions of India.

To conclude, if in the qualified and relative sense already explained, on a fair retrospect, it be found that all parties are more or less in the right, and more or less in the wrong; that all have more or less mutually to complain of; that all have more or less to plead in self-defence by way of palliation or excuse; why should not all, while sincerely lamenting and making amends for the past, agree at once to drop all further acrimonious or railing accusations which can only irritate and exulcerate men's spirits, and thereby convert temporary blains and blotches into cancerous and incurable distempers? Why should not all resolve to sacrifice all selfish partialities and all resentments for personal offences on the altar of a common patriotism? Why should not all strive as much as possible reciprocally to forgive and forget; to drop the mantle of charity over former shortcomings, and consign them to the grave of oblivion; to cherish sentiments of mutual kindness and goodwill, and look for a reparation of the past in the conjoint development of a bright and glorious future? And while improvements of every kind should be encouraged, and, as far as practicable, introduced in every direction and in all departments, why should not all—Government, zemindars, planters, and general philanthropists—unite their best exertions in establishing and extending a vitalizing system of education without which the machinery of all other reforms will prove very much like a steam-engine without steam or governor, or ships with spread sails without wind or helm?

This has been my own conviction for the last 30 years; and it has only grown in strength with the lapse of time. Upwards of seven years ago, towards the close of evidence on the Bengal judicial system, given before a Committee of the House of Lords, after referring to the multiplicity and enormity of existing evils with their probable remedies, I was led to wind up as follows:—"It is the obtrusion of facts like the preceding which has led many to feel deeply that there are running sores, as it were, throughout the entire fabric and framework of Hindu society, which no mere improvement of legislation, or in the administration of the law or the police, will wholly reach. No amelioration in our legislative or judicial policy will reach the springs of some of those evils which I have attempted so inadequately to delineate. Their springheads are to be found in those deep-rooted superstitions which work so disastrously in deteriorating native society. Nothing we can do as law makers or law administrators can reach them effectually. Nothing, nothing can suffice but a real, thorough, searching, moralising, and I should individually say, Christianising course of instruction, which, by illuminating the understanding and purifying the heart, will inspire with the love of truth and rectitude, and so elevate the whole tone of moral feeling and social sentiment among the people."

To describe what is meant by a "real, thorough, searching, moralising, Christianising course of instruction"

Appendix,
Part III.

Illustration from the History of England.

Application of the lesson to the case of Bengal ryots.

Intelligence alone not enough.
There must be a culture of the moral feelings.

Conclusion
from the whole.

This no new conviction with me.

Extract from evidence before the House of Lords confirmatory, &c.

Appendix,
Part III.

What the maximum of a sound education must include.

What the minimum.

Without it no decided improvements can be effected for indigo, or ought else.

Goodwill to all, &c.

instruction"—its subject-matter, its direction, its discipline, its gradations, its living agencies, its varying and elastic organisation—forms no object of the present communication. In its completed form, it would, of necessity, include the careful inculcation of the grand soul-awakening, soul-illuminating, soul-purifying doctrines and moral principles taught, with Divine authority, in the Bible. But I dwell not on the subject now. An education, far short of this perfection, yet sound and moralising, so far as it went, would, doubtless, do much, as far as the interests of this world are concerned. Let us have the more perfect form wherever we can, and let all who are under no shackles or restraints labour to promote and extend it to the uttermost. And where we cannot have the more perfect form, let us at least have an improved system, imbued and animated by its spirit, since, in such a mixed world as ours, when we cannot get the absolutely right, we must often be satisfied with the relatively right, or even the relatively expedient. My present design is mainly to show cause why some such system, at least as a minimum, is, in our present transitional and critical circumstances, absolutely indispensable to promote the ends of good government, to lead to an amicable settlement of the indigo and other vexed social questions, to ensure the due administration of justice, the maintenance of peace and order, the augmentation of the comfort and happiness of all classes of the people; and, finally, to secure the honour and dignity of the British Crown, and the enduring stability of the British Indian Empire. Let this necessity be once fairly admitted, let the energetic resolve be adopted to supply it, and then will be the time for discussing all questions and considering all details relative to the ways and modes of practical operation.

In all that I have ventured to advance, I cast myself on the kind indulgence of yourself and the other members of the Commission. I never was, and never could be, an exclusive party man; and, therefore, some of my remarks may be displeasing to all parties, and others satisfying to none. If so, I cannot help it. I desire to cherish goodwill towards all men, and illwill to none. I rejoice in the good name, the good deeds, and the prosperity of any of my countrymen. I earnestly long, at the same time, for the education and advancement of the people of India. But I would not, in the false and fulsome spirit of flattery, attribute to either, qualities, merits, or deeds which did not belong to them. And if any word or expression has escaped me fitted to give unintentional umbrage, I can only fall back on the "mens sibi conscia recti." That is my sheet-anchor. And I am not prepared to forego the testimony of a "conscience void of offence towards God and man," for the sake of gratifying friends or conciliating foes—of gaining the favour of the great, the smile of the mighty, or the applause of the people.

I have, &c.

(signed) Alexander Duff,
Cornwallis Square, 21st August 1860.

To W. S. Seton-Karr, Esq.,

President of the Indigo Commission, &c. &c.

STATEMENT respecting the EDUCATIONAL DESTITUTION in BENGAL and BEHAR.

I. The Destitution.

IN order to quicken and arouse the philanthropy of the people of Great Britain, and impel them to embark their utmost energies on the enterprise, the first point on which their most earnest attention ought to be concentrated and riveted is the fearfulness of our educational destitution.

Having to deal exclusively with the provinces of Bengal and Behar, we shall, for the sake of brevity, purposely confine our remarks to these; though we may add that careful inquiry has satisfied us, that, with regard to the matter now on hand, all the provinces of India, (northern and southern, eastern and western), with their 180 millions of inhabitants, belong substantially to the same category of educational destitution.

The aggregate population of Bengal and Behar, has been estimated, at the lowest reckoning, in round numbers, at 36,000,000.

Now, as regards the juvenile part of the population, from the most favourable average, furnished by European statistes, it appears that 366 in 1,000, or about eleven-thirtieths of the whole people of any nation may be reckoned as under 14 years of age*, and that of this entire population of children three-sevenths are of an age to go to school, even when the school-commencing age is fixed at seven years complete. In India, however, the school-commencing age is, in point of fact, not seven, but five years. This would render the proportion of the juvenile population of the school-going age not three-sevenths, but about three-sixths or one-half. Let us now, then, actually apply these proportions to the case before us. In Bengal and Behar, as already stated, there is a population of 36,000,000, or thirty-six millions. Eleven-thirtieths of this aggregate will give us a juvenile population amounting to 13,200,000, or upwards of 13 millions. The half of this gives us 6,600,000, or upwards of six millions and a half, as the number of children of a school-going age.

Here the important question arises; of this vast aggregate of a school-going age, how many, apart from recent missionary† and Government operations, receive school instruction of any kind.

On this subject we are happily not left to the results of casual observation or loose conjecture.

In

* To prevent all misapprehension on the subject, it may be as well to state, once for all, that the writer of these remarks inserted, several years ago, in the "Calcutta Review," an article on the "Indigenous Education of Bengal and Behar," and that, in freely availing himself, in the course of the following observations, of the statements and conclusions of that article, he is only borrowing from himself.

† These are purposely excluded from our estimate, because, however improved the quality of the instruction given in connexion with these, the number actually benefited by it is so small, compared with the teeming masses that are unaffected by it, as to resemble a drop in the ocean or an atom in the mountain.

In 1835, Mr. Adam, a gentleman pre-eminently qualified by his knowledge of the people and their language, was appointed by that enlightened noblemen, Lord William Bentinck, as Commissioner, to "conduct inquiries into the state of native education in Bengal;" in other words, to ascertain, "with all attainable accuracy, the present state of instruction in native institutions and in native society;" his instructions plainly stating that the Government "deemed it more important that the information obtained should be complete as far as it went, clear and specific in its details, and depending on actual observation or undoubted authority, than that he should hurry over a large space in a short time, and be able to give only a crude and imperfect account of the state of education within that space." It is not too much to say that never were such wise instructions more wisely, energetically, or searchingly carried out. Of the multifarious results, or returns, of Mr. Adam's most minute and elaborate investigation, it is not too much to say that, considering the life and vigour which he infused into all his operations, and the unslumbering vigilance with which he superintended them down to the minutest items of detail, considering, too, the nature of his own official appointment and the full equipment which he possessed of all the official means, appliances, and agencies necessary to render his inquiry at once extensive in its scope, and complete and accurate in its details; it is not too much to say that the returns must be regarded as the most perfect of the kind ever yet obtained in India, and in general worthy of the most assured and undoubted confidence.

Looking, then, at the authoritative numerical tables, with which Mr. Adam has supplied us; and bearing in mind that under the term "instructed" are included all that have obtained any kind or degree of instruction, however humble, including even those who can merely decipher writing or sign their names, and often even that very imperfectly, we deduce this generalised result, that, in Burdwan, the most highly cultured of the specimen districts visited, only 16 per cent. of the teachable or school-going juvenile population do actually receive any kind or degree of instruction; and in Tirhut, the least cultured district visited, only 2½ per cent. receive any kind or degree of instruction; while the aggregate average for all the districts visited is no more than 7½ per cent., leaving 92½ out of every 100 children of the teachable age wholly destitute of all kinds and degrees of instruction whatsoever! And taking this as a fair, legitimate, and inductively established average for all Bengal and Behar, with their many millions, how fearful, how utterly appalling the aggregate amount of educational destitution! since there are, as we have already seen; in these two provinces, 6,600,000, or upwards of six and a half millions of the school-going age; and since of these, only 7½ in 100 receive instruction of any kind, it must follow that only 511,000, or about half a million, receive any kind of instruction, leaving 6,088,500, or about six millions of children, capable of receiving school instruction, wholly uneducated! That is, a number of school-going children in the provinces of Bengal and Behar alone wholly uneducated, greatly more than double the aggregate of the entire population of Scotland, including men, women, and children.

But the mind cannot adequately realise the aggravated nature of such destitution, unless it be distinctly remembered, that a wholly uneducated juvenile population must give us a wholly uneducated adult population.

Not satisfied, however, with deducing this as a necessary consequence from his tables of juvenile educational destitution, Mr. Adam, in order to ensure the strictest accuracy, resolved, for the sake of comparison, check, and correction, to institute rigid inquiries into the numbers of the infant and adult population, or persons below five and above fourteen; as also, into the respective number of the latter, or adult population, that were more or less instructed, or wholly uninstructed. From the tables and statements which he has furnished under this head, we deduce this as the result: viz., that the aggregate average of more or less instructed adults for all the districts visited is no more than 5½ per cent., leaving 94½ of every 100 adults wholly destitute of all kinds or degrees whatsoever of school instruction. What, then, must be the amount of educational destitution among the adult population of Bengal and Behar with their many millions? The sum total, as we have already seen, of the population in these two provinces is 36,000,000, or thirty-six millions. Deducting from this amount the juvenile population of 13,200,000, or upwards of thirteen millions, it will leave 22,800,000, or nearly twenty-three millions as the aggregate of the adult population.

But we have already found that, of the adult population, only an average of 5½ in 100 have received instruction of any kind. It will hence appear that, of the entire adult population of about 23,000,000, only 1,254,000, or about a million and a quarter, have received school instruction of any kind; leaving 21,546,000, or upwards of twenty-one and a half millions of adults, wholly uneducated; that is, a number of adults in the provinces of Bengal and Behar alone, wholly uneducated, considerably exceeding in amount the entire aggregate of the population of England and Scotland united, including men, women, and children. What a tremendous conclusion to have been arrived at, is this. Upwards of six millions of children of the school-going age, and upwards of twenty-one and a half millions of adults, in the provinces of Bengal and Behar alone, without one shred or tittle of school instruction of any kind or degree, however humble, meagre, or inadequate.*

Thus to look down on an expanse of absolute ignorance, a sheer intellectual and moral waste, would be sufficiently painful. But, alas, there is something more painful still, and that is, to look down on a region that is not merely sterile of all that is useful or wholesome, but spontaneously prolific of all that is unprofitable and noxious. Now, that is precisely what truth and reality—justice to the great cause we advocate, and justice to the people of India—imperatively demand of us. Mr. Adam was too much disposed to view the whole case negatively: in other words, to treat it simply as a question of ignorance. Even then, as we have seen,

* Facts like these may help the friends and supporters of the British and Foreign Bible Society to understand better the force of some of the statements in the recent minute or memorandum of the Calcutta Auxiliary, which went to check, or even rebuke, the over-sanguine expectations of many relative to India as a field for the immediate and universal distribution of the Bible.

seen, on his own showing and in accordance with his own clear admissions, the contemplation is a harrowing one. But how much more so does it become when we reflect, that as regards the overwhelming majority of the juvenile and adult population, there is not merely a total absence of school instruction of any kind for good, but the positive presence and ever active energy of an education of circumstances for all manner of evil?

II.—The Education of Circumstances.

As regards actual innate ideas or impressions, the mind of man may be truly allowed, agreeably to the phraseology of Locke, to come into the world as unvaried a blank as "a sheet of white paper." But, then, all sound philosophy, backed by Scripture and experience to boot, must convince us that, though destitute of actual innate ideas or impressions, the mind does come into the world endowed with various innate powers, susceptibilities or tendencies, which only await the presentation of their appropriate objects to ensure their various and fitting development. In this truer aspect of the case, the mind may be said rather to resemble "a sheet of white paper" which has been written all over with divers chemical solutions, the letters, words, and sentences remaining wholly invisible, until brought in contact with heat, or any other exciting cause, fitted to reveal them in perceptible legible forms. The mind of man, somewhat similarly endowed with latent and undeveloped powers, susceptibilities, and tendencies, is, immediately on its introduction on the actual stage of time, plunged, as it were, into an atmosphere of circumstances which, calling these varied powers, susceptibilities, and tendencies into active exercise, impart unto them all their own peculiar tinge and colouring. It is thus that the intellectual and moral faculties are most influentially moulded, the future life and character most effectually shaped and formed. The manners, language, and pleasureable associations of earliest youth, become the habits of maturer years. The feelings, prejudices, and predilections of the susceptible mind of the child become the predominant feelings, prejudices, and predilections of the indurated mind of the man. In this view of the case, we cannot but respond to the truth and accuracy of the sentiment expressed by a British journalist, when he exclaims, "How infinitely small is the education which is obtained at school, compared with that which is obtained at home! The formation of habits, and the acquisition of rules of conduct, the most efficacious of all processes of education, take place outside the walls of schools, and are derived chiefly from example and association in infancy. It is, indeed, in the dwellings of the people that the mind and character of the people are formed, that their physical frames are matured, their moral natures educated, their judgments guided and directed, and that their future place in the scale of morality and intellect is determined."

Such being the acknowledged potency of the education of external circumstances, let us consider, for a moment, the social atmosphere into which every Hindu is plunged from the very dawn of his palpable being! What sights and sounds encompass him all around, by night and by day, imprinting the most vivid images of sense on the captive mind, and exciting the most carnal propensities of the unregenerate heart! The subject is too vast to be entered on here; we can only passingly and incidentally allude to it. It would require whole volumes to depict the endless round of shows, spectacles, and revelries—the monotonous circle of mechanical forms, frivolous rites, and ceremonial mummeries—which constitute the popular worship of Hinduism, and endow it with resistless fascinations to infantile minds, whether of earlier or of riper years.

Now, viewed in reference to its effect on the intellect only, what must be the influence of a system like this in perpetual operation?—a system which robs the Divine Being of every attribute fitted to awaken veneration, gratitude, or love—a system which, virtually and practically, converts cows, monkeys, dogs, jackals, squirrels, birds, and other animals—trees, plants, books, wood, stone, and other lifeless substances—into gods or objects of religious reverence—a system studiously inculcating as worship a mass of trivialities such as one would think "could only be practised by infants taught to do so by their nurses, or by persons devoid of intellect?" What, we ask, must be the direct and legitimate influence of such a system on the intellect of its enthusiastic votaries, young and old? What can it be, except a resistless influence in depraving the reason and judgment, in crippling and degrading the cognitive powers, in paralysing the energies of original thought, in fettering or even crushing the spirit of inquiry, in contracting, if not wholly annihilating, the capacity of accurate discriminative discernment; in a word, in superinducing and perpetuating a state of hopeless childhood and mental imbecility?

And if such be the inevitable effect of the existing system of things on the intellect, still more disastrous is the influence which it exerts on the moral nature of the Hindu community.

In the existing circumstances of that community, there is not merely the absence of any principles fitted to elevate the moral character, but the positive presence of every principle fitted to destroy it. Think of the mantras or popular formularies for inflicting damage or mortal injury on enemies; think of the rites and ceremonies for obtaining success in invading the rights of property and violating the sanctity of a neighbour's home; think of the promiscuousness with which persons of all sexes, with scarcely a covering, perform their ablutions in tanks and sacred streams; think of the wanton and lascivious dances, constantly exhibited before the idols, with their fitting accompaniments of filthy and abominable songs; think of the apathy, the hard-heartedness, the unfeeling disregard of human suffering produced by the distinctions of caste, the self-inflicted cruelties, and the brutal exposures of the sick and the dying; think of the boundless license to all vice and crime afforded by the unseemly characters of the gods, the very objects of devotion and worship, whose unworthy exploits are perpetually rehearsed amid the excitement of festivity, music, and song; how they quarrelled with each other, kicked and abused each other, and in their various social feuds and domestic scuffles often bore away the most unmistakeable badges of their folly and shame in the loss of an eye, a tooth, or a head; how in their personal bearing and demeanor towards others they were ever and anon guilty of the worst possible excesses—excesses of dishonesty and fraud, of lying and deceit, of intemperance and licentiousness, of ferocious cruelty and bloody revenge; in a word, how the popular gods of Hinduism, whose lives and actions are constantly imaged before the mental eye of their deluded deluded votaries, are beings who seem to differ from the most depraved of the race of man only by their superiority in power and wickedness, beings whose society, if they were merely human, would be systematically shunned by the wise and the good; think of all this, with seriousness and sobriety, and then say, whether the unavoidable tendency of the whole be not to blunt the sense of decency, to extinguish all feeling of delicacy, to replenish the imagination with thoughts of impurity, to pollute the best of the affections, to sear and deaden the conscience, and so render it insensible to the distinctions of right and wrong, truth and falsehood, to stunt the growth of every nobler and more generous aspiration, to excite into inordinate development every grosser and more prurient inclination of the naturally corrupt heart; in a word, to habituate to scenes, sentiments, and practices which cannot fail to issue in a depravation of all morals and a deterioration of all manly character. And yet, is not this, with the exceptions so few, and modifications so partial and unimportant, as not materially to affect the general estimate, is not this indisputably, in its broad and characteristic lineaments, a painful but faithful portraiture of the actual condition of the great masses of the native population?

The intellectual and moral condition of the wholly uninstructed masses, constituting the overwhelming majority, we have now briefly glanced at. And surely the picture is a dark enough one. Nor is the dark shade much lightened, when we fix our gaze on the intellectual and moral condition of the partially or inadequately instructed minority. That minority consists of two divisions—the smaller, those who enjoy a learned; the larger, those who enjoy an elementary education.

III. Learned Education.

The state of those who enjoy a learned education may again be considered with reference to the great divisions of the population, the Musalmans and the Hindus. Of the former, the grand media of instruction are the Persian and the Arabic; of the latter, the Sanskrit.

In the Persian schools, Mr. Adam found the course of instruction possessed of a more comprehensive character than that pursued in the Bengali schools. And it might be supposed, says he, "that the moral bearing of some of the text-books would have a beneficial effect on the character of the pupils; but as far as I have been able to observe or ascertain, those books are employed, like all the rest, solely for the purpose of conveying lessons in language—lessons in the knowledge of sounds and words, in the instruction of sentences, or in anecdotal information, but not for the purpose of sharpening the moral perceptions or strengthening the moral habits. This, in general native estimation, does not belong to the business of instruction, and it never appears to be thought of or attempted. Others will judge from their own observation and experience, whether the Musalman character, as we see it in India, has been formed or influenced by such a course of instruction." Mr. Adam distinctly informs us, as the result of his own observation, that the Muhammadan possessed no "moral superiority" over the Hindu. Indeed, he might well have added, that while negatively there is nothing in what is taught fitted to "sharpen the moral perceptions or strengthen the moral habits," there is a vast deal in the works studied which is calculated to bunt or pervert the intellectual powers, vitiate the moral feelings, and steep the whole soul and body in a very quagmire of pollution.

Of Arabic schools there are two sorts, which may be contra-distinguished as Formal Arabic and Learned Arabic, properly so called.

The former of these institutions may be described as intended exclusively for instruction in the formal or ceremonial reading of certain passages in the Koran.

"The whole time," says Mr. Adam, "stated to be spent in school varies from one to five years. The teachers possess the lowest degree of attainment to which it is possible to assign the task of instruction. They do not pretend to be able even to sign their names; and they disclaim altogether the ability to understand that which they read and teach. The mere forms, names, and sounds of certain letters and combinations of letters they know and teach; and what they teach is all that they know of written language, without presuming or pretending, or aiming to elicit the feeblest glimmering of meaning from these ample vocables. This whole class of schools is as consummate a burlesque upon mere forms of instruction, separated from a radical meaning and purpose, as can well be imagined. The teachers are all Kath Mollas, that is, the lowest grade of Musalman priests, who chiefly derive their support from the ignorance and superstitions of the poor classes of their co-religionists, and the scholars are in training for the same office." After such a statement, we need not be surprised at Mr. Adam's conclusion, that "no instruction can be more insignificant and useless, and in every respect less worthy of notice than those Arabic schools, viewed as places of instruction."

The Learned Arabic schools, properly so called, are of course of a higher order. They are intimately connected with the Persian, and almost imperceptibly run into each other. The subjects taught are somewhat varied. The works on grammar occupy a prominent place. Complete courses of reading on rhetoric, logic, and law are embraced. The external observances and fundamental doctrines of Islam are minutely studied. The works of Euclid in Geometry, and Ptolemy on Astronomy in translation are not unknown; other branches of Natural Philosophy are also taught; and the whole course is crowned by the perusal of treatises on Metaphysics, deemed the highest attainment of the instructed scholar. "Perhaps," remarks Mr. Adam, "we shall not err widely, if we suppose that the state of learning amongst the Musalmans of India resembles that which existed among the nations of Europe before the invention of printing."

This is the most favourable picture, which, in a generalised way, can be given of these Arabic institutions; for, in none of them singly can it be found fully realised.

And if the subjects taught be not by any means of a liberalising and edifying character, the deficiency is certainly not supplied by any redeeming qualities in the mode of teaching or the system of discipline. No words can possibly convey any adequate conception of the indolence and listlessness, the drowsiness and sleepiness, the disorder and anarchy, which reign paramount in a Persian Arabic institution.

From such a course of teaching and discipline, what beneficial effect on the mind and character could possibly be expected to result? To suppose any such sanatory influence possible would be to annihilate or reverse the established laws of antecedence and consequence. Perhaps the only consolation consists in knowing, that in the provinces of Bengal and Behar, the whole scheme of purely Arabic education is prosecuted by comparatively so small a number of students; for, when we reflect on the genuine spirit of the Muhammadan system, how it inculcates a rigid monotheism, or lifeless empty deism, which, "by denying the Trinity, and with it all personal manifestation of the Deity, limits its idea to the depths of eternity, without admitting any true or living communication of the Godhead with what appertains to time, and thereby naturally allures the metaphysical pride which, in this abstraction, hath made itself its own God"; how the sensual Eudaimonism, to which it "opens so free a scope, must rally round the apostle of lust, the multitude that burns with all the passionate glow of the fervid South, and place under his control all the wild fiery energies of that region;" thus re-establishing the reign of sensuality on earth, to be terminated by a "paradise of lust" in the world to come; how the Ethical Pantheism which it professes, while it furnishes a pretext, a motive, and a palliation to all the pretences of the mighty, to the ambition of usurpers, the violence of pride, and the arrogance of tyranny, and at the same time consoles and disarms the injured and the oppressed by the inevitableness of destiny, must draw to its preacher the men of the sword, of violence, and of blood; thus encouraging the craving thirst for conquest, stimulating the malignant passions of hatred and revenge, and even commanding "irreconcilable enmity, eternal warfare, eternal slaughter, to propagate throughout the world a belief in its blood-stained prophet of pride and lust." When we calmly reflect on all this, we may be disposed to reckon it a gracious interposition of Providence, that the study of the higher Arabic Literature is, in point of numbers, at so low an ebb, instead of regretting that the more advanced disciples of this "pure old doctrine of all-conquering Islam and of all-surpassing faith" are so few in number, and drink so scantily at its original well-heads.

Appendix,
Part III.

We now come to the other great class of learned schools, or that in which the literature, law, philosophy and religion of the Hindus are taught through the medium of the Sanskrit language.*

To a certain extent, Sanskrit learning, is open to all respectable classes of native society. Castes, inferior to the Brahminical, may study the more secular branches, such as grammar and lexicology, poetical and dramatic literature, rhetoric, astrology and medicine. But the higher and more sacred branches, such as law, the six systems of philosophy, and the mythological poems are the peculiar inheritance of the Brahman caste. Such, in theory, is "the distinction recognised in the legal and religious economy of Hinduism; but, practically Brahmins monopolize not only a part, but nearly the whole of Sanskrit learning." In the Behar districts, visited by Mr. Adam, both teachers and students, without a single exception, belonged to that caste; and the exceptions in the Bengal districts were comparatively few.

As to the subject-matter of learned instruction in Sanskrit, it is not possible, within our narrow limits, to do more than briefly allude. In philology, grammar, lexicology, there is much that is good; though even these are strangely mixed up with what is idolatrous and superstitious.

In poetry, the drama, rhetoric and general literature, with much that is harmless, there is a vast deal of what is utterly demoralizing.

Even the study of law is made the vehicle and cherisher of false religion in its most idolatrous forms. And, as if superstition were inherent in the soil of this land, and all-pervading in its atmosphere, it must, even in the department of legal scholastic discipline, cause its claims to be heard, and the feelings which it engenders to be systematically cherished.

In the department of logic, there is much that is eminently fitted to acuminate and subtilize the intellect; but the system, as a whole, must be regarded as tending to waste its powers on hair-splitting distinctions, and to paralyse its energies by the expenditure of these on the pursuit of what is frivolous, or meaningless, or useless, or worse. The stupendous pile of subtleties, which, throughout the entire cycle of the middle ages, the European mind, for lack of more wholesome nutriment as well as more fitting materials to work on, continued ingeniously to spin out of its own substance, and which it required the "Reformation" of a Luther and the "Instauration" of a Bacon, with the convulsions of empire and the crash of ancient institutions, to sweep away, can alone convey an approximate conception of the masses of sharp-edged organs and gossamer-like tenuity, that have accumulated in our Indian schools of logic, and constitute the staple commodities of intellectual production and distribution there.

Besides these principal grades of schools of learning, there are seminaries for the inculcation of other branches of Sanskrit lore, which must not be wholly passed by unnoticed.

There are medical schools, for the study of the most approved medical shastras, which whilst containing much that is useful, though inextricably intermixed with the strangest fallacies and quackeries, have, in their own department, exercised for ages a supremacy, "so absolute, and undisputed, as to have repressed all independent inquiry, observation and experiment."

There are astrological schools, which embrace the teaching of the art of divination and the casting of nativities by the situation and aspect of the stars, as if modern science were a fable, and the triumphs of modern philosophy a dream!

There are philosophical schools, in which theistic, atheistic, atomic and ideal schemes of philosophy are propounded with as much zeal, as if they were the happy discoveries of yesterday, instead of the periodically-reviving and periodically-exploded errors of successive ages and of different climes.

There are Puranic or Mythological schools, in which are read portions of the 18 Puranas, with selections from the Ramayana and Mahabharat, the gigantic epic poems of India, containing fabulous accounts of the creation, the genealogy and achievements of incarnate gods and heroes, with all manner of wild and extravagant legends.

There are Tantric schools, in which are taught those works that are employed in explaining the "formulas peculiar to the votaries of Shiva and the female deities, by which they seem to obtain supernatural

* Let it be noted that our objections refer exclusively to the subject-matter usually taught through the medium of the Sanskrit and other learned languages, not to the languages themselves, when taught for purely philological and ethnological purposes.

supernatural powers and accomplish objects either good or bad for themselves or others." The followers of this Tantric system are, even among Hindus notoriously "intemperate and licentious in their habits and manners, not only believing that the use of intoxicating liquors and an unlimited indulgence in licentiousness is permitted, but that it is enjoined by the system which they profess."

There are Vedantic schools, in which are read the Bhagavat Gita, a celebrated episode of the Mahabharat, unfolding a curious scheme of half-mythological, half-philosophical rationalism; the Vendanta Sara and other treatises expository of Pantheism; a system, which in its more ideal and spiritual, not less than its grosser forms, impiously confounds the creature with the Creator, inflates the soul with a pride vastly more towering than that of stoicism, sanctions or inculcates the popular polytheistic idolatry, enforces the abhorrent dogma of transmigration through the varied forms of animate and inanimate nature, and, by authoritatively teaching that final beatitude consists in a literal immersion or absorption of the human spirit in the unfathomable abyss of the Divine essence, virtually points to the atheist's hope and godly man's fear, a moral and intellectual annihilation.

But, apart altogether from the distorted views of moral and religious truth inculcated in the Sanskrit institutions and the perverted habits of mind contracted in acquiring them, Mr. Adams himself distinctly admits that in them both teacher and taught are only wasting their time, their learning and their powers on a vast deal of what is utterly frivolous, or useless, or worse.

"The native mind," says he, "of the present day, although it is asleep, is not dead. It has a dreamy sort of existence in separating, combining, and recasting in various forms the fables and speculations of past ages. The amount of authorship shown to exist in the different districts is a measure of the intellectual activity which, however now misdirected, might be employed for useful purposes. The same men who have wasted and are still wasting their learning and their powers in weaving complicated alliterations, re-compounding absurd and vicious pictures revolving in perpetual cycles of metaphysical abstractions never ending, still beginning, have professed to me their readiness to engage in any sort of literary composition that would obtain the patronage of Government."

And it is a notable fact, that when our professedly Christian Government proposed to establish and endow the present Sanskrit College of Calcutta, the illustrious Raja Rammohun Roy, himself one of the profoundest scholars in Eastern and Western lore, felt constrained, as a patriot and philanthropist, to address to our supreme authorities an earnest remonstrance against it.

"The proposed seminary, or Sanscrit College," said he, "similar to those which existed in Europe before the time of Lord Bacon, can only be expected to load the minds of youth with grammatical niceties and metaphysical distinctions of little or no practical use to the possessors, or to society. The pupils will there acquire what was known 2,000 years ago, with the addition of vain and empty subtleties, since produced by speculative men, such as is now commonly taught in all parts of India. The Sanskrit language, so difficult that almost a life-time is necessary for its acquisition, is well known to have been for ages a lamentable check on the diffusion of knowledge; and the learning concealed under this almost impervious veil is far from sufficient to reward the labour of acquiring it. If it had been intended to keep the British nation in ignorance of real knowledge, the Baconian philosophy would not have been allowed to displace the system of the schoolmen, which was the best calculated to perpetuate ignorance. In the same manner, the Sanskrit system of education would be the best calculated to keep this country in darkness, if such had been the policy of the British Legislature."

When, then, to the useless, the frivolous, and the puerile acquisitions of Sanskrit learning, which instead of truly bracing and invigorating the mental faculties, tend rather to dilute and rarefy them into a vain and subtilizing spirit of error, we add the towering pride thereby engendered, the callousness of feeling, the total insensibility to the wants and miseries of man, together with the defence which it involves and entails of all that is blasphemous in erudite Pantheism, and all that is revolting in the popular idolatry; we surely have a picture, in which the semblance of each better light is wholly shrouded and eclipsed by the reality of the darksome shadows.

IV.—Elementary Education.

Let us now turn to the indigenous system of elementary education, whether public or private; i. e. whether carried on in public schools or in private families.

1. Look at the subject-matter, or nature and amount of the instruction communicated.

At the outset, it may be noted, that in purely indigenous schools, the use of printed books in the native language appears hitherto to have been wholly unknown; and except in a few districts, the number of schools in which written works or manuscript text books, are not employed, vastly exceeds the number in which they are used. How then, in the former description of school, is the business of education conducted? Why, simply thus:—All that the scholars learn is acquired from the oral dictation of the master. What is so acquired is firmly lodged in the memory by dint of incessant repetition, without any understanding, for a long time, of what meaning the sounds, so imitated, convey.

But the point of chiefest importance is that which concerns the subject-matter of what is taught, whether orally, or by the aid of manuscript text books. What constitutes the staple or substance of the intellectual, moral and religious provision which is supplied to the opening mind of ingenious Hindu youth? As regards the use of particular pieces of compositions, there is considerable variety, some being employed in one locality and others in another; one or two only being found in some schools, and a large number in others. But, as regards their general and essential character there is a distressing sameness, a terrible uniformity. Apart from the rhyming arithmetical rules of Subhanakar, a writer, whose name is as familiar in Bengal as Cocker in England, without any one knowing who or what he was, or when or where he lived—these scholastic compositions and text books consist of translated extracts of wild and extravagant legends from the Purans and other shastras, more particularly works describing the adventures and loves of Radha and the incarnate god Krishna, together with the boyish amusements of the latter, such as his boating pleasures on the Jumna in the neighbourhood of Brindavan, and the tricks which he played the milkmaids with his youthful companions. There are also hymns or songs without number, in praise of the goddess Durga and other popular divinities. But the works or pieces that are best known and in most general use throughout the country appear to be the following :—The Chānakya, a series of stokes or brief sententious sayings, in the proverbial style, avowedly in praise of learning and precepts of morality; the Gangā Bandanā, describing the virtues of the river goddess; the Saraswati Bandanā or salutation to the goddess of learning, which is committed to memory by frequent repetition, and is daily recited by the scholars in a body before they leave school, all kneeling with their heads bent to the ground, and following a leader or monitor in the pronunciation of the successive lines or couplets; the Gurū Bandanā, a doggerel composition containing an expression of the respect and devotion due from the scholar to his teacher; the Gurū Dakṣiṇā, another doggerel composition, which in glowing terms describes the fee or reward which Krishna and his brother Balarāma gave to their teacher, after having finished their education, and which is constantly sung by the elder boys of a school from house to house to elicit donations for their master.

But no mere general description can convey the remotest conception of the genuine nature and character of these almost universally current school compositions. Of these, by far the most respectable is the Chānakya, which does contain many passages that are negatively unexceptionable, and a few that are positively good. But even its best parts can scarcely be said to rise beyond the inculcation of a secular sort of prudence, and never ascend, even in incidental allusion, into the lofty region of pure and godlike morality, the morality of essential truth, inflexible rectitude, unspotted holiness, and disinterested love. On the other hand, the work constantly descends into dead levels and depths far beneath the platform of a worldly-wise and enlightened prudence. The spirit of enmity, revenge, selfishness, covetousness, and carnal indulgence seems not sanctioned merely, but positively inculcated. We quote a few stokes as specimens :—

“A man should be kind and liberal to some enemy, that he may by his assistance be able to kill another, as he would pick out the thorn sticking in his feet by means of another thorn.

“No trust should be placed in rivers, in creatures armed with claws or horns, or in men with weapons in their hands; neither in women or royal races.

“For a time of adversity it is proper to preserve wealth, which, however, may be expended for the preservation of your wife; but you should always preserve your personal welfare even at the sacrifice of your wife or wealth.

“A wife is requisite for the purpose of having a son, a son is requisite for the purpose of offering funeral cakes, a friend is requisite for assistance in time of need, but wealth is requisite for all purposes.

“Possessing plenty of eatables, a good appetite, the power of sexual intercourse, handsome wives, a liberal heart, and property, are the sure indications of the meritorious actions of man in his former life.

“Fresh meat, soft rice newly prepared, cohabitation with young women, fresh clarified butter, warm milk and tepid water, are the six things which are beneficial to life.”

We may next notice the Gangā Bandanā, or hymn in praise of the Ganges, as a genuine specimen of that description of popular scholastic composition. As it is short we shall give it entire, leaving it to the reader to infer the state of mind that can believingly entertain the sentiments expressed in it, and joyfully and triumphantly give them utterance. It is as follows :—

“O Ganga! the river of the gods, whom the Purans declare to be the purifier of the fallen and the most ancient, to thee I pay my reverential bow. Thou art sprung from the foot of Vishnu, art called Drabamahi (fully dissolved), and art alike the mother of the gods, giants, and men. Thou didst reside in the drinking pot of Brahmā, and wast with him sanctifying his whole region by thy presence. But observing the wickedness of living creatures, and intending to destroy their fears of death, thou goddess of the gods, hast come down to this world. Bhagiratha, a descendant of the solar race, first showing thee the way, conducted thee to this earth below. The most sinful and misbehaved, merely by touching thy waters, ascend up to heaven with their corporal frame entire. Thy waters are perfectly pure, and the fruits of drinking them are so various, that even Brahmā and Vishnu could not describe them. Who can speak of thy glory, since, Shulapani (the spear-handed Shiva) holding thee on his head, thought himself dignified! If rice, herbs, &c., be dressed in thy water, the gods would take the same, considering them as a rarity. That boiled rice also becomes full of ambrosia, and, according to Vyāsa, the taking of it destroys the fear of death. The place of thy junction with the sea is equal to Bikuntha in sanctity, and its importance is so great that neither Brahmā nor Vishnu could fully appreciate it. The very sight of it takes away all the sins of men. Thy waters possess such transcendent qualities that if a man (whether he be of low birth, a Sudra, or a religious mendicant) were to bathe in them on the last day of Pous, he secures for himself a mansion in the heaven of Vishnu. The very utterance of thy name is all that is necessary for directly sending a person to the abode of Vishnu without the necessity of his visiting the realm of Yama. When the father, mother, son, or wife of a person unceremoniously throws his lifeless corpse upon the burning pile, and with feelings of abhorrence returns home, after having bathed in thy waters, it is thou who at that moment takest him into thy bosom. The kindred and friends who loved him, while he had the power of acquiring, mourn over his death only for a day or two. In such dreadful times none but thy feet are his real friends. No sooner is the dead carcase of an individual, partly eaten up by crows and jackalls, drifted by any means to thy shore, than hundreds of heavenly nymphs, holding fans in their hands come down and wait on him. I would rather be a lizard, a crab, or even the young one of an emaciated bitch, and live near thee, than be the lord of millions of elephants in a place not sanctified by thy presence. Worms, insects, and birds, even kings, down to millions of other living creatures, are equal in thy sight. If the most sinful and wicked once touch thy waters during their whole lifetime, thou becomest a shelter to them on the last day. Even if, from the distance of a hundred yajanas (or 800 miles) from thy stream, a person were to utter thy name, immediately does he become perfectly holy. The ashes of the descendants of Sagar who had been destroyed by the curse of a Bráhmaṇ, having come in contact with thy waters, assumed human forms with four hands, and ascended up to Baikuntha (the heaven of Vishnu). Thy glory, oh, Ganga, is far beyond my power to describe; the Agama and Purans unfold it at full length.”*

Having

Having requested an intelligent and respectable native to furnish us with a set of the slokes or metrical couplets, which he had learned memoriter, when in the Patshala or vernacular school, he sent one as a specimen, accompanied with a literal translation in English, and enclosed in a note, of which the following is a verbatim et literatim copy:—

"Sir,—I beg to state that when I was translating this sloke, which I learnt by heart when very young, from my Guru mahashai, or teacher, without at the time understanding the meaning of it, whether it implied a dog or an ass, a kind of unpleasurable sensation arose in my mind which made me, indeed, miserable. Afterwards the whole mind rebelled with frown and anguish against the ideas which that sloke conveys, as if they were more than virulent venom, fit only to bring destruction on man. Therefore I humbly beg that you will kindly excuse me for not translating the other slokes, which are more or less obscene than the one already translated, for I am afraid they will make me unhappy too, nay, they will make me worse. I wish that all the waters of forgetfulness would come to wash away from the tablet of my memory such slokes as these; they are most baneful.

"I have, &c. &c."

While the translated sloke is of so gross a nature that we dare not insert it here, we need scarcely add that we hastened to release our native friend from the odious task which we had unconsciously imposed upon him, with feelings of deep and unfeigned regret at the discovery, that one portion of the vernacular scholastic instruction is, in some respects even worse than our previous experience of its puerile and legendary absurdities, or its idolatrous and barbarous teachings, had led us to expect or conceive.

2. Look at the system of discipline. This is a subject which apparently did not attract Mr. Adam's attention; but as it is one of vast importance in enabling us to arrive at a just and sober estimate of the genuine character and practical effects of the existing system of scholastic tuition, we must endeavour to supply a few brief notes founded on our own inquiry and experience.

If the scheme of teaching be throughout one of dull, dry, plodding, monotonous mechanism, acting on head and heart with all the force of a congealing efficacy, the scheme of discipline may be truly characterised as throughout a reign of terror. Kindness, patience, generosity, love, all are alike unknown here. Fear is the first and last and only motive brought into play; punishment the first and last and only stimulant. In varying the modes of this punitive discipline, the utmost ingenuity is exercised. With the cane the master is always armed, as with an instrument as indispensable to his vocation as the eyes for seeing, or the ears for hearing, and it is in constant and faithful exercise. The open palm and clenched fist are also vigorously applied to the back, the cheek, and the head. These are but the common droppings that fall with the frequency and fulness of tropical showers. Of the other varieties constantly exhibited, the following may be taken as those of most ordinary occurrence. A boy is made to bend forward with his face toward the ground; a heavy brick is then placed on his back, and another on his neck, and should he let either of them fall within the prescribed period of half an hour or so, he is punished with the cane. Or a boy is condemned to stand for half an hour or an hour on one foot, and should he shake or quiver, or let down the uplifted leg before the time, he is severely punished. Again, a boy is made to sit on the floor in an exceedingly constrained position, with one leg turned up behind his neck. Or still worse, he is made to sit with his feet resting on two bricks, and his head bent down between both legs, with his hands twisted round each leg so as painfully to catch the ears. Again, a boy is made to hang for a few minutes with his head downwards, from the branch of a neighbouring tree. Or, his hands and feet are bound with cords; to these members so bound, a rope is fastened, and the boy is then hoisted up by means of a pulley attached to the beams or rafters in the school. Again, nettles dipped in water are applied to the body, which becomes irritated and swollen; the pain is excruciating and often lasts a whole day; but, however great the itching and the pain, the sufferer is not allowed to rub or touch the skin for relief, under the dread of a flagellation in addition. Or the boy is put up in a sack along with some nettles, or a cat, or some other noisome creature, and then rolled along the ground. Again, the fingers of both hands are inserted across each other with a stick between, and two sticks without drawn close together and tied. Or, a boy is made to measure so many cubits on the ground, by marking it along with the tip of his nose. Again, four boys are made to seize another, two holding the arms and two the feet; they then alternately swing him and throw him violently to the ground. Or, two boys are made to seize another by the ears, and with these organs well outstretched, he is made to run along for the amusement of the bystanders. Again, a boy is constrained to pull his own ears, and if he fail to extend them sufficiently, he is visited with a sorer chastisement. Or, two boys, when both have given offence, are made to knock their heads several times against each other. Again, the boy who first comes to school in the morning, receives one stroke of the cane on the palm of the hand; the next receives two strokes; and so each in succession, as he arrives, receives a number of strokes equal to the number of boys that preceded him; the first being the privileged administrator of them all. When a boy wants to go out, the common practice is to throw a spittle on the floor; if it dries up before he returns he is punished with the cane; or, if not, a boy hostile to him, may, with or without the cognisance and connivance of the master, come and wipe it out, in order to insure his punishment. When, instead of teaching, the Guru mahashai or master betakes himself to the making or copying of almanacs and horoscopes, as he constantly does, to eke out his scanty allowances, the boys, too, very naturally betake themselves to extraneous modes of diversion and employment, such as playing and pinching, chattering and frolic, waggery and abuse; but when forgetting themselves too far, they become obstreperous and the noise swells into tumult, the teacher is suddenly roused into red burning wrath, and gives vent to his uncontrollable fury in a crushing tempest of indiscriminate flagellation, intermingled with the loud sound of vituperative epithets too gross and shocking to be recorded here.

No wonder though the Patshala or vernacular school should be viewed, as it uniformly is, as an object of terror by the young. The conductor of it is the ghost that haunts and scares the young. When a child misbehaves, the most severe and awe-inspiring threat of the mother is, "call the Guru mahashai to take him to school." Apart from its general influence in paralysing the intellectual and moral powers, this system of terror leads to many specific practices of a baneful tendency. It superinduces the habit of crouching servility towards the master in his presence, and the rendering of many menial and even dishonest services. To propitiate the dreaded tyrant, the boys are glad to prepare his hookah, to bring fire for smoking, gather flowers for his puja, sweep his lodging, wash his brazen pots, cleave thick pieces of wood for fuel, &c. They are induced to go to the bazaar with their written plantain-leaves, and to give them to the shopkeepers as packing materials, in exchange for cowries, fish, tobacco, fruits, betel-nut, pawn, &c., which they present as offerings to the master; or they are positively encouraged, for his sake, to bring, that is in reality to purloin or steal, wood, rice, salt, dhal, oil, &c. from home, or from any where else; seeing that those who succeed, by fair means or foul, in presenting such gifts most frequently, have the best chance of escaping the dreaded rod, the best chance of being praised for cleverness, though the greatest dunces; for diligence, though the greatest sluggards; and for knowledge, though the greatest ignoramuses.

Appendix,
Part III.

On the other hand, as might be expected, the system tends to generate the spirit of hatred, retaliation, and revenge towards the master. This spirit practically shows itself in various ways. For example, in preparing his hookah, it is a common trick for the boys to mix the tobacco with chillies and other pungent ingredients; so that when he smokes, he is made to cough violently, while the whole school is convulsed with laughter;—or beneath the mat on which he sits, may be strewn thorns and sharp prickles, which soon display their effects in the contortions of the crest-fallen and discomforted master;—or at night he is waylaid by his pupils, who from their concealed position in a tree, or thicket, or behind a wall, pelt him well with pebbles, bricks, or stones; or once more may rehearse doggerel songs, in which they implore the gods, and more particularly Kali, to remove him by death, vowing, in the event of prayer being heard, to present offerings of sugar and cocoanuts.

Once more, the system naturally and even necessarily leads the young to regard the Patshala, not as a place of healthful, renovative, mental exercise, but as a sort of dungeon or grievous prison-house, to escape from which is the chiefest of all ends, as the desire to do so is the most powerful of all instincts. Many, accordingly, are the pretexts and expedients resorted to, in order to escape the “durance vile” of scholastic imprisonment. The boy often runs off for several days to the house of a relation or friend at a distance; and, on his return, asseverates that he was sent there by his parents. To throw boiled rice on domestic vessels ceremonially defiles them; hence when a boy is bent on a day’s release from school, he peremptorily disobeys his admonishing mother, saying, “No; if you insist on my going, I shall throw about the boiled rice”—a threat which usually gains him the victory. If a person of a different caste, or unbathed, or with shoes on his feet, touch the boiled rice or pot of another, it is polluted; hence, when a boy effects his escape from school, he often hastens to some kitchen, touches the boiled rice, or the pots in which it has been boiled, and thus becomes himself polluted; and until he bathes, no one can touch or seize him without being polluted too. A temporary impunity is thus secured. At other times the boy finds his way to filthy and unclean places, where he remains for hours, or a whole day, defying the master and his emissaries to touch him, knowing full well that they cannot do so, without partaking of his own contracted pollution. So determined are boys to evade the tortuous system of discipline that, in making good their escape, they often wade or swim through tanks, or along the current of running drains, with a large earthen-pot over their head, so that the suspicion of passers-by, or of those in pursuit, is not even excited; seeing that naught appears on the surface but a floating pot; or they run off and climb into the loftiest neighbouring tree, where they laugh to scorn the efforts of their assailants to dislodge them. In the recent case of one personally known to our informant, the runaway actually remained for three days on the top of a cocoa-nut tree, vigorously hurling the coco-nuts as missiles at the heads of all who attempted to ascend for the purpose of securing him.

3. Look at the teachers, their means of support and qualifications.

Very nearly the whole of the teachers earn their livelihood by teaching, being regularly paid for their professional services. Bearing in mind that presents, whether monthly, yearly, or occasional, consist of rice, fish, salt, oil, vegetables, cooking utensils, tobacco, clothes, &c. the following enumeration will present at once to the eye a tabulated view of the exceedingly varied, or rather grotesquely diversified ways, in which the teachers are remunerated.

Some receive—

Monthly wages only.

Fees only.

Subsistence money only.

Wages, and uncooked food.

Wages and subsistence money.

Fees and subsistence money.

Fees and weekly presents.

Fees and annual presents.

Weekly presents and annual presents.

Wages, uncooked food, and subsistence money.

Fees, uncooked food, and annual presents.

Fees, subsistence money, and weekly presents.

Wages, subsistence money, and annual presents.

Fees, subsistence money, and annual presents.

Fees, weekly presents and annual presents.

Wages, uncooked food, subsistence money, and weekly presents.

Fees, uncooked food, subsistence money, and weekly presents.

Fees, uncooked food, subsistence money, and annual presents.

Fees, uncooked food, weekly presents and annual presents.

Wages, subsistence money, weekly presents, and annual presents.

Fees, subsistence, weekly presents and annual presents.

Fees, uncooked food, subsistence money, weekly presents and annual presents.

Now, reducing all these items to a money estimate, the mean rate of monthly payment for all the districts visited will be found from Rs. 1. 8. 7. as the minimum, to Rs. 4. 12. 9., as the maximum. This affords to all the vernacular teachers of Bengal and Behar, an average monthly professional income of Rs. 2. 15. 7., or about three rupees; not above one-half of what is usually given in Calcutta to the lowest menials or domestic servants.

The details now given abundantly show by what pinched and stinted contributions the class just below the wealthy, and the class just above the indigent unite to support a school; and it constitutes a proof of the very limited means of those who are anxious to give a Bengali education to their children, and of the sacrifices which they make to accomplish the object. But, for emoluments so lean and so meagre, what qualifications can the teachers be expected to pre-ent? If it be an universal law that the price of a commodity may fairly be allowed to determine its intrinsic or relative or conventional value, what can be the value, intrinsically, relatively, or conventionally, of qualifications everywhere estimated and hired at a rate so low as those of the vernacular school-master of Bengal and Behar? Accordingly, it is the fact, that, however low the emoluments in question are, in comparison with those to which competent men might be justly considered entitled, they can scarcely be said to be lower than the paidentic qualifications or marketable commodity of which they may be regarded as the pecuniary equivalent. The following is the result of Mr. Adam's extended observation on the subject:—

"The teachers consist both of young and middle-aged men, for the most part simple minded, but poor and ignorant, and therefore having recourse to an occupation which is suitable both to their expectations and attainments, and on which they reflect as little honour as they derive emolument from it. They do not understand the importance of the task they have undertaken. They do not appear to have made it even a subject of thought. They do not appreciate the great influence which they might exert over the minds of their pupils, and they consequently neglect the highest duties which their situation would impose, if they were better acquainted with their powers and obligations. At present they produce chiefly a mechanical effect upon the intellect of their pupils, which is worked upon and chiselled out, and that in a very rough style, but which remains nearly passive in their hands, and is seldom taught or encouraged to put forth its self-acting and self-judging capacities. As to any moral influence of the teachers over the pupils, any attempt to form the sentiments and habits, and to control and guide the passions and emotions; such a notion never enters into their conceptions; and the formation of the moral character of the young is consequently wholly left to the influence of the casual associations amidst which they are placed, without any endeavour to modify or direct them. Any measures that may be adopted to improve education in this country will be greatly inadequate, if they are not directed to increase the attainments of the teachers, and to elevate and extend their views of the duties belonging to their vocation."

The intellectual and moral condition of the wholly uninstructed masses constituting the overwhelming majority, we have already glanced at; and, in the preceding statements, will be found ample materials, from which to form an accurate estimate of the intellectual and moral condition of the partially or inadequately instructed minority.

To spare the reader the tedium of a lengthened recapitulation, we have only to request that he may be pleased to look back and re-ponder the statements of fact already given. Let him look at the nature, character, and influence of the instruction imparted in the elementary schools, and say, whether Mr. Ward's estimate of it does not fall far short of the reality, rather than exceed it. Education in these schools, "is confined," says he, "to a few rudiments, qualifying the pupils to write a letter on business, and initiating them into the first rules of arithmetic. A Hindu school is a mere shop, in which by a certain process the human mind is prepared to act as a copying machine or as a lithographic press. The culture of the mind is never contemplated in these seminaries. Hence Hindu youths, though of a capacity exceedingly quick, never find the means of strengthening or enlarging the faculties. The bud withers as soon as it is ready to expand. Destitute, therefore, of all that is reclaiming in education, of all that contributes to the formation of good dispositions and habits, these youths herd together for mutual corruption. Destitute of knowledge themselves, the parents, the tutors cannot impart to others that which they themselves have not received; human nature takes its unrestrained course; and whatever is in the human heart receives an unbounded gratification." These schools thus viewed, as Mr. Ward does, chiefly in their negative character, are sufficiently unproductive of good and prolific of evil. How much more so when viewed in their positive character. Under the endless recurrence of a dull, monotonous mechanical routine, the intellectual soil, light by nature, and wholly unmanured by art, soon becomes impoverished altogether. Under the combined influences of an utterly vicious system of discipline, the forced initiation into deceptive and dishonest practices, the habitual inculcation of loose, grovelling, carnalising maxims for the regulation of future conduct, the unceasing repetition of abominably filthy or grossly idolatrous legends; the moral and religious soil is transformed into a fertile nursery of all manner of rank, unprofitable, and noxious weeds.

Whether, therefore, we look at the wholly uninstructed majority, or the partially instructed minority of the people of this land, we cannot help concluding that the work of education, in any right and proper sense of that term, has, except in a few isolated cases, connected with missionary and other operations, yet to be begun.

With these comparatively few exceptions, the provinces of Bengal and Behar, and indeed India generally, may verily be said, educationally, to present an all but universal blank. Indeed so vast, so aggravated is the destitution, so immense, so apparently boundless the field, that one is apt to sink down, staggered, confounded, and almost paralysed into despondency at the very prospect of it. But Christian faith, feeding on the promises, and Christian benevolence glowing in anticipation of a renovated and gladdened humanity, soon interpose to rouse and rally the best energies of the true friends of India in this and other lands.

